your mind somewhat. We can't do what you and others have been suggesting."

They sent over some of their bright boys. I won't name them. They said, "We have a plan of decontrol. This is it. This is the way we would like to do it. This is an orderly fashion and we can handle it this way. We can't take these controls off every place all at once."

I had been away from politics for some years, and these people were on the scene. So I became a member of the committee. As a matter of fact, I went over the minutes of that committee recently and I reminded Senator Bourget that he was on that committee. He said he had forgotten about it.

I remember the importance of that committee. Howe was there with some of his staff almost all the time. Humphrey Mitchell was there all the time. One had to listen, and we wanted to give everyone an opportunity to say what he wished to say. Finally, of course, the committee reached some conclusions and things were settled, as they always are.

I attended those hearings for three or four months. I played some role in them because they wanted Toronto to have a voice. I met dozens and dozens of people who had worked for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, and who were on the other side. They told me something that I remember very clearly. Time and time again they said, "Don't ever bring in controls in peacetime under any circumstances, if you can possibly avoid it and there is an alternative." I agreed with them. To date, no one has suggested an alternative. No one has suggested anything else, and I know of nothing else.

They told me something more than that. They said, "Make the law tough on everybody. You can't make it tough enough, and when it cannot be avoided, throw the book at them and make sure that everyone feels that it is being fairly administered; and if you can do that for a year, you won't have to carry it on for long." That was the advice given me. They also said, "And get rid of controls at the earliest possible time."

I agree with that. But what alternative do we on this side of the house have, and what alternative do you on the other side have? What difference does it make? We are all in trouble—heavy trouble. Success depends upon our ability to convince the country that we mean business.

What about public confidence? It is nice to read in the press that a large number of people are in favour of the government's policy. However, many are in favour of it so long as it does not touch too close to home. It's a little different when it starts to touch close to home.

● (1210)

Frankly, what I liked about the original suggestion of Mr. Stanfield was the shock effect of freezing everything for the moment. The people would have known that there was something urgent, something important. I liked that suggestion for its immediate effect. The government, however, said otherwise, and that is it.

In order to make it work, we have to be rough on everybody. I agree that there cannot be equality, but certainly there must be equity with justice. We all have to suffer together.

[Senator Croll.]

People are anxious for a solution. They are very worried, very frightened, of the effect inflation will have, and is already having, on their lives. If you think this is a tough bill, you should have seen the bill under which Donald Gordon operated.

Senator Flynn: There was no bill. It was the War Measures Act.

Senator Croll: Yes. He could do anything.

Senator Asselin: Are you saying that this bill is the same thing?

Senator Croll: No, it is not the same. However, the comparison was not pulled out of the sky; it came out of the fact that some of the powers that were used in the War Measures Act are being used in this legislation, although not as extensively. Some of the powers in the old War Measures Act are incorporated in this bill. Not all of the powers are necessary, of course.

Senator Flynn: Under the War Measures Act the minister could not impose any fine. He had to go before the court to have a fine imposed.

Senator Croll: There are some differences. All I know is that despite the many difficulties which were encountered, the government of the day was only able to make that legislation work because it was able to assemble the best brains in the country, and because there was a patriotic feeling running through the country. The children were overseas, the fathers were overseas, and there was a desire to make things work. Under the then prevailing circumstances, the government of the day was able to make the War Measures Act work.

However, living in this day and age, it is a different world entirely. I am a little perturbed, as are others, at the fact that the chairman has to correct his quotes and misquotes, and that the Prime Minister has to pay some attention to see what it is he is talking about. The one thing we cannot afford to do is to blow it before we start it, and we have not started it yet. That is very important.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Croll: The labour movement has its own view with respect to this legislation. I do not agree with the actions of labour groups, and neither does everyone in this country. Labour takes the position: "Wages, yes; no difficulty at all in controlling wages. Prices; well, maybe you will control prices, but it is a hit-and-miss business. Dividends, yes; sometimes you control dividends, but you do so kind of softly, and not too hard. But corporations; you certainly are not able to stop them from doing a lot of things that they should not be doing."

Senator Flynn: Are you suggesting that corporations act differently? Do you see an essential difference between corporations and individuals?

Senator Croll: I am simply stating the view of the labour movement. I think corporations are trying to play the game this time. It is in their interest to make sure that we come out of it, and come out of it well. Others have spoken about professions.

In supporting this bill, considering the method in which it was presented to us, we really have not got much choice. We either participate or we don't participate. As a matter of fact, it is the only game in town.

What has happened is that the Canadian economy has been laid low by a disease called inflation. Everyone has a prescription, but we are not really sure that our prescription will cure the patient. It has become a worldwide epidemic. The inflation germ, some of which comes from overseas and some of which is homegrown, is in the air. But we cannot put Canada into isolation. Dr. Macdonald has given us some medicine, and it is the very best medicine that we know of today. Dr. Stanfield's medicine is the same, but he tells us to take it in greater doses so that it will bring about a quicker recovery. Well, that may or may not be.

What is happening in our country today—and let this register for a few moments—is that everyone is busy catching up with everyone else, and there is always someone new to catch up to. Leapfrogging is the name of the game, but it is leapfrogging in a squirrel cage. We are not getting anywhere with our leapfrogging. We are simply going round and round and round. We have to get rid of the leapfrogging and we have to get rid of the squirrel cage. We have to come up with some sensible solution to inflation. The only test of success will come if everybody complains.

One of the things that we hear so much about is government spending. Many people feel that a curtailment of government spending would have saved the situation. Well, I have been around a long time, as have some others in this chamber, including a couple of former cabinet ministers I see sitting across from me who did some spending in their day and were subjected to this criticism. From time to time I agree with some of the criticism. I do not know whether the government is spending too much, or whether it is spending it inefficiently, but I am waiting for someone somewhere to stand up and not only tell the government it is spending too much money, but tell it where the unnecessary expenditures are being made.

I am sick and tired of being told that the government could save $9 million by getting rid of Information Canada. Information Canada seems to be looked on as the everlasting whipping boy. If you ask, "In what other areas can the government save money?" they say, "Well, you know how it is; you can save it on Information Canada."

Everybody says that all governments are inefficient. Of course, there is some inefficiency in government. Every time I attacked a spending item, I was told, "That is the reason we are spending it. Would you like to move to have it cut out?" And Croll shuts his mouth quickly because he does not want that item cut out. I am waiting for someone to make a direct suggestion in respect of government expenditures.

One of the other things that arises in this respect, and about which there has been a great deal of misunderstanding, is collective bargaining. No matter what happens, no matter how long it takes, it would be a tragic bit of business if collective bargaining suffered. Collective bargaining is the difference between the organized and the unorganized in this country; it is the difference between bread and butter on the table and meat and potatoes on the table. Out of approximately 10 million working Canadians three million rely on collective bargaining.

● (1220)

I do not think Mr. Broadbent, speaking on behalf of the unions, was fair in saying this is the end of collective bargaining. Anyone who has ever seen a collective agreement knows there are 50 items in every contract. I have never seen one with less. Indeed, the federal government had one with 124 items. But there are any number of other things to bargain for besides money. If we have got a year to wait around—or more as I suggest—and a lot of housekeeping can be done on items in collective bargaining that they never had time to clean up before, which would be useful and necessary to the people.

What I want to direct my remarks to particularly is something that has not been mentioned here—although it was in the other place, but not too much. It is not what is happening to the professions, but what is happening to unorganized people in this country. In order that there may be some better understanding of what I am getting at, I would like to place on the record at this point a table entitled "Poverty Line Updated—1975," a copy of which I have sent to every member of the Senate.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is it agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

POVERTY LINE UPDATED—1975

| FAMILY SIZE | Senate* Committee Poverty Line 1973 | Senate* Committee Poverty Line 1974 | Senate* Committee Poverty Line 1975 | Statistics Canada Poverty Line 1974 | Statistics Canada Poverty Line 1974 |
|-------------|---|---|---|---|---|
| | (nearest $10) | (nearest $10) | (nearest $10) | (updated) | (revised) |
| 1 | $2,990 | $3,100 | $3,490 | $2,518 | $2,512—3,456 |
| 2 | 4,990 | 5,130 | 5,810 | 4,196 | 3,644—5,008 |
| 3 | 5,990 | 6,145 | 6,970 | 5,034 | 4,648—6,391 |
| 4 | 6,990 | 7,200 | 8,140 | 5,872 | 5,527—7,601 |
| 5 | 7,970 | 8,200 | 9,300 | 6,713 | 6,181—9,496 |
| 6 | 8,970 | 9,970 | 10,470 | 6,713 | 6,783—9,328 |
| 7 | 9,970 | 10,970 | 11,630 | 6,713 | 7,437—10,223 |

*Plus approximately $1,000 for each additional family member.

SENATE REPORT:

Poverty Level set at 50% of average Canadian family income adjusted to family size, making provision for inflation and gross national product.

STATISTICS CANADA:

Updated cutoff is determined by adjusting the low income lines developed in 1961 for increasing prices as reflected in Consumer Price Index.

Revised cutoffs are based on changing consumption patterns which now indicate that families who spend 62% or more of their income on food, clothing and shelter (as opposed to the 70% criterion used in the updated lines) are in straitened circumstances.

These limits are also differentiated by size of area of residence. For example, using the revised limits, the Poverty Line for a family of 4 in 1974 range from $5,527 in a rural area to $7,601 in cities of one half million or more people.

Senator Croll: I want it clearly understood that in what I have to say I am not suggesting that anything can be done for these people outside the guidelines, nothing special. I now consider them to be within the law under the bill.

I suppose most people think that we have had legislation on minimum wages for years and years. That is not so. The first minimum wage for men was legislated in Ontario in 1937. I know, because I was responsible for the act. That is almost 40 years ago. At that time it was a big thing. It was quite a sensation. It was widely publicized, and it was thought quite something to pass that act. I was the provincial Minister of Labour at the time. I had hoped for and expected a great deal from the act, and it did a great deal.

[Senator Croll.]

It was a great help to very many people who were working for horrible wages, as you know. Indeed, some are working for horrible wages even today. However, it did not live up to my expectations. But then, what does? With these acts one has to be prepared for some let-down. However, it did indicate a concern and compassion for people who could not look out for themselves.

Senator Langlois: What was the hourly rate then?

Senator Croll: I cannot tell you; I do not know.

Senator Flynn: Forty cents an hour.

Senator Croll: Whatever it was, it was pretty low.

Honourable senators will be interested to know who these people are, and how many there are. These are the people, and were the people then, who have no more economic strength than a butterfly in a storm. There is an historic relationship between minimum wages and poverty, so I speak to you today because I think they have been hurt enough. The Poverty Line Updated—1975, which I have just had appended to my speech, has been accepted by the country generally.

The government supports controls. In that support the government also supports an increase in the minimum wage and other measures. But the government has done nothing. Perhaps they will do something after this bill. It may be that they will agree with what we have been saying and will be saying here. I had reason to believe a long time ago that they would do something about the minimum wage. The people who are earning these minimum wages do not feel controls so much. They feel the effect and the psychology of restraint. The employer who gives them nothing is a patriot because he is doing exactly what the country wants him to do. That is not the way we should look upon these things. For an employer to pay rock bottom wages is no longer shameful, it is no longer exploiting; he is doing what he thinks he ought to be doing.

All I can tell you, honourable senators, is that the federal government has not done itself credit. However, before I get on to that, let me follow up what I was saying a few minutes ago. This may be of interest to all of you.

Senator Choquette: Will it add anything to the debate?

Senator Croll: It will add a great deal to your knowledge, which is what we are here for. I talked about minimum wages, and the bill deals with minimum wages.

Senator Asselin: Is that in Bill C-73?

Senator Croll: Of course.

Senator Asselin: Does it deal with what you are talking about—minimum wages?

Senator Croll: Of course it does. It fixes the minimum wage at $3.50 an hour. There is provision for that. Of course it does.

I have said that there are about ten million people employed in this country. About 30 per cent of them belong to the union movement. In the first place, there are approximately 15,000 employed by the federal government who work for minimum wages. I will tell you who they are in a little while. In Ontario about 10 per cent of the working labour force draw minimum wages; in the Western Provinces, from 10 to 15 per cent; in Quebec, from 15 to 17 per cent; in the Maritimes, from 17 to 22 per cent; and in Newfoundland, from 22 to 25 per cent. In total, there are 1,100,000 people who work for the minimum wage.

I have been asked about the minimum wage. At the federal level, and in Quebec and Manitoba, it is $2.60, and is going up to $2.80 in Quebec. Some minimum wage rates are going up to $3 as of January 1—for example, in Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia and the Northwest Territories. No one has reached a minimum of $3.50 an hour.

● (1230)

You will find that at $3.50 an hour it averages out to approximately $7,200 per annum. When you consider that figure, you will realize that in 1974 for a family of four the poverty line was approximately $7,200. In 1975 the poverty line for a family of four is approximately $8,100. The unfortunate part about it is that for a family with five children, and an income based on $2.60 an hour, the $110 family allowance coming into the home is 20 per cent of the family income. In welfare families it is 25 per cent of the family income.

You often hear a great deal of talk to the effect that when you offer these people work, they will not accept it and will run for the welfare office. I have some information here that I cannot resist putting on the record for the understanding and information of many members of the Senate. In various parts of the country the average working man receives less money than a similar sized family on welfare, because there are deductions that a person on welfare does not have to contend with. The government has implemented a program whereby people working for the minimum wage may go to the government—we are talking about workers, not welfare people—and have their income augmented. The government says, "Come to us and we will augment your income, if you are earning less than what welfare people are." Fair bargain?

In Toronto, where I believe 16,000 were eligible for assistance, only 80 appeared as of recent date. They would not be found dead or alive in the welfare office. There are people who work and who want to work, and they will even work for poor wages.

A remarkable thing, which I am sure none of you has ever heard or seen before, regardless of where you have been, is contained in an editorial which appeared in the Toronto Star on October 31, 1975 entitled "Making Work Pay More Than Welfare." A telephone number was given for people to call to find out whether or not they would qualify for assistance. I am sure you have never heard or seen anywhere in this country a newspaper giving you a telephone number, and saying, "Come on, get in there, there is something free there for you." They did not go. If you ask why, I say it is because they wanted to work. They have always worked. I am not talking about people on welfare. That is another matter that we will deal with, and it is not nearly as bad as is often pointed out.

Previously, I mentioned working for minimum wages.

Senator Walker: Would the honourable senator permit a question? Where is there a word in the bill about minimum wage?

Senator Croll: I beg your pardon?

Senator Walker: There is not a word in this bill about minimum wage.

Senator Croll: There is.

Senator Walker: There is not a word, with the greatest of respect, about minimum wage. Are you suggesting that it should be in the bill, or should be in the regulations?

Senator Croll: There is mention made in the guidelines.

Senator Asselin: We are not talking about guidelines.

Senator Croll: The guidelines are a part of this bill.

Senator Walker: There is no mention of it, and no reference to it.

Senator Croll: The people covered are those working in hotels, restaurants and manufacturing plants—cleaning personnel, janitors, cleaners, clerks, typists and sales personnel.

There is one more interesting point I shall bring to your attention. I have been for some time keeping an eye on the number of people on welfare, and the number of people working for the minimum wage. It is surprising to note that about 1,100,000 are on minimum wages, and about 1,300,000 not on social welfare but welfare. You begin to realize there is a relationship between the minimum wage and welfare. They are either one or the other. They never earn enough to get off the floor. I have indicated that at the present time we really need to make sure that those at the bottom, those who are not in any way responsible for the inflation and who have contributed nothing to that inflation, should not be hurt by anything that we do under the present bill. Whether it is in the bill or not, it is certainly in the guidelines, and it certainly has been stated time and time again by the minister. The allowable amount was raised from $600 to $700 without being offset by the guidelines. This is a matter we should be concerned with, and that is the warning I hope I have passed to the Canadian people.

Hon. Hazen Argue: Honourable senators, perhaps my remarks will be pertinent following the remarks of Senator Croll. I wish to congratulate the senator on putting forward the position of the lower income earners and particularly those who are at the minimum wage level.

I rise at this time to put on the record the position of organized agriculture in Canada, as I see it, in relation to this legislation. The government is short of friends in going forward with this legislation. They need more friends. Certainly organized labour has come out strongly against Bill C-73.

The agricultural organizations are in favour of this legislation. Speaking in Regina on December 3, the president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, Mr. Charles Munro, stated that the Canadian Federation of Agriculture supports the government's anti-inflation guidelines. The Ontario Federation of Agriculture, meeting in convention, went on record, according to a Canadian Press report of November 27, 1975, as follows:

The Ontario Federation of Agriculture adopted a resolution Wednesday calling for acceptance of the federal government's wage-and-price-control guidelines by all individuals and groups, including commodity marketing boards.

● (1240)

The Saskatchewan Wheat Pool recently held a convention. I might remind honourable senators that the membership of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool is comprised of almost every single grain producer in Saskatchewan. The Saskatchewan Wheat Pool does not support the federal government or its ministers or policies on every occasion. As a matter of fact, I have heard it said that the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool is opposed basically to the Liberal Party and to the Liberal Government. At their convention a year ago the members of the Pool came out opposing any tampering with the Crowsnest Pass rate. At that time they were so critical of the government as to ask for the resignation of the Honourable Otto Lang. On the other hand, just a few weeks ago the same organization, meeting in convention, went on record as being in support of the federal government's anti-inflation guidelines. I think it is important to take note of that. Indeed, the president of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool had words of praise for the federal government's anti-inflation program. Let me quote from a press report of a statement made by Mr. E. K. Turner, the president of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, in a recent radio broadcast. The report reads:

While calling for federal government leadership in curbing inflation, the pool president said, "Every individual business, organization and governments at all levels must cooperate to make the program work." He further stated, "Frankly, I have been disappointed at the amount of criticism which has been directed at the program by some groups, and also in the attitude of some provincial governments, including our own—[the Government of Saskatchewan] which have failed to take a position of positive support for the program."

[Senator Croll.]

So, the government has the support of organized agriculture, which supports this bill and the principle it is endeavouring to enunciate.

Senator Goldenberg: Will the honourable senator permit a question?

Senator Argue: Yes.

Senator Goldenberg: Is there any connection between the support of the farm organizations and the exemption from the guidelines of food at the farm gate?

Senator Argue: I am not sure that food is exempt exactly in that way, but there probably is a connection. But I should like to deal with that more fully, because I feel that the farmer does not have that much to gain through this legislation. The farmer supports it, but he may not have that much to gain from it.

Certain things that have happened recently have made the farmer quite concerned at the government's policy as set out in Bill C-73, and at the monetary restrictions and the program of cutbacks and savings. From statements that have been made we know that government policy seems to be aimed at affording to the average Canadian in the labour force a 10 per cent or 12 per cent increase in wages or incomes every year. They cannot look forward to more than that, but they should be able to look forward to at least that. According to present government policy, corporations can look forward to those increases in prices which are necessary to cover bona fide increases in costs. But as I see the signals, there is evidence that the farmer's position may in fact be cut back.

I am not suggesting it is conclusive evidence, but I am certainly concerned at the strong condemnation which has been voiced over the last number of months, condemnation of the Egg Marketing Agency, condemnation of this kind of quota system and orderly marketing, condemnation by the Chairman of the Food Prices Review Board, Mrs. Beryl Plumptre, who now is Vice-Chairman of the Anti-Inflation Board. Moreover, the government announced a few weeks ago that the dairy producers of Canada will not be able to hold their own. They will not be able to obtain a 10 or 12 per cent increase in income; on the contrary, it has been announced that there will be a 5 per cent reduction in the subsidy for industrial milk. On top of that the government has also enunciated a new policy to increase allowable imports of cheese. It is for those reasons that the dairy producers across the country, who form part of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, while supporting the legislation as a matter of principle are disturbed by the cutbacks in dairy subsidies.

Farmers, I believe, are quite happy to live within the 10 per cent or 12 per cent. They would be almost happy, perhaps even satisfied, to be in exactly the same position as a corporation: that if their costs go up, their prices will also go up. But they are certainly fearful that they will be caught in the cutback and that their incomes, instead of rising by 10 per cent or 12 per cent, will in fact drop.

Canada is becoming more and more a consumer society. Twenty years ago on a visit to Washington I saw the powerful farm lobby operating in Congress. When I was there two years ago there was no longer any powerful farm lobby. I was honoured to have the opportunity to speak, along with other parliamentarians, with the Secretary of Agriculture in the United States, Earl Butz, and I gathered the impression from him that part of his policy as Secretary of Agriculture was to do everything in his power to see that food prices were low and stayed that way.

I am grateful that we have in our government in the Minister of Agriculture, the Honourable Eugene Whelan, a strong champion of the farmers' point of view. The farmers need him where he is. They need his position to be strong. Unfortunately I have the impression—I hope I am wrong—that his position is gradually being eroded, and that food and farmers are being used as part of the government's restraint policy, part of the government's policy to hold down costs in a way which will be adverse to farmers.

If you want cheap food and you say, "Well, don't let the prices be established at the farm gate," then for one thing we can freeze the price of beef. If you froze the price of beef at the farm gate, you would just bring about a further rush of cattle to the market, which would perhaps have the effect of lowering the price of beef for a short time, but in the long run there would be very high prices for beef indeed, because beef production in this country would have been drastically reduced.

We have worked hard in this chamber, and in the Agriculture Committee, to bring about improvement in agricultural policies. Certainly we played a part in improving the Farm Credit Act. The Farm Credit Corporation had a certain quantity of money—I can remember it being discussed in this chamber earlier this year—from which it could make loans. The Farm Credit Corporation has run out of money. It has no money left to make any loans. It has not had any money since September. Will the federal government now reduce the amount of money allotted to the Farm Credit Corporation as part of the government's austerity program? I am convinced that if you want to have reasonable food prices in Canada in the future, it is necessary to give reasonable prices to the farmers today. I say that we must keep up agricultural production, and I, along with other agricultural producers and other senators, lend full support to the second reading of this measure. I think the government, however, should be careful, in everything it does, to help support and bolster the income of the low wage earner. In exactly the same way, though perhaps for other or additional reasons, government policy should not sacrifice the wellbeing of the farmer. On the contrary, it should allow him to obtain a fair share of the income of this country. He should be able to play his part in production and achieve his portion of the 10 or 12 per cent increase that is allowed. If they will not give it all to him, he will probably be satisfied with less but he should be assured that when his costs go up his income will go up.

● (1250)

We have in this chamber a representative of the government, and I would hope that when agricultural questions are discussed in Cabinet, Senator Perrault will assist the Honourable Eugene Whelan in making certain that farmers receive their fair share. Nothing could be more advantageous to the Liberal Party than to have a happy group of farmers across this country. They have shown real statesmanship in supporting this legislation, even though they realize that there are dangers involved in it. I hope they will not be made the sacrificial lamb of the government's program of cutting back expenditures.

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, as I rise to conclude this debate—

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C. speaks now his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, some notable speeches have been made in the course of this important debate, and excellent ideas and proposals have been received from all parts of the house. I think all of us have the feeling that this is "landmark" legislation, and that this bill represents something very important in the evolution of our country.

The bill has been variously described as "landmark," "important," "significant," "ominous," "unusual," and so on. It has been suggested that in some ways it is dictatorial, and that it fetters human freedom. One fact, however, emerges from the present economic condition of this country—unusual, important action is required to meet the problem confronting all of us, regardless of our political beliefs.

There is an area where political dissent and disagreement are legitimate, and honourable senators of the Opposition have quite properly pointed to those areas in which they believe this bill to be deficient. On behalf of the government, let me say that should this bill receive the support of Parliament every effort will be made in the months to come to improve it and make it better legislation.

In the time allowed me at present—and I hope to be brief—it is my intention to answer some of the questions posed primarily by members of the Opposition during the course of the debate. At this point, however, I suggest that the Senate do adjourn during pleasure, to reassemble at the call of the bell at approximately two o'clock.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 2.15 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, before the luncheon adjournment I suggested that we have in the present situation in this country a need for a national consensus, because the problem of inflation is one that affects all of us, regardless of our political persuasion or where we may reside. It seems to me that a good law must be one which meets a clear public need, and, in addition to meeting that need, there must be a consensus of support for it. Yesterday we heard the Deputy Leader of the Opposition make the point that there seems to be—

Senator Grosart: Yes, I made the point.

Senator Perrault: Well, the honourable senator felt he made the point, but I must tell him that there were those in the chamber who felt he had not made it all that persuasively. But he gave us his assessment of the situation, and that was that the reaction in Canada to this proposed legislation indicated that there was not widespread public support for it. He said it was meeting with resistance in all provinces.

Honourable senators, I can tell you that I think most Canadians took a great deal of satisfaction from the results of polls announced yesterday by the CBC and another survey organization which indicate that 66 per cent of the Canadian people believe the program is necessary. Not as many people believe that the program can succeed—I think that less than 60 per cent of the people polled think it can succeed—but surely our task, as people who are supposed to provide leadership in the country, is to assure the Canadian people that the program can be made to work. Our task must not be to travel throughout the country and suggest reasons why it should not succeed, but, rather, we should be concerned with making the program work, because it is a program which the people want to succeed.

Senator Flynn: That is what you were doing a year ago.

Senator Perrault: Well, we have heard many statements made during the course of this debate about what might have been. Some speakers looked back nostalgically to 1972 and 1974 and said, "Perhaps, if a different government had been elected, things might have been different." However, we are living with the economic facts of 1975. We know that the growth in national productivity is around the zero mark, and that inflation is around 12 per cent while wage settlements are around 18 or 20 per cent. So we know that something has to be done.

I do not want to repeat the speech I made earlier, but I shall attempt to answer some of the questions, and offer some explanations in response to the questions which have been posed.

It has been suggested that the administrator will have powers which are totally inappropriate. I assure honourable senators that it is not the intention of the government to install some mad czar with unlimited powers as the administrator. The administrator's position will be something like that of the Deputy Minister of National Revenue. The administrator can make his rulings, but his rulings are going to be subject to questioning, and revocation and rescinding if necessary.

I need only refer honourable senators to clauses 24 and 30 of this bill which, in my view, provide reassurances for all of us that the administrator will not be given these dangerous and arbitrary powers which have been suggested by some honourable senators. Clause 24 reads as follows:

The Governor in Council may, within thirty days of receipt by the Clerk of the Privy Council of a copy of an order made by the Administrator, either upon petition of any person affected by the order or of his own motion, by order, rescind the order of the Administrator or instruct the Administrator to vary his order—

That hardly suggests that the administrator has life and death power over anyone in this country.

Senator Flynn: The government will have to support it.

Senator Perrault: The suggestion is that the government will have to support the order of the administrator. That is simply not correct. That is not the way in which this government intends to proceed.

Senator Flynn: He won't last long.

Senator Perrault: The Governor in Council really represents the people of Canada.

[Senator Perrault.]

Senator Flynn: Oh yes?

● (1420)

Senator Perrault: We then have clause 30 under the heading of "Appeals," which provides as follows:

(1) Any person

(a) against whom an order has been made by the Administrator pursuant to section 20 or 21, or

(b) who is affected by a variation pursuant to section 22, without his consent, of an order referred to in paragraph (a) that was made against him, may appeal to the Appeal Tribunal, but no appeal under this section may be instituted—

Those are just two examples of the way in which human rights and freedoms are protected.

Senator Grosart: Is there an appeal to the courts?

Senator Perrault: The suggestion that the administrator will be given unlimited bureaucratic power is simply not correct.

I refer to other clauses of Bill C-73, which contain similar protections of human rights and freedoms. I am speaking of the manner in which human rights will be protected in this country. Does anyone really suggest that if arbitrary, undemocratic decisions are made by the administrator, or by the board, that Parliament would be muzzled? Under the standing orders of the other place there are occasions during each of the three supply periods in a year for motions of non-confidence, and the same right of free speech exists in this chamber. The reports of both the board and the administrator will be made public and tabled in Parliament. They will also be tabled in the Senate. In addition, the estimates of the board will be presented to Parliament and considered by a committee of this house. So I simply attempt to make the point that there is not an effort on the part of the government to establish unlimited arbitrary powers, or to provide any person with those powers.

Senator Grosart, in his interesting and informative speech respecting the Interpretation Act, alleged that Parliament had its powers restricted by Bill C-73. It is clear, and this bill re-affirms it, that Parliament retains its right to legislate any statute that will supersede Bill C-73, if Parliament specifically says so. On another point, this bill does not supersede the Bill of Rights. Indeed, I believe that when Senator Grosart was speaking to this point he made the statement—

Senator Walker: No, he did not.

Senator Perrault: He made a number of statements. He asked a question. At page 1541 of the Debates of the Senate for yesterday, he is reported as saying:

I don't know, and I don't think anybody knows, whether the provisions of this bill are intended to make the provisions of the Bill of Rights completely inoperative. The Bill of Rights, of course—

This is one of the very accurate statements made by Senator Grosart during his speech:

—makes it clear that there must be an express statement that such and such a bill does not abrogate the provisions of the Bill of Rights.

That is an accurate conclusion. That is the situation.

Senator Grosart: Will you read the rest of it, please?

Senator Perrault: There must be an explicit statement that this bill "shall operate notwithstanding the Canadian Bill of Rights", and there is no such expression in Bill C-73. I am pleased to give that assurance.

A question was posed by Senator Asselin as to whether a written opinion regarding the constitutionality of Bill C-73 had been requested of the law officers of the Crown. The only answer that can be given to this question is that which I have already given, namely, that this issue has been given a great deal of careful study by the federal government, and we have obtained an assurance that the actions delineated in the bill before us are within the power of the federal government under the terms of the British North America Act. I went on to say:

There is no question in our minds about the legality of the proposed legislation.

Specifically, the Department of Justice has been duly consulted, and following those consultations the government has chosen to introduce this legislation in the firm belief that the legislation is within its powers. Basically, the government is acting pursuant to the powers relating to peace, order and good government, which are granted to it by the British North America Act. It is significant that not one province has challenged the constitutional right of the federal government to proceed with this legislation.

Senator Grosart: Not yet. They don't know how the government is going to proceed.

Senator Perrault: The honourable senator said they do not know how the government is going to proceed. I have a greater estimation of the legal research facilities of the provinces. I do not believe for a minute that if they had found an avenue they would not have delineated it before this time.

Senator Grosart: They haven't seen the regulations.

Senator Perrault: We are told that the bill may not be within Canadian legal tradition. This is not a matter of delegation as between the provincial and federal governments. All depends on section 91 of the British North America Act, which permits the federal Parliament to make laws for the peace, order and good government of Canada. At the federal-provincial conference all provinces accepted the jurisdiction of the Government of Canada, and no province rejected the exercise of that jurisdiction through this bill.

The honourable senator made reference to regulations, the suggestion being that somehow regulations should be fully developed and articulated before we ask Parliament to pass this bill. Officials are now in the process of preparing regulations, and are conferring with various groups in the community with respect to them. There is expertise across this country. Many people and many organizations must be consulted before those can be prepared in their final form. It will be a matter of some time yet—but hopefully by the end of the month—before they will be in the definitive form required for law-making. Although the specific duty of the board is to try to clarify as soon as possible some of the areas of obscurity brought to light by different groups in the community, every effort is being made to complete this work as quickly as possible.

The honourable Leader of the Opposition, with his vast wartime experience with a cousin of the present program of guidelines known as controls, knows how complicated the whole area is. The detailed application of regulations is something about which, even when the initial work is done, we are not going to have all the final answers. The regulations will have to be changed and added to as time goes on. We are attempting to get the work done as quickly as possible so that the position will be known in the main sectors of interest.

There has been some discussion about professional fees. The question was whether provinces are being consulted with respect to guidelines regulating professional fees. More precisely, one question related to how productivity would be measured or determined in relation to the professions.

This is a matter which has been the subject of a number of meetings—meetings which are still being held with the provinces. The matter is being discussed, and there has been no agreement yet as to the manner in which professions will be regulated. It would seem that the only answer that is available at this time is the answer I have already given—that is, professional organizations generally are under provincial jurisdiction.

I was asked further whether the provinces would also cooperate and set up regulatory boards. Clearly the question of whether the provinces will set up their own regulatory boards, or whether they will ask the federal government to enforce the law in their respective provinces with respect to the public sector, is now being discussed with the provinces and no firm conclusion has yet been reached.

A question raised during the question period today was about meetings which may have taken place in recent days or weeks with the provinces. I have taken it upon myself to ascertain the current situation. There was no meeting between the Minister of Finance and the provinces yesterday. The last meeting was on November 24. The minister has had discussions with respect to the public sector in the provinces, and has undertaken to table copies of a model agreement submitted to the provinces in connection with Bill C-73 in the other place today, and this will also be made available here for the information of honourable senators.

● (1430)

Senator Flynn's question relating to clause 46(6), admittedly, posed what appears to be an anomaly regarding the role of this chamber in the process of deciding extensions of the guideline program, and so forth. I feel certain that this is one of the questions which will be asked of the Minister of Finance later this day at the meeting of the committee charged with the responsibility of reviewing the bill.

A question was asked about the awarding of costs. Senator Grosart felt, because no costs may be awarded by the appeal tribunal on the disposition of an appeal, that this represented an injustice. His remarks with respect to this matter are to be found at page 1540 of the Debates of the Senate of yesterday, as follows:

No matter how aggrieved or injured the appellant may be, the bill clearly states, in clause 35:

No costs may be awarded by the Appeal Tribunal on the disposition of an appeal.

The appellant may have been put out of business, he may be 100 per cent right, but under this bill no costs can be awarded to him.

I point out to Senator Grosart that, similarly, no costs are awarded as a penalty in the event that the appellant loses, which is also a real possibility.

Senator Flynn: All too real.

Senator Perrault: Senator Grosart expressed his concern for small businesses in respect of the high costs which could conceivably be involved in this process. I think we should remind ourselves again, however, that the mandatory aspects of this legislation apply to firms of 500 employees or more. Generally, therefore, small businesses, unless they are in a strategic sector or are construction companies, will not be affected by this legislation. So, the danger does not appear to be as real as suggested by Senator Grosart.

I should also like to remind Senator Grosart that in section 171(3) of the Income Tax Act we have precisely the same kind of provision.

Senator Flynn: Mistake.

Senator Perrault: Section 171(3) of the Income Tax Act reads:

No costs may be awarded by the Board on the disposition of an appeal.

Senator Grosart: That is the worst kind of justification you could think of.

Senator Perrault: So, this type of provision is in the tradition of this country. This type of provision in legislation has worked very well in the past.

Senator Grosart: Not for me.

Senator Perrault: It is not a departure from established Canadian norms of law and justice.

There was also some question raised about the time limit. If the provinces are in favour of an 18-month limit—and this is a matter of some current interest—I have been assured that they are free to enter into agreements with respect to their respective public services. These regulations will end in 18 months, if the provinces wish to enter into those kinds of agreement.

Senator Flynn: If they pass legislation providing for such a term, they will have no choice.

Senator Perrault: They will end in 18 months, unless renewed, but the provinces cannot shorten the application of this proposed act in respect of the private sector.

Senator Asselin made some pungent remarks about the role of the administrator. I think we all enjoyed his speech. Indeed, I think there was a high level of quality in all of the speeches, as the Leader of the Opposition has already pointed out. Senator Asselin said:

—orders issued by the administrator may be appealed . . . only on matters of law, not on matters of fact.

This is not correct. Orders of the administrator can be appealed to the Anti-Inflation Tribunal, which will have a duty to grant a proper hearing to the parties and will consider both the facts and the law. It is only the decisions of the Anti-Inflation Tribunal that can be appealed on matters of law to the Federal Court of Appeal.

[Senator Perrault.]

Later in his remarks, Senator Asselin asserted that pursuant to the power under clause 39 of the bill, the Governor in Council could make regulations that go beyond the legislation. Clause 39 is, in fact, a general clause which grants a regulation-making power to the Governor in Council. This is a clause that appears in many statutes and has traditionally been used only to regulate with respect to details that have not been taken care of by the substantial regulation-making power which appears elsewhere in the legislation. In any event, this clause does not empower the Governor in Council to make regulations that go beyond the statute. Also, as honourable senators know, there is a joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons which has a mandate to review regulations and ensure that this does not happen.

Senator Flynn: The honourable senator says it will ensure this does not happen. This has happened very often. Sometimes it is too late.

Senator Perrault: We on this side are confident that as long as the members of the Opposition maintain the vigilance they have demonstrated so well in the past we need not fear about a miscarriage of the law.

Senator Grosart: You are going to get the bill through today, I think.

Senator Perrault: I want to make sure that I have not omitted some of the points that have been raised. The Leader of the Opposition talked about the historical background, and said that we must go back to the Second World War when there were controls which were controls and not guidelines.

Senator Flynn: What difference does it make?

Senator Perrault: We are in a different context. I suggest that there is a substantial leeway in the guidelines that was not in those controls. If the guidelines program does not work as effectively as most Canadians wish it to work, or as effectively as is desired, we will soon know the difference between the definition of "guidelines" and "controls."

Senator Flynn: There was a lot of leeway in the controls, but I do not see it in the guidelines.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I want to move along quickly, because I know the committee will be convening in a few minutes.

The Leader of the Opposition said this is a most unusual bill, a frightening and strange bill, and that he did not know the thinking of those who prepared it. However, I think the assurances that have been given this afternoon, and the assurances that are to be found in the bill, should remove the fear felt by the Leader of the Opposition.

I think most of the salient questions have been answered. I do not want to omit replying to the principal questions that have been raised. Some honourable senators have spoken about the length of the program. I wonder whether some members of the Opposition are unduly concerned about whether this program is for 18 months, 36 months, or whatever the period is. Whatever time we assign to the program, it is important that we convey to the people of this country that we are very serious about meeting the problem. This is really a judgment matter. Is it better psychologically to say we are going to have the restraints for a twelve-month period or an eighteen-month period, or the maximum of three years which is set forth in this bill? It seems to me that psychologically there are many advantages in suggesting that it can go on for as long as three years. If necessary, it could be extended.

● (1440)

It is very clearly pointed out in the bill that the program can be shortened. There is provision here for a group of 50 members of the other place to initiate a debate. There is the possibility for them to introduce a resolution on the matter. There is the possibility for the government to make a proclamation, an order in council, which would shorten that period of time.

Senator Flynn: If you can prolong it after three years, why can you not prolong it after eighteen months? What is the difference?

Senator Perrault: It is simply a matter of judgment, senator. When you say it is an eighteen-month program, many people are simply going to say, "I think we can hang on for eighteen months, and then after that eighteen-month period is over we can certainly make demands on the employer for higher wages, or boost the price of products."

Senator Asselin: Will it not be the same after three years?

Senator Perrault: Three years suggests that there is a greater resolution on the part of the government. These are matters of judgment. We may have honest differences on this point, but I believe that all parts of this chamber want the program to work regardless of certain of our reservations.

Senator Grosart: It is probably the recognition of the time it took the government to create the mess.

Senator Perrault: I know the honourable senator has a reputation for being a fair-minded man, and he would be the last person to accuse any government of having the power of either singlehandedly creating prosperity or singlehandedly creating recession or adversity.

Senator Grosart: I am not too sure.

Senator Flynn: Not suddenly—gradually.

Senator Grosart: It took four years.

Senator Perrault: I have further detailed information on the expiration date. The act expires December 31, 1978, or an earlier date fixed by proclamation. The question posed by some senators is: Does that mean there is no limit to the application of the bill? We have only to look at the three following subclauses which require a positive resolution of Parliament to continue the administration.

Another point which has been raised, both here and in the country, is that the government might decide that controls are necessary for a long time. It would depend on the circumstances at the time. Of course, that is the only kind of answer which can be given, because the government is hoping that gradually the steam is going to be taken out of the inflationary spiral. As honourable senators are aware, the government is hoping to drive the rate of inflation down to something like 8 per cent in the next twelve months, and then gradually over the next three years get it down to very manageable proportions.

Honourable senators, if I have not dealt with all the important questions which have been raised during the course of this debate, I apologize. I took down as many of those questions as possible, and these are the replies which I am able to give at this time. I urge your support for second reading of this bill.

Senator Argue: I wonder if the government leader would permit a question before he resumes his seat? Would he care to make a statement as to the government's attitude towards agriculture, generally, and whether he feels there is a drive now to have a cutback in certain support programs? I believe this would result in a reduction in farm income, and I do not think that is what is desired—at least, I hope it is not.

Senator Perrault: I appreciate the opportunity to venture a reply. This government has always been very concerned about the people who work in the important agricultural industry, and I believe the record bears that out.

The whole thrust of this program is to increase productivity. The program seeks to provide a bonus to those who make greater economic contribution to this country. That is why this program says that for equal work it would be wrong to compensate to inordinate levels those who seek increases in their wages and salaries. But if more work is accomplished in agriculture, in industry, and by professionals, then there is ample justification for increases which are representative of that greater effort. So far as agriculture is concerned, it is not within this program of restraints—I almost said "controls."

Senator Grosart: Guidelines.

Senator Perrault: Guidelines, yes. Agriculture is not within the guidelines. The program is designed to increase productivity in the non-agricultural sectors, and also to increase agricultural production greatly. I hardly think we would achieve the kind of objectives this program seeks if we were to cut back on other programs designed to increase the productivity of our important farm population. I am pleased, therefore, to give that kind of assurance.

Senator Grosart: May I ask the Leader of the Government one question? I congratulate him on the effort he has made to answer the questions which were asked on this side, but there is one question which I do not believe he has answered.

Yesterday I asked him if, in view of the wording of clause 38—I know that I cannot ask him to interpret the bill—it was the intention of the government to make the traditional prerogative writs ineffective against any act or decision of the administrator. I believe it is important for us to have an answer to that question.

Senator Perrault: What was the clause?

Senator Grosart: I was referring to page 29 of the bill as passed by the House of Commons, clause 38, which is headed: "Judicial Review of Decisions or Orders of Administrator and Appeal Tribunal." It is the famous "for greater certainty" clause.

Senator Perrault: I have located the appropriate clause. What was your question?

Senator Grosart: The question has to do with this clause headed: "Judicial Review of Decisions or Orders of Administrator and Appeal Tribunal." The Appeal Tribunal is dealt with in the latter part of the clause. The first part of the clause reads:

For greater certainty, a decision or order of the Administrator under this Act is not subject to review or to be restrained, prohibited, removed, set aside or otherwise dealt with except to the extent and in the manner provided by this Act—

I said yesterday, the "manner provided" is minimal. I am now asking if it is the intention of the government that that clause shall remove the rights of citizens to proceed against such an action under the traditional prerogative writs. I mentioned some of them yesterday—mandamus, certiorari and so on.

● (1450)

Senator Perrault: It is limited to the right of appeal given under the act, senator.

Senator Flynn: The answer is yes.

Senator Perrault: As I stated, we are really in the area of trading legal opinions on this point.

Senator Grosart: May I say that I was very careful not to ask the Leader of the Government to interpret the bill. What I asked was whether it was the intention of the government to make these writs inoperative against the administrator. We are not trading legal opinions. I am asking what the intention of the government is.

Senator Perrault: The only provision here is:

—except to the extent and in the manner provided by this Act—

And I have quoted clause 24 and clause 30 to indicate that there is ample protection against arbitrary actions by the administrator.

Senator Grosart: That is not the question I asked. I want to know whether these writs apply, yes or no.

Senator Goldenberg: May I point out to Senator Grosart that if it is the intention of the government to exclude the application of the prerogative writs, then that is in conformity with a great deal of the legislation passed in recent years governing administrative tribunals. I think the Leader of the Opposition would agree with me on that.

Senator Grosart: That, of course, is not the question I asked.

Senator Perrault: I very much appreciate the learned opinion of Senator Goldenberg. I think it can be agreed that the bill does provide ample protection for the rights of individuals, and that there is ample protection against inordinate use of arbitrary power by any officer of this program.

Senator Grosart: That is still not an answer to the question I asked.

Senator Croll: The answer is yes. Does that make you feel any better?

Senator Flynn: Senator Goldenberg, of course, knows that the Supreme Court frowns upon clauses which limit the use of these writs.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Perrault moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 1549.)

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL FINANCE
ON SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (A)

Tuesday, December 9, 1975.

The Standing Senate Committee on National Finance to which the Supplementary Estimates (A) laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1976, were referred, has in obedience to the order of reference of Tuesday, November 13, 1975, examined the said Supplementary Estimates (A) and reports as follows:

1. In obedience to the foregoing the committee made a general examination of the Supplementary Estimates (A) and heard evidence from the Honourable J. Chrétien, President of Treasury Board and Mr. R. L. Richardson, Assistant Secretary, Program Branch, Treasury Board.

2. These Supplementary Estimates total $1,750 million of which $98 million are non-budgetary items, that is to say, loans, investments and advances. The budgetary expenses total $1,652 million of which $524 million are statutory items and $1,127 million represent funds for which Parliament is being asked to provide new authority.

3. After the excessive jump in the Supplementary Estimates and total Estimates for 1974/75 as shown in the following table, your Committee was interested to hear the President of Treasury Board state that the total Supplementary Estimates for 1975/76 would probably be no more than $2,500 million which would bring the total expenditures for 1975/76 to approximately $32,000 million. This would mean the growth in expenditures this year would be no more than 15 per cent over last year which is within the goal of 16 per cent mentioned by the President of Treasury Board when he appeared before the committee last Spring in connection with the Main Estimates for 1975/76.

YEARLY ESTIMATES TOTALS

(millions of dollars)

| Fiscal Year | Main Estimates | Supplementary Estimates | Total |
|-------------|----------------|-------------------------|----------|
| 1969/70 | 12,467.4 | 348.8 | 12,816.2 |
| 1970/71 | 13,752.3 | 929.6 | 14,681.9 |
| 1971/72 | 15,340.9 | 1,305.5 | 16,646.4 |
| 1972/73 | 16,539.1 | 1,725.6 | 18,264.7 |
| 1973/74 | 19,286.5 | 2,124.9 | 21,411.4 |
| 1974/75 | 23,297.4 | 4,935.8 | 28,233.2 |
| 1975/76 | 29,585.3 | 1,751.0* | |

*Supplementary Estimates (A) only

4. Your committee was pleased to hear that its recommendation, made often over the years, that the increase in federal expenditures should not exceed, as a percentage, the increase in the Gross National Product, has now become long term government policy. In the words of the President of Treasury Board, "We would like as a general policy that the public sector should not take more out of the economy than is reflected in the growth of the Gross National Product."

5. The larger statutory items under budgetary expenditures in these Supplementary Estimates are as follows:

- (a) Finance—$200 million to meet the increased cost of public debt charges.
- (b) National Health and Welfare—$127.8 million for contributions to the provinces in connection with the health care program and $45 million for old age security payments in respect of a payment of a spouse's allowance in accordance with the amended Old Age Security Act.
- (c) Transport—$85 million for payments to Railway and Transportation Companies.
- (d) National Defence—$44.9 million for pension contributions and other employee benefits.

6. The larger items to be voted under budgetary expenditures are as follows:

- (a) Energy, Mines and Resources—$385 million for oil compensation payments due, partly, to the increase in the international price of oil in October.
- (b) Manpower and Immigration—$144 million for special employment measures, particularly in the area of job creation.
- (c) National Defence—$133 million, most of which is for increased operating expenses.
- (d) Treasury Board—$112.5 million of which $100 million is for government contingencies and $12.5 million for student summer employment in the summer of 1975 including Opportunities for Youth Program.
- (e) Finance—$50.1 million of which $21 million is for a payment to Saskatchewan relating to the maintenance of the domestic oil price and $29.1 million for contributions to provinces for disaster relief assistance.

7. The Treasury Board has supplied your committee with a list explaining the $1 items in the Supplementary Estimates (A) which is attached as Appendix A to this Report.

8. A $1 item of particular interest to your committee concerns a transfer of $24 million to provide for the increased operating costs of new and existing Crown-owned accommodation, the renegotiation of existing leases at higher rates and escalation payments in leased accommodation; additional leased accommodation for government departments and agencies; the cost of tenant services for space occupied by the Department of Public Works and for tenant services completed but not paid for in 1974/75. The Treasury Board was asked to provide more details on this item such as the major specific items that have been delayed in order to transfer this amount, a break-down giving examples of premises involved and a comparison of either existing or previous rates with the increased rates. In providing this information Treasury Board officials were also asked to make a distinction between the increase due to the revision of rates and the increase due to the addition of newly leased property.

9. Your committee examined the various items contained in these Supplementary Estimates and received answers to questions from the Treasury Board officials. In some cases the answers were not immediately available and the Treasury Board officials agreed to provide material as soon as possible. The questions for which answers were to be supplied are as follows:

- (a) A comprehensive statement regarding loans to the de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Limited, the government's option with respect to Canadair Ltd., and the expenditures made and operating results with respect to the STOL services between Montreal and Ottawa.
- (b) Regarding the oil compensation payments East of the Ottawa Valley Line, what is the income being received to offset these expenditures?
- (c) Concerning the purchase of heavy water for lease or resale to Canadian and foreign users, what is being paid for the heavy water and at what price is it being sold?
- (d) Could the Committee be given a general idea of the rate of return that is being received on loans for working capital advances?
- (e) May a more detailed break-down of the $200 million required to service the public debt be provided?
- (f) What is the per capita cost per province for health care?

Respectfully submitted.

H. Sparrow
Deputy Chairman

(Appendix A to report)

EXPLANATION OF ONE DOLLAR ITEMS IN SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (A), 1975-76

SUMMARY

The one dollar items included in these Estimates have been grouped in the attached schedules according to purpose.

- A. One Dollar items which authorize transfers from one vote to another—15 items.
- B. One Dollar items which amend the legislative provisions of previous appropriation acts—3 items.
- C. One Dollar items which authorize the payment of grants—6 items.
- D. One Dollar items which authorize financial guarantees—1 item.
- E. One Dollar items which authorize the extension of existing acts to cover circumstances not now covered—2 items.
- F. One Dollar items which amend acts other than appropriation acts—3 items.

November 12, 1975
Estimates Division

SCHEDULE A

ONE DOLLAR ITEMS WHICH AUTHORIZE TRANSFERS FROM ONE VOTE TO ANOTHER—15 ITEMS.

ENERGY, MINES AND RESOURCES—ATOMIC ENERGY CONTROL BOARD

Vote 25a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $199,999.

Explanation—To finance mission-oriented research contracts with non-university organizations in the field of safeguards techniques and other nuclear safety research.

Source of Funds—Vote 30—($199,999)—Funds are available because types of projects previously financed through contributions are to be carried out under contract.

INDUSTRY, TRADE AND COMMERCE

Vote 47a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $999,999.

Explanation—Funds are required to meet the expenses of the Hall Commission of Inquiry on Prairie Grain Handling and Transportation.

Source of Funds—Vote 50—($999,999)—Contributions to the Brazilian Government will be less than originally forecast due to delays in establishing the sites of grain silos.

NATIONAL HEALTH AND WELFARE

Vote 15a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $2,999,999.

Explanation—To provide for a shortage of $3.97 million for non-salary operating expenditures related to the provision of health care to Indians and northern residents.

Source of Funds—Vote 20—($2,999,999)—Funds are available because a number of capital projects originally scheduled for construction in 1975-76 have been deferred.

Vote 40a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $207,999.

Explanation—Increased funds are required for contributions to support athletes and teams training for participation in the 1976 Olympics.

Source of Funds—Vote 35—($207,999)—Funds are available due to reductions in operating expenses.

PUBLIC WORKS

Vote 1a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $741,999.

Explanation—To provide for announced price increases which were not included in 1975-76 Main Estimates and to authorize additional funds for improvements to the Management Information Systems.

Vote 10a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $23,999,999.

Explanation—To provide for the increased operating costs of new and existing Crown-owned accommodation, the renegotiation of existing leases at higher rates and escalation payments in leased accommodation; additional leased accommodation for government departments and agencies; the cost of tenant services for space occupied by the Department of Public Works; and for tenant services completed but not paid for in 1974-75.

Vote 20a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $1,649,999.

Explanation—To provide for wharf repairs at Baie Comeau, Gaspé, Ile-aux-Coudres and Mont Louis, P.Q.

Vote 35a—To authorize transfers totalling $3,699,999.

Explanation—The additional funds will be used to:

- (1) cover the cost of repairs ($1,700,000) to the Alaska Highway caused by a severe rainfall in June, 1975;
- (2) provide for the increased cost ($335,000) of maintenance and repair of bridges in the Ottawa area;
- (3) pay accounts ($500,000) carried over from 1974-75 for maintenance of the Alaska Highway by the Yukon Territorial Government; and
- (4) meet other cost increases ($1,165,000) not provided for in the Main Estimates.

Source of Funds—

| Votes Transferred To | Votes Transferred From | |
|-----------------------------|-------------------------------|--------------------|
| | Vote 15 | Vote 40 |
| Vote 1a | $ 741,999 | — |
| Vote 10a | 23,999,999 | — |
| Vote 20a | 1,649,999 | — |
| Vote 35a | 2,200,000 | 1,499,999 |
| | $28,591,997 | $1,499,999 |

Vote 15—Funds are available because of unforeseen delays in the construction program.

Vote 40—Funds are available due to delays in the reconstruction of the Alaska Highway and in the construction of a new snow shed on the Trans-Canada Highway.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY—NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL OF CANADA

Vote 5a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $899,999.

Explanation—To purchase development and techno-commercial research from Canadian industry in line with the government's make or buy policy.

Source of Funds—Vote 15—($899,999)—The Industrial Research Assistance Program will commit less money than previously forecast in order to support the new program.

Vote 10a—To authorize transfers totalling $4,199,999.

Explanation—To provide for the construction of a remote manipulator system (Teleoperator Program) which consists of an arm and associated controls to handle objects outside the Space Shuttle vehicle. This is the Canadian contribution to the United States Space Shuttle program.

Source of Funds—Vote 15—($1,500,000)—The Industrial Research Assistance Program will commit less money than previously forecast in order to support this program.

Vote 35—($2,699,999)—Funds have been made available through a reduction in expenditures.

SECRETARY OF STATE

Vote 15a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $479,999.

Explanation—To provide for:

- (1) a research program on the Canadian publishing industry to assist in the formulation of a publishing policy ($135,000);
- (2) the cost of a study on the Canadian film industry ($135,000);
- (3) the establishment of the Office of the Special Adviser on Film to study the respective responsibilities of the five federal cultural agencies involved in the film industry and to examine the relationships between the private and public sectors in the production of films ($140,000); and
- (4) the purchase of a sculpture to be presented to the City of Kingston in recognition of that city's tercentenary ($70,000).

Source of Funds—Vote 20—($479,999)—Funds will be available since the proposed grant to the Massey Hall will not be fully utilized pending agreement with the Province of Ontario and Massey Hall.

TRANSPORT—NATIONAL HARBOURS BOARD

Vote 91a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $449,999.

Explanation—To provide for the expected 1975 operating deficit of the port of Halifax.

Source of Funds—Vote 90—($449,999)—Funds are available because of delays in major maintenance operations to the Jacques-Cartier bridge.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

Vote 1a—To authorize transfers totalling $399,999.

Explanation—To cover costs of Commemorative Ceremonies held to mark the 30th anniversary of the liberation of Italy ($315,000) and for tenant services in the Headquarters Building ($85,000).

Vote 5a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote $59,699 and the deletion of a debt of $8,734.92.

Explanation—To provide for unforeseen operating costs of the War Veterans Allowance Board, and for writing off a debt of $8,734.92.

Vote 15a—To authorize transfers totalling $241,999.

Explanation—To provide for tenant services in district offices at St John's, Quebec City, and London, Ontario; and for the restoration of the Vimy Memorial.

Source of Funds—

| Votes Transferred To | Votes Transferred From | |
|----------------------|------------------------|------------------|
| | Vote 35 | Vote 50 |
| Vote 1a | $ 84,999 | $315,000 |
| Vote 5a | — | 59,699 |
| Vote 15a | 105,999 | 136,000 |
| | $190,998 | $510,699 |

Vote 35—Disability pensions will be less than originally forecast.

Vote 50—Capital expenditure will be less than forecast because some projects have been delayed.

SCHEDULE B

ONE DOLLAR ITEMS WHICH AMEND THE LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS OF PREVIOUS APPROPRIATION ACTS—3 ITEMS.

TRANSPORT

Vote 10a—To authorize the entering into of an agreement between the Minister of Transport and private shipping companies for construction and operation of an Arctic Class 2 icebreaking bulk cargo vessel.

Explanation—It is proposed to provide financial support for the construction and operation of an experimental vessel which will be employed to gain technical and commercial experience relating to the employment of Arctic class commercial vessels in northern waters.

URBAN AFFAIRS—CENTRAL MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION

Vote 10a—To authorize the reimbursement to the Corporation for contributions made and expenses incurred in respect of the new Private Lender Assisted Rental Program and for losses, costs and expenses incurred under the new Land Lease Program.

Explanation—To reimburse C.M.H.C. for contributions made and expenses of $200,000 incurred under the Private Lender Assisted Rental Program, and for net losses, costs and expenses of $200,000 incurred in the operation of the Land Lease Program. These two new activities were established as a result of the recent amendment to the National Housing Act. Under this legislation it was not expected that contributions would be made until next year thus authority was not included for the early phase-in of the program.

Vote 15a—To authorize the payment of additional Home Buyer grants and a transfer to this Vote of $10,499,999.

Explanation—To supplement the Home Buyer grant program as a result of a greater than expected volume of applications for payments and the extension of qualifying criteria to include those persons whose "offer to purchase" was accepted on or before October 31, 1975 and who will occupy the new residence before December 31, 1975.

Source of Funds—Vote 10—($10,499,999)—Payments for grants, contributions, subsidies and the reimbursement of administrative costs for the low-income non-profit housing, residential rehabilitation and neighbourhood improvement activities have been lower than originally forecast.

SCHEDULE C

ONE DOLLAR ITEMS WHICH AUTHORIZE THE PAYMENT OF GRANTS—6 ITEMS.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS—CANADIAN INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

Vote 30a—To authorize grants totalling $8,224,000.

Explanation—To provide increased grants to international organizations providing Multilateral Assistance and for International Emergency Relief to meet unanticipated requirements.

Source of Funds—Vote 30—($8,223,999)—Funds are available from reduced requirements for International Assistance grants.

NATIONAL HEALTH AND WELFARE

Vote 50a—To authorize grants totalling $170,900.

Explanation—To provide additional sustaining grants totalling $170,900 to nine welfare agencies. These grants will be used to offset price increases ($103,000) and for program expansions ($67,900).

Source of Funds—Vote 50—($170,899)—Contributions will be reduced from $4,000,000 to $3,829,100, mainly in research projects, to finance the welfare grant increases.

SECRETARY OF STATE

Vote 20a—To authorize grants totalling $481,111.

Explanation—It is proposed to provide a grant to the Community Music School of Greater Vancouver ($111,111) and to increase the grant to the Fathers of Confederation Buildings Trust, Charlottetown, P.E.I. ($370,000).

Vote 25a—To authorize grants totalling $250,000 and a transfer to this Vote of $549,999.

Explanation—Additional funds are required:

- (1) to provide a grant of $180,000 to the Canada Studies Foundation. (This grant will be used to develop curriculum materials for the teaching of Canadian Studies in both elementary and secondary schools, and it will be matched by the Council of Provincial Education Ministers.);
- (2) to provide a grant of $70,000 to the Social Science Research Council to assist with the cost of a national conference to be held in November, 1975 to promote the use of social science research; and
- (3) to reimburse Statistics Canada $300,000 for the cost of a questionnaire survey on the socio-economic and financial background of post-secondary students.

Vote 40a—To authorize grants totalling $255,000 and a transfer to this Vote of $254,999.

Explanation—It was originally proposed to finance certain projects for cultural events in the International Women's Year program by contract. It is now proposed to finance these events through grants.

Source of Funds—

| Votes Transferred To | Votes Transferred From | |
|-----------------------------|-------------------------------|------------------|
| | Vote 20 | Vote 35 |
| Vote 20a | $ 481,110 | — |
| Vote 25a | $ 549,999 | — |
| Vote 40a | — | $254,999 |
| | $1,031,109 | $254,999 |

Vote 20—Funds will be available since the proposed grant to the Massey Hall will not be fully utilized pending agreement with the Province of Ontario and Massey Hall.

Vote 35—Funds originally provided for contracts are now being transferred to the grants and contributions vote.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

Vote 20a—To authorize grants totalling $131,500 and a transfer to this Vote of $131,499.

Explanation—To increase payments to the Last Post Fund to cover the increased costs of burials and to provide for special housing assistance to qualified veterans.

Source of Funds—Vote 50—($131,499)—Capital expenditures will be less than forecast because some projects have been delayed.

SCHEDULE D

ONE DOLLAR ITEMS WHICH AUTHORIZE FINANCIAL GUARANTEES—
1 ITEM

FINANCE

Vote L13a—To authorize the financial provisions of an international agreement.

Explanation—To authorize Canadian participation in an arrangement by the 24 members of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development to provide financial assistance, through guarantees of market borrowings or through direct loans to participating governments, when member countries encounter major balance of payments problems. The agreement was signed in Paris on April 9, 1975 and stipulates the conditions under which the Fund may be utilized. It will take effect when approved by a 90 per cent weighted majority of the signatories.

SCHEDULE E

ONE DOLLAR ITEMS WHICH AUTHORIZE THE EXTENSION OF EXISTING ACTS TO COVER CIRCUMSTANCES NOT NOW COVERED—2 ITEMS.

SOLICITOR GENERAL

Vote 5a—To increase pensions to the families of two deceased Penitentiary employees, to authorize grants totalling $97,000 and to authorize a transfer to this Vote of $3,194,999.

Explanation—Authority is requested to provide:

(1) Pensions to families of Louis Georges Nadeau and Joseph Albert Paul Gosselin, deceased employees of the Canadian Penitentiary Service, at rates as set out in the RCMP Superannuation Act rather than in the Government Employees Compensation Act ($12,000);

(2) increased grants to After-care Agencies who provide community and liaison services to inmates in federal institutions ($85,000); and

(3) increased operating costs mainly for overtime payments to prison staff ($1,800,000); and, price increases in utilities, security contracts with private firms and outside hospital services ($1,065,000).

Source of Funds—Vote 10—($3,194,999)—Funds are available due to delays in construction of new penitentiaries.

TRANSPORT—CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

Vote L76a—To secure Parliamentary authority as required under Section 32 of the Canadian National Railways Act for the Railway to arrange financing for the acquisition of equipment and to permit the Railway to issue securities on such terms and conditions and bearing such rates of interest as may be approved by the Governor-in-Council.

Explanation—The proposed vote will provide authority for the Railway to utilize the financing medium authorized under Section 32 of the Canadian National Railways Act, which states "Where Parliament has provided for expenditure on equipment to the extent of 25% of the cost of such equipment, the National Company may make or arrange for one or more equipment issues for the remaining 75% of such costs."

In addition, it will enable the Company to sell securities at market rates of interest, instead of the 6% ceiling referred to in Section 72(5) of the Railway Act, in order to finance capital expenditures.

SCHEDULE F

ONE DOLLAR ITEMS WHICH AMEND ACTS OTHER THAN APPROPRIATION ACTS—3 ITEMS.

AGRICULTURE

Vote 50a—To amend the Canadian Dairy Commission Act so as to provide for an increase from $100 million to $300 million in loans from the Minister of Finance which may be outstanding at any time under Section 16, sub-section (2) of the Act.

Explanation—The present act which was passed in 1967, authorized a $100 million limit on loans for the purchase, package, storage and disposal, etc., of any dairy product.

This limit is no longer adequate because the value per lb. of butter and skim milk powder has increased considerably since 1967 and because the depressed world market for skim milk powder has led to higher inventories. It is expected that current year inventories will peak at about $210 million and that similar or possibly greater requirements will exist in 1976-77.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION—CAPE BRETON DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

Vote L40a—To amend Section 19(2) of the Cape Breton Development Corporation Act.

Explanation—To increase by $15 million the statutory ceiling on working capital advances that may be outstanding at any time. The present Act, which was passed in 1967, authorizes advances of up to $10 million. The proposed revision to the ceiling is necessary to finance the increased unit value and volumes of coal and material inventories held by the Corporation.

SECRETARY OF STATE—CANADIAN FILM DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

Vote 62a—To authorize an increase of $5 million in the statutory ceiling of the Canadian Film Development Corporation Act.

Explanation—The Canadian Film Development Corporation is financed by statutory funds which are obtained from the Consolidated Revenue Fund according to its needs. An amount of $10 million was originally authorized under Section 18(1) of the Corporation Act. This was increased to $20 million by Appropriation Act No. 4, 1971. The current request will raise the level to $25 million.

These funds will be used for loans to film makers and investments in Canadian feature films in order to foster and promote the development of a feature film industry in Canada.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, December 10, 1975

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 4, 1975

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-79, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1976.

Bill read first time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 44(1)(f) I move that this bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading later this day.

Senator Flynn: There is no objection to giving unanimous consent but I hope copies of the bill will be distributed before we proceed. I am interested in seeing whether or not it has been amended in the other place since it was given first reading.

Senator Langlois: Yes, it has been amended.

Senator Flynn: It has been amended in what respect? Do we have the bill?

Senator Langlois: Yes, we have the bill. Clause 5 was struck out.

Senator Flynn: What was clause 5 concerned with?

Senator Langlois: Borrowing authority.

Senator Flynn: Was it left out because it was considered illegal?

Senator Langlois: It was not left out; it was struck out. This is simply a statement of fact.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of the Air Canada Inquiry Report, dated October 1975 (The Honourable Willard Z. Estey, Commissioner).

Report of the Minister of Transport on the administration of the Motor Vehicle Safety Act for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 20 of the said Act, Chapter 26 (1st Supplement) R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Superintendent of Insurance for Canada, Volume II, Annual Statements of Property and Casualty Insurance Companies, for the year ended December 31, 1974, pursuant to section 8 of the Department of Insurance Act, Chapter I-17, R.S.C., 1970.

Report of the Auditor General to the House of Commons for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1975, pursuant to section 61(2) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970, together with a Supplement to the said Report.

Copies of a Draft Memorandum of Agreement between the Government of Canada and the provinces under Bill C-73, Anti-inflation Act, together with a copy of Background Notes thereon.

COMBINES INVESTIGATION ACT

REPORT OF BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE
PRESENTED AND PRINTED AS AN APPENDIX

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I desire to present a report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce on Bill C-2, to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Bank Act and to repeal an Act to amend an Act to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Criminal Code.

Honourable senators, I would ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day to form part of the permanent records of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report see appendix, pp. 1589-1595.)

● (1410)

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, with leave I should like to give a short explanation of the observations contained in this report.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Hayden: The history of this legislation goes back to October 16, 1974, when the Senate, by resolution, authorized the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce to "examine and report upon any bill relating to competition in Canada or to the Combines Investigation Act, in advance of the said bill coming before the Senate, or any matter relating thereto."

Your committee proceeded to conduct a full-scale study and received many briefs and heard many witnesses, including the minister on three occasions, and departmental officers.

We tabled two reports in the Senate during our study of this matter. Without referring in any detail to those reports I can say that the first one presented on March 19, 1975, was a comprehensive study of the legislation and included suggestions for some 22 amendments. At that stage the bill had not as yet been referred to the committee in the other place, but when this referral took place many of the amendments we made were presented, adopted, and made part of the bill at the time the report of the Commons committee came out.

I can give you the box score with regard to amendments, if you wish to call it that, although we were not trying to gain points; all we were trying to do was to clarify the legislation. I think we proposed about 22 changes, some of them technical, some very substantial. I think 13 of these were accepted, in whole or in part. The report presented today develops the subject matter of our recommendations and indicates what happened to those that were accepted and those that were rejected.

The second interim report of the committee, presented in the Senate on June 26, 1975, involved only one subject. This arose from the fact that Bill C-2 extended the application of the Combines Investigation Act to "services." This innovation had many ramifications. The committee heard witnesses in connection with air travel, including representatives of the International Air Transport Association, since it seemed to them that the complications which appeared to them to exist, if they continued to fix tariffs and tolls, might make them subject to the "services" provisions of the Combines Investigation Act.

At that time your committee proposed an amendment, the purpose of which was to provide an exemption. We had conferences with the minister and his officials, but the minister felt that he would prefer not to provide an exemption. In the course of further development of the evidence, however, the minister gave certain undertakings, which are referred to in the report. He has undertaken that the government will not proclaim the bill in relation to services for purposes of section 32 of the act for a period of six months after proclamation of the other provisions of the bill. The minister agreed that this phase of the matter, air transport, affected both his department and the Department of Transport, and that the legislation arising out of and affecting the air transport industry should be the subject matter of review by these two departments and possibly some determination as to where the control and direction should come from. In other words, whether it should come from the Department of Transport by way of enlarging their present legislation, if it does not go far enough, or whether by way of a decision to prosecute or not to prosecute and leaving it in the hands of the combines investigation administration.

The minister, in meeting with the committee, agreed that these conferences which have started could not, by virtue of their subject matter, be terminated quickly. He agreed, therefore, that this second proclamation, which would make the prosecution sections of the Combines Investigation Act applicable to services, would not be made earlier than six months from this date so as to afford the opportunity for the development of some understanding in this area.

The other undertakings had to do with a variety of subjects, and the minister stated in committee that in the next session of Parliament he proposed to introduce Phase II of the combines legislation, dealing with mergers, monopolies, specialization agreements and things of that kind. He said that many of the subject matters we had raised in the services part of Bill C-2 would be in Phase II, and therefore we could deal with them at that time. So, honourable senators, we were not being shut out in recommending that this bill be reported without amendment, because the areas and the subject matters will still be open when we get to Phase II.

I recall in one particular instance that a number of amendments were made in the House of Commons dealing with increases in penalty provisions. For some reason, I suppose due to pressure, the language of three of those amendments varied. It became a question of determining whether this variety in terms to describe fines and sentences conflicted with a general statement in the Criminal Code indicating that a trial judge is not obliged to impose a fixed penalty unless it is said to be a fixed penalty. A judge may impose a fine of $1 million or, in default of payment, 15 years' imprisonment. In other words, under the Criminal Code the judge has discretion. We were concerned with the variety of language used. The judge in the first instance might feel there was an intention on the part of Parliament to superimpose these penalties and sentences, and therefore destroy the effectiveness of this discretionary provision in the Criminal Code.

● (1420)

The minister gave an undertaking that when we reach Phase II this whole matter of the language to describe these fines and imprisonment terms will be reviewed with the object of making it uniform. In the circumstances, we felt that those who appeared before us and raised certain points which appeared to have some considerable merit would not be shut out from making further presentations on the same subject matter, because the same points would arise in connection with Phase II. It would be an impossible situation if we had a subject matter in Phase I dealt with differently from the subject matter in Phase II. Therefore, we felt that the public interest, for which we were supposed to have regard, would be well protected if the bill at this time were approved without amendment. Any points which are not disposed of, and which appear to be meritorious, may still be developed in Phase II.

In a very summary manner, this indicates the scope of the report. It appears to be lengthy, but that became necessary because of the several reports we made following one consideration of the subject matter, plus our conferences with the minister respecting his undertakings, which were in the nature of commitments, as to dealing with some of these particular points. We felt we had no need to feel uncertain, or have any lack of assurance, that what the minister said would be implemented, because we found him through all his appearances to be very sincere and open-minded in his consideration of problems.

Honourable senators, I am sorry that this has taken me a little time to explain. However, I have tried to indicate in a general manner the contents of the report.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Flynn: At the next sitting.

Senator Cook moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

ANTI-INFLATION BILL

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Hayden, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, to which was referred Bill C-73, to provide for the restraint of profit margins, prices, dividends and compensation in Canada, presented the following report:

Wednesday, December 10, 1975.

The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce to which was referred Bill C-73, intituled: "An Act to provide for the restraint of profit margins, prices, dividends and compensation in Canada", has, in obedience to the order of reference of Tuesday, December 9, 1975, examined the said Bill and now reports the same without amendment, but with the following observations:

These observations are included in this Report on the express direction of the Committee and relate to subclause 6 of clause 46 of the Bill, which was added in the course of the third reading of the Bill in the House of Commons.

Clause 46 (6) reads as follows:

"(6) Where, at any time after March 31, 1977 and before July 1, 1977, a motion for the consideration of the House of Commons, signed by not less than 50 members of the House, is filed with the Speaker to the effect that this Act shall expire on a date before December 31, 1978 that is specified in the motion, the House of Commons shall, within the first fifteen days next after the motion is filed that the House is sitting, in accordance with the Rules of the House, take up and consider the motion, and if the motion, with or without amendments, is approved by the House, this Act expires on the date that is specified in the motion."

These observations are made for the purpose of expressing the resentment of the Committee to the provision in the said subclause 6 by virtue of which, where a motion is signed by not less than 50 members of the House of Commons and is then filed with the Speaker of that House providing for the expiration of the Act, on a date before December 31, 1978, and is voted on and approved by the House of Commons, then such approval by the House of Commons shall terminate the life of the Act.

This presents an anomalous situation. Bill C-73 can only become law as, if and when approved not only by the House of Commons but by the Senate of Canada and thereafter receives Royal Assent. To propose, therefore, in such a Bill as C-73 the termination of the Act by unilateral action of the House of Commons is arbitrary and presumptuous. As a result, this Bill and this particular subclause 6 of clause 46 thereof was the subject-matter of a proposed amendment put forward in your Committee, adding the requirement of approval of any such proposed termination of the Act by the Senate of Canada. Such proposed amendment was not carried because of a tie vote. Those voting against the proposed amendment were as strongly opposed to the form of the provision in the said subclause, requiring only the approval of a majority of the House of Commons for the subsequent expiration of the Act, as those who favored the said proposed amendment.

The need for bringing into law the provisions of this Bill as quickly as possible in the best interests of the economy of Canada was the impelling motive of those who voted against the proposed amendment. The Committee regards the conditions providing for the termination of the life of this Bill as a display of unjustified arrogance. Such a provision has appeared in several other Bills which at an earlier time have come before the Senate, but the Committee warns that any repetition of such a provision in any future legislation will lead to an amendment of the Bill whatever may otherwise be the degree of urgency and the beneficial purposes of the Bill.

Respectfully submitted,

Salter A. Hayden,
Chairman.

MOTION FOR THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(b), I move that the bill be read the third time now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Langlois, that this bill be now read the third time. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Flynn: No.

MOTION IN AMENDMENT NEGATIVED

Senator Molson: Honourable senators, I find myself in rather a quandary in this respect. I do not like controls, particularly partial controls, because I believe it is difficult to make them work effectively. However, I believe action has been too long delayed and at this belated hour there is no alternative method of attack on inflation open to the government. Therefore, I not only support Bill C-73 but I would like to see it implemented as rapidly as possible.

● (1430)

I say "rapidly" because, as always, uncertainty has a crippling effect on the conduct of affairs. At the present time, the efforts of the government to control inflation lack credibility for two main reasons. First, there is absolutely no demonstration of a willingness on the part of the government to reduce current government expenditures, and the mention of future budgetary cuts carries little weight. Secondly, so far it has not been possible to demonstrate to individual wage and salary earners that a realistic control of prices will be achieved. However, during committee consideration of this bill yesterday, the Minister of Finance assured us that evidence of the government's serious intent in this regard will be seen within the next couple of weeks.

I accept the minister's statement. My dilemma stems from the fact that this bill contains in it the clause to which the Chairman of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee referred in his report, that being clause 46. Clause 46(6) is, I believe, at the very least, unacceptable to this chamber, and, at the worst, unconstitutional. I cannot speak with any authority on the constitutional aspect, but we do have highly qualified constitutional experts who can.

I would like to draw the attention of the Senate to section 17 of the British North America Act. Section 17 deals with the definition of Parliament, and reads as follows:

There shall be One Parliament for Canada, consisting of the Queen, an Upper House styled the Senate, and the House of Commons.

It is certainly not necessary for me to say that bills only become law and reach the statute books after action by all three components of Parliament—that is, passage by the House of Commons and the Senate, and assent by the Crown. This even applies to money bills. Bill C-73 is no exception. It will become law only after passage by this chamber and royal assent.

Is it reasonable, honourable senators, that a statute should require these processes of the whole Parliament, but that that statute could cease to be in effect and have no further application on a motion passed only by one-third of Parliament? We have to ask ourselves if this constitutes a covert effort to abolish or downgrade the Senate where no open attack has succeeded. Is it an effort to abolish the Senate chip by chip, block by block, instead of by open frontal attack?

If the Senate is no longer necessary, and if a bill to abolish the Senate were put forward, I would probably vote for it. There would be one or two conditions. First of all, it would have to come to us as an amendment to the law passed by the House of Commons. Secondly—and this is even more important to me—I would have to know that a substantial majority of the people of Canada felt that the Senate was no longer necessary and should be abolished. Those two conditions being met, I would vote for such a bill.

However, that does not make it possible for me to accept the present bill. This is not a case of feeling that the dignity of the Senate has been affronted or, to quote this morning's newspaper, the Senate's being "susceptible to fits of end-of-the-year nasties" and declining to be rushed. The problem here is that the roles of Parliament are being altered and the responsibility of the Senate reduced by only a simple motion in the other place.

[Senator Molson.]

Under these circumstances, I am going to propose an amendment to Bill C-73. I realize that this amendment will not carry because, although honourable senators may favour it—and I believe the majority would—they will not delay passage of this important measure. What it should do, however, is to give notice that I, and perhaps other senators, will not support future legislation which contains any such back door efforts to change the Constitution.

Honourable senators, I now move that Bill C-73, intituled, "An Act to provide for the restraint of profit margins, prices, dividends and compensation in Canada," be not now read the third time but that it be amended as follows:

Page 34: Strike out lines 11 and 12 and substitute therefor the following:

"House, a message shall be sent to the Senate informing the Senate that the motion has been so approved and requesting that the motion be concurred in by the Senate.

(6.1) If a motion approved by the House of Commons pursuant to subsection (6) is concurred in by the Senate, this Act expires on the date that is specified in the motion."

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is there a seconder for Senator Molson's motion?

Senator Macdonald: I second the motion.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Molson, seconded by the Honourable Senator Macdonald, that Bill C-73, intituled "An Act to provide for the restraint of profit margins, prices, dividends and compensation in Canada, be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows—

Some Hon. Senators: Dispende.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt this motion in amendment?

[Translation]

Hon. Martial Asselin: Honourable senators, before the amendment now before us is put to a vote, I should like to say a word about it.

As Senator Molson pointed out, a similar amendment, proposed yesterday in committee, was rejected. This afternoon, the chairman of the committee explained to us why the amendment was voted down.

Yesterday, there were many reasons why some senators, who in principle were in favour of the amendment moved by Senator Molson in committee, voted against it. Obviously, the main one was the general wish that the bill be passed as soon as possible because of its urgency and not sent back to the House of Commons. But I feel that we should congratulate Senator Molson for having brought up such an important question this afternoon through his amendment. I say "important" because the very existence of our institution is at stake.

● (1440)

For some years, the other place has seemed to want to erode—if I may say so—the role and the responsibilities of the Senate, by simple motions or otherwise. Today we have another obvious demonstration of this.

If it were only for the argument invoked by Senator Molson, I am convinced that the amendment alone would be sufficient reason for me to vote against the bill on third reading. As Senator Molson said, clause 17 of the Constitution defines Parliament. Parliament is the Senate, the House of Commons and the Governor General—three levels. Moreover, we see that clause 46 of this legislation will enable the House of Commons to repeal this act following a motion signed by at least 50 honourable members and submitted to the Speaker for examination by the House of Commons, and if the motion is passed after a three-day debate, this legislation will be repealed without the consent of the Senate. So I think that right now the legislation before us is unconstitutional because it does not comply with the provisions of clause 17 of the British North America Act. Besides, if the bill is unconstitutional, I wonder by what right honourable senators will vote against that amendment. They should vote for the amendment of Senator Molson. I would be very much in favour of submitting to the attention of the courts that particular aspect of clause 46, which has the effect of totally ousting the Senate when it comes to the passing of such an important bill.

It may be argued that precedents were established in the past on the occasion of finance bills, but we are discussing no such bill today. The bill before us will affect the Canadian people as a whole. I say again that this bill, because of a very important omission in clause 46, is already unconstitutional. If the amendment to refer that bill to the House of Commons was not accepted yesterday at committee stage, it may have been for a very good reason. That, however, does not prevent the Official Opposition as well as the "third force" in our house—Senator Molson—from putting forward such an amendment and drawing the attention of the Senate to what might happen in the future, even if we accept beforehand to pass all the bills of the House of Commons without question and without studying them thoroughly as we did with this bill. It is obvious that the Senate is meeting its responsibilities concerning Bill C-73 now before us. I believe that this bill is one of those that have been studied closely by the committee and this assembly.

Honourable senators, even if you reject the amendment of Senator Molson, I repeat that this bill is unconstitutional and could be considered as such by the courts even if clause 46 allowed the House of Commons to annul the act simply on the wish, the consent or the approval of the House. I repeat that this would be an unconstitutional decision because, as Senator Molson said earlier, for a law to be enacted, it must be accepted by the House of Commons and the Senate and sanctioned by the Governor General.

This is why I shall support this amendment and vote for the amendment, and if it is rejected, as I know it will be, well, I shall vote against the bill because I believe that it is unconstitutional in its present form.

[English]

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, if I may for a moment, I would like to support Senator Molson's amendment, which is mentioned in the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce. The chairman referred to examples of similar wording being used in previous legislation. I would point out that the first example is in the act amending the Income Tax Act, Statutes of Canada, 1973-74. There the House of Commons was given authority to remove certain tax exemptions. In effect, they were imposing a tax. I believe for that reason the Senate avoided the issue on it.

The second example is in the act amending the Veterans' Land Act, 1974. This amendment in no way changed the Veterans' Land Act. The Veterans' Land Act was scheduled to expire the end of March 1975, and the House of Commons was given authority to request the minister to review the legislation. I would point out that in that case, had the minister renewed the legislation, it would have required the consent of the Senate.

In the Olympic (1976) Act, Statutes of Canada 1973-74, the authority granted allowed the House of Commons to refer reports tabled in that house to one of their standing committees, and did not in any way alter the bill.

Honourable senators, throughout the debate on Bill C-73 and the guidelines, the Senate has indicated it has taken a keen interest in anti-inflation measures. I wonder who supplied the advice to the minister on this occasion. Surely the Leader of the Government in the Senate conveyed to his colleagues in the Cabinet that the Senate was keenly interested in these measures, and I would hope that there was some Cabinet discussion on the amendment before it was moved by the Minister of Finance. I am rather curious to know why the Cabinet and the Minister of Finance would allow the insertion of this clause without recognizing it is an affront to the Senate.

It may be that in this case the Leader of the Government in the Senate—perhaps I am anticipating his reply—will state that he desires the legislation be passed in order that the anti-inflation measures can become effective immediately, but I would point out that the acceptance of the amendment need not result in a long delay. The House of Commons is presently in the process of extending its sitting hours, and an adjournment is indicated for December 19, which is not very far away. I suggest, the House of Commons having made the mistake, that the onus is on that house, rather than on the Senate, to correct it and to get the legislation passed quickly.

Senator Carter: Honourable senators, I wish to make a brief comment in support of Senator Molson's amendment.

Senator Molson pointed out that the Parliament of Canada is composed of three elements—the Crown, the Senate and the House of Commons. In clause 46 of this bill the House of Commons has taken unto itself not only the authority of the Senate but of the Crown. It has usurped the authority of the Senate, and the duties of the Senate, and also that of the Crown. That is something, honourable senators, I just cannot agree to.

I will support Senator Molson's amendment.

● (1450)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I must say that I share the view that this is an unfortunate anomaly in this bill, and I assure the house that I have discussed it with some of my colleagues in the government. Admittedly, it is an anomaly because a preceding clause of the bill very much includes the Senate, as was pointed out by the Leader of the Opposition in his excellent speech the other day.

No one can take satisfaction in what is essentially a drafting error, a drafting mistake. May I say, in suggesting that this interesting and useful amendment be defeated at this time, that I shall certainly give an undertaking that a strenuous effort will be put forward to make the appropriate correction in this proposed legislation.

Yesterday when the Minister of Finance appeared before the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce he said, "I must confess that this is a blind spot." There was a minister of the Crown making a public confession. He said:

I cannot recall precisely, but I think that probably arose out of the debate which occurred in the house itself. It was really something that was referred to in second reading and then this occurred within the committee. There was a loud discussion at that time about bringing it back into the house itself, and this was intended to respond to that particular point of view.

Whatever interpretation we draw from the remarks of the minister before the committee, obviously this is a source of some embarrassment to him, and it does represent a weakness in the drafting.

However, I think that we should endeavour to keep in perspective the urgency involved here. What we are discussing now is a proposed amendment to clause 46(6) on page 33. Clause 46(6) reads as follows:

Where, at any time after March 31, 1977 and before July 1, 1977, a motion for the consideration of the House of Commons, signed by not less than 50 members of the House, is filed with the Speaker to the effect—and so on. We are not talking about a crucial deadline which will occur in the first week of January of 1976; we are not even talking about a crucial deadline which will occur in the fall of 1976. We are talking about a circumstance which may arise between March 31, 1977, and July 1, 1977.

I suggest to honourable senators that there is ample time—ample time—before 1977 to meet the problem which has been delineated so well by the Leader of the Opposition, by Senator Molson, and by other honourable senators. It seems to me, and perhaps it represents a consensus, that the positive values represented in this bill are such that it deserves support, even in its imperfect form today. It deserves the support of the Senate now, without involving it in the further process, regardless of its undoubted merits, of sending it back to the other place with this amendment, knowing the possibility of the prolongation of debate which that would entail and the hazard in which the program could well be placed.

Already, honourable senators, we are faced with some rather important deadlines. Surely the uncertainty which is involved in this entire process cannot be helpful to Canadian companies, Canadian workers, or the professional people of Canada. The prospect of a prolonged debate in the other place, lasting over the Christmas period and perhaps extending into January, cannot accelerate the process of developing, for example, the program of regulations which is now well under way.

[Senator Perrault.]

A Canadian Press article in the Ottawa Citizen of yesterday, purportedly quoting the Honourable Mr. Pepin, states:

The legislation now is before the Senate and, once given approval there, will only require royal assent.

This could come by the end of the week, permitting the cabinet to issue regulations that will determine the details of how the selective wage and price controls are to be applied by the board.

Mr. Pepin said the board's mandate extends to all sectors of the economy, including government spending.

"If we feel the government is not doing its utmost to control its own spending, we will not hesitate to comment. That's our mandate," he said.

The importance of the challenge of inflation across the country is such, however, that, although the government is saying the point has been well made, without any question at all, and that this is not the kind of precedent we can tolerate or condone in this chamber, we must not delay passage of this important measure. The enthusiastic reception given the excellent report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce is indicative of the spirit felt in all parts of this chamber on this point.

I know some honourable senators have questioned whether this represents a diminution of the powers of the Senate. Is it the wedge which suggests that there are those—God forbid!—who would like to see the abolition of the Senate? I suggest that during this session the Senate has demonstrated once again its undoubted worth, not only to the parliamentary system but to the people of Canada. I do not have to remind honourable senators, nor do I have to remind the people of Canada through their representatives in this chamber, that so far this session the Senate has initiated over 30 bills, and 48 amendments of undoubted worth and value which have enhanced and improved the legislation of Parliament. Indeed, we need make no apology for our performance or question our value to the parliamentary system or to the people of Canada.

That is the message which we should take every opportunity of conveying to our friends in the other place and to the people of this country. The confidence which this government has demonstrated in the Senate during this session by virtue of the fact that almost a record number of government measures have been initiated here is, I think, sufficient reassurance to those concerned about a possible move toward abolition. That is the best assurance that there is no substance to those fears.

I find it impossible to argue against the spirit of the amendment proposed by our distinguished colleague, Senator Molson, but in view of the urgency which exists in this country today of facing one of the most serious economic challenges we have had since Confederation, I can only urge that initiatives, urgent representations, go forward in other directions, and that the appropriate amendments be brought before Parliament so that this anomaly, that has been described so well by the Leader of the Opposition, can be corrected.

I am not taking a stance here of denouncing an amendment of undoubted worth. I am simply suggesting that we have a case of a greater good demanding that we take appropriate action on this measure this afternoon. I give my assurance again that the point is going to be made to my colleagues, with every fibre of energy I possess, that this kind of imperfect drafting should not occur again, and that we shall protect the rights of this chamber that are enshrined in the British North America Act.

● (1500)

I hope that with that kind of assurance, honourable senators—and I say it reluctantly—we may defeat this amendment, and proceed with the urgent matter that is before the house. I suggest that this is an action that is in the best interests of all Canadians.

Senator Asselin: We do not mind voting against the amendment if we are going to save the principle.

Senator van Roggen: Would the Leader of the Government accept a question?

Has the leader sought from the government a firm undertaking that an amendment to correct this anomaly will be brought in at the earliest opportunity next year? If he has not sought such an undertaking, would he consider it practical to obtain one before we vote on this amendment?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it may not be possible for me to obtain that assurance at this time, but I think we should examine very closely the possibility of moving an amendment in this chamber when we come back after the New Year.

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, I would like at the outset of my remarks to compliment Senator Molson on the clarity with which he expressed his views on this important issue. He is very modest respecting his abilities in the field of constitutional law, but I think he has seen the point very clearly. He expressed it well, and moved an appropriate amendment.

The problem before us at present, however, is somewhat different from the usual case. The bill provides a route for termination of its effective operation. Usually an act of Parliament remains in force until it is repealed by Parliament, in which case there is no difficulty. Sometimes an act remains in force until a date that is specified in it.

This particular bill contains something a little different from those alternatives. It is, in effect, a modification of the second method of termination I have referred to. It contains a date for termination three years hence, together with an option for an alternative date to be set by order in council, approved by both Houses of Parliament. In my view, this is perfectly proper. However, the bill also contains, the offending subclause 46(6), which provides for termination on a motion in the House of Commons signed by 50 members, and adopted by a majority of that house alone, without the concurrence of the Senate.

This clause, as far as I am concerned, is quite offensive, but I would like to clarify one point and here I refer to Senator Asselin's remarks. I understood Senator Asselin to say that the method I refer to is unconstitutional. With this I cannot agree. I find it totally offensive for other reasons, but I cannot agree that it is unconstitutional, since Parli-ment can, quite properly, enact any termination date it likes. In this case, this is the method of termination it is proposed that Parliament should enact. Parliament could, for example, enact a termination date which depends upon any extraneous occurrence. As I say, I cannot agree that it is unconstitutional. It may be offensive for other reasons, but not on the ground of unconstitutionality.

Since the report of the committee was presented only today, and a copy of it is not in the hands of all members of this house, I would like to read two sentences from it in order to develop a further point I wish to make. The sentences I refer to describe a similar motion that was made at the meeting of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

Those voting against the proposed amendment were as strongly opposed to the form of the provision in the said subclause, requiring only the approval of a majority of the House of Commons for the subsequent expiration of the Act, as those who favoured the said proposed amendment.

That is an accurate statement of what took place in the committee. I now draw your attention to the next sentence:

The need for bringing into law the provisions of this Bill as quickly as possible in the best interests of the economy of Canada was the impelling motive of those who voted against the proposed amendment.

I was one of those who voted against the proposed amendment.

Senator Asselin: Did you express your views in that direction at the committee meeting?

Senator McIlraith: You will have to check the record. I am not certain whether I did or not. I think my views were expressed clearly to the other members of the committee, but I am not sure whether they are on record.

In any event, the sentences I have just read clearly express my own point of view. The impelling reason, as far as I am concerned, for voting against this amendment is that the bill is somewhat extraordinary—as was pointed out by two honourable senators in the Opposition—in that much of the operative work to be done under it will be done by regulation. Such regulations can only become law when the bill is passed, and the committee was told yesterday that we have every reason to expect those regulations within a few days. If we vote for the amendment it will mean sending the bill back to the House of Commons for their concurrence. That route is going to involve, of necessity, a few more days' delay in getting the regulations.

The Opposition may not agree that the bill is correctly framed, but it is a bill that is presently before Parliament to deal with inflation, and I think it is a good bill. In any event, regardless of my views on that, the urgency of passing the bill is so great that I for one am prepared to vote against the amendment in order to get the regulations passed by the Governor in Council, and into operation within the next few days.

For that reason, and with very considerable regret, I feel impelled to vote against Senator Molson's amendment, excellent though it is.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I will be very brief. First, as Senator Phillips has indicated, the distinction between the problem we are faced with today, and the problems which have faced us on previous occasions where similar clauses were involved, is that now the problem is much more serious.

● (1510)

I think everyone agrees that in substance this is a bad clause, and there may even be some doubts as to the validity of legislation containing such a clause. Therefore, this is a situation we should not let stand. The argument made against it deals merely with the element of time involved. Well, if we pass this amendment, the message can be sent to the House of Commons today, and it can be considered there tomorrow. I do not see why the Senate should always be the only one of the two bodies held responsible for any delay. We could have royal assent tomorrow afternoon, and if the situation is as urgent as it is made out to be, then it should be as readily apparent to the House of Commons as it is to the Senate. To me that argument, made by those opposed to the amendment, is not valid and I cannot agree with it. We have ample time to deal with this. Royal assent can be given tomorrow. But the responsibility for recognizing the urgency of this legislation must rest with the House of Commons. I do not accept the argument that we are delaying the passage of this legislation simply because we put forward this amendment. It is the responsibility of the House of Commons in the present circumstances, which arise out of their negligence, if that is what it was, to correct the situation and in doing so to dissipate all doubts immediately. They could give consideration to this amendment tomorrow afternoon and royal assent, as I have already said, could be given tomorrow evening.

Furthermore, I do not see why we should take the blame for supposedly delaying the legislation when the House of Commons has taken five weeks to debate it while we have taken only five days. Surely they can take a few more minutes, which is all that would be required to pass the amendment, and then send it back to us and we could, as I have said, have royal assent tomorrow. If they should choose not to consider this tomorrow, then I do not see how anyone can blame the Senate for that.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I intend to vote for the motion in amendment, and I agree entirely with the position taken by Senator Flynn. I would add, of course, that it should be obvious to all of us that our function is to delay legislation if it is not acceptable to us. Here we have a case where not only is it not acceptable to the Senate, but it is obviously not acceptable to the government, as stated by the minister who introduced it. So, I cannot understand the argument that we should not delay the passage of this legislation. Surely it is the function of the Senate to delay the passage of a bill if we find it has major imperfections. In this instance the only element of time involved would be a matter of a few hours. I am not saying that we should delay it indefinitely. I am not suggesting that for one moment. But I am saying we should delay it for whatever time is necessary to correct any deficiencies and any defects we find in the bill.

I will only comment on the statement made by Senator Molson that under certain circumstances, if there were a substantive motion backed by general agreement for the abolition of the Senate, he would vote for it. I wish he had given his reasons for this statement. because I think I know some of them, it not all. For my own part, I have no hesitation in saying that if the time should come when we are faced with this difficult decision on a motion, or on a bill, to abolish the Senate, then we ourselves will have been largely responsible for that situation coming about.

[Senator McIlraith.]

I agree entirely with everything the Leader of the Government has said about the work done in the Senate, about the efficiency and the general usefulness of the work, particularly by our committees. On the other hand, we all know that there are practices, collective and individual, in respect to the responsibilities of senators that require remedy, if not excuse. To some extent, one of our committees is dealing with at least one possible aberration from the concept of senators placing their responsibilities in and to the Senate above and before all other responsibilities which they may have assumed. I would not myself agree to the abolition of the Senate under the circumstances indicated by Senator Molson unless there was the suggestion of an alternative body which would perform the necessary functions of a second chamber in any federal state. I do not believe that there is a single federal state which has not found it necessary to have a second chamber. Therefore, I am all the more concerned when as distinguished a senator as Senator Molson says he would vote for the abolition of the Senate. I would do so myself, however, unless some radical, fundamental reforms were made, particularly insofar as they concern the discharge of responsibilities here by individual senators, and also insofar as they concern the use of the public funds available to the Senate, and the facilities of the Senate, in respect to uses other than those strictly applicable to the work of the Senate. I am sure that honourable senators know the practices and aberrations to which I am referring.

I would urge the Leader of the Government, who is not here at the moment, to proceed at once, immediately, with the reform and renewal, and I emphasize that word "renewal," of this body. We all know the deficiencies that exist here; we all know of the criticisms that are made and the basis for those criticisms. On every side we are faced with suggestions for the reform of the Senate, that is to say on every side but one. The government itself has made suggestions. The Prime Minister has made suggestions. We find them in the press and we find them coming to us from academics and others over and over again. We hear these suggestions from all sides—except from the Senate itself. Surely the time has come when the Senate should look at itself and come forward with worthwhile suggestions for the reform and renewal of the Senate.

Senator Robichaud: Honourable senators, I certainly had no intention of speaking in this debate, but it has taken an interesting turn, inasmuch as the vitality and the role of this institution is concerned.

Senator Argue: Out of order!

Senator Robichaud: How I am out of order?

Senator Argue: I have been out of order on some occasions myself, but I do feel that in dealing with Bill C-73 we will be making a grievous mistake if we get into a wide-open debate on Senate reform. I have certain ideas which I feel should be advanced on the question of Senate reform. Almost every time I make a speech I have ideas on Senate reform, but I think we should reserve general discussion on Senate reform to some time when it is in order. It is clearly out of order now.

Senator Robichaud: I appreciate the argument presented by my friend Senator Argue, but I am not going to talk about Senate reform because I agree that this is not the time to do so. However, I want to say that I undertook certain obligations on becoming a senator. I undertook to do a certain job, and I think I am doing that job despite any argument that may be presented to the contrary. I feel that we are playing a very important role at the moment, and I do not have to apologize to anyone for the job that we do day in and day out.

Last Thursday, when I was preparing to speak on the debate on the televising and broadcasting of Senate proceedings, I checked and found that four committees were sitting that morning, all of them at practically the same time. So, I think this institution is performing a very good job for Canada. I have no apologies to make to anyone for defending the institution of the Senate. I say this because of the work being done by all senators in committees and in the Senate itself.

● (1520)

Returning to the bill, I have a tremendous degree of sympathy with the motion introduced by Senator Molson. In my opinion, he is right in principle, and I would be inclined to vote for the motion, were it not for the urgency—

Senator Asselin: Hear, hear!

Senator Robichaud: Senator Asselin, I can hear and watch your reaction. I would be inclined to vote for it, were it not for the urgency in respect of passing the bill, but I am putting two things together.

I do not have to apologize for the good functioning of this body. At the same time, I think we can overcome this difficulty. This afternoon I heard the Leader of the Government say—it was not a commitment—that legislation may be introduced in this house to rectify the mistake that was obviously made, and admittedly made, in the other place. I am not worried in connection with that. I do not believe this institution is in jeopardy because a mistake was made by the other place. In my opinion we will survive, and I think we should. If we have in mind that it is possible, if legislation were introduced to abolish this house, that we might vote for it. then, in my opinion at least, those who speak that language do not fulfill the role which they should fulfill in this place. I believe strongly in this institution. I believe also in the urgency of the legislation with which we are now dealing, and I do not think that this house is in jeopardy because we vote for the bill.

Personally, I will vote against the amendment, sympathetic as I may feel toward Senator Flynn, Senator Asselin, Senator Molson and Senator Grosart. I am sympathetic with their cause, but I feel that I should still vote against the amendment.

Senator Asselin: Do not be emotional.

Senator Manning: Honourable senators, my remarks will be very brief. Judging by what has been said it is quite clear, in my opinion, that there is almost general agreement that the amendment to this bill, which was introduced and passed in the other place, is not only an insult to the Senate, but something it is difficult to understand that Parliament would even consider. It seems to me that the practical question before us is what is the best and most effective manner in which to correct something which has been done, and which should not have been done.

It seems to me that there are only two ways in which the error can be corrected. One way is for the amendment to be passed in this house, and then in the other house. However, to be realistic, honourable senators, I see little prospect of the amendment passing in this house, in the first place. Even if it were passed by this house, I think it would be wholly unrealistic to think that the other house would approve an amendment of this type at this time.

The second course of action is that which was referred to briefly by Senator van Roggen and by the Leader of the Government. I would like to pursue it further for just a moment. If the bill is permitted to pass without amendment, why could this chamber not immediately bring in an amending bill to correct this error? I submit, first, that this would not necessitate any further delay in the passage of the bill, and it would recognize the importance of passing the bill as quickly as possible, as has been properly stressed by a number of honourable senators.

Secondly, I submit that there would be a far greater probability of an amendment, initiated in this house and correcting this error, being approved by the House of Commons, than would be the case if the amendment now before us were agreed to and the bill returned to the other place. For this reason I feel that I have no alternative but to oppose the amendment, as much as I agree with its substance and the need to correct the error.

However, I would ask the Leader of the Government if he is prepared at this time to give an undertaking that he will introduce, before we adjourn for the Christmas recess, an appropriate amendment, to the clause in question, that would require the consent of the Senate to any motion approved at some later date in the other place for the termination of the price and wage controls.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I would like to make the commitment that the appropriate remedial action will be initiated to correct the anomaly which obviously exists in this bill as it stands. I do not know whether that requires an amendment initiated by the government in the Senate or, in conjunction with the sponsoring minister in the other place, an appropriate amendment included with other amendments which are anticipated in the near future. However, the best possible route will be sought to achieve what is obviously a needed correction in the drafting of this bill.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Flynn: As much as I like the assurance, or the promise, given by the Leader of the Government, I point out to him and to the Senate that it is entirely unrealistic to count on any government action. I do not say that if it were introduced as a private bill by a member of the Senate it would not proceed. However, it would stand on the Order Paper in the other place for the whole of next session. On the other hand, the bill, if introduced by the Leader of the Government here, would be a public bill and would be passed here quickly, following which it would sit on the shelf in the other place indefinitely. The same situation would occur, I assure you, if a government bill were sponsored in the other place. It would also be kept there until the next session ends. We would be told that it could not be arranged, that there were too many other pieces of legislation, and that the debate could not be commenced. At this time, if the amendment is sent to the other place, the pressure will be on them to vote on it in order to have the legislation in force tomorrow. If we cannot stand on our own feet, we might as well—

Senator Choquette:—fall down.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I believe that the state of the economy today, and the wage settlements which depend upon clarification of this legislation and the regulations, are such that it is imperative that we avoid, if at all possible, any further inordinate delays. There are millions of dollars' worth of settlements and important contract matters hanging in the balance, and I can only suggest that a long, protracted further study of an amendment in the other place would do grievous harm to the economy at the present time. I hope that honourable senators will accept the assurance which has been given by the government today.

Senator Asselin: Will the Leader of the Government explain to the Senate why the other place took five weeks to study this legislation, if it is so urgent?

Senator McDonald: Ask your colleagues over there.

Senator Asselin: You represent the government.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I have only a very few words to address to this question. It seems to me that whether or not the Senate should continue to exist is completely irrelevant, and ought not to form any part of our consideration. However, we are being asked to vote for something which everyone admits is wrong or, to put it the other way, to vote against something which everyone admits is right, which seems to me to be a pretty thin argument.

● (1530)

Surely the Leader of the Opposition is correct when he says that if there is any urgency felt by the government and the House of Commons, there need be no delay beyond a matter of a few hours at the outside. If they then decide that the bill is so lacking in urgency that they can keep it there a week, 10 days or two weeks, surely that is not our fault, but theirs. I do not understand the philosophy that we should vote for something which we think is wrong because someone has made a mistake from which they want to be rescued, and we have not the nerve to stand up and tell them so.

I propose to support Senator Molson's amendment.

[Translation]

Senator Denis: Honourable senators, I do not think this is the first time that a bill has needed to be amended. This is legislation which is urgent and which must be passed immediately. Everybody knows it is urgent. I wonder why that tempest in a teapot? I would understand Senator Molson if it were "a tempest in a beer mug."

[Senator Flynn.]

Senator Molson: That is better.

Senator Denis: However, the government admits it is an anomaly but that is of no consequence since next year it will be possible to amend it either here or in the other place. We can do one or the other if a bill is unconstitutional because it does not involve the three levels—the Senate, the House of Commons and the Governor General.

Well, nothing stops anyone from challenging the constitutionality of that clause. Consequently, the law remains the law, and we can apply it immediately.

We are playing around for nothing, absolutely nothing, because next year or in two years we will be able to amend it.

The government is aware of that anomaly. Statutes were passed which contained anomalies. Statutes are continuously amended. Do you not consider that that also applies to this bill? Even if it is not amended in this session, it will be of no consequence.

[English]

Senator McDonald: Honourable senators, I dislike very much the anomaly in the bill we are presented with. I dislike very much the fact that on numerous occasions the Senate is asked to do things in a rush, and that sometimes, because of the time factor involved, we have to forego improving legislation which is not as good as it should be. But, in this particular case, I am not so sure that if we were to amend the bill and send it back to the other place it would receive the immediate attention of all members of that house in order to rectify the obvious mistake they have made, and that they would return the bill to us in sufficient time for it to be dealt with and become law prior to the Christmas adjournment.

I am not convinced that some members of the other place, whose dislike of this chamber is very obvious, would give it the attention necessary in order for it to do what all of us would like to see accomplished. Because of the political affiliations of those people, and some organizations which have fought this legislation almost to a standstill, I am not so sure that we would receive sufficient cooperation in order to have done what each and every one of us, I am sure, would like to see done here.

For that reason I find myself in the position where I have no alternative but to vote against the amendment, in an endeavour to have the legislation read the third time today, and assented to tomorrow.

All of us recognize that since the last war an obstacle to the continued progress of our country, and the major problem faced by Canada and the Western world, has been inflation. Whether this bill will remove that problem, I do not know, but it is the only bill we have. So far as I am concerned, if we do not put it into effect as early as possible—which, in my opinion, means tomorrow—and get the regulations into the hands of Canadians, and convince them that the government means business, there will be little control over the cost of production, goods and services in this country.

I therefore beg all honourable senators to give the bill their support, and to vote against the amendment, with the assurance of the Leader of the Government that he will introduce an amendment to the legislation, or, in cooperation with the minister, get an amendment moved in the other house. He has given us all the assurance that anyone could ask for.

Senator Flynn: But it doesn't mean anything.

Senator McDonald: I would ask all honourable senators to give the bill their immediate attention, and let us get on with the business of the day.

Senator van Roggen: As the one who posed the question to the Leader of the Government, may I say that the undertaking he has now given is ample for my purpose, and I shall be voting against the amendment.

In reply to the very cogent points made by Senator Flynn, if the amendment, when introduced, is not diligently and rapidly dealt with in the other place, or, indeed, if an amending government bill is introduced in the other place and then left on the shelf for the whole session, then I say to him that I—and, I would hope, other Liberals—will join him in blocking legislation from that house until they damn well do pass it.

Senator Flynn: I take note.

Senator Molson: It is on the record.

Senator Grosart: Will the Leader of the Government give us a similar assurance?

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Benidickson: Madam Speaker, could the amendment be read? Some of us were not present when it was moved.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Molson, seconded by the Honourable Senator Macdonald:

That Bill C-73, intituled: "An Act to provide for the restraint of profit margins, prices, dividends and compensation in Canada" be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows:

Page 34: Strike out lines 11 and 12 and substitute therefor the following:

"House, a message shall be sent to the Senate informing the Senate that the motion has been so approved and requesting that the motion be concurred in by the Senate.

(6.1) If a motion approved by the House of Commons pursuant to subsection (6) is concurred in by the Senate, this Act expires on the date that is specified in the motion."

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those who are in favour of Senator Molson's motion in amendment please say "yea"?

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Will those who are against please say "nay"?

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion the "nays" have it. And more than two honourable senators having risen.

The Hon. the Speaker: Please call in the senators.

● (1540)

Motion in amendment of Senator Molson negatived on the following division:

YEAS
The Honourable Senators

| | |
|-----------|------------------|
| Asselin | Haig |
| Beaubien | Lawson |
| Bélisle | Macdonald |
| Cameron | Molson |
| Carter | Phillips |
| Choquette | Quart |
| Flynn | Smith |
| Grosart | (Colchester)—15. |

NAYS
The Honourable Senators

| | |
|------------------------------|--------------------|
| Austin | Langlois |
| Basha | Lefrançois |
| Buckwold | Macnaughton |
| Cook | McDonald |
| Cottreau | McElman |
| Croll | McGrand |
| Davey | McIlraith |
| Denis | McNamara |
| Deschatelets | Michaud |
| Desruisseaux | Molgat |
| Duggan | Neiman |
| Eudes | Norrie |
| Fournier | Perrault |
| (Restigouche- Gloucester) | Petten |
| Fournier (de Lanaudière) | Riley |
| Hayden | Robichaud |
| Inman | Smith |
| Lafond | (Queens-Shelburne) |
| Lamontagne | Sparrow |
| Lang | van Roggen—38. |

The Hon. the Speaker: I declare the motion in amendment lost.

Senator Asselin: Close.

Senator Croll: Question.

Senator Lawson: Honourable senators, I wish to make a few comments on the main motion before the question is put.

There is a great mass of confusion throughout the country insofar as labour-management negotiations, large and small, are concerned, especially in relation to those grey areas that are not covered by the specifics of the bill. There is a sense of urgency developing throughout the country that something be done, that regulations be enacted and clear instructions given. A whole new art in negotiations has developed, which reads something like this:

● (1550)

As our Union is presently in negotiations with your firm and has arrived at a settlement with you, that on the face of it could be considered as being above the guidelines as set out, we wish to say that our reasoning for this settlement is that for one or more reasons, as set out in the regulations to the bill, we are in this case exempted from the controls.

However, as there may be some dispute or difference of opinion on this matter, the Union agrees that any initial wage increase shall be limited to 10% of all previous cost items in effect for a maximum of 60 days, and if either nothing is heard from the Anti-Inflation Board, or the settlement is approved by the Anti-Inflation Board within this 60-day period, the difference between the actual settlement and the 10% will be paid retroactively.

These are the kinds of clauses that are now being developed in negotiations, and most negotiations cannot be concluded because there are no clear-cut forthright regulations as to what does apply.

There are industry negotiations with a dozen companies—four of them are named in the original 1,500; eight are not. What rules apply to these companies? This is the kind of confusion that needs to be ended, and ended quickly, for at the moment there is virtually a total stop in all negotiations across the country; negotiations are virtually paralyzed. The only way I can see this deadlock being broken is by the passing of the legislation, and regulations being immediately circulated throughout the country.

There is one matter that I want to raise. When speaking during the debate on the White Paper I raised a concern that had been expressed to me in various parts of the country in negotiations about the question of interest rates. I was concerned about the psychological impact of interest rates and the high costs involved there, because it comes up in every set of negotiations. Since we discussed the White Paper here, it appeared that we were on the right track. I have here the reported bank profits: Royal Bank of Canada, $153.2 million, up 43 per cent; Imperial Bank of Commerce, $133.9 million, up 32 per cent; Bank of Montreal, up 81 per cent to $102.1 million; Bank of Nova Scotia, $111.7 million; Toronto-Dominion Bank, $90.6 million, up 31 per cent.

Senator Benidickson: Would the honourable senator permit a question?

Senator Lawson: Yes.

Senator Benidickson: Would the honourable senator explain those figures? I did not quite understand them. Are they net increases after taxes, before taxes, after provision for bad debts, and so on?

Senator Lawson: This is a report in the Vancouver Sun of the after-tax profits of these banks. I would not want to commit myself as to their accuracy. Of course, it does not really matter whether it is after taxes, net, or whatever it is. Members of trade unions look at this and see these figures of 31 per cent, 48 per cent and 80 per cent. The increase for the Bank of British Columbia has been reported at 200 per cent.

[Senator Lawson.]

The question I want to ask should perhaps be directed to the Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce. In committee yesterday was the minister asked, or did the minister indicate, whether these kinds of percentage increases will be controlled under the guidelines, if they are adopted?

Senator Hayden: It was not raised in committee.

Senator Lawson: If the question was not raised, that is a real concern that would certainly influence my vote on the bill, unless there is some assurance, which perhaps the Leader of the Government might give, that these kinds of percentage increases will be controlled under the guidelines, and that we will not be faced next year with trade unions being restricted to increases of 8 to 10 per cent while the profits of the banks are not similarly regulated. I do not think the government can or should expect the support of the people of Canada if it is not going to do something about this.

Senator Beaubien: Honourable senators, to my mind there is absolutely no question but that the profits of the banks will be regulated.

Senator Grosart: It does not say so.

Senator Benidickson: Not only dividends, but profits?

Senator Beaubien: Does the honourable senator want to make a speech?

Senator Benidickson: Perhaps I might be permitted to ask a question about the distinction. Is it profits as well as dividends?

Senator Beaubien: The bank statements end on October 31. Therefore, they will be regulated on the amount they earned, which Senator Lawson mentioned. Dividends are regulated, and they are not allowed to go up by 10 per cent, but the salaries are; neither are profits allowed to go up by 10 per cent. I may be wrong, and Senator Hayden can correct me if I am, but I am sure that will be the law under the regulations.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, may I endeavour to provide some clarification? Banks are very definitely included within the ambit of this legislation. Bank charges, service charges and profits will also be included. The only way this legislation will succeed in the country is by being administered evenly so that it is fair to all groups. The wage earners of this country, the workers—whether they work as professionals or in mills and factories, or whether they are engaged in the important transportation industry of this country—making the vital contribution that they do, have a right to believe that they will not be called upon to make a sacrifice which will not be made by all sectors in the country, including those who serve in Parliament.

● (1600)

Honourable senators, while I am on my feet may I bring to the attention of the Senate information which I have just received from the office of the Minister of Finance. The minister has undertaken to introduce an amendment to the Anti-Inflation Act to provide for Senate consideration, similar to that of the House of Commons, of a motion regarding early expiration of the said act, at the same time as other amendments of the act are introduced. I understand that a number of other revisions are now under consideration.

I am happy to be able to give that positive assurance to the house.

FURTHER MOTION IN AMENDMENT NEGATIVED

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, before beginning my brief remarks on third reading, I would say that I noticed in the debate that several senators gave a few historical facts. I would like to place on the record that the first parliament to pass an anti-inflation bill was the British Parliament in 1351, when they approved the Statute of Labourers. For the first time the judges were selected not from the nobility but from among the rural middle classes, and they were placed on a fixed salary. However, the citizens at that time considered the justices or commissioners to be biased, and there followed 30 years of unrest and riots. I hope this is not going to be the situation in this case.

Throughout the debate, the life of this legislation has received considerable attention. Senator Perrault said that this is one place where we could have an honest political difference. I agree with that statement, and I would point out to him, in reply to his explanation of yesterday, that it should be three and a quarter years as opposed to 18 months. In flood control, not all the waters are released at once; waters are gradually released so that the areas under control are not flooded.

There are two points, honourable senators, that I do not consider to be political, the first being the fact that we do not have the regulations before us. Bill C-73 has been before Parliament for approximately six weeks, and we have still received no indication of the type of regulation to be promulgated. The regulations may be available next week, but one must ask why all the secrecy and hesitation in releasing them before third reading of the bill in this house. We are like a group of legislative paleontologists piecing together a bureaucratic dinosaur. We do not know whether that dinosaur is going to fly, swim, or, even worse, we do not know whether it is going to use its claws or its teeth on its victims. This fact causes me a great deal of concern. It is my hope that the regulations will bear in mind the Christmas spirit and be as generous as possible.

The other section of the bill that causes me a great deal of concern is the one dealing with appeal from a ruling of the administrator. I can only compare this aspect of the bill to a situation in which an individual lays a charge of assault against the administrator, and then finds that the brother of the administrator is sitting on the Bench. He will, in that case, naturally suspect a great deal of bias. Due to the fact that the appeal is directed to another branch of the same board, we can naturally expect suspicions of bias on the part of the board.

Honourable senators, I move, seconded by Senator Haig:

That Bill C-73, intituled: "An Act to provide for the restraint of profit margins, prices, dividends and compensation in Canada, be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows:

Page 23: Strike out line 38 and substitute therefor the following:

"behaviour for a term not to extend beyond April 30, 1977."

Page 23: Strike out line 42 and substitute therefor the following:

"term not to extend beyond April 30, 1977."

Page 33 and 34: Strike out lines 7 to 47, inclusive, on page 33, and lines 1 to 19, inclusive on page 34 and substitute therefor the following:

"(2) This Act expires on April 30, 1977, or on such earlier day as may be fixed by proclamation."

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Phillips, seconded by the Honourable Senator Haig, that Bill C-73, intituled "An Act to provide for the restraint of profit margins, prices, dividends and compensation in Canada, "be not now read the third time, but that it be amended as follows:

Page 23: Strike out line 38 and substitute therefor the following—

Senator Flynn: Dispense.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Senator Phillips: If I may, honourable senators, directly on the amendment proposed, draw your attention to a reply given in the House of Commons by the Minister of Finance, as reported at page 9791 of House of Commons Debates, in which he states that the government in its negotiations with the provinces is considering a shorter period of time, at the end of which time he hoped there would be a renewal—and I draw your attention to the word "renewal." I also draw to your attention the fact that the draft proposal presented to the provinces contains provisions for 18 months only, and that either the federal government or the provinces have the right to terminate the agreement by giving 90 days' notice no later than January 15, 1977. If the provinces are dissatisfied and wish an agreement for 18 months only, why should we provide a term longer than the provinces have requested?

I detect on the part of the government an unwillingness to consider a shorter term because of the opportunity that could be provided for criticism at the end of 18 months. If the proposals contained in Bill C-73 are not successful, I am sure the government will receive criticism both in Parliament and outside Parliament, so there is no opportunity for the Opposition to gain anything in particular there. On the other hand, if the program is working, a renewal would give the government the opportunity to renew the evangelical zeal that they are attempting to generate at this time.

The other day Senator Greene suggested an election could be fought on the issue. Perhaps this thought would occur to the government.

● (1610)

I wish to point out that this amendment does not mean the end of the legislation. It can be renewed, as suggested by the Minister of Finance, and if it is working I am sure honourable senators would wish it renewed. If it is not, however, honourable senators would not want to continue the controls in the blind hope that something would happen in the next 18 months to improve the situation.

Senator Benidickson: Honourable senators, I think I shall not be delaying the house unduly if I make a few remarks now, inasmuch as I did not take the opportunity to participate in debate on two previous occasions. The first was on the inquiry of the Leader of the Government calling the attention of the Senate to the White Paper entitled "Attack on Inflation—a program of national action," which was published on Thanksgiving Day. The second was on the general debate on second reading of this bill, Bill C-73, before its referral to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

I thought I read this morning that, after consultation with the provinces, the Minister of Finance had reconciled himself to their argument that 18 months was perhaps adequate for this legislation. I may be wrong in that, but my feeling is that if we do not have continuous full cooperation from the provinces beyond 18 months, this legislation will prove to be of little use.

I think it is obvious that it is easy for the provinces to accept initially, more or less holus-bolus, the hard aspects of the anti-inflation bill, knowing that politically in ensuing periods they can blame Ottawa invariably if things do not go well. They can simply say to their long-time constituents, their employees, teachers, labourers within provincial jurisdiction and municipalities, and so on: "We are not responsible. Blame Ottawa." Certainly, if I were a provincial premier I would be glad to have that political opportunity. After all, in the crisis which almost everyone recognizes exists today, it would be the easiest course to follow.

On the other hand, if the provinces are not prepared to go with the hard game rules for longer than 18 months, I am not sure that the program could be effective. I have been of the opinion for several weeks now that if this legislation does not prove itself within 18 months it is simply going to be a horrible nightmare anyway.

I have to say at once, though, that I am not against controls per se. In 1971 or 1972 one of our committees dealt with a similar subject concerning price and wage controls. At that time I was in a minority of one or two, I believe it was, who would have been prepared to accept controls then. I was overwhelmingly overborne by the rest of the committee, however. I feel their course of action was in response to the persuasiveness of their economic advisor, Mr. Gillies, who has since become a Conservative Member of Parliament. Naturally, a committee is master of its own destiny, but an economic advisor of his stature does have influence.

I am the first to admit that this kind of program can be done within a short time only once. I wanted to do it then. But if we had done it then we could only have put it into effect for a limited period of time and I certainly admit that we would not be in a position to do it now. For that reason I am prepared to forget the incident, except that I am a little resentful that Mr. Gillies took one stance on that occasion and then, in 1973-74, took the opposite position, becoming an advocate for controls as financial critic for the Conservative Party. In that respect I fully confess both parties have had lapses in philosophy, if I may put it that way.

[Senator Phillips.]

Honourable senators, I was interested to hear the remarks of Senator Lawson earlier today. It is not too long since an earlier speech of his in this chamber was much respected across the country. But today he raised the question whether the banks were perhaps receiving too much profit from interest. Certainly, the beneficiaries of interest are, in the first instance, the chartered banks. I have nothing specially antagonistic against chartered banks. In my time I have served with two Ministers of Finance. In one particular year I was active when the ten-year revision was an important function of an assistant to the Minister of Finance in the other place. I am certainly proud of my association with two Ministers of Finance, Mr. Douglas Abbott and Mr. Walter Harris.

I believe there is an overwhelming sentiment in this place and in the country to see this bill passed. I join with that sentiment and I say let us get behind it despite any personal, real, sincere, or technical questioning we may have about the efficacy of certain aspects of the bill.

I applauded Senator Smith (Colchester) for his remarks yesterday when he was making certain objections, one of which had to do with the three-year duration of the measure. Perhaps I was wrong in my interpretation yesterday of the remarks of the Minister of Finance, for whom, I repeat, I have a high regard, but I thought yesterday Mr. Macdonald agreed with the provinces that perhaps the term should be only 18 months. I will not be here when the amendment is voted on, but my feeling is that if this measure works to reduce inflation, and fairly soon—and I certainly hope it does—it will have to be recognizable within the next 18 months. I say I certainly hope it works, because we are at the point, I think, of passing the bill and in my opinion we must all get behind it afterwards and see that it does work.

• (1620)

Although I am a graduate of a law school, I make no pretence of being a reader in detail of the legalistic clauses in some of the bills that come before us. I try always to be modest. If I have any lack of modesty, it may lie in claiming a certain sense of political smell that I have accumulated over a period of time. What makes me mention this is that yesterday, after Bill C-73 was referred to the Senate Standing Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, and after my duty to attend a caucus of my party had been carried out, I went to a meeting of that committee. I want to tell you my feelings about it. Admittedly, I arrived late at the meeting. The members were discussing professional fees, which I did not think was too important. I did not leave, however, before I heard Mr. Poissant, and a couple of other excellent assistants to the committee, raise some questions which I thought were very astute and important.

I do not want to be misunderstood. I consider that the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce has been giving a tremendous amount of valuable service to the Senate as a whole. They have dealt among others with the bankruptcy bill and the extremely controversial competition bill, Bill C-2. Many tributes have been paid recently to the committee, not only because of its work but because of the notable anniversary of its chairman. I have no desire to speak derogatorily of the committee, but I left its meeting yesterday in a somewhat unhappy state. I have before me a few pencilled notes for the later questioning that I made at the meeting. I wrote "$2,400 limit. Patriotism. Trickery. Faith. Psychology." I wrote down: "Disappointed. Yes, perhaps disgusted. Lingering bad taste."

These were some of the ideas that I thought I might raise with the minister and some of the officials of the department—the minister whom I admire as much as anybody I know, in front-line politics and whose talents I recognized when he first entered the House of Commons. However, I walked out and thought, "Why should I bother him by opening up a can of worms?"

But two months have gone by since the Thanksgiving Day address of the Prime Minister. As an old controllist advocate when necessary, I approved of what he proposed. Some of us had a meeting later that night. The Prime Minister was there and I was glad to hear him say that while it had not been in the original announcement, there was no question but that the paid political servants of the Crown, members of the Cabinet and, I suppose, the higher salary level parliamentary secretaries, as they now call them, would surely be under the $2,400 limitation with respect to incomes.

One of the reasons why I left the meeting yesterday was that if I had stayed I was going to have to tell my good friend the Minister of Finance, and some of the more highly paid officials of his department who were likely around with him, that since a few days after the Prime Minister's speech and the laying down of the guidelines, I have never lost the distaste inspired by the announcements, and my feeling that there was something a little too quick in the fixing up of salary protection for inside, knowledgeable people with respect to this $2,400 limitation on increases in the immediate first year of these proposed controls. My memory is not as good as it used to be. There were quite a few people involved and I was going to ask him how many, but I decided then—perhaps, I think now, wrongly—against it.

Senator Forsey referred to this matter during the debate we had earlier in this connection, and he referred to personal sacrifices that might be made even here. I felt that if I spoke on the subject I might be misunderstood, however. We all have our personal situations, and when one person volunteers to give up sacrificially this, that and the other thing, he may not be doing something which can be done with equal ease by all, since someone else's obligations may be different.

I left yesterday's meeting of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, as I say, with a feeling of uneasiness. I was unhappy. These feelings have been developing over the two months that have elapsed since the Prime Minister's announcement, and they have not been eased by this matter of government salaries over $2,400 that has been thrown at me all across the country. The suggestion is, "The Ottawa people looked after themselves from and before the beginning."

It was 4.30 yesterday afternoon, I think, when we were discussing this in the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, so I decided to relax back in my office. I picked up the evening Ottawa Citizen and instead of being cheered, however, I was rendered more unhappy. I read a column that I do not usually read, by a Mr. Geoff Johnson, the headline was, "Carpets escape the axe." The article goes on:

Up there on the 23rd floor of the Bell Canada palace on Elgin Street, lavishly appointed home of Treasury Board, keeper of the public purse, there is much honing of axes in readiness for the trimming of the public service.

I read the previous day that we might not even wait for attrition around here in the public service, that we might institute actual staff reductions. The article continued:

Certainly, it's not the carpets that will feel the axe first.

Honourable senators can read the article for themselves. We are here to pass a bill, and I perhaps should not raise these petty things, because we have on our agenda as well the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, before which the President of the Treasury Board appeared for consideration of extra supplementary estimates (A) 1975-76. I think all members of that Committee will feel, while they had met Mr. Chrétien here on November 19, that he earned greater respect from them than ever for some of the points of view he expressed. Personally, I have great admiration for him. I thought he did extremely well as Minister of Indian Affairs, and I do not think that anybody has more Indian constituents than I have, and have had over a long period of time. He had a great interest in their welfare and, for example, he provided the native peoples with funding so they could retain advocates and staff to advance their case against even the government itself if necessary, and to assert their rights and causes. As I say, I have great respect for Mr. Chrétien. He apologizes for his bilingualism at times, but I wish I could express myself in English as efficiently, colourfully and pointedly as he did and does.

• (1630)

Again, honourable senators, I am not being personal, but I have sufficient experience around here to know that if there were new carpets for Treasury Board itself they were probably ordered six months or more before the decision to do some belt-tightening and to have some more controls and restraint. I think some old-time politicians would have burned those carpets or put them in storage rather than leave the possibility open for such a newspaper article to appear in the current climate. But I am aware that these mistakes are continuing to be made, and the top people have to think personally about them. Shape up their staffs! They have to do without carpets.

The article went on to say, more or less: Goodness gracious, the Canadian Council is expanding; they are putting other people out of downtown offices; they need new carpets and they need new space. I am not singling out the Canada Council here. It is the newspaper story that does. But all over Ottawa people are asking for leadership by the government itself. Let us see that the leadership in these things comes from the very top—the ministry. I think it will. As I have told you, I have the greatest respect for the two members of Cabinet to whom I have referred, but I feel that everybody has to be serious about this and everybody has to get down to it and do his best. Staff must support their ministers and the welfare of the country.

I refer back to what Senator Smith (Colchester) said, that he has great objections to a number of the clauses of the bill, and that he had considerable doubts as to their efficacy. I regret what I regard at the moment as too strong objections that have been registered against the anti-inflation proposals by the official labour movement. I was elected as a Liberal labour member, and I can recall no occasion when, if called upon, I did not respect the honour of being a Liberal labour member. On four or six occasions, and usually with my deskmate, Senator Croll, I voted, perhaps against my party Whip, on their behalf. The one thing I think I can point to, and with some pride, is that on each and every subject where I didn't follow the party line my point of view eventually became part of Liberal Party legislation. However, I think that there must be a little less antagonism now to this bill. I think it is time for us all to rally and to let bygones be bygones; let us put patriotism at the top and let us put the idea of sacrifice and conscience before each and every one of us. Let us be prepared to make sacrifices and let us make this legislation a success, regardless of anything that we have seen or said in the past.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I suppose we are going to come back to the amendment now before the Senate. I understand that since Senator Benidickson had to leave he was allowed to speak to the whole bill, but I think the question now to be discussed is that of the period of time for the application of this legislation.

Senator Phillips made the point very clearly, and he has been supported in this respect by Senator Benidickson. What we suggest, and what our party has always suggested, is that for those who will suffer more directly, the hope of an early termination of the control is of great importance. Since the government has agreed, in fact, with the provinces by allowing in the agreement for a period of only 18 months, we think the bill would be much more logical, and offer more hope to those who will suffer the "rough justice" it provides, if it allowed them to look forward to its possible termination after 18 months instead of three years from now, to say nothing of the fact that the latter date surely involves serious dangers for the health of the economy.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, two points were made, and made very eloquently, by Senator Phillips—the first one concerning the duration of the program, and the second involving the suggestion which was made by him that there is an inadequate opportunity for criticism, and that the three-year period appears to him to be a device to frustrate legitimate criticism of the program. However, I should like to direct his attention to clause 46(2) of the bill, which provides:

This Act expires on December 31, 1978, or on such earlier date as may be fixed by proclamation or a motion for the consideration of the House of Commons that is approved by the House—

And I do not want to go over all that again.

Senator Flynn: It is subclause (6) that you want to refer to.

[Senator Benidickson.]

Senator Perrault: We have reviewed all this at some length. Consequently, I am suggesting that the program can be terminated at an earlier date if it should appear to be in the best interests of the country to do so. I want to provide that assurance once again.

Insofar as the negotiations with the provinces are concerned, it is true that some of the provinces suggested that as far as their own public sector employees were concerned, the program should be for 18 months. The proposal is that the provinces would be able to sign formal agreements to have the federal guidelines apply to provincial public servants for the shorter period of 18 months, with the expectation that their participation would be reviewed and extended at the end of that time. The representations which have been received from the provinces have applied to provincial public servants, but it is the determination of the government to have the three-year period—at least, the expiration date, December 31, 1978—to continue to apply to those who work in the private sector.

I return to the controversial subclause 46(6):

Where, at any time after March 31, 1977 and before July 1, 1977, a motion for the consideration of the House of Commons—

"And the Senate," as it will ultimately be.

● (1640)

—signed by not less than 50 members of the House, is filed with the Speaker—

That really provides that after a decent period of time, when Canadians of all political persuasions and beliefs have had time to assess the impact of this program, there will be ample opportunity for 50 members of the loyal Opposition, should they so desire, to initiate the type of debate which it may be necessary to have at that time. There is no attempt to frustrate criticism. If the program is not as successful as hoped, as members of the Opposition suspect it may not be, they will have full opportunity to criticize in the full and rich parliamentary tradition. There is no attempt to muzzle legitimate criticism of this program for a 36-month period.

Although I know it is not directly relevant to the amendments, I think all senators should be commended for their constructive remarks and, at times, their constructive criticism of the measure before us. This is bound to be a controversial piece of legislation. In important measures of this type there are certain to be real concerns and apprehensions, not only with respect to the implementation but also the effect of the legislation. That is freely admitted. You know, we are really undertaking a journey into faith to a certain extent, because we have never had this type of program in Canada before in peacetime. However, the goodwill evinced by all members of the Senate, in my opinion, is one of the happiest auguries for the future. There is a feeling that we want it to work.

I wish to give the commitment that there will be an earnest endeavour on the part of the government to ensure that the legislation works in the public interest as fairly as possible. Appropriate amendments will be advanced should the need for them become apparent. The remaining task is for us to make this program work.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Some Hon. Senators: Yes.

Some Hon. Senators: No.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those in favour of the motion in amendment will please say "yea".

Some Hon. Senators: Yea.

The Hon. the Speaker: Those who are against the motion in amendment will please say "nay".

Some Hon. Senators: Nay.

The Hon. the Speaker: In my opinion the "nays" have it. And more than two honourable senators having risen.

The Hon. the Speaker: Please call in the senators.

● (1650)

Motion in amendment of Senator Phillips negated on the following division:

YEAS
The Honourable Senators

| | |
|-----------|------------------------|
| Asselin | Haig |
| Beaubien | Macdonald |
| Choquette | Phillips |
| Flynn | Quart |
| Grosart | Smith (Colchester)—10. |

NAYS
The Honourable Senators

| | |
|------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Argue | Lang |
| Austin | Langlois |
| Basha | Lefrançois |
| Buckwold | Macnaughton |
| Cameron | McDonald |
| Carter | McElman |
| Cook | McGrand |
| Cottreau | McIlraith |
| Croll | Michaud |
| Davey | Molgat |
| Denis | Molson |
| Deschatelets | Neiman |
| Desruisseaux | Norrie |
| Eudes | Perrault |
| Fournier | Petten |
| (Restigouche- Gloucester) | Riley |
| Fournier (de Lanaudière) | Robichaud |
| Goldenberg | Smith (Queens-Shelburne) |
| Hayden | Sparrow |
| Lafond | van Roggen—40. |
| Lamontagne | |

The Hon. the Speaker: I declare the motion in amendment lost. Shall the main motion carry?

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I do not intend to delay the passage of the bill, even if we are not very happy with the result of our efforts to improve it.

I would like at this time to put a question to the Leader of the Government concerning the rumour that the Anti-Inflation Board has ruled that the agreement entered into between the Postmaster General and the postal workers is in contravention of the guidelines. I was wondering whether, under the legislation, the Anti-Inflation Board has only the power of recommendation and whether the administrator can do anything about the agreement.

I think the Senate would like to be enlightened on this matter.

Senator Perrault: In reply to the honourable senator, I have only fragmentary information at this time with respect to the reported ruling by the Anti-Inflation Board on the proposed settlement for the inside postal workers. For the sake of accuracy, I would like to take his inquiry as notice and provide a reply as soon as I am able to ascertain the facts.

Senator Macdonald: Honourable senators, I do not propose delaying the third reading of this bill by more than two or three minutes, but I would like to make one suggestion.

It seems to me that ever since the program was introduced, the emphasis has been on wage controls. Many Canadians, particularly those on low and fixed incomes, believe that price controls mean that the price of groceries will be frozen. If that is not done, there will be a great deal of disappointment over the coming months.

I know that the price to the farmer and fisherman does not come within the act, and that only other increases which are justified can be considered. Some of the major grocery chains have frozen the price of groceries, with the exception of perishables, which shows that it can be done very easily.

● (1700)

I suggest to the government that it freeze the prices on those groceries that people must buy, and, if prices must rise, that they be kept frozen by means of subsidies, as was done during the war.

Senator Perrault: On behalf of the government, may I say that careful attention will be given to the honourable senator's proposal.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion for third reading?

Senator Flynn: On division.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

ADJOURNMENT

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, December 11, 1975, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

Motion agreed to.

THE ECONOMYGOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES—ENLARGEMENT OF ST. LAWRENCE ISLANDS NATIONAL PARK—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, yesterday I was asked a question by Senator Molson regarding the possible enlargement of the national park on the St. Lawrence River.

In answer to the honourable senator's question, I should like to advise the Senate that the Honourable J. Judd Buchanan, Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, in a press release of April 1975, announced federal government plans for the expansion of the St. Lawrence Islands National Park. The estimated cost is $30 million. However, the plan is only in the concept stage, and spending of funds will occur only after the master plan stage has been approved. It is anticipated that the project will reach that level within the year.

Of course, the money will be spent only with Treasury Board approval and the appropriate parliamentary approval.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 1571)

COMBINES INVESTIGATION ACT

REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE ON BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

Wednesday, December 10, 1975.

The Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, to which was referred Bill C-2, intituled: "An Act to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Bank Act and to repeal an Act to amend an Act to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Criminal Code", has, in obedience to the order of reference of Tuesday, October 28, 1975, examined the said Bill and, for the reasons hereinafter mentioned, now reports the same without amendment.

Bill C-2 as passed by the House of Commons comes as no stranger to your Committee, the subject matter thereof having been referred to it for advance study on March 27, 1974 and again, in the present Parliament, on October 16, 1974. On March 19, 1975 the first Interim Report¹ of your Committee was tabled in the Senate and a second Report² tabled on June 26, 1975.

Bill C-2 proposes extensive amendments to the Combines Investigation Act and is said by the Government to comprise what has commonly been described as "Phase I" of contemplated amendments to that Act. The effect of these amendments is to—

- (a) bring service industries and the professions under the scope of the Act,
- (b) create certain new offences relating to combines,
- (c) make certain trade practices "reviewable" by the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission,
- (d) provide a civil right of action for violation of the Act,
- (e) expand the jurisdiction of the Federal Court of Canada with respect to combines matters,
- (f) strengthen the law with respect to misleading advertising and representations, and
- (g) provide more severe punishment for infringement of the Act.

Further amendments to the Act, commonly referred to as "Phase II", relating particularly to mergers and monopolies will be introduced, according to the Government, during the next session of Parliament. With the introduction of Phase II, most of the ground covered by Bill C-256, the Competition Act (which was introduced as a comprehensive overhaul of the Combines Investigation Act nearly four-and-a-half years ago, but not proceeded with) will have been traversed in slower, and therefore for those affected less painful, but possibly just as comprehensive a fashion.

As stated in the first Interim Report on the advance study, your Committee had the advantage of considering a great many submissions from a cross section of companies and associations; a list of briefs and appearances is attached as an appendix to the first Interim Report. In addition, your Committee heard evidence by the Director of Investigations and Research under the Act, Mr. R. J. Bertrand, and other members of his Department. As a result of those hearings your Committee made in its first Interim Report on the advance study a number of recommendations for amendment to the Bill before it was passed by the Commons. The Bill in the form finally adopted by the Commons responds to an appreciable number of the most important concerns and recommendations of your Committee with respect to the Bill as originally introduced.

The Bill was referred to your Committee by the Senate on October 28, 1975. Your Committee since that date has had seven sessions during which it has heard five further submissions from the parties listed in the Appendix. In addition, three sessions were devoted to the evidence of the Minister responsible for the legislation, the Hon. André Ouellet, Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

No new concerns have been identified by your Committee since the Bill itself was referred to it which have not already been described in its two Reports on the advance study with the exception of a minor technical matter in connection with the punishment provisions arising out of amendments made in the House of Commons during the debate on the report stage on the Bill.

Your Committee's principal task has therefore been to assess the effectiveness of the amendments made in the Commons in meeting the recommendations outlined in its two previous Reports and deciding what action should be recommended with respect to those which have not been reflected.

Among the recommendations made in the Interim Report which your Committee considers have been fully met by amendments to the Bill made in the Commons are the following:

1. Restoration of the refusal to sell defences under the resale price maintenance provisions (new subsection 38(9), clause 18, p. 42).
2. Provisions making the Commission a Court of Record for purposes of its jurisdiction in connection with reviewable practices, requiring that the burden of proof in applications before the Commission under the reviewable practices jurisdiction shall be on the Director of Investigation and Research (except where the applicant is a supplier seeking modification of an order) and clarifying that parties before the Commission have the right to cross-examine witnesses called by the Director and to call and examine witnesses and produce documents on their own behalf (new section 31.8, clause 12, p. 23).
3. Provision of a right of application by a supplier against whom an order has been made under the reviewable practices provisions to apply for modification of such order. (New section 31.9, clause 12, p. 23).

¹ Committee Proceedings Issue No. 33 and Appendix to Hansard, March 19, 1975.

² Committee Proceedings Issue No. 47 and Appendix to Hansard, June 26, 1975.

4. A re-drafting of part of new subsection 31.4(2), clause 12, pp. 16 and 17 clarifying the circumstances under which an order respecting the practices of exclusive dealing or tied selling may be made¹.
5. Removal of a provision whereby the consent of the person calling for tenders to a joint bid would have to be obtained prior to submission of the tender (new section 32.2, clause 15, p. 27).

Among the recommendations of your Committee which were partially met by amendments made by the Commons were the following:

1. The provision of a defence of "due diligence" with respect to certain offences which would have otherwise carried strict liability.

This was perhaps the most significant of the concerns expressed by your Committee and its recommendation has been implemented to a substantial degree in the amendments made by the Commons. The offences in the present Act with respect to misleading advertising and representations and as amended by the Bill are provided for in such a way that, contrary to typical criminal offences, mens rea, or, criminal intent is not an ingredient which must be established by the Crown. The amendment containing the "due diligence" defence appears as new section 37.3 in clause 18 of the Bill on page 39. With the exception of the word "forthwith" in paragraph 37.3(2)(d), your Committee is satisfied that the amendment meets the concerns expressed by your Committee. The Minister and his officials argued that there was sufficient flexibility in the word "forthwith" that there would be no undue hardship and that to remove the word would open the door to abuse by the unscrupulous. It may be that the courts will interpret the provision in the manner suggested by the Minister and, if so, there will be no difficulty. Instead of an amendment to delete or replace the word "forthwith" your Committee recommends that no action be taken at the present time and that court decisions under the section after enactment be monitored to ascertain whether the defence is meeting the concerns for which it was inserted.

2. Exemption for affiliates.

Your Committee proposed that the exemption in the Bill in respect of dealings between affiliated persons and companies under the resale price maintenance provisions (new subsections 38(2) and (7) on pp. 40 and 41, clause 18) be extended to other offences in the Act and in the Bill since, otherwise, by implication, dealings between affiliates might constitute commission of the offence. This proposal was recognized in the Commons amendments with one exception. The exemption was not extended to sales between affiliated companies for the purposes of the price discrimination provision, section 34 of the Act. In other words, the clear implication as a result of this omission will be that, e.g., a parent company may not be able to sell to a subsidiary at a lower price than it would to an arm's length customer. The explanation given by the Minister was that allowing sales to subsidiaries at a lower price would tend to weaken the position of arm's length customers of the parent company who compete with the subsidiary. In other words, the possibility of lower prices to the consumer should yield to the creation of conditions to improve the status of independent dealers. This is obviously a policy question of some importance and the Minister has indicated that the matter will be re-examined in the Phase II amendments together with the subject of loss-leadering—another area where possible lower prices to the consumer in the short run should possibly give way to other considerations. In this connection he said:

"I do not want to duck the question at all; quite the contrary. It is an important area. It is public knowledge that in Phase II we will be dealing with loss leading. I have indicated this in speaking to the other place that this would be one of the subjects of study and action in phase two. We will also be dealing with price discrimination in Phase II. We will come back to the subject at that time."¹

3. Sports.

Because the Bill would extend the application of the Act to services, it could be argued that the customary arrangements between leagues and teams in amateur and professional sports with respect to players could be considered an offence under section 32 of the Act. Recognizing that some exemption should be granted, the Bill would substitute for section 32 a new section 32.3 which in essence repeats in subsection (1) in language more applicable to the sports world the offence contained in section 32 but also provides in subsection (2) a defence which could be invoked based on the desirability of maintaining a balance among the teams and the necessity of observing certain regulations in sports organized on an international basis.

Your Committee recommended that both amateur and professional sports should simply be exempted from the Bill.

While recognizing that combines legislation may not be the appropriate place for dealing with the problems of the sports world, the Minister, when he appeared before your Committee, suggested that in due course these and other matters affecting sports would be dealt with in a comprehensive way in other legislation and that in the meantime this new provision should be inserted in the Combines Act. Your Committee, with some reservations, agrees that the new provisions should be allowed to remain on the basis that some form of exemption from section 32 of the Act is required and that the matter will be kept under review by the Government for more appropriate attention at a later date.

4. Regulated Trades, Industries and Professions.

An area which has presented great difficulty to your Committee is the position of regulated industries, trades and professions. Because the Bill would bring services under the purview of the Act, attention has been focused on the problem although it may well be that the problem existed under the present Act in relation to trades and industries dealing with "articles".

¹ See Interim Report, Committee Proceedings No. 22, Item 8, p. 9.

¹ Committee Proceedings, Issue No. 61, November 19, 1975, p. 17.

Your Committee feels strongly that no industry, trade or profession, the bulk of whose activities are regulated by some governmental body, whether provincial or federal, should, in addition, be exposed to prosecution under the Combines Investigation Act.

Your Committee heard submissions in this area from the Institute of Chartered Accountants, the International Air Transport Association (IATA), the Air Transport Association of Canada, the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange and the Association of Canadian Franchisors and Independent Grocers' Alliance.

In the case of the Institute of Chartered Accountants (and other professions) and the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange, members have for years had arrangements with respect to certain aspects of the carrying on of their activities. There is nothing secret or covert about these arrangements and they have generally been regarded as being in the public interest. While some aspects of their activities may be considered to be regulated to one degree or another, some aspects clearly are not. Yet, if those activities are still regarded to be in the public interest, it would be an ill-considered policy that would abruptly, in the wake of a new law of general application, make them illegal merely because they are unregulated or insufficiently regulated.

An amendment was inserted in the Bill by the House of Commons which may be of some assistance to the professions. (See new subsection 32(7), clause 14, p. 26). It provides that a court shall not convict under the conspiracy section if it finds that the arrangement relates to the standards of competence and integrity reasonably necessary for the protection of the public.

The Minister and his officials in their testimony before your Committee stated on the one hand that they considered that the decisions of the courts, particularly in the Breweries case¹ and the Farm Products Marketing case², were sufficient protection for these groups. On the other hand, the Minister and his officials were unable to resist keeping the door to application of the Combines Investigation Act open by stating that they also felt that the degree to which a regulated trade, industry or profession could consider itself protected by this jurisprudence depended to a great extent on the manner in which the particular regulatory body responsible for them exercised its powers. Since in many cases it may not be up to or within the power of the particular industry, trade or profession to affect the manner in which such bodies exercise their legislative powers, your Committee considers that they may well be placed in an untenable position if the Combines Investigation Act is applied blindly to them.

The case of the air transport industry in Canada is particularly striking in this regard. Because of the nature of its activities, there has always been a high degree of cooperation amongst the various companies in the industry. This cooperation has been, in some cases, required and in other cases simply encouraged by the Government. For example, the Government of Canada has many agreements with other countries respecting air transportation which provide as follows:

"The tariffs referred to in paragraph (1) of this Article shall, if possible, be agreed in respect of each route between the designated airlines of the contracting parties, in consultation with other airlines operating over the whole or part of that route, and such agreement shall, where possible, be reached through the rate-fixing machinery of the International Air Transport Association. The tariffs so agreed shall be subject to the approval of the aeronautical authorities of both contracting parties."

It is true that the tariffs which result from such agreements must be filed with the Canadian Transport Commission but the question remains as to whether this process is a sufficient "regulation" to bring the carriers within the exempting formula contained in the judgment of Chief Justice McRuer in the Breweries case. Moreover, there may be other aspects of the air transport industry on which it has been the practice to have agreements and arrangements, with the encouragement of the Department of Transport and the Canadian Transport Commission, in respect of which the powers of supervision of the Canadian Transport Commission are not as precise as they are in the case of tariffs.

In its Second Interim Report, your Committee recommended that a provision be inserted in the Combines Investigation Act specifically exempting the air industry from the application thereof. The Minister has argued against the insertion of a specific exemption for particular named industries (although there are already some in the Act) but at the same time appeared to recognize the dilemma in which the industry might find itself as a result of application of the Act. The following are some excerpts from the Minister's testimony before the Committee on November 19th:

"... Phase II of the revision of the competition policy will be concerned especially with those matters which affect the structural issues of industry raised by merger, monopoly and specialization agreements. I could undertake today before you to say that this question of uncertainty which exists for the transportation industry must and could be clarified in the course of the coming months after full discussion with my colleague, the Minister of Transport, and the appropriate decision made as to whether it would be dealt with through the Canadian Transport Commission or the Combines Investigation Act..."³

"... Secondly, I am quite prepared to meet some of the fears expressed by members of this Committee by saying that the new area now covered, that in order to clarify the situation we will undertake to have an in-depth study and come up with a positive conclusion one way or the other on Phase II. But basically we assume that competition is expected in the air transport industry and that the industry should conduct itself accordingly.

¹ 1960 O.R. 601

² 1957 S.C.R. 198

³ Committee Proceedings Issue No. 61, p. 6.

I hope and believe that everyone here accepts this understanding. Whether it is monitored by the Director of Combines (sic) and Research or whether by the CTC is a question that has to be clarified. I am quite prepared to ensure that it will be clarified in the course of the coming months.

Therefore, by the time we introduce Phase II of the competition policy we will know exactly whether it should be regulated through the CTC or under the umbrella of the Combines Investigation Act.¹

"We ask that the aeronautical authority, being the CTC, exercise its full authority over civilians. We do believe that for the time being there is no danger of a case developing until we have had an opportunity of correcting the situation in Phase II, at which time we will put forward a definite position on this."²

"... The promulgation of a certain part of the Act will come within a matter of weeks. More particularly, in the service section, we have said that we will give sufficient time to the service industry to prepare themselves because of the new legislation. This will be a period of three, four of possibly five months. We might not promulgate this section until we have been able to settle clearly the question whether or not the CTC is doing this monitoring and this in-depth decision making. If the mechanism is in place within the CTC to do the in-depth evaluation, it is quite clear the Combines Investigation Act does not apply. We could then promulgate it without difficulty."³

Exemption from combines legislation for specific industries is not completely unknown in Canada. It was found some years ago, for example, by the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission that the shipping companies in Canada were operating a cartel in respect of an aspect of their business. It was also found by the Commission, however, that the cartel was in the public interest. The result was the Shipping Conferences Exemption Act.⁴

It is clear from the discussions in Committee that a great deal of further consideration will have to be given to the entire question of regulated trades, industries and professions in relation to competition legislation. Your Committee appreciates the difficulty of framing a general exemption covering all regulated activities, as was attempted in clause 92 of Bill C-256, because of the danger that general language may go further than desired in some cases and not far enough in others. On the other hand, your Committee favours a solution whereby the particular regulatory body concerned is responsible for all matters with respect to the industry under its jurisdiction to the exclusion of the Combines Investigation Act.

In this connection, the Minister has undertaken that, in availing itself of the split proclamation provisions in clause 31 of the Bill, the Government will not proclaim the Bill in relation to services for purposes of section 32 of the Act for a period of six months after proclamation of the other provisions of the Bill. A copy of the Minister's letter to the Chairman of your Committee is annexed to this Report.

The interval between passage of the Bill and proclamation, if carried out in accordance with the Minister's undertaking, will provide time for a rational analysis of the problems, and, if necessary, for introduction of amendments to other legislation. If the matter cannot be resolved in that way, the introduction of the Phase II amendments to the Act will provide further opportunity for dealing with the problem.

This report has dealt largely with the position of the air transport industry and carriers. However, the discussion is applicable to other regulated and semi-regulated industries. In the latter category falls the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange, which also appeared before your Committee. The Exchange, is an unincorporated association and therefore derives no legislative sanction for its activities from its own constitution. There is power under the *Grain Futures Act*¹ for the Board of Grain Commissioners of Canada to revoke or vary any by-law or rule of the Exchange which in its opinion is prejudicial to the public interest. The position of the Exchange appeared to be that this power of the Board over their operations was sufficient to bring their arrangements with respect to minimum commissions within the protective formula enunciated by Chief Justice McRuer in the Breweries case. The Exchange may or may not be well founded in taking that position in view of statements made by the Minister and his officials before this Committee. Their point, however, was that two of the commodities for which the Exchange prescribes minimum commission rates, namely rapeseed and gold, are presently not covered by the Grain Futures Act. The delay in proclaiming application of section 32 of the Act to service industries will provide time for the Exchange to seek an amendment to that Act so as to bring rapeseed and gold within the regulatory umbrella of the Board of Grain Commissioners. So as to clarify that these activities remain immune from the Combines Investigation Act, the Exchange may also wish to consider in the interval whether the powers of the Board under the Act should be strengthened or whether a specific exemption from combines legislation should be provided in the Grain Futures Act. The question in their case (as in all cases) should be examined on the merits: Are minimum commissions in commodity futures trading desirable in the public interest? If the answer is in the affirmative, which it apparently has been since the beginning of the Exchange's operations nearly a hundred years ago, then there seems little doubt that the supervision should come from the Board of Grain Commissioners rather than the Director of Investigation and Research under the Combines Act. The latter really cannot supervise or regulate. His is a blunt weapon; the sole question is: To prosecute, or not to prosecute.

The position of the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange has been dealt with in some detail because there may well be an analogy with other groups who may wish to take advantage of the deferred proclamation to analyse their position

¹ Ibid, p. 7

² Ibid, p. 9

³ Ibid, p. 10

⁴ R.S.C. 1970, Chap. 39 (1st Supp.)

¹ R.S.C. 1970, Chap. G-17.

and make necessary changes in their own activities, or make representations for change in the legislation governing them or, possibly, in the Combines Investigation Act itself.

5. Franchises.

Many arguments were addressed to your Committee to the effect that bona fide franchise arrangements should be exempted from the application of the Act. Because the Bill would make tied selling, exclusive dealing and market restriction practices reviewable under the new reviewable practices jurisdiction of the Commission and since one or more of these practices is usually involved in so-called franchise arrangements, it is clear that the Commission will have the power to make orders with respect to franchise agreements. Your Committee believes that the basic elements which must be established by the Director before the Commission can make an order under these provisions, namely, that the effect of the arrangements is likely to lessen competition substantially, afford a certain degree of protection to those in the franchise business.

Beyond that, two amendments were made in the House of Commons which go toward meeting the concerns of your Committee. One was the addition of new subsection 31.4(7) clause 12, p. 19. This amendment is particularly designed to exempt one of the kinds of arrangements commonly used in the soft drink bottling industry. The other amendment is the addition of new paragraph 31.4(5)(c), clause 12, pp. 18 and 19 reading as follows:

"(c) a company, partnership or sole proprietorship is affiliated with another company, partnership or sole proprietorship in respect of any agreement between them whereby one party grants to the other party the right to use a trade mark or trade name to identify the business of the grantee, provided

- (i) such business is related to the sale or distribution, pursuant to a marketing plan or system prescribed substantially by the grantor, of a multiplicity of products obtained from competing sources of supply and a multiplicity of suppliers, and
- (ii) no one product dominates such business."

This particular amendment developed in the House of Commons as a compromise to an amendment introduced by an Opposition member which would have completely exempted franchise arrangements. The Minister indicated that the Government would not be prepared to go that far and he then offered the provision referred to above which is now in the Bill. The purpose of the amendment was to exempt arrangements such as those of the IGA Food Stores.¹ However, the Association of Canadian Franchisors requested a hearing before your Committee on the basis that the amendment, because of certain defects in the drafting, would not accomplish its purpose. The Association pointed out that IGA retail outlets purchase all of their supplies from IGA. Such supplies include some IGA brand names but also a wide range of other brands which are purchased by IGA from the suppliers of the other brands and then resold to the individual IGA franchises. The argument was made that the use of the word "obtained" in line 39 on p. 18 without further qualification implies that, to come within the exemption, the products must be obtained from competing sources by the individual IGA franchises. It was suggested that the words "by the grantor or the grantee" be inserted after the word "obtained" for clarification.

Inasmuch as the amendment was designed to exclude franchise arrangements similar to that of IGA, the submission of the Association of Canadian Franchisors cannot be dismissed lightly. It may be that the Commission will interpret the amendment in a manner favorable to this kind of franchise arrangement. At this stage your Committee is not inclined to recommend that passage of the Bill be delayed so that an amendment can be inserted. However, it does recommend to the Government that the submission of the Association be kept under consideration with a view to making a clarifying amendment, if necessary, at the time the Phase II amendments to the Act are introduced.

6. Delay for Institution of Proceedings on Summary Conviction.

The Bill, following amendment in the Commons, has extended the Criminal Code six-month limitation period for institution of summary conviction proceedings to two years. Your Committee had recommended that the limitation period be removed altogether so that the Crown would always be governed by the gravity of the offence rather than time limitations in electing as to whether to proceed by indictment or summary conviction. It may be desirable to retain a limitation on offences tryable only by summary conviction but your Committee continues to believe that the limitation should be removed for offences tryable either by summary conviction or indictment.

There remains to deal with certain recommendations in the Interim Report which have not been reflected in any way in amendments made to the Bill prior to passage by the House of Commons. No one of these alone is of sufficient importance, in your Committee's opinion, to warrant the delay in passage of the Bill which would result if an amendment were made by the Senate. Moreover, the mere fact that they have been highlighted and openly discussed with those who made submissions to your Committee as well as with the Minister and his officials, will in itself serve a useful purpose. Those who submitted briefs may to some extent have had their fears allayed and those responsible for administration of the Act will have gained some insight into the problems created by the apparent overreaching in certain provisions of the Bill. Phase II will undoubtedly raise many of the same issues as the present Bill and it will be possible to develop the precise nature of any required amendments more intelligently in the context of the provisions of both Phase I and Phase II taken together. The items in question are as follows:

1. Your Committee outlined three areas in particular in which it expressed doubts as to the constitutionality of provisions of Bill C-2. Your Committee notes that an Opposition amendment in the Commons making proclamation of certain clauses of the Bill conditional upon a favourable constitutional ruling by the Supreme Court of Canada on reference thereto by the Governor General in Council was ruled out of order by the Speaker of the House of Commons. Without commenting on that ruling, it is obvious that an amendment along similar lines proposed by the Senate would create substantial difficulties. An individual litigant retains the right to test the constitutionality of any provision he desires in the courts and it may be that a court would be able to render a more meaningful decision on a constitutional issue raised in that manner.

¹ See Commons Debates, October 16, 1975, p. 8278.

2. On the question of the creation of the right of civil damages, your Committee expressed the view that making a conviction a prerequisite would strengthen the constitutional basis for the right. Your Committee was also concerned by the provision allowing the complete record of proceedings in a criminal case to be used in the civil proceedings. Your Committee continues to have doubts as to the justice and workability of this feature which is contained in new subsection 31.1(2), clause 12, p. 12. This is a procedural matter and your Committee will be satisfied if the matter is kept under surveillance to see whether its doubts prove to be well founded.
3. While in agreement with the provision permitting the Crown to seek an interim injunction, even without notice to the other party, to restrain conduct directed toward the commission of an offence under the Act, your Committee's concern was that where such an injunction turned out, on the merits, to be unwarranted, the Crown (as would an ordinary litigant in similar circumstances) should be liable for any damage caused to the party against whom the injunction was obtained. It may be that such liability exists without amendment to the Bill, or that a court would have discretion to impose such liability by making issuance of the injunction conditional upon the Crown executing an undertaking to be liable. Jurisprudence on the subject is not clear where the Crown is the applicant for the injunction and your Committee continues to think that legislative clarification is desirable. However, it may be that the importance of interim injunctions will be even greater with respect to the Phase II amendments to the Act and your Committee therefore agrees that consideration of any amendment may be deferred until that time.
4. Your Committee was concerned that, in the refusal to deal provisions, the Commission will be able to make an order if there is merely "insufficient competition amongst supplier of the product", (paragraph 31.2(1)(b), clause 12, p. 14). Much will depend on the manner in which the Commission interprets the jurisdiction given to it and your Committee is satisfied that this is another area in which any amendment could be developed better in the light of Phase II.
5. Your Committee expressed concern in the Interim Report and this concern was shared by many of those who had occasion to comment on the Bill including members of the Commons Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, that the inability to obtain supplies of a particular brand name product might give rise to an order being made by the Commission against the supplier of that product notwithstanding that identical or functionally similar products produced by other suppliers were available. Your Committee's recommendation that an amendment be made clarifying that the word "product" was used in its generic sense was partially accepted in amendments made in the Commons by the insertion of new subsection 31.2(2), clause 12, p. 14. However, that amendment does provide that where a single brand name product is very dominant, its supplier may be made the subject of an order notwithstanding that similar products are available to the complainant. Your Committee fears that as a result of this provision, an already dominant product could become a virtual monopoly, a condition which is obviously contrary to the objectives of the legislation. It is to be hoped that the Commission will be cognizant of this possibility in its approach to applications under the section.

6. Again in the refusal to deal provisions, your Committee was concerned (new paragraph 31.2(1)(a)) that a person not yet in business at all would be permitted to invoke the refusal to deal provisions in order to force his way into business. Your Committee had and continues to have doubts as to the need for the entire refusal to deal section. However, it appears to be considered important by the Government as a matter of policy and unless the provision is to be deleted in its entirety, it may be preferable to leave it intact. It is to be hoped that the Commission will extend the benefits of the provision to a person not yet in business only with extreme caution.
7. Finally, your Committee expressed doubts as to the sufficiency of the right of appeal from orders of the Commission under section 28 of the Federal Court Act. Questions arising under the Commission's reviewable practices jurisdiction are not as likely to produce such purely legal issues as that which arose recently under subsection 10(5) of the Act.¹ In that case a Judge of the Supreme Court of Ontario held, as persona designata under the section, that the solicitor client privilege extends, in principle, to the seizure of documents, in the course of an investigation, in the possession of a salaried lawyer employed by the company under investigation. On appeal by the Director under section 28 of the Federal Court Act, the Federal Court of Appeal affirmed the decision of the Ontario Judge.

Your Committee has by no means abandoned its recommendation for a wider recourse but nevertheless recognizes the difficulties in giving to an appellate court powers to interfere with questions of fact. It appears that the Commission may receive still further powers pursuant to amendments to be introduced in Phase II at which time the nature of the right of appeal from orders of the Commission will be an even more important topic of consideration.

There is a final matter, not arising out of either of its Reports on the advance study, upon which your Committee considers it should comment. During the debate on the report stage of the Bill in the House of Commons, certain amendments increasing the severity of the punishment which may be inflicted by the courts for violation of the offences under the Act were proposed by the Government. Certain subamendments to these amendments were proposed by a member of the Opposition and the Government amendments, as amended by the Opposition member's motion, were adopted by the House. The result is that the punishment provisions of the Act are expressed in an inconsistent manner and it may be that a court would conclude that the intention was to override certain provisions of the Criminal Code which would normally give the court flexibility. These matters were brought to the attention of the Minister when he appeared before your Committee and were discussed with him at some length. The Minister recognized the dangers and he has undertaken to introduce amendments to the end that all punishment provisions of the Act are prescribed in a uniform manner.

¹ In re Shell Canada Ltd., 1975, F.C. 184.

Respectfully Submitted,

Salter A. Hayden,
Chairman.

APPENDIX "A" TO REPORT

1. Air Transport Association of Canada.
2. International Air Transport Association.
3. The Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.
4. The National Association of Tobacco & Confectionery Distributors.
5. Association of Canadian Franchisors and Independent Grocers' Alliance.

APPENDIX "B" TO REPORT

Minister
Consumer and Corporate Affairs

The Honourable Salter A. Hayden, Q.C.
The Senate
Ottawa, Ontario

Dear Senator Hayden:

Let me first of all thank you for the time and effort that you have devoted in leading the discussion on the study and examination of Bill C-2, an Act to amend the Combines Investigation Act, by the Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

As I mentioned frequently to you and your colleagues in the Committee, your work was most helpful in revising the legislation and I am looking forward to the same constructive examination and co-operation on Phase II of the revision of competition policy legislation.

On the occasion of our last meeting on Tuesday, December 2, I mentioned to you that I would be willing to undertake to ensure that the proclamation of Bill C-2 as it relates to the application of section 32 to services would be delayed for six months. I also undertook to make certain that in the bill that will be introduced to implement Phase II, there will be a close scrutiny of the penalty provision of the Combines Investigation Act as revised, to make sure that the wording of such penalty provisions are uniform. I would appreciate it if you would communicate to members of the Committee that I have instructed my officials to take all the necessary steps to have these undertakings fulfilled.

Again, please accept my sincere thanks for the patience and effort you and your colleagues have given me in this task. I welcomed the opportunity to appear before the committee and found the discussions most satisfactory.

Yours sincerely,

André Ouellet

House of Commons
Ottawa
K1A 0A6

THE SENATE

Thursday, December 11, 1975

The Senate met at 11 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RELATIONS IN THE PUBLIC SERVICE

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS
MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that messages had been received from the House of Commons to acquaint the Senate that the name of Mr. Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier) had been substituted for that of Mr. Lapointe, and that the name of Mr. Alexander had been substituted for that of Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West) on the list of members appointed to serve on the Special Joint Committee on Employer-Employee Relation in the Public Service.

BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY

REPORT OF BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE COMMITTEE
TABLED AND PRINTED AS AN APPENDIX

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I desire to table the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce relating to the subject matter of Bill C-60, respecting bankruptcy and insolvency, and I would ask that the report be printed as an appendix to the Debates of the Senate and to the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of this day and form part of the permanent records of this house.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(For text of report see appendix to today's Hansard.)

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, I would ask leave to give a very short explanation of this report.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Hayden: Honourable senators, the procedure in tabling this report is that there is no debate on the report. If one wished to provoke a debate on the report, one would have to call the attention of the Senate to it in the form of an inquiry.

The comments which I should like to make in connection with the report are brief and general. Bill C-60 is intended to replace the Bankruptcy Act, the Companies' Creditors Arrangement Act, and the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act. In addition, the Winding-up Act of Canada will no longer be applicable to insolvent companies.

Bill C-60 will bring within its jurisdiction the winding-up of insolvent banks, railways, and loan, trust and insurance companies. It introduces many new terms, concepts and procedures which are a great improvement over the provisions of the present Bankruptcy Act. However, as we discovered in our examination of the subject matter of the bill, and in the hearing of witnesses and submissions, many changes are required in order to reflect a proper balance between the rights of creditors and debtors, and the public interest.

The most innovative provisions of the proposed bill, I think, are those which deal with the rights and priorities of secured creditors, and the additional sanctions which are imposed on officers and directors of bankrupt corporations.

Under the proposed bill, wage earners are given a priority over secured creditors for unpaid wages to a maximum amount of $2,000. That proposal provoked lengthy discussion in committee, and when the departmental officers appeared before us they expressed support for the suggestion made in committee—and it has been picked up in various submissions—that a preferred way of dealing with this situation would be by means of an insurance fund. They agreed that the financing, particularly of smaller companies, would be seriously interfered with in the case of certain companies that had a large input of labour if wage earners are given priority over secured creditors for unpaid wages to a maximum amount of $2,000 each. This might cause serious difficulties of financing for these companies. It would also possibly increase the cost of financing.

● (1110)

There were very impractical restrictions on the rights of secured creditors to take possession of, and to realize upon, the assets of the debtor which are held as security for the indebtedness of the bankrupt to the creditor. Many parts of this report deal with that situation.

It must also be remembered that this voluminous report, covering 102 pages, has to deal with a bill containing 410 clauses and a number of schedules. During the hearings the departmental officers, as the record shows, supported many of the submissions made to the committee and many of the views expressed by the committee.

One of the things I should draw your attention to is that the bill does away with the position of registrar. Our report recommends that the position of registrar be reinstated. The bill proposes that there be an administrator, who will be an employee of the government. The registrar has greater independence than that, because he is designated as registrar by the chief justice of the province. He performs a variety of functions, judicial and administrative.

The bill also does away with the bankruptcy judge, as we understand the expression, where the chief justice of the province designates a judge, of the supreme court or the superior court, as the case may be, to hear bankruptcy matters. This gave an expedition to the proceedings; it gave more assurance of continuity in dealing with the problems in bankruptcy.

The report recommends the reinstatement of the registrar, and also that the provision for the designation of a bankruptcy judge be restored. The feeling was that if bankruptcy has to be dealt with in the same way as any other subject is dealt with in the courts, the delays would be more substantial under the bill as it stands. This was not only the opinion of our experts, but was the opinion expressed by the Canadian Bar Association, whom we heard. We also heard from the Institute of Chartered Accountants, the Toronto Board of Trade and the Canadian Bankers' Association. We received quite a cross-section of informed opinion and understanding, as a result of which we have been able to incorporate what we hope will be found to be better provisions.

The minister has assured us that this report will be looked at very carefully. I am satisfied that many of the provisions will find their way into a revised edition of this bill. Bill C-60, which was tabled in the house and not proceeded with, will be revised and introduced at the beginning of the next session. Under the circumstances, I have refrained from going into any particular detail as to the contents of the report.

EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RELATIONS IN THE PUBLIC SERVICE

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN SENATE MEMBERSHIP

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the name of the Honourable Senator Smith (Queens-Shelburne) be substituted for that of the Honourable Senator Cook on the list of senators serving on the Special Joint Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service; and

That a message be sent to the House of Commons to acquaint that House accordingly.

Motion agreed to.

BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce have power to sit while the Senate is sitting today, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

Motion agreed to.

POST OFFICE

OPINION OF ANTI-INFLATION BOARD RE SETTLEMENT WITH CANADIAN UNION OF POSTAL WORKERS—QUESTION AND ANSWER

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I would inquire of the Leader of the Government whether he has any comment on the opinion expressed—I do not think it is a decision—by the Anti-Inflation Board on the agreement with the postal workers?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, this question was directed to me yesterday as well. I can confirm that the Anti-Inflation Board has given its opinion that the pay award proposed by the federal government for the inside workers of the Post Office exceeds the guidelines. The board has decided that the agreement is too high in regard to the standards which have been established for the board to implement or to advise on. However, the matter is one for Cabinet discussion. I can inform the house that the report prepared by Mr. Jean-Luc Pepin, the head of the Anti-Inflation Board, has now been placed before Cabinet. It is hoped that before the day is out Cabinet will have made a decision on the matter. It is true, as the Honourable Leader of the Opposition suggested yesterday, that cabinet does have the power to reject the advice which had been tendered by the Anti-Inflation Board regarding this matter. No decision, however, has been taken as yet.

● (1120)

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

AID TO CHILE—QUESTION ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on Thursday, November 20, Senator Forsey asked the following question:

Is Canada now providing any aid, direct or indirect, to Chile, by grants, loans, re-scheduling of debts, technical assistance or otherwise?

If so, what are the terms of such aid or assistance?

Honourable senators, in response to that question of Senator Forsey's regarding Canadian government aid to Chile, I am informed that Canada has not provided government-to-government aid to Chile during the last two years. At the same time, some humanitarian assistance has been channelled through the Canadian Embassy in Chile to projects of the Peace Committee, an organization sponsored by the Roman Catholic Church in Chile, and perhaps other church organizations.

In May of this year seven members of the Paris Club, including Canada, agreed on general terms for a multilateral re-scheduling of the greater portion of Chile's external debt falling due in 1975. Since that time Canada and Chile have reached agreement on outstanding bilateral issues involved in this exercise. Canada previously participated in the Paris Club's re-scheduling of Chilean debt falling due in 1974. The Canadian government views the Paris Club as a technical forum for the discussion of problems of commercial debt. It participated in debt re-scheduling exercises involving Chile pursuant to recommendations by the International Monetary Fund that a debt re-scheduling was justified.

It should be noted that all of Chile's debt thus far affected involved the repayment of credits provided by the Export Development Corporation on commercial terms and re-scheduled on a commercial basis. No aid component was involved in this process.

COMBINES INVESTIGATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND AND TO REPEAL—THIRD READING

Senator Cook moved the third reading of Bill C-2, to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Bank Act and to repeal an act to amend an act to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Criminal Code.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Cook, seconded by the Honourable Senator Cameron, that this bill be now read the third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I wish to say just a few words. As you know, the subject matter of this bill was referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce before the bill was passed in the House of Commons. When the Senate received the bill it was referred to our Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, and the report of that committee was submitted yesterday.

In my opinion improvements were made to the bill in the other place, most of which resulted from the report of our committee on its study of the subject matter of the bill. When the committee then received the bill as passed by the House of Commons, it had to consider certain problems which the chairman of the committee mentioned yesterday when he was presenting his report. Despite those problems, I wish to say that I am in agreement with passing this bill now, because of the assurances we have had from the minister that many of the doubts voiced by our committee would form the subject of amendments when phase two of the bill is introduced.

There are other points about which I have reservations; however, we will see how they turn out. I am referring principally to the creation of a civil remedy under this legislation, which I think may be beyond the jurisdiction of Parliament. The fact that this right of action has to go before the Federal Court is another constitutional problem which may create other problems in the future; but it would not have been helpful to try to find solutions to these questions at this time.

On the whole I think the Senate has made an excellent contribution to this important piece of legislation. It will be called upon to do the same thing when the subsequent bill dealing with phase two comes before Parliament.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

PRIVATE BILL

NORTHLAND BANK—SECOND READING

Hon. Donald Cameron moved the second reading of Bill C-1002, to incorporate the Northland Bank.

[Senator Perrault.]

He said: Honourable senators, I am happy to have the privilege of putting this motion today. In doing so I am carried back a number of years when I was an officer of the United Farmers of Alberta, in which capacity I used to attend their annual conventions. Some of the sessions at those conventions were pretty lively, and one of the perennial topics was the development of a western bank. At that time I little thought that one day I would have the privilege of standing up in the Parliament of Canada to propose the establishment of such a new Canadian bank. I would like to say that the fact that I am in a position to propose the establishment of a new western bank today in no way reflects on the excellent service contributed by the existing chartered banks of Canada.

I think it is evidence of the burgeoning growth of Alberta and Western Canada as a whole that there is a widespread feeling that there is a place for another western financial institution. Originally it was intended that my colleague from Edmonton, Senator Prowse, would introduce this bill, but regrettably, due to his illness, he is unable to do so.

The concept of a regional bank in the western provinces is not new. The proposed Northland Bank is the latest of a long series of proposals that have been made since the 1900s to the effect that some financial institutions should have their main roots in Western Canada. This proposal today is the result of the considered judgment of a number of very responsible and well-known business leaders in the four western provinces.

• (1130)

The feeling has developed that there is a place for a new financial institution which will have its roots in Western Canada and which will be charged with the responsibility of assisting in the provision of credit, financial advice and other money-related services. This feeling has been confirmed by a number of commissions and has been strongly supported over the years by the western cooperative organizations whose memberships represent about one and a half million western Canadians.

Northland Bank—Norbanque en français—will locate its head office in Winnipeg and its executive offices in Calgary. Offices will concurrently be opened in Regina and Edmonton. At the moment there are firm commitments to subscriptions for more than 50 per cent of the opening paid-up capital of $10 million required to capitalize the bank initially. The bank, through its personnel, will stress imaginative and innovative methods of providing finance to an expanding economy while maintaining the highest standards of accepted banking practices.

The provisional directors of this proposed Northland Bank are well-known western businessmen, many of whom are known to me personally. I am sure they are known to many of my colleagues in the Senate. I shall just go over the names quickly: Ronald Thomas Curtis, Winnipeg; Henry George deCuyper, Winnipeg; Richard Earl Foster, Saskatoon; Donald Victor Larson, Winnipeg; Philip Duncan Sampson, Regina; Alan William Scarth, Winnipeg; Gordon Maxwell Sinclair, Saskatoon; George Robert Viereck, Prince Rupert; Robert Alan Willson, Calgary; and Hugh Malcolm Wilson, Calgary.

All directors are Canadian citizens and are committed to subscribing for shareholdings in accordance with the requirements of the Bank Act.

Senator Asselin: All millionaires.

Senator Cameron: Honourable senators, it gives me a great deal of pleasure to move second reading of this bill. It is to be hoped that if it receives the approval of Parliament it will lead to the establishment of a new western financial institution, one staffed and officered by people who are executing roles of prominence in the western business community. I commend this bill to your favourable consideration.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, we on this side have no objection to this bill being given second reading today so that it can go to committee. Senator Cameron, after inquiring as to who might speak on the bill on this side, was good enough to introduce me to the two chief officers of the corporation, Mr. Hugh Wilson, the President and Chief Executive Officer, and Mr. Robert Willson, Chairman of the Board.

The impression I received was that these are two gentlemen with wide business experience and that there is a partial connection between the petition before us and the cooperative movement, especially that aspect of it which we know as a credit union or a caisse populaire. I say that because it seems to me—I do not believe that Senator Cameron mentioned it—that this is one of the reasons we can regard this as a special application for a special kind of bank. We had a similar application passed a short while ago for another special kind of bank, termed a wholesale bank. The impression I received from my conversations with these two gentlemen is that this bank will obtain most of its immediate financial support, as required by the Bank Act, from those interested particularly in the credit union movement. In my opinion, this is a special advantage, an indication that this bank will start with the kind of support from an important part of the business community that should assure its success. That is important, because we do know that of some banks which have recently commenced business in Canada at least one appears to be having difficulties. We also know of one in Western Canada whose difficulties proved to be insurmountable. I therefore welcome the fact that the Northland Bank, when it is constituted, will have this special type of support.

The development of a banking facility in and for, but not necessarily exclusively for, the cooperative movement is very much in line with the development of the whole cooperative movement over the years. The cooperative movement has, in effect, its own trust companies and caisses populaires, organized on an escalating basis from the locals through to the provincial and the national levels. Therefore, one would hope that the prospects of this bank for success are excellent.

I understand that the petition has been examined carefully by the appropriate authorities, and presumably they will indicate to the committee that they see no objection to the establishment of this bank. I congratulate Senator Cameron on presenting this petition. I am told that one of the senior officers succeeded Senator Cameron in the distinguished role which he occupied for so many years as the Director of the Banff School of Advanced Business Management.

Hon. Hazen Argue: Honourable senators, I should like to add my voice to those who have welcomed this bill for second reading. Senator Cameron and Senator Grosart have said that this is a specialized bank to be established in Western Canada to carry on, at least initially, a specialized business. Out in Western Canada we have a very strong, virile, cooperative movement, which is a major factor, if not the most important factor, in grain marketing and retailing products to farmers, in the main, and also to city people. The credit union facilities are extensive and second to none. As I see it, this is a method to catch up the money in the hands of the credit unions, the financial institutions and the federated cooperatives, the Canadian Co-operative Implements Limited, and so on. The population of the three Prairie provinces is approximately four million, and it has been stated in evidence that the cooperative movement has approximately 1,500,000 members, whose organizations will be playing a part in this new bank. Cooperatives today are big business. They are big business in Western Canada and in other parts of this country. They are 100 per cent Canadian-owned and to my mind that is important. They are controlled on the basis of one vote for each shareholder, no matter whether a shareholder has more than one share. So the whole basis of the cooperative movement is democratic.

● (1140)

The cooperative movement in my province is very large, and has had the support of the major political parties; so much so that at a convention of the provincial Liberal Party last weekend there appeared an important person, the head of a section of the cooperative movement, to explain to the party some of the workings of the movement.

Senator Flynn: Did they understand?

Senator Argue: I was delighted that a similar convention was held simultaneously by the Conservative Party in that province, and it too had a distinguished representative of the cooperative movement inform those present of the work and value of the cooperatives in Western Canada.

Senator Flynn: What about the Social Credit Party?

Senator Argue: Credit unions have pioneered in many ways in the financial field in Western Canada. They have provided credit for local people—credit which, in many instances, is far easier to obtain, is less onerous by way of interest, and carries with it many advantages compared with those of normal banking or credit institutions.

It is possible in Western Canada for a farmer in good standing to go into a credit union office and ask for a large sum of money to purchase land, and for the loan to be granted him within 24 hours. The service is quick, excellent, and losses are almost unknown.

The credit union, among other things, pioneered life-insured loans and provided a lead for the banks to follow. The vast majority of adult persons in the three Prairie provinces are members of one or more cooperatives.

Senator Lang: Honourable senators, on a point of order, may I follow the Speaker's example by reminding the honourable senator, as he has reminded others on occasion, that the subject before us is hardly consistent with the remarks he is making.

Senator Argue: I would have thought that I was very much in order. The proposed new bank is composed of the major cooperatives on the Prairies. I was pointing out the excellent work they have done, and how they have pioneered in many fields. I was trying to bring to the attention of honourable senators, including Senator Lang, how innovative they have been in so many ways.

When the Northland Bank is established—it being something of a wholesale bank, geared initially, at any rate, to the needs of the cooperatives in Western Canada—I believe it will demonstrate to the chartered banks across Canada, and the great industrialists of this country, that the cooperative movement is big, democratic and, in my judgment, one of the best possible forms of free enterprise.

I am pleased to support the motion.

Hon. W. M. Benidickson: Honourable senators, I did not quite understand the point of order raised by my honourable friend, Senator Lang.

Senator Flynn: It has been disposed of.

Senator Benidickson: I believe I have the right to make a comment in this debate on the motion for second reading of a bill to incorporate the Northland Bank, which bill I assume will be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

I have a background in connection with this matter, but only over the past week or so. The secretary of my brother-in-law, who happens to be a minister from a Prairie province, asked me to receive the people who were endeavouring to incorporate this bank. I asked why.

Senator Flynn: Why not?

Senator Benidickson: As a political leader in his province, my brother-in-law felt that this house was going to have its turn at examining this bill, and he wanted some guidelines on our procedures.

I said that I was not a member of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, but, yet, in a 'nitwitty' way I had got myself involved in the request for incorporation of another bank last week. I suggested that that perhaps was why they came to see me in regard to the incorporation of banks, and the seeking of approval of the two Houses of Parliament.

I received those gentlemen and was delighted to find that one of them was Mr. Willson who, I believe, is the newly elected chairman of the board of one of Senator Cameron's very worthwhile enterprises, namely, the School of Advanced Business Management in Alberta. I said to him, "I do not think I should offer any recommendation to any member of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee. You could not find a better man to speak for Western Canada in this connection than Senator Prowse or Senator Cameron. I do not know why you would not anticipate from the Senate the utmost cooperation. Personally, I have been a great believer in providing all possible competition in almost any field, particularly the field of banking."

[Senator Argue.]

I told him that I welcomed, as what is loosely described in this country as an ethic, the incorporation of the Unity Bank, which had a certain appeal to customers, backers and others who did not belong to traditional financial establishments in this country. I also told him that since the incorporation of that bank I had read with regret about some hardships it had encountered.

Possibly that is not too pertinent, and I may be taking up the time of honourable senators, but I simply wish to say that I recall a few weeks ago, when IAC wanted to translate itself into the Continental Bank of Canada, that two or three members of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee very commendably and properly, in my opinion, disclosed the fact that they were directors of long-established corporate banks, and said that they personally welcomed competition in this field. To me, competition is the essence of being a Liberal politician.

● (1150)

Senator Flynn: "Liberal" with a small "l"?

Senator Benidickson: When I was told that the investors in, and supporters of, this bank would be very successful cooperatives, and agricultural and other enterprises, of Western Canada, I felt, contrary to the unfortunate experience of the Unity Bank, that this would be a viable endeavour. Because of the tremendously successful financial record of these agencies, the cooperatives and merchandising agencies, and in view of the known resources behind them, I felt this was a viable proposition, and I wished them well.

That is the reason I am now participating in this debate. My introduction to this proposal—and this illustrates the vagaries of politics—came from a secretary of my brother-in-law, who used to be a director of one of the chartered banks. This individual, because of his interest in seeing an advance in the commercial importance of Western Canada in the financial field, sought, through me, an introduction to some members of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee. I referred him to Senator Cameron, telling him that he could not have a better sponsor for this bill.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Cameron moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

Motion agreed to.

SUSPENSION OF RULE 95

Senator Cameron: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), I move:

That rule 95 be suspended with respect to the Bill C-1002, intituled: "An Act to incorporate the Northland Bank."

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I wish to announce, on behalf of the Chairman of the Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, that the committee will meet immediately in Room 256-S to consider Bill C-1002, to incorporate the Northland Bank.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT INCENTIVES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Alan A. Macnaughton moved the second reading of Bill C-74, to amend the Regional Development Incentives Act.

He said: Honourable senators, this bill consists of a page and a half and, by way of text, four paragraphs. Actually, the essence or thrust of the bill is to extend the existing act for a period of five years.

Although the present act does not expire until December 31, 1976, applicants with accepted offers must be in commercial production by that date in order to receive incentives grants. This bill, then, would extend that commercial production deadline to December 31, 1981. It does not incorporate any other changes. However, I thought a short explanation for the benefit of the house, and also for the record, should be given.

As honourable senators are well aware, the Regional Development Incentives Act received royal assent in 1969, the same year that the Department of Regional Economic Expansion was set up. Since that time, it has been an important element in the federal government's regional development policy.

While I am sure that most of you are familiar with the broad provisions of the Regional Development Incentives Act, I will mention a few salient features of the current program. Incentives are aimed at producing new, more rewarding and more stable jobs, and at reinforcing existing employment opportunities in slow-growth regions. Incentives are offered to firms to select locations in the designated regions rather than elsewhere. The act is also aimed at encouraging expansion and the modernization of existing facilities which would not otherwise be carried out because of a lower return on investment, and to encourage larger and better facilities to be built than would otherwise be the case.

Incentives under the act, which may take the form of grants, or repayable grants, or loan guarantees, are designed to encourage investment and employment in slow-growth regions. More specifically, they are designed to encourage companies to establish new facilities and to expand or modernize existing facilities in the manufacturing and processing industries within those regions. The purpose, of course, is to reduce, over a period of time, regional disparities and to achieve more balanced economic growth across Canada.

Some of the results are as follows: As of last August, the latest period for which complete program statistics are available, the Regional Development Incentives Act had helped to stimulate some $2.4 billion in capital investment in the slow-growth regions of Canada, which investment is expected to create about 122,000 direct new jobs. To this end, some $507 million in grant offers have been accepted since the inception of the program. However, as a result of a major policy review undertaken by the department in 1973 certain changes were made in the regulations governing the administration of the act. On the whole, these changes were designed to improve the decision-making process on smaller cases, and to establish an administrative framework consistent with the decentralized mode in which the department now operates. These changes have led to a more smoothly functioning program, one that works effectively in concert with other elements of the department's policy.

● (1200)

The incentives program is seen as an integral part of the government's total approach to regional development, and an important element of that approach is the General Development Agreement which the department has now signed with every province except Prince Edward Island, which in turn is covered under a similar "Comprehensive Development Plan." These agreements spell out a joint federal-provincial strategy for social and economic development in each region, a strategy aimed at taking advantage of the inherent economic potential of that particular region. In this context, the Regional Development Incentives Act serves to implement industrial development by encouraging particular industries which will support that broad development strategy.

By using the Regional Development Incentives Act in conjunction with the general development agreements, the department has established an effective basis for improving economic and social conditions in Canada's slow growth regions.

As honourable senators will know, there is no conventional wisdom governing the formulation of regional development policy in Canada, but the department has over the nearly seven years since its creation evolved a practical and flexible set of instruments and a policy approach which is suited to the country's needs and economic, social and political realities.

The important part of this approach continues to be the Department of Regional Economic Expansion's program. I trust that the members of this chamber will agree to the extension of the Regional Development Incentives Act in order to ensure uninterrupted operation of the programs.

I will endeavour to answer questions, but, as I said at the beginning, the purpose is to give this act a five-year extension.

On motion of Senator Asselin, debate adjourned.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I suggest that the Senate do now adjourn during pleasure to reassemble at the call of the bell at approximately 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 2.15 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

PRIVATE BILL

NORTHLAND BANK—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Leave having been given to revert to Reports of Committees:

Senator Macnaughton, for Senator Hayden, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-1002, to incorporate the Northland Bank, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Macnaughton moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

THE ESTIMATES

REPORT OF NATIONAL FINANCE COMMITTEE ON SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (A) ADOPTED

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on the supplementary estimates (A) laid before Parliament for the fiscal year ending the 31st March, 1976, which was presented Tuesday, December 9.

Senator Sparrow: Honourable senators, I move that the report be now adopted.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, by agreement the acting chairman of the committee is not speaking to the report. I will not speak to it now, but will ask leave to include in my remarks on the appropriation bill those comments I may have made on the report.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

APPROPRIATION BILL NO. 4, 1975

SECOND READING

Hon. Léopold Langlois moved the second reading of Bill C-79, for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1976.

He said: Honourable senators, yesterday I caused two statements to be distributed, in an endeavour to provide you with a better understanding of my introduction to this bill.

The first statement deals with the supply for 1975-76. This statement not only relates to previous bills, but also provides an explanation of the present bill. The second is a statement of the total estimates for 1975-76 to date. I hope, as I have said already, that these statements will enable honourable senators to have a better understanding of the remarks which I am about to make.

[Senator Macnaughton.]

● (1420)

Honourable senators will recall that royal assent has already been given to two supply bills covering estimates for the current fiscal year. The first provided interim supply for the months of April, May and June; the second, which received royal assent on June 26, 1975, provided full supply for the balance of the main estimates.

Appropriation Bill No. 4, 1975, provides for full supply in respect of supplementary estimates (A), which total $1.7 billion. These latest estimates consist of approximately $525 million in statutory items; $1.127 billion in budgetary items, and $99 million in non-budgetary authorities. The total estimates tabled to date for the fiscal year 1975-76 consist of budgetary expenditures of $29.894 billion and non-budgetary expenditures of $1.442 billion, for a grand total of estimates to date of $31.336 billion.

Supplementary estimates (A) were referred to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance on November 13, 1975, and were discussed in committee on November 19, 1975, with the Honourable Jean Chretien, President of the Treasury Board, and again on December 9, 1975, with Mr. John S. Foster, President of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited and his Treasurer, Mr. E. Deslauriers, as well as the Chairman of the Transportation Development Agency of Transport Canada, Mr. Malcolm D. Armstrong, and Mr. Mark Brenkmann. The latter presentation had to do with the STOL program, mention of which was made by one of our colleagues in this chamber recently.

During his appearance before the National Finance Committee, the President of the Treasury Board stated that the size of these estimates reflects, in large part, the cost to the government of protection to Canadians who could not otherwise protect themselves from the continuing burden of inflation. As we are all aware, the government has launched a direct attack on inflation, but it cannot abandon those whose positions have worsened further than was expected in the first half of this fiscal year.

There are also supplementary estimates to cover the inflationary effects on the costs of operating some government programs. Honourable senators will note that there are only two major new programs reflected in these estimates, those being spouses' allowances, amounting to $45 million, and special employment measures, amounting to $144 million. The special employment measures program was part of the June budget.

Revisions totalling $480 million are required to certain statutory payments, such as public debt, $200 million; hospital insurance and medicare, $128 million; and payments under the Railway Act, $85 million.

The major increases in budgetary expenditures for non-budgetary items are: $385 million to subsidize consumer prices for petroleum products which, as we all know, is due in part to the increase in the international price of petroleum products in October; $133 million to cover price and salary increases of National Defence; and $100 million to increase the contingency vote, to a total of $220 million. The latter is necessary to ensure that adequate funds are available to meet any salary payments that may arise out of collective bargaining agreements that have been, or may be, settled during the year.

An increase of $12.5 million is also included in these estimates to cover additional costs of the Student Summer Employment Program.

Events during the fiscal year have also given rise to expenditures beyond those provided in the main estimates. Examples of these would include the cost incurred by the Department of Agriculture because of further outbreaks of brucellosis disease in cattle, and the further costs of assisting Chilean and Vietnamese refugees.

The estimates, as in previous years, seek authority to finance new items through complete or partial offsets in other votes in the same program or programs of a ministry where funds can be made available through the exercise of restraint, or where changing circumstances permit lower expenditures. Items which are completely offset are treated as $1 votes in order to bring them before Parliament for authorization.

There is a total of thirty $1 items included in these supplementary estimates. These items consist of the following:

- (a) Fifteen items which authorize transfers from one vote to another;
- (b) Three items which amend the legislative provisions of previous appropriation acts;
- (c) Six items which authorize the payment of grants;
- (d) One item authorizing a financial guarantee;
- (e) Two items which authorize the extension of existing acts to cover circumstances not now covered; and
- (f) Three items which amend acts other than appropriation acts.

Lists of these $1 items have already been prepared and distributed to the National Finance Committee for their review and consideration.

I shall endeavour to answer the question put to me by the Leader of the Opposition yesterday as to the borrowing authority that does not appear in this bill, as it has appeared for the last 25 or 30 years in supply bills, including the main estimates and interim supply. In the other place, this item, which was included in clause 5 of the supply bill, was struck out by Mr. Speaker after a point of order had been raised by the Honourable Mr. Lambert, an Official Opposition member, followed by other members of the House. I think the position taken by Mr. Knowles on Mr. Lambert's point of order summarized the basis of the Speaker's decision. Perhaps I might be permitted to read from page 9881 of House of Commons Hansard for Tuesday, December 9:

MR. KNOWLES (WINNIPEG NORTH CENTRE): I was about to draw to Your Honour's attention Standing Order

58(19) which is very pertinent to this whole situation. It reads as follows:

The concurrence in any estimate or estimates or interim supply shall be an Order of the House to bring in a bill or bills based thereon.

Those are the key words in Standing Order 58(19).

That motion was passed, the motion in the name of the President of the Treasury Board concurring in interim supply. That, therefore, was an order to bring in a bill based thereon. I submit in line with what has been argued by the hon. member for Edmonton West—

That is, Mr. Lambert.

—that the bill that has now been introduced is based in the main on the supplementary estimates that we passed a few moments ago, but that clause 5 of this bill is in no way based on the estimates that we concurred in tonight.

● (1430)

That is the point which was the basis of—and, to my mind, it is the main reason for—Mr. Speaker's ruling, which can be found at page 9883 of Hansard:

I would therefore suggest at this stage, when the supply bill is about to go through all stages before this parliament without debate or without amendment, that in my view it can only go forward through that sort of process if clause 5 can be stricken from it.

I hope the Leader of the Opposition understands that this has nothing to do with the position I took in this chamber during a debate which lasted, I believe, from December 13 to December 18, 1974. It was a very interesting debate. I took the position that the borrowing authority was not an appropriation per se, and, therefore, need not be covered by a recommendation from His Excellency the Governor General. I was supported in that position by an opinion obtained from the Department of Justice. The decision taken in the other place a few days ago had nothing to do with that position, because it was based essentially on a Standing Order of the House of Commons which, of course, does not apply to this chamber.

I hope the whole question will be reviewed in time to come, so that a happy solution to that problem will be found. I do stress the point that this decision of the other place bears no reflection on the position that I expressed in this chamber last December.

With these comments, I conclude my remarks in commending this supply bill to the favourable consideration of honourable senators.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, I am not convinced that Senator Langlois should try to justify his position in advance.

Senator Langlois: It is because you asked me to.

Senator Flynn: He might have been in a better position had he waited for me to say something about this problem.

Senator Langlois: You said something a few days ago.

Senator Flynn: I do not share in the sense of infallibility that Senator Langlois has expressed, and the justification he has tried to convey to the Senate with regard to this problem.

He should recall that the main question we discussed on previous occasions was whether or not a supply bill should be referred to the National Finance Committee, when the National Finance Committee had already examined and reported on supplementary or main estimates.

The point I was making last year, to which Senator Langlois has referred, was that the borrowing authority contained in a similar bill was not covered by the estimates. This has been proven by the ruling made by Mr. Speaker in the other place. Mr. Speaker's ruling—and I read it very carefully—is not based solely on the reasons given by Senator Langlois. What Mr. Speaker also said was that a recommendation by the Governor General for supplementary estimates does not per se include a recommendation to grant borrowing authority. That was the main reason for his ruling. Secondly, it was based on a standing order of the House of Commons, which has adopted a rule whereby a supply bill will not be debated. They are going to debate the estimates—

Senator Langlois: Or amended.

Senator Flynn: It will not be debated, that is the main point. Amendment is something else. You could vote against a clause, and it would thereby be amended.

First, I say it could not be debated—and I raise the question because of that rule—and, secondly, as I stated—and I believe my stand is still valid today—we had not discussed in the National Finance Committee the borrowing authority which was inserted through the back door by means of an appropriation bill. Of course, Senator Langlois at that time was right in saying that this had been done over the years.

Senator Langlois: Since 1955.

Senator Flynn: What did Mr. Speaker say about that?

There is an historical ground or some justification for including in a supply bill which relates to the main estimates,—

And this applies, of course, to supplementary estimates.

—and even a supply bill that relates to interim supply, a clause which relates to the borrowing power of the government. However, the inclusion of such a clause in a bill for supplementary estimates as in the bill before the House tonight, seems to me to be totally without justification, as I understand the remarks and the stand taken by the President of the Privy Council almost exactly one year ago.

That was indirectly the point I was making. You cannot say that because the National Finance Committee has studied the supplementary estimates or the main estimates or the interim supply bill that it has necessarily discussed and dealt with a clause giving the government authority to borrow $2 million or $3 million. In fact, I think it was more than that last year.

Senator Langlois: I think you are right on that. It was more.

[Senator Langlois.]

Senator Flynn: In any event, the figure is not important, but that is why I wanted the Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate to consider the proposition that an appropriation bill, if it includes something other than the estimates, is not necessarily the same thing as the estimates themselves. I think I have been proven right here, and of course Senator Langlois was right in calling on historical grounds or practice over the years to justify his position in refusing to send the bill to the National Finance Committee. But I say to him that if he had agreed to do that and we had done it last year, we might have clarified the situation and we might have made the point before the House of Commons.

I certainly cannot see Senator Langlois taking the same position in the future, namely, that a supply bill in itself cannot be discussed or should not be referred to a committee, especially the National Finance Committee.

But I had other reasons for asking Senator Langlois to refer the supply bill to the committee than simply to go over the discussion concerning the estimates themselves. I was concerned with the form of the bill. Indeed, on the previous occasion I mentioned several cases, and I wish to come back to at least one now. Those senators who recall the discussion we had at that time will know that I discussed the provision contained in paragraph (2) of clause 3 of the bill, which reads as follows:

The provisions of each item in the Schedule shall be deemed to have been enacted by Parliament on the 1st day of April, 1975.

What I wanted to know then was what that meant in practice. I suggest that clause 3(2) means that by approving this bill we are approving any expenditures made by the government prior to the adoption of this bill with respect to any of the estimates approved by this bill. To me that is not a good thing to do, because after all, in effect, we are absolving the government from having done something before it had any authority to do it.

● (1440)

I wanted this matter to be raised in committee at the same time as the clause concerning the borrowing authority, which was a very important matter. If we had done this last year in respect to borrowing authority, we might have helped the house to make the decision before it actually did; but again I say to the Honourable the Deputy Leader of the Government that a supply bill does not necessarily represent the same problem as the estimates, supplementary, main, or interim supply, and that it is not an argument to say to the Senate, "The Standing Senate Committee on National Finance has studied this, and therefore the bill should not be referred to committee." I hope that in the future, if there is some justification for a supply bill, as distinct from the estimates themselves being referred to the National Finance Committee, we will not meet with the same opposition.

It may be that at that time Senator Langlois had realized, or someone from the other place had told him, that it was a somewhat dangerous or delicate point to raise and that therefore it would have been a bad thing if the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance had proven the government's practice to be wrong. But I think this is something that we ought to do, and something that we would be praised for having done before the other place did it.

In any event, I say to the deputy leader that because in this bill the former clause 5, dealing with borrowing authority, was struck out, when the government brings in a separate bill the object of which is to obtain this power from Parliament, perhaps the National Finance Committee will be able to deal with it in a more appropriate way. The last time we granted this borrowing authority we had no way of arranging for officials of the Department of Finance, or any other department, to come and explain what exactly the problem was. Of course we were given the same general reasons for it that were given in the House of Commons, but we could not go very far because of the refusal of the deputy leader to send the bill to committee.

With regard to this appropriation bill, I want to draw to the attention of honourable senators the fact that we have here a sum of $1.7 billion to add to the expenditures of the government during the fiscal year. This proves that the program of restraint put forward by the government has not yet led to any restraint on the part of the government itself; indeed, every observer would say that the proposed government cuts are apparently to be very small during the present fiscal year. All we have is the assurance of the Minister of Finance, given in committee the other day when we were considering Bill C-73, that all government programs and expenditures are being reviewed, and that when the next budget comes along we will see evidence of the policy of restraint. I have, however, some doubts about whether that will in fact come to pass.

I am not going to go into detail with regard to restraints on government spending. It is very difficult to suggest what cuts should be made, or in what areas. In any event, as general observation about this appropriation bill, I would like to say that it does not prove that the government is really doing anything about carrying out one of the main items of its anti-inflation program, which calls for its own expenditures to be cut and restrained.

I now come to an item which has always amused me, or which, at any rate, amused me the first time I saw it. This item is to be found at the bottom of page 12, and is in connection with Parliament. It is a very interesting item:

5a House of Commons—Program expenditures—To extend the purposes of Parliament Vote 5, Appropriation Act No. 3, 1975, to provide, notwithstanding Section 10 of the Senate and House of Commons Act, for payment to Réal Caouette of an amount based on the annual rates of $5,300 and $5,600 for the periods July 8, 1974, to December 31, 1975, and January 1, to March 31, 1976, respectively, throughout which he is a member of the House of Commons and the Leader of the Social Credit Party of Canada, and to provide a further amount of—$869,826

This is a trivial amount, but it raises a question of principle. We are amending the act concerning the Senate and the House of Commons in order to provide an individual with special treatment. I suggest to you that this is bad. It is a bad thing to amend an act of parliament just for one individual, because as was explained by Senator Langlois last year, it is only for Mr. Caouette. At that time he said it was only up until March 31, 1975. And now we see it is going on until the end of the fiscal year. I say that this is a very bad practice.

I recognize the electoral value of Mr. Caouette to the Liberal Party. Of course, the Liberal Party should be grateful, because Mr. Caouette's party, when he was really its effective leader, decided to defeat the Diefenbaker government in February 1963. After the ensuing election when there was a slightly different result, and we did not know which of the two main parties would have the support of the house, Mr. Caouette and some of his colleagues indicated that they would support Mr. Pearson, and therefore there was a change of government. Then in 1965 the Liberals thought it would be wise of them to try to wipe out Social Credit, and they practically succeeded as a result of the extraordinary campaign of Mr. Yvon Dupuis which reduced Social Credit representation to about nine. Then came the election of 1968 with the resulting overall majority for the Trudeau administration. But just before the 1968 election, as honourable senators will recall, the Pearson government was defeated on a money bill, a tax bill and—

Senator Perrault: On a technicality.

Senator Flynn: The Leader of the Government says it was a technicality, but if the technicality had been on the other side I wonder what the leader would have said. In any case that is what happened, and Mr. Pearson, after consulting obviously with Mr. Caouette—and it has been said by some people that it was the Honourable Paul Martin who was involved at that time, and I could believe that—decided to come back and ask the House of Commons if it really did mean what it did when it voted against the bill. Mr. Caouette, after some reflection, decided, "No, no, I have changed my mind. I think I would rather have the present government continue in office than have an election."

It was the same thing after the election of 1972. They maintained Mr. Trudeau in office. I remember also that during the election of 1974 Mr. Caouette was saying everywhere throughout Quebec, "Of course, if there is no Social Credit candidate, vote for any other party but the Conservative Party."

So, here we have the result of that assistance on the part of Mr. Caouette to the Liberal Party. It is quite obvious that it was an error on the part of the Liberal Party in 1965 to fight the Social Credit Party in Quebec, because it, and Mr. Caouette in particular, has been its most effective ally in dividing the vote against the Liberal Party in that province. Of course, Mr. Mackenzie King and others have always followed the rule "divide and conquer." We have, as a result, legislation dealing with one person—legislation amending an act of Parliament for one person—Mr. Réal Caouette, but only for as long as he remains the leader of the Social Credit Party.

To cover that up, Mr. Caouette has introduced a bill in the other place under which the same treatment would apply to any other leader of the Social Credit Party, whatever representation it has in the house, for historical reasons. Well, "historical reasons," of course, include the services rendered to the Liberal Party, and we might possibly be faced with such legislation eventually. In any event, I object strongly to such a practice. So far as my other point is concerned, I think my good friend Senator Langlois will be more cooperative if for some good reason we wish the supply bill as such referred to a committee of this house, namely, the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance. I am quite sure that at this time, the main problem having been removed by the decision of the Speaker of the House of Commons, we do not need to refer the present bill to that committee. In my opinion, however, we will eventually receive an answer to my question concerning clause 3(2).

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, at the stage of our consideration of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance I said that I would make some comments at this time which would, to some extent, include what I would have said then.

We have before us, of course, an appropriation bill which is based on the same set of facts as contained in the supplementary estimates which were before us. My remarks now with respect to the situation that has developed should not in any way be regarded as criticism of the deputy chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance. However, I think an explanation should be made as to why the Leader of the Opposition quite properly refused leave when the deputy chairman of that committee sought to move the adoption of the report on its presentation in this chamber. The reason we on this side objected was, of course, that at that time that report had not been seen by any member of the committee, other than the deputy chairman, nor by any other member of the Senate. Therefore, in our view it would have been improper to proceed and move the adoption of a report which even members of the committee had not seen.

I have said that this is not a criticism of the deputy chairman, because this is a practice which has developed, to some extent. It is a matter of one bad habit following another. It is the old story of not following our rules. We get an exemption from the rules, and then it is extended and used as a precedent, causing one bad habit to follow another. This is what has happened in this case, but other circumstances were involved at the time.

One problem was that the committee did not have permission from the Senate to sit after 11 a.m., when the Senate was called, and so on. However, in my opinion, it is important to call attention to our rules in this respect. They differentiate very clearly between reports of committees which are not reports on bills, and reports of committees which are reports on bills.

● (1450)

The report of the National Finance Committee falls, of course, into the first category. It is a report, I take it, under rule 78(3), a report which is for the information of the Senate only, and for no other purpose. That, I take it, is the category into which this report falls. Therefore, under our rules, such a report can be laid on the Table, and that is all there is to it. There is no rule allowing a motion for its adoption. But, alternatively, it may, by motion, be placed on the Orders of the Day for future consideration. That, of course, is what is normally done.

[Senator Flynn.]

Senator Benidickson: That was done in this case, fortunately.

Senator Grosart: Senator Benidickson said it was not done in this case—

Senator Benidickson: It was done in this case, fortunately.

Senator Grosart: Yes, but after we on this side of the house had refused to give leave for its adoption. The acting chairman quite properly took the next step, under rule 78(3), and moved that it be placed on the Orders of the Day for consideration at a later date.

This very fact brings up the bad situation we are in. I did not speak on the report a few minutes ago, because we are in the absurd position of having a debate on a motion for the adoption of the report at the same time that we have the appropriation bill before us.

I raise the point because in conversations with the acting chairman I have been led to believe that he is fully aware of the situation, and has every intention of avoiding it in the future. That means, I hope, that the National Finance Committee will meet to consider the supplementary estimates as soon as they are referred by the Senate. The long delays which have taken place between the referral and the meeting of the committee is part of the problem, and I am sure all honourable senators will agree that it is highly desirable that we have the report of the National Finance Committee well ahead of the time that the appropriation bill comes to us.

I re-emphasize that in making these remarks I am not suggesting any criticism of the acting chairman who, in the absence of the chairman from a few recent meetings, did an excellent job, guided our proceedings well, and has, indeed, presented us with what I regard as an excellent report. I have no objection in principle to the report—it is a good report, in my view—but I should like, if I may, to make a few comments on some of the items that appear in the appropriation bill now before us.

First, I should like to thank Senator Langlois not only for his usual excellent presentation, but for supporting me as thoroughly as he did in the position I took when we were considering the rules. It is not a good rule that provides it is not permissible for a senator to quote from Hansard of the other place, except remarks of a minister. He read at length from a speech of a member of the other place, as reported in Hansard, and that would normally be a violation of our rules.

I was glad to hear him do that, because I objected to that rule when the committee was considering a revision of the rules, and said that no doubt we would continue to pay no attention whatsoever to it, even if it is incorporated in the revised rules.

To be fair, Senator Flynn did not go that far. He quoted the Speaker. That might very well come within the spirit of a definition of "a minister." However, I thank him also for his support, and all honourable senators who in future will continue to pay no attention whatsoever to this rule.

Senator Flynn: We will redraft it.

Senator Grosart: As the Leader of the Opposition pointed out, we are dealing here with a total of $1.7 billion in budgetary expenditures—that is to say, statutory items, items to be voted and non-budgetary items.

Our report, if I might refer to it, speaks somewhat favourably of this. It says that, after all, it is much less than the total of the supplementaries last year, which amounted to about $5 billion. This year the total is only $1.7 billion. The report suggests that this might be a change for which we should compliment the government.

We are told also, of course, that the total of the supplementaries is likely to be about $2.5 billion. I am not so sure that we should be too congratulatory of the government on that score. It is true that it is about half the figure for last year, but, on the other hand, the $2.5 billion will still be higher than any previous year other than last year, and the $1.7 billion in supplementary estimates (A) will be greater than the total of all supplementaries in any recent year with the exception of one.

Therefore, I agree with the Leader of the Opposition that this is, rather, an indication that the government has not been very successful in carrying out its many-times-stated intention of holding down government expenditures, because we are again at the highest spending level in history.

In committee we heard from the President of the Treasury Board that it is now government policy—this is referred to in the report—to keep down, to restrain, increases in federal government expenditures, and hopefully expenditures at all levels of government, to a percentage increase less than the percentage increase in the gross national product. This was suggested in the White Paper, and, in answer to a question in committee, the President of the Treasury Board confirmed it as current federal government policy.

Well, to be fair, the President of the Treasury Board did not say that it would refer to this year's expenditures which we are now discussing, but it is not very encouraging to have the President of the Treasury Board say, "I am really going to hold the increase in these expenditures down to 15 per cent or 16 per cent," when, of course, the GNP is not rising at anything like that rate.

When we on this side of the house suggest cuts in expenditures, the Leader of the Government says, "Tell us what expenditures you would cut?" That is a very good question, and we have the answer. The President of the Treasury Board, less than a year ago, came before the committee and, with a great sounding of trumpets, said, "We are cutting $1 billion, and here are the cuts". He gave them to us, and said, "One billion dollars." So any time the Leader of the Government wishes to ask that question, I will say, "Go and ask Mr. Chretien, because he has the answer."

It may not always be a completely acceptable answer. For example, the report deals with some of the $1 items which we have in the bill before us. Honourable senators are well aware of the background of the $1 items. They are items which, as the Deputy Leader of the Government said, are used for various purposes, including amendment of statutes. One of the purposes to which they are put—and there are usually a number of items in this category—is the transfer of funds. These are the items described under "A" in the summary that was given to us, as follows:

● (1500)

One Dollar items which authorize transfers from one vote to another—15 items.

This is just half the total of $1 items.

We did look at these transfers and asked questions about them. Of course, they are given to us to indicate that the government is really saving money, whereas actually the vast majority of these transfers do not save a cent. Although the source of funds is not explained in the bill that is before us, it is explained in the estimates, and it is in the estimates that we find what is being done with these transfers, which account for half of the total of the $1 items. The government has apparently decided at various times to find some money for a new expenditure it felt was necessary. As we look down the list, the estimates tell us exactly where that money was found, and the $1 item is to cover the transfer of $1 million, $2 million, $5 million, or whatever the amount is. The explanation given is that such and such a project has been delayed—deferred, in most cases. Of course, that money is going to be spent. They are talking about items which have been approved by Parliament. If anyone cares to look at those 15 items, he will see that they are all going to be proceeded with. All the government is doing is deferring expenditures, not eliminating them, and as anyone who has had to deal with a household budget, or any other kind of budget, realizes, there is a vast difference between saving money by not spending it and appearing to save money by deferring the expenditure for a period of time.

Senator Flynn: And using it for something else.

Senator Grosart: The Leader of the Opposition adds, "And using it for something else." That, of course, raises another question. In the estimates we are told, as I indicated, the source of these funds. We are told what the transfer is. However, the bill before us does not actually authorize that transfer. It authorizes an expenditure, but not specifically the transfer. This raises a question as to the propriety of an executive decision not to go ahead with a decision of Parliament, and its effect on those who may have expected the project in question to proceed. I will not belabour the point. I raise it only to indicate that even the very large amount of $1.7 billion which we are asked to approve today is not actually the total amount that will be spent under the terms of this and other related acts—and there are other reasons for that which I will not go into now.

One aspect of the total that concerned us, of course, was the effect of these very high expenditures on the public debt. It is an extraordinary thing that we have not been able to get an estimate of what the total increase in the public debt is going to be this year. There was a figure in the original budget, Mr. Turner's budget, of $5.3 billion. Every estimate I have seen, however, indicates that it will be well over $7 billion, and almost certainly $8 billion. That is the kind of effect that I think we have to be concerned with.

As a result of our questioning in this regard, we found that our total debt is now something in the order of $780 million, and the cost of servicing that debt is increasing at a very great rate. The servicing cost of issuing some new loans is $8.5 million—that is just the cost of servicing these new loans—but it is interesting to look at the interest rates that the government is being charged. On this score, on a superficial examination, the record is not too bad. In 1971 the average interest rate on the various instruments the government uses to borrow money—such as the Canada pension fund, Canada savings bonds and treasury bills—was 6.03 per cent. According to the response from Treasury Board to one of our questions, we find that rate is now 7.24 per cent, which is not an unconscionable increase.

There is an item in supplementary estimates (A) of particular interest to some senators—and especially, I would think, to Senator Lamontagne. I am referring to vote L51a of Energy, Mines and Resources, which reads:

Loans to Atomic Energy of Canada Limited in accordance with terms and conditions approved by the Governor in Council to finance the purchase of heavy water for lease or resale to Canadian and foreign users.

The committee was very interested in that. It appears that we are buying heavy water at one rate and selling it at another, possibly much higher, rate.

We were given an answer by the department which we did not find satisfactory, and requested further information. I am glad to say that the new President of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, Mr. Foster, appeared before the committee. The meeting was held in camera, so I am not authorized to relate, in any great detail, the information he gave at that time. But in that discussion—and I am sure this is not confidential—Mr. Foster highlighted one or two aspects of our whole program in the nuclear reactor field, one of which indicated that, in terms of the percentage of the total of our energy requirements in Canada supplied by nuclear reactors, we are now well up with the rest of the world, and the province of Ontario, due to the use of CANDU reactors by Ontario Hydro, is probably the leader in the world on a comparable population basis. Something in the order of 15 per cent of Ontario's total energy requirements are now being met from nuclear power. It is a remarkable achievement and one from which we can derive some satisfaction.

We were also concerned about the cost of the federal health program, and particularly about those open-ended arrangements under which the federal government undertakes to match the spending by the provinces. What the committee felt should be looked into was the fairness of this type of program in relation to the individual provinces. To some extent, this kind of open-ended program is an incentive to the provinces to expend funds, whether they have the money or not. We asked for the per capita costs to the provinces in respect of the federal health program. We were provided with some very interesting figures. I will not repeat the individual figures, but I ask permission to have this table, which sets out the per capita costs by province, inserted in Hansard at this point.

[Senator Grosart.]

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(The table follows:)

ESTIMATED PER CAPITA COSTS IN 1974-75 BY PROVINCE FOR MEDICARE AND HOSPITAL INSURANCE

| Province | Medicare | Hospital Insurance |
|-----------------------|----------|--------------------|
| Newfoundland | $41.36 | $146.69 |
| Prince Edward Island | 49.44 | 119.19 |
| Nova Scotia | 56.27 | 153.00 |
| New Brunswick | 43.80 | 154.04 |
| Quebec | 66.50 | 181.62 |
| Ontario | 69.04 | 176.32 |
| Manitoba | 57.41 | 159.75 |
| Saskatchewan | 54.71 | 159.29 |
| Alberta | 61.04 | 173.96 |
| British Columbia | 71.59 | 160.55 |
| Yukon Territory | 68.40 | 103.30 |
| Northwest Territories | 67.48 | 181.22 |
| Canada | 64.92 | 171.91 |

Senator Grosart: The table shows that the per capita cost of medicare ranged all the way from $71.59 in British Columbia to $41.36 in Newfoundland. For hospital insurance the per capita costs ranged from $181.62 in Quebec to $103.30 in the Yukon Territory.

● (1510)

Finally, we were interested in the provision in the bill for the deficit in what was called the Oil Compensation Program. This is a program of payments in those parts of Canada east of the Ottawa Valley to equalize, as far as possible, the domestic cost of gasoline. It is financed on the one side by the export tax and on the other by the special federal excise tax on gasoline. There is still a deficit in this regard. As the Deputy Leader of the Government has indicated, the minister said it was accounted for largely by the recent increase in OPEC country prices.

What is disappointing is that that program, as originally conceived, was hailed as one whereby there would be a balance, whereby the extra money obtained from these two taxes, export and excise, would compensate for the deficit east of the Ottawa Valley. We were given reason to believe that that was an assurance. It has not happened. It is true that there was an event which should have been anticipated but which had not occurred at the time. However, I suggest that is an indication of the danger we run into when we accept all these reasons for expenditures at their face value. It is understandable that errors in projections can be made, but a $385 million shortfall is not just a typographical error in the estimates.

Again, I thank the Deputy Leader of the Government, not only for his usual good explanation but for the papers he has provided us with, which make it so much easier for us on this side to—I was going to say, “understand what he was saying”, but that is not what I mean—understand what the government is saying.

Hon. W. M. Benidickson: Honourable senators, having spoken yesterday I apologize for rising now and taking up more of your time. I was a little late entering the chamber; otherwise I might have had some remarks to make when the report of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance was presented to us by my esteemed friend Senator Sparrow.

I can make my remarks brief by joining, I think, completely with what was said by Senator Grosart about the meetings and other antecedents of this report. Supplementary Estimates (A) came to us for referral to committee on November 13. On Tuesday, December 9, we were faced with the possibility that some of the “powers that be” here might ask us to abridge our rules again and go ahead and approve the report before those senators not on the committee had had an opportunity to read it. We had only two short meetings, which I think is not too wonderful.

Supplementary Estimates (A) involve $1.751 billion. I think our meetings occupied two hours on November 19, and an hour and a half on the other day, December 9. On the second day, I think we were assembled in large part because of an interest I expressed in the subject of the STOL aircraft costing, which I have previously raised in this chamber. I was with my colleagues in the Senate sitting all the afternoon of Monday, but I was not present Monday night and was not aware that the committee meeting called for 9.30 a.m. Tuesday had to adjourn within the short period of an hour and a half, so that the members could assemble—this is almost without precedent—in the chamber for a sitting of the Senate at 11 a.m. So there were no replies to the major questions I had in mind and raised before 11 a.m. I will deal with that later.

I think that anything to be said about the report, relevant to the bill before us, has been tactfully said by Senator Langlois. We are concerned about rising costs. In summary, the report shows that in the year 1969-70 the main estimates and supplementary estimates totalled $12.8 billion. I will not refer to 1975-76, because we have many months to go and might receive some more supplementary estimates. However, let me refer to the previous, completed fiscal year, 1974-75, ending March 31 last. In the short period of time from 1969-70 to 1974-75 total expenditures have risen from $12.8 billion to $28.2 billion.

I appreciate Senator Grosart's reference to the respect that we think we got from the President of the Treasury Board on November 19 in committee for our repeated recommendation that federal government expenditures should in some way be related to our gross national product. I am disappointed in the report with respect to the supplementary item for the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, namely, the rather large supplementary of $385 million, which brings the total of expenditures on this item this year to over $1.7 billion, for compensation to consumers of oil products east of the Ottawa Valley.

I thought I would be able to give you some accurate figures on the actual net cost amount that will be requested from consolidated revenue in connection with this rather new large item in our estimates, which is part and parcel of our total expenditures, about which we receive so much criticism. My recollection is that about three years ago the OPEC countries ganged up—I do not complain about that; they have to look after themselves—and there ensued a large increase in the cost of energy.

● (1520)

In this really serious situation, the federal government, after consultation, negotiated what seems to be a very decent, high-principled, agreement with the provinces. I think, from the point of view of national patriotism and sharing of difficulties and responsibilities, I can assume this. The essence of the agreement re petroleum product pricing was that the Western oil-producing provinces would take less than the market price for selling their petroleum products to their fellow Canadians. It was a considerable and important sacrifice on their part, for which I give them full credit. The federal government would obtain new revenue from the imposition of an export tax.

At any rate, as recently as three years ago we all got the impression that the revenue from this export tax would approximate the Eastern gas cost, or the consumer subsidy for those who bought petroleum products east of the Ottawa Valley. The government is now asking for a supplementary $385 million.

Our committee, in my opinion, did not properly investigate the actual net cost to the consolidated revenue fund in 1975-76. I cannot tell you what, out of the consolidated revenue fund, the taxpayers of this country are actually paying to citizens residing east of the Ottawa Valley as a result of this agreement. I am not against it, but I am saying that amount for the current year is perhaps tremendous. Do the consumers east of the Ottawa Valley know the cost to other taxpaying Canadians?

I do not believe, when we are criticized for the amount of the total expenditures, that we are getting from our constituents an understanding—I mean an adequate and proper appreciation—of what in essence is a transfer payment. However, there are many other items of a similar transfer category.

I shall try to be brief on this point. I did ask the committee on Tuesday morning, before the meeting had to be abruptly terminated—I do not blame anyone for this—to look at the commitment we were making for what is called the STOL aircraft service between Ottawa and Montreal. I am frank to say the officers of the Crown who appeared before us were exceptionally competent. Their presentation, however, was by means of slides. We were making notes in the dark and, in the circumstances, the notes I made may not be too accurate.

In any event, this is a subsidy for someone's genuine benefit, and the balance sheet may show it to be a worthy one. Respecting STOL we are looking at a special transportation service between the two cities of Ottawa and Montreal. I believe the expenditure commitment has been approximately $25 million, exclusive of supervisory salaries in the Ministry of Transport, aircraft depreciation, and so on.

In this anti-inflation climate we have to try to save some millions of dollars here and there. The customary whipping boy, Information Canada, involves only $9 million plus. I think we can certainly do without spending much of that $9 million if ministers are going to continue to maintain, and even greatly enlarge, their spending on publicity. We cannot attack or curtail expenditures on a picayune basis. We do not know enough about the overall when we devote three hours to $1.7 billion. Sure, government is too big. We are talking about some $30 billion, so perhaps my $25 million on STOL aircraft is peanuts. My old political mentor from northern Ontario was once criticized for his comment, "What's a million?"

Senator Asselin: C. D. Howe.

Senator Benidickson: I suppose there is ample opportunity for many people to say, "What's a billion?" The flippancy is just as wrong.

At any rate, I believe that the Ministry of Transport, which has a very specialized advocacy for this service, should have been questioned. We were cut off at 11 o'clock. These things are new to me. I used to be a parliamentary assistant in the Department of Transport but I am very much out of date.

At any rate, this particular branch of MOT advocating this service can, I presume, be very persuasive. They were very credible the other morning. They started off in 1971-72 with a budget of $4.7 million, and in the next year it was $9.8 million, and in 1973-74 it was $13.2 million.

One of my purposes in asking the committee to sit—although I did not get time to ask the officials—was to consider the relative cost and the relative usage of one kind of transportation over another; for instance, air and ancillary airports versus fast trains. I must disclose that at one time I represented a riding in Canada that had more railway terminals than any other in the country. Perhaps I am a little railway minded. In considering the Mirabel Airport and the Toronto Airport, on which hundreds of millions of dollars were spent for a rather small percentage of air travellers, I wonder if there is proper balance of rationality for this kind of thing, and I hoped to hear about that. I will not pursue this because I am pretty sure that MOT will need more money before long, and will come back to us. I think we will have further estimates soon, and an opportunity to question this.

• (1530)

Along with this you will remember that in the estimates presented in March last year we were asked to vote blindly $38 million for the entry of the government into aircraft manufacturing. The money was to buy out certain assets of Canadair Limited, a subsidiary of General Dynamics of the United States.

[Senator Benidickson.]

Members of the committee will recall that originally we were never even told that there was an item in the agreement with Canadair which committed the government to not disclosing any of the financial statements that were part and parcel of the option agreement. They just simply said that the Senate was not entitled to look at it.

Some of us took umbrage at that and we adjourned. Officials came back and then presented to the chairman of the committee—something they should have done in the first place—a statement which said that they had promised not to make public the operating statements which were part of the option to purchase.

I realized, of course, that it would not have been proper for the company's competitors and others to see those documents if the option were not exercised. Moreover, the chairman of the committee, Senator Everett, reminded me last Friday that when we stood firm they had presented the agreement, and thus committee members had an opportunity to look at it in his office. But knowing all the leaks of information that occur in this political arena, I chose not to look at the agreement. I had every confidence that I would not be responsible for a leak, but I did not want there to be even a ghost of a chance that such a thing could be blamed on me, and that could not be if I did not look at that improper secrecy pledge respecting a possible payout by the taxpayers of $38 million.

However, as recently as one week ago, that option was exercised, involving the taxpayers in a payment of $38 million, at least, in order to get into the aircraft manufacturing business by buying certain assets of Canadair. I should point out that this followed another not inconsequential agreement made two years or more ago, similarly to buy certain assets and get into the aircraft manufacturing business through the de Havilland Company.

Honourable senators, as this option has been consummated and we have not had more than a day or two to even peruse it, may I have your permission to table a copy of the agreement with the official custodian of our records?

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Some Hon. Senators: Agreed.

[Editor's note: See p. 1614 for Senator Benidickson's statement withdrawing his request to table agreement.]

Senator Benidickson: I shall not pursue this matter further except to say that between Canadair and de Havilland we have, with STOL, now gone into the highly risky and highly uncertain realm of aircraft manufacturing.

One fact that did emerge at the meeting on Tuesday morning was that the Cabinet had approved, and had become committed to, the prospective agreement involving all three of these things starting as far back as May 1971. In the light of such a commitment there is a most natural question which I should have liked to ask, but I lost the opportunity when the committee had to adjourn early because the anti-inflation legislation had to be dealt with in the house. But if the members of the National Finance Committee had been allowed to see the documents at the appropriate time, and I had had the opportunity, this is the question I would have posed to the highly-paid staff of public servants who have been engaged in this field since 1971: If the Dash 7, which de Havilland has had on the manufacturing planning table for the last three years, is such a good aircraft, why do we not have sales contracts yet with anyone anywhere in the world? Why have there been no commitments from anyone anywhere in the world to buy this aircraft?

I read in the press last week that we now have a new world sales force. It may be that it will be better able to sell the aircraft in question, but, whether it does or not, it is almost certain to involve more expenditure of public funds. Can you imagine any private company committing itself to manufacturing aircraft with a minimum investment of almost $150 million—and it is bound to be far more than that eventually—without, after three years, having even one single order in prospect?

At the first meeting of the National Finance Committee this year I asked a question concerning the concentration of corporate power in relation to expenditures. I thought the matter would be found in the estimates of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, but I was wrong. You know, it is most difficult for parliamentarians to follow anything any more in this blue book of estimates. It is becoming more obscure from year to year. They are making it harder and harder for parliamentarians to be in a position to ask intelligent questions, and I read in the paper yesterday that that was confirmed by the newest Auditor General. In any event, I was told that the Royal Commission on Corporate Concentration expense was to be found in an item under the Privy Council. It was under the Prime Minister's operation, and it involved something in the order of $1.3 or $1.4 billion. I am just guessing at that figure.

Honourable senators, I feel it my duty to refresh your memories as to the initiation of the inquiry of which I gave notice. If you will recall, we had a morning sitting at ten o'clock on March 26. By accident earlier that morning at 1 a.m. I had read in the Toronto Globe and Mail, and in the financial pages of the Montreal Gazette, about a proposed takeover by Power Corporation of another conglomerate, Argus Corporation. In rather hasty consultation with several of my colleagues who are more knowledgeable than I in business, and with no anti-corporate feeling involved at all, knowing that we were about to recess for Easter, we designed a temporary stop gap in the form of a notice of inquiry which was put on the Order Paper in my name.

I think I should read it. It is in the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate of our last sitting before Easter, March 26, and reads as follows:

● (1540)

By the Honourable Senator Benidickson, P.C.:

26th March—That he will call the attention of the Senate to a planned takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., of Argus Corporation Ltd., and the advisability of referring the matter to a standing or special committee of the Senate to ascertain if such a takeover, if successful, would be in the public interest; and generally to inquire into the effect of growing corporate strength vis-à-vis the Canadian consumers resulting from other such takeovers, conglomerate ownerships, mergers, etc.

On that same morning of March 26 I spoke to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs on this matter, but he did not give me the nod, in favour or otherwise. However, I certainly informed him of what I was doing, because I have very great admiration for him. I think he is a comer in the political field, and I think he is in a good portfolio. If, in addition to his hard organizational work in his riding, and his travels through many of the constituencies of Canada, he looks after the Canadian consumer properly, I think he is the kind of political figure that has a future.

When I came back from the Easter recess, during which I visited Mexico with my good friend, Senator Cameron, I read with considerable pleasure that the Prime Minister himself had appointed a royal commission to deal with these matters. I was truly delighted by this, since I really did not want the Senate to get into this matter unless no one else would take it on, since we have to face the fact that we in the Senate have a reputation for being a little pro-business, having a little pro-corporate strength and power. I did not think that a report of a committee of the Senate on such matters would be the most desirable thing. The commission, I was glad to note, was to be headed by Mr. Robert Bryce, whom I have known for thirty years and for whom I have the greatest esteem. He has been a familiar personage in government activity at the topmost levels for a very long time.

Returning for a moment to March 26, I may say that I simply put the matter on the Order Paper, with one hour to go before the recess, as a holding tactic, and on June 12 I withdrew my Notice of Inquiry, expressing my pleasure at the fact that a royal commission—I think the first one that the present Prime Minister has ever appointed—was going to take on most of the things that aroused my concern. You will find my remarks in the Debates of the Senate of June 12, in which I expressed my hopes for the success of this commission and indicated that I had no desire to participate as a member of a Senate committee engaged in this kind of inquiry.

I have here a copy of a minute of a meeting of the Privy Council, dated April 22, 1975, which said that the Privy Council would appoint, under the Inquiries Act, Mr. Bryce and a couple of other gentlemen, whose names meant nothing to me, as a commission to inquire into:

- (a) the nature and role of major concentrations of corporate power in Canada;
- (b) the economic and social implications for the public interest of such concentrations; and
- (c) whether safeguards exist or may be required to protect the public interest in the presence of such concentrations.

There is more, dealing with the terms of reference, but I will spare you the necessity of hearing me read it.

With this arrangement I was perfectly happy, since I thought the Senate should not be involved in it for the reasons I gave. Therefore, I paid no further attention to the matter, since I thought it was in good hands.

I was, however, astounded and shocked when a new book, The Canadian Establishment, by Peter Newman was published, in which he points out, to my horror, that one of the members of the commission, whom I did not know and whose antecedents I had never looked up, a Mr. Nadeau, was President of Petrofina Ltd. The chairman of the board of that corporation is now a Mr. Campo, who must be a close associate of Mr. Nadeau. Mr. Campo is also a director of Power Corporation, the mammoth organization that I thought we were going to have a look at.

Senator Thompson invited a large number of us to a lunch not long ago to meet Mr. Campo. He gave a little speech about Canadian citizenship, pointing out how the ethnic groups of consequence in Canada can be a unifying, not a divisive, force in this country. He expressed it in a better way than I have ever heard. I had no prejudice against the gentleman in any way, and I enjoyed the lunch, but unfortunately I did not get the opportunity to tell him about my apprehensions with regard to Mr. Nadeau, and the Royal Commission on Corporate Concentration.

Honourable senators, while it is true that I took this thing rather casually over a period of several months after my notice of inquiry on March 26, I did not take it so casually that I did not go to the first public hearing of the commission which was held here in Ottawa in early November, I believe. Some opening remarks were made by no friends of mine; in fact, my political opponent, a Mr. Lorimer of the NDP, and a Mr. Laver, who presented arguments that were very consequential, worrying and important. At my own expense I bought the stenographic transcript—and they do not come cheap when you buy them from a commercial reporter—of what they had to say, and I sent it to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

I now draw your attention to the fact that others besides myself are exercised about this. As evidence of this, let me refer you to a full page opposite the editorial page of the Globe and Mail—which is not a leftist or an anti-corporate newspaper—of November 25, and another on December 8, making people aware of the possibilities—I am not saying that they exist—of the possibilities of serious conflicts of interest.

● (1550)

As to my attendance at the opening meeting of the royal commission, I will make two references. The Chairman, Mr. Bryce, presented as Exhibit No. 9 and Exhibit No. 10 two letters between himself and the Prime Minister. I should say, as a member of the public, that Mr. Bryce was offering to disclose any holdings he had, and so on, that could possibly be suspect as a conflict of interest. The reply of the Prime Minister was to the effect, "I have noted your letter and I thank you for the copy of the complete list of securities you own, and I have no lack of faith in you."—and as I told you before, honourable senators, I have no lack of faith in Mr. Bryce. But the Prime Minister, as I recall from reading the letters exchanged, went on to say—and I do not know what the follow-up has been—"All right, Mr. Chairman Bryce, you have done that commendably as the chairman, but I think it is your responsibility to ask other members of the commission and senior research and other staff of the commission to do likewise, and report to you, and subsequently, if you see fit, you will report to me." That is my recollection of my reading of Exhibits 9 and 10.

[Senator Benidickson.]

Now, honourable senators, I have not had a conversation with Mr. Bryce or anybody important about it since, but I simply want to say that as these opportunities come most appropriately in the numerous items involved in supplementary estimates, it seems to me to be my best chance before Christmas of expressing to you my disappointment in that what thought I was launching in March, and which I explained in June—a healthy inquiry—has not come to pass, and I am sad. I do not feel that the commission is adequately representative of, for example, consumer interests, labour interests and so on. It is a commission of three members, two of whom can be said to be part of big business.

I am going to end, honourable senators, by saying what some of our young friends, including those in my own family, say—"You have given a non-answer." I am convinced that this commission, if something is not done, will present a non-report. I would vote against the $1.2 million or more in these estimates. No confidence!

Hon. Léopold Langlois: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honorable Senator Langlois speaks now his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I shall be brief—

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Langlois:—in trying to summarize the points raised by those who have participated in the debate this afternoon.

First, I should like to make a brief comment on the remarks made by the Leader of the Opposition in connection with the deletion of clause 5 from the supply bill by the Speaker of the House of Commons. If I raised this point this afternoon it was because earlier this week, when I moved that this bill be placed on the order paper for second reading, the Leader of the Opposition himself was the first to remark that the bill had been amended. I do not want to put words into his mouth but, to summarize what he said, he asked me if this clause had been struck out merely because it was illegal. In reply to this the only remark I made was that it had been struck out, and that was a simple statement of fact. I had in mind then to revert to this question later, knowing in advance that the honourable senator was going to take it up. That is why this afternoon I limited myself to giving the reasons, as I understood them, for Mr. Speaker's having ordered that this clause be struck from the bill.

In referring to the debates of the other place, I carefully avoided making any reference to a previous statement made by Mr. Sharp, the leader of the house, but since the Leader of the Opposition has referred to the statement made last year by Mr. Sharp on the very same point, I think I should quote now—and there will be no objection to this because he is a minister of the Crown and even under our amended rules I am allowed to quote him—from what he said on that occasion, December 9, 1975, as reported at page 9881 of Hansard.

Mr. Speaker, the honourable member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) quoted words I used last December, when the same point was raised by him. At that time I was quite unaware that the bill then before us included a clause of the kind which is before the House again today. My remarks were directed to this effect: that I was unaware of this, and therefore would not let it happen again. But this time I am aware.

Mr. Speaker, not only am I aware, but I have before me a list of acts in which a similar clause is to be found. I have 18 statutes, 18 appropriation acts passed between 1955 and 1974, in which a similar provision was included. On each of these occasions I understand that it was quite in order and quite within the terms of the Constitution and the British North America Act.

Then, honourable senators he continued:

This is entirely the point I made last year, and that I kept making this afternoon. So much for this point, honourable senators.

I should like also to comment on the suggestion made this afternoon by the Leader of the Opposition to the effect that the supply bill should be referred to the National Finance Committee in order to check on the wording. He claimed, and rightly so, that some of this wording is not quite clear. I can say that in all honesty, because two years ago I agreed to have one of these supply bills referred to the National Finance Committee because the Leader of the Opposition then raised a question as to the wording of a particular bill about which I myself had some doubts. So I agreed to have that bill referred to the committee to check on the accuracy and the propriety of that particular wording.

Last year when this question was brought up again, I suggested, as I am about to suggest this afternoon, that if ever the honorable the Leader of the Opposition has a question to raise as to the wording of a supply bill I would entirely support the idea that it be referred to committee. I will not say that it should be referred to the National Finance Committee, but to the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee or the Rules Committee, because if it is a question of procedure or a question of wording then I think one of these two committees would be the appropriate one to which such questions should be referred.

I do not want to elaborate on this except to remind the house of the argument I made last year to the effect that supply bills have never customarily been referred to the National Finance Committee for the good reason that the Senate has no power whatever to amend supply bills. That is the situation under the Constitution. At that time I quoted from page 136 of our rules, and this is the paragraph I read:

Supply bills are not referred to a committee of the whole or to a select committee. However, the estimates on which a supply bill is based are referred to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance when they are tabled in the Senate.

● (1600)

I also quoted the reference to Bourinot, Fourth Edition, pages 443 and 444. To that, the honourable Leader of the Opposition last year said it was obsolete.

Well, frankly, these Forms and Proceedings are not obsolete, since they were incorporated in the book, Rules of the Senate of Canada, by order of the Senate dated December 10, 1968, as any honourable senator may check from the footnote on page 94.

That was the reason for my objection last year, and I still object to supply bills as such being referred to a select committee of the house, the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance.

I come now to some of the other points raised by Senator Flynn, in particular to the item regarding the Leader of the Social Credit Party in the other place, Mr. Caouette. This matter was fully discussed a year ago when this item was first introduced. Full information was supplied by the then President of the Treasury Board. Again, this year the same important questions were put to him by members of the committee and were fully answered. I do not believe it is expected of me this afternoon to rehash all those proceedings of the committee, to go over those same questions when they have been fully covered in committee.

I come now to some of the points raised by Senator Grosart. He referred in particular to the $1 items, specifically items in the supplementary estimates regarding transfer votes. He said that these were not savings in expenditures. I need only refer him to a few of these transfer votes, in particular to the vote under National Health and Welfare, Vote 40a, which is to authorize a transfer to this vote of $207,999. I read now from the document headed "Explanation of One Dollar Items in Supplementary Estimates (A), 1975-76," explaining these $1 items, which was tabled before the committee by the President of the Treasury Board:

Explanation—Increased funds are required for contributions to support athletes and teams training for participation in the 1976 Olympics.

Source of Funds—Vote 35—($207,999)—

Funds are available due to reductions in operating expenses.

If this is not a reduction in expenditures, I do not know what a reduction in expenditures is. It is here in black and white,—"reductions in operating expenses."

I would like also to refer to Vote 5a, under Science and Technology—National Research Council of Canada, reading as follows:

Vote 5a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $899,999.

Explanation—To purchase development and technological research from Canadian industry in line with the government's make or buy policy.

Source of Funds—Vote 15—($899,999)—

The Industrial Research Assistance Program will commit less money than previously forecast in order to support the new program.

There again is a cut in expenditures, and in my opinion these cuts are the necessary consequence and result of this policy of the Treasury Board to have departments live within their original budgets in exercising restraint in their expenditures.

Another example of a similar nature is to be found under the heading of the same department, vote 15 for $1,500,000. The source of the funds is:

The Industrial Research Assistance Program will commit less money than previously forecast in order to support this program.

Vote 35—($2,699,999)—Funds have been made available through a reduction in expenditures.

Then we find under Secretary of State—

Senator Macdonald: Give us some more.

Senator Langlois: I hope I am convincing you.

Senator Macdonald: I am not hard to convince.

Senator Langlois: Under Secretary of State we find:

Vote 15a—To authorize a transfer to this Vote of $479,999.

Explanation—To provide for—

There is a list of explanations, which I will omit, and following that list we find:

Source of Funds—Vote 20—($479,999)—

Funds will be available since the proposed grant to the Massey Hall will not be fully utilized pending agreement with the Province of Ontario and Massey Hall.

Another cut in expenditures. I could go on with several other items which prove that the interpretation placed on these $1 items by Senator Grosart is completely out of line.

Senator Macdonald: May I ask one question, please?

Senator Langlois: Yes, go ahead.

Senator Macdonald: Is all that money that has been saved being used to pay the rent on these buildings which have not been used?

Senator Langlois: None of the examples I have just given cover expenditures of that nature, as my honourable friend knows. I am merely replying to the point raised by Senator Grosart that these cuts are not real cuts in expenditures and I am proving amply by these quotations from the explanations given for these $1 items that they are in fact reductions in expenditures and restraint in government spending.

Senator Macdonald: You know, a man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still.

Senator Langlois: Sometimes you cannot convince your opposite numbers in this place that you are right, but this [Senator Langlois.]

is not proof that you are wrong. I would not be the first preacher to have preached in a desert.

Senator Bourget: You are not alone in the desert; I am with you.

Senator Langlois: That makes it all the more a desert. Anyway, I will end my remarks in this debate by adding that there is a definite commitment made by the government, and ministers on behalf of the government, to impress on departments the necessity to exercise restraint in their expenditures.

Yesterday in this house the Leader of the Government quoted a statement to the press made by Mr. Pepin, who said that it was part of his mandate as Chairman of the Anti-Inflation Board to see that restraints in government expenditures are exercised. He reserved his right, as being part of his mandate, to draw the attention of the government to this absolute necessity in order to fight inflation.

Again, I thank all honourable senators who have been kind enough to participate in this important debate. I also thank my honourable friends for their kind attention.

Senator Benidickson: Honourable senators, I have received a note from one of our esteemed colleagues, questioning my right to table that Canada-Government of Canada option document. I had no special reason to table it. It came to me from, I think, the clerk of the National Finance Committee.

● (1610)

I want to assert, contrary to the position I accepted last March, inasmuch as this document was consummated last week—a fait accompli and now a purchase agreement involving $38 million plus—that in my opinion it is an appropriate document for public tabling and scrutiny. But I am perfectly prepared to withdraw the tabling of the document, with the unanimous, courteous leave of my colleagues, with the right, of course, to ensure that it is available to other people if I see fit.

This brings up an interesting question. I was for some years in an opposition that was puny numerically. We have had difficulties here regarding search warrants. This was not a document that came to me from some surreptitious source. It came from a specially employed clerk of the committee, obtained apparently from the Industry Department for me. I do not know whether or not other members of the committee received it. Irrespective of some other inquiries undertaken about one of our colleagues, with whom I have no reason to be other than friendly, I have great apprehension—I am thinking particularly in terms of a member of our all too thin Opposition about receiving what some ill-tempered, stupid member of a powerful ministry might say was the property of the Crown, and calling it a "stolen document" under the Criminal Code, and then asserting the government's right to search for a document in the Opposition's resource debating material. Of course, that is not what happened in the recent instance.

I bring this to the attention of honourable senators, because I think it is of interest to the Opposition. We may eventually be inquiring into the facts of what happened in the Giguère case.

The agreement I asked leave to table does not come under the classification of a leaked document. However, suppose it came to me from an anonymous public servant who felt that our ultimate boss, the taxpayer, should receive it. Under the section of the Criminal Code concerning the receipt of stolen property, could a search warrant be obtained and my office here, which is invariably unlocked, be raided? I assure honourable senators that this document did not come to me in that fashion. My recollection is that it came to me a few days ago from the specially-employed clerk of the National Finance Committee, and was obtained from the department. As the matter has now been consummated, this should be a matter of public information.

I am prepared to expunge the record of the agreement of all honourable senators to my tabling the document. In my opinion, this is an appropriate case for referral to the committee dealing with statutory instruments, secrecy of documents, conflict of interest, et cetera. I will cheerfully abide by any experienced staff decision. I have no grudge against, or motives with respect to, the Power Corporation.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the only point that may arise in connection with the tabling of documents of this or any other kind is that certain documents might be privileged. There is no attempt, of course, to restrict free speech, or the free flow of information, in the Senate. That is the only technical point to which I believe Senator Benidickson has spoken.

Senator Macdonald: Honourable senators, I wish to assure the Deputy Leader of the Government that the absence of my leader and his deputy, as well as others, is due to the fact that they are attending another meeting. They thought the meeting would be over before now, but apparently it has taken longer than anticipated. The Deputy Leader of the Opposition asked me to assure honourable senators on the other side that there was no discourtesy intended, and I am sure no offence was taken.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(b), I move that the bill be read the third time now.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

WESTERN GRAIN STABILIZATION

AGRICULTURE COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO STUDY LEGISLATION

Leave having been given to revert to Motions:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(e), I move:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture be authorized to examine and report upon the subject matter of the Bill C-41, intituled: "An Act respecting the stabilization of net proceeds from the production and sale of western grain and to amend certain statutes in consequence thereof," in advance of the said bill coming before the Senate.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Monday, December 15, 1975, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Before the question is put, I should like to give a brief outline of the work in store for us next week.

It had, of course, been expected that the Senate would sit tomorrow. However, as we have made such excellent progress and accomplished so much this week, and as we are not expecting to receive any more legislation before Monday, I think we can safely adjourn until Monday at 8 p.m.

I have been advised that we can expect to receive early next week Bill C-41, the Western Grain Stabilization bill; Bill C-75, the Government Annuities Improvement bill; Bill C-78, the Halifax Relief Commission bill; and Bill C-28, the Animal Contagious Diseases bill, followed by Bill C-52, the Superannuation bill; Bill C-69, the Unemployment Insurance bill; and Bill C-77, the Housing bill. The work load will be heavy, and there is no doubt that we will be sitting on Friday next week, and perhaps also on Saturday.

● (1620)

With respect to committees, the Foreign Affairs Committee will meet at 9.30 a.m. on Tuesday, and at the same hour there will be a meeting of the Science Policy Committee; the Internal Economy Committee will meet at 11 a.m. There may also be meetings of the Joint Committees on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, and Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, on Tuesday, but these are not yet definite.

On Wednesday, the Science Policy Committee will meet at 10 a.m. On Thursday, the Foreign Affairs Committee has scheduled a meeting for 9.30 a.m. There may also be meetings of the Joint Committees on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, and Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, on Thursday.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

ending December 31, 1975 for the additional period from January 1, 1976 to March 31, 1976.

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of Order in Council P.C. 1975-2780, dated November 25, 1975, approving the Capital Budget of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority for the year

The Senate adjourned until Monday, December 15, at 8 p.m.

APPENDIX

(See p. 1596)

BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY

REPORT OF STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON BANKING, TRADE AND COMMERCE RELATING TO THE SUBJECT MATTER OF BILL C-60
BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1975

INTRODUCTION

On May 13, 1975, the Senate authorized the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce to examine and report on the subject matter of Bill C-60 entitled "An Act respecting bankruptcy and insolvency" in advance of the said Bill coming before the Senate. Since that date your Committee has received written submissions from the interested parties listed on Schedule "A" to this Report. In addition to the written submissions, oral presentations have been made by representatives of the associations listed on Schedule "B" attached hereto and the advisors to the Committee have presented a detailed explanation and analysis of the Bill.

Bill C-60 is intended to replace the following statutes which will be repealed, The Bankruptcy Act, The Companies Creditors' Arrangement Act and The Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act. In addition, The Winding-Up Act of Canada will no longer be applicable to the winding-up of insolvent companies. Bill C-60 also brings within its jurisdiction the winding-up of insolvent banks, railways and loan, trust and insurance companies. Your Committee has considered the issue of whether or not improvements in the bankruptcy and insolvency legislation could be achieved by amending the existing Act. The effect of Bill C-60 is that existing jurisprudence interpreting the provisions of the present Bankruptcy Act will have little direct value. However, this is the inevitable result of legislative reform.

Bill C-60 introduces many new terms, concepts and procedures which are a very great improvement over the terms of the present Bankruptcy Act. It would be difficult and extremely time consuming to incorporate these provisions into the existing Bankruptcy Act. Your Committee is, therefore, prepared to accept the principle that a completely new Bankruptcy Act should be prepared.

Many changes are required in Bill C-60 in order to reflect a proper balance among the rights of creditors, debtors and the public interest. The draftsmen of Bill C-60 appear to emphasize the rights of debtors to obtain rehabilitation and relief from their debts at the expense of the rights of creditors. From an administrative point of view many functions previously handled by private trustees and by the Registrar in Bankruptcy are delegated to the Bankruptcy Administrator, an employee of the federal government. Your Committee is concerned that this delegation will significantly increase the cost of bankruptcy administration to the taxpayer. It is very difficult to determine whether the additional benefits achieved will justify the increased cost.

Submissions received by your Committee have mentioned technical flaws in the definitions and the drafting of sections. These submissions have been made available to the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and if the legislation is redrafted we would recommend that the submissions be considered although they are not mentioned in this report. In this report we have attempted to outline the most important changes that your Committee would recommend in Bill C-60.

TERMINOLOGY

The language and terms used in Bill C-60 is somewhat cumbersome and confusing. In order that the provisions of any legislation be understood the use of simple and meaningful language is important.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. We recommend that the Bankruptcy Administrator be named Bankruptcy Supervisor; this would more closely describe his role in the bankruptcy and arrangement process.

2. The Bill refers to a "Proposal" and is used in the context of an "offer", which "offer" if accepted becomes an "Arrangement". In our opinion, this is a confusing use of language and the term "Arrangement" should be used throughout.

3. We recommend that the terms pertaining to arrangements should be abbreviated as follows:

"Arrangement by way of Composition" should be abbreviated to

"Composition Arrangement";

"Arrangement by way of Extension of Time" should be abbreviated to

"Extension Arrangement",

and the term "preventive commercial arrangement" should be deleted as a preventive commercial arrangement only appears to prevent a bankruptcy.

4. The Bill uses the term "Bankruptcy Order" as opposed to the terminology under the present Bankruptcy Act of "a Receiving order in Bankruptcy" which change in terminology we are in accord with. As to the word "petition" we recommend that the Bill should refer to a "voluntary petition" or an "involuntary petition" so as to clarify exactly what type of proceedings have been followed.

5. The "Certificate of Non-Responsibility" should be changed to "Certificate of Discharge".

ADMINISTRATION

ADMINISTRATOR

Bill C-60 provides for the appointment of bankruptcy administrators in each district who are full-time employees of the Office of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy. The bankruptcy administrator will assume the functions presently carried out by the official receiver, the registrar, and in some instances the trustee in bankruptcy. In addition to performing his tasks under the present Act which are principally of an administrative and investigatory nature, his function will be augmented by his involvement with the small debtor arrangement program, consumer/debtor bankruptcies, and he will also administer commercial bankruptcies where a private trustee cannot be found to administer the same or dies during the course of his administration.

The administrator, when acting in the capacity of a trustee, will be entitled to receive the same remuneration and expenses as a private trustee and will have his accounts taxed by his own superior, namely, The Superintendent of Bankruptcy.

Under certain conditions, the office of the official receiver presently administers "no asset personal bankruptcy" cases for a fee of fifty dollars ($50). In order for a personal bankruptcy file to qualify for the fifty dollar ($50) fee and to be administered by the official receiver, the insolvent bankrupt must earn less than three thousand dollars ($3,000) per annum if he is single and less than five thousand dollars ($5,000) per annum if he is married. These minimum amounts are increased by five hundred dollars ($500) per annum for every dependent which he supports; also, the debts must not have been business debts.

The Bill proposes that the bankruptcy administrator should administer arrangements for the consumer debtor.

The Bill gives the administrator the sole authority to oppose the discharge of a bankrupt or to apply to the Court for an order imposing the status of "deemed bankrupt" on an officer, director or agent of a bankrupt corporation.

Under the present Bankruptcy Act there appears to be a duplication of work performed by the Office of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy and the Registrar in respect of the taxation of trustee accounts. It is obvious that for this reason the draftsmen of Bill C-60 propose to eliminate the function of the Registrar.

The Background Papers which were released by the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs at the time Bill C-60 was tabled in the House of Commons indicate that the administrator will be directly involved in the financial rehabilitation of consumer/wage-earner debtors. There does not seem to be a rehabilitation process included in Bill C-60 unless the draftsmen are referring to the administrator preparing the arrangement as a form of rehabilitation.

The designation of the officer of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy as "Bankruptcy Administrator" is a misnomer and recommendation is made that his title should be "Bankruptcy Supervisor".

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The office of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy is presently geared to handle "no asset personal bankruptcy" cases and, accordingly, we concur that their present policy should be so extended to include all "no asset personal bankruptcy" cases as we deplore the necessity of honest financial hardship cases being required to pay a fee in order to go bankrupt and free themselves of their debts. Private trustees should also be permitted to handle "no asset bankruptcies".

2. We are in accord with the provision whereby the administrator will administer arrangements for the consumer debtor; however, the Bill proposes to give creditors very little say in the administration of consumer and wage-earner debtor arrangements. We are of the opinion that necessary amendments should be made to the Bill whereby creditors have substantially more input in arrangements filed with the administrator.

3. We are of the opinion that the administrator must obtain input from interested creditors when opposing discharges and when applying to the court for an order imposing the status of "deemed bankrupt" and must not be granted the sole right to act independent of the trustee, the creditors and the inspectors of a particular file.

TRUSTEE

(a) LICENSING OF TRUSTEES

The Bill proposes that the Superintendent of Bankruptcy and his deputies will continue to be appointed by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. It is however also proposed that the Superintendent of Bankruptcy's only obligation to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is to report to him on an annual basis on the administration of the Bankruptcy Act. Appointments both to the office of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy and of licensing trustees were heretofore made by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs on the recommendation of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy. These appointments will now solely be within the discretion of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy.

The Bill recommends an extension of the present procedure which provides for the issuance and renewal of a trustee's license for a given term. The Bill suggests that the term not exceed two years. We understand the renewal of licenses to be a cumbersome procedure and should be automatic unless something has come to the attention of the office of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy which would cause the trustee's license not to be renewed. Provisions have been made to facilitate the licensing of corporate trustees thereby overcoming the difficulties presently encountered in obtaining authorization to so act in several provinces. Also the Bill provides for the Superintendent of Bankruptcy to remove a trustee's license summarily without provision for an appeal process.

(b) TRUSTEE AND INTERIM RECEIVER

There appears to be a double standard created as to the duty of care that must be exercised by the interim receiver and trustee under Section 35 of the Bill and that which must be exercised by the secured creditor under Section 240(5).

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. It is our opinion that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs plays a vital role in the appointments to the Office of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy both as an administrative control and as a cost control and, accordingly, it is our opinion that these appointments together with the renewal and issuance of trustee's licences should not be left solely to the discretion of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy. The procedures now instituted should continue under any future legislation. We have been advised by representatives of the Office of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy that under the present procedure there may be a delay in this area of administration. We, however, do not believe this delay to be of any great significance.

2. With regard to corporate licensing we recommend that Section 18(2) be amended to read:

"Every corporation that holds a license may carry on the business of a trustee in bankruptcy or as a receiver throughout Canada and shall not, in respect of its operations as a trustee in bankruptcy or as a receiver, be construed to be carrying on the business of a trust company".

3. We recommend that there be an appeal process available directly to the court for the trustee who loses his license.

4. We recommend that Section 35 be amended to establish a higher standard of care to be imposed upon interim receivers and trustees.

(c) DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF TRUSTEES

The Bill provides that if at a first meeting of creditors, duly called, a quorum does not attend within one half hour of the time called for the meeting, the meeting is deemed to have been held. This is a good provision as many instances have arisen in the past where creditors have not attended and a new meeting had to be called. Thus, the administration of an estate was delayed.

Under the present Bankruptcy Act, the trustee is required to prepare and file all tax returns which were required to be filed by the bankrupt and which were not filed as at the date of the bankruptcy. This was both a very costly practice and one which did not necessarily produce a recovery for the creditors. The Bill proposes to do away with this requirement and this elimination is welcome.

The present practice is for a trustee in bankruptcy, immediately upon his appointment, to petition the Court via "ex parte" proceedings for a redirection of mail for a period of three months. The Bill proposes that the granting of this petition is an administrative function and should be handled by the administrator and should be granted for a period of 30 days.

Such a routine matter should not involve the time and expense of an application to either a court or the administrator. This procedure could be avoided by providing that a trustee may advise the post office of the bankruptcy of a debtor and thereupon the post office should re-direct to the trustee mail addressed to the debtor.

The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants in their submission stated as follows on the "Realization of Property":

"Section 191 provides penalties for trustees who do not adhere to regulations in respect of method of selling assets of the bankruptcy estate. In the past, trustees have been hampered by regulations that are rigid and leave no room for flexibility to deal with special circumstances. It is our understanding that the regulations that were imposed by the Superintendent were a direct result of abuses by some trustees of the tendering process. It is our view that this is wrong, that the creditors suffer as a result of this procedure, and that the Superintendent should take a more positive approach with respect to the bidding process. Our suggestion is that bidders should not be permitted to attend at the opening of bids but that the Superintendent or the administrator should be required to be there unless circumstances indicate that it is unnecessary. We are convinced this would have a beneficial effect on the total realization for the estate if this method were followed, and would satisfy the public with respect to the tendering process."

The Bill provides that a creditor may request the trustee to continue or institute a proceeding that in his opinion would benefit the estate. If the trustee refuses or neglects to institute or continue such a proceeding, the creditor may obtain permission from the Court to institute or continue the proceeding in his own name and in the name of the administrator. These proceedings are instituted at the cost of the creditor. Any benefit derived from these proceedings belongs exclusively to the creditor and any other creditor who joined with him in the proceedings to the extent of their total claims and costs. Any surplus belongs to the estate and is payable to the administrator or where the administrator so directs to the trustee or debtor.

The proposed Bankruptcy Act stipulates that where a bankrupt resides more than 10 miles from the place of a meeting and is requested to attend a meeting other than the first meeting of creditors or a meeting of a board of inspectors, the trustee will pay the bankrupt reasonable expenses for attending the meeting. The trustee should only have the obligation to pay these expenses if there are funds available in the bankrupt estate.

The Bill carries on the tradition of the existing Bankruptcy Act where once a trustee has accepted an appointment as trustee in bankruptcy of a file, he must continue on that file until the administration is terminated. This provision may create difficulties where the trustee at a date subsequent to the commencement of the administration of a file determines that he has a conflict of interest.

We, therefore, recommend that if a conflict of interest arises during the administration of a file that the trustee be permitted to step down provided that another trustee acceptable to the inspectors is prepared to act.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. No application to a court or to the administrator should be required for a redirection of mail. The trustee without an order should be entitled to require the post office to redirect to the trustee mail addressed to the bankrupt for a period not exceeding three months from the date of the bankruptcy. A court order should be required if the trustee wishes the redirection of mail to be extended beyond the three month period.

2. We agree with the recommendation of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants as it pertains to the realization of assets.

3. We are of the opinion that in a bankruptcy, any surplus funds should be remitted to the trustee on the file and not to the administrator and only paid to the debtor if all monies owing to creditors have been fully discharged.

INTERIM RECEIVER

Bill C-60 sets out the duties and responsibilities of Interim Receivers generally. The powers and duties of the Interim Receiver are as included in the present Bankruptcy Act. The Bill proposes to legislate under what circumstances the Interim Receiver's appointment is terminated and the time frame under which he is to prepare his final accounts for taxation.

The Bill provides that when a debtor files an arrangement a creditor may by "ex parte" petition request for the appointment of an Interim Receiver.

RECOMMENDATION

In our opinion an Interim Receiver should be appointed in the terms and conditions of a proposal as well as during the Notice of Intention period while the proposal is being formulated.

INVESTIGATION BY THE SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKRUPTCY

In 1966 the Bankruptcy Act was amended to give the Superintendent of Bankruptcy extensive investigative powers in connection with a bankruptcy with respect to the conduct, dealings and transactions of the bankrupt, the causes of his bankruptcy and the disposition of his property. Section 6(1) of the Bankruptcy Act. The Bill has broadened the investigate powers to cover offences in connection with any proceedings under Bill C-60 which would include commercial and consumer arrangements as well as bankruptcies. The investigation may also include offences committed before the institution of proceedings under the Act. Section 53(1).

The Bill gives the Superintendent powers of search and seizure which may seriously disrupt the maintenance of permanent master files of data by large financial institutions such as banks and trust companies. In this age of the computer, data relating to transactions involving many parties is maintained in permanent master files. Provision should be made for the Superintendent to obtain the information he requires without disrupting the permanent master file.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. We concur with the extension of the investigatory powers of the Superintendent to include any offence committed in connection with proceedings initiated under the Bill whether or not the proceedings had in fact been commenced when the offence was committed.

2. Where information relating to the dealings and transactions of a person under investigation by the Superintendent is maintained in a permanent master file together with information relating to other parties, the Superintendent shall only be entitled to production of the source documents and the transcription of the data of such person stored in the permanent master file. The Superintendent shall not be entitled to remove from its usual location the permanent master file.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

The Bill legislates situations under which accountants, solicitors, trustees and other professionals may not act in the event of a bankruptcy. The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants in their Brief, report that they understand the following regulation is proposed as it relates to conflict of interest:

"A trustee while he is the trustee of an estate may act for or assist a secured creditor of the estate to assert any claim against the estate or to realize a security interest that he holds if he:

- (a) obtains an opinion of a solicitor not related to the secured creditor that the security interest is valid as against the estate, and
- (b) notifies the creditors or the inspectors of all the circumstances of his relationship with the secured creditor, his remuneration, and the opinion he has received in respect of the validity of the claim of security interest.

A trustee may act for a secured creditor up to the date of the first meeting of creditors while complying with the foregoing paragraph of this regulation."

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. We agree with the recommendation of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants that the foregoing should be incorporated into the new Bankruptcy Act in substitution for Section 30.

2. We are concerned with the strict codification of the definition of the meaning of a conflict of interest within the statute and accordingly are of the opinion that the question of conflict of interest should be dealt with under the rules of conflict of the respective professional bodies.

3. Consideration should also be given to formulating amendments to the Bill whereby trustees may act in two or more estates which are related, particularly where we are dealing with parent, subsidiary, associated and related companies, and husband and wife.

4. A solicitor who has acted for a debtor in a particular matter should be entitled to continue to act in the matter if the trustee and the inspectors are of the opinion that it would be beneficial to the bankrupt estate. This would permit the estate to take advantage of the knowledge of the matter acquired by the solicitor.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE CONSUMER DEBTOR

Part X of the present Bankruptcy Act permits an insolvent person to apply for a consolidation order which would provide for payment of his debts in full within a period of three years. Such a consolidation order does not apply to:

- (a) a judgment or debt in excess of $1,000 unless the creditor consents to come under the order
- (b) a debt owing to a government, municipality or school district
- (c) a debt secured by real estate
- (d) a debt incurred by a trader or merchant in the ordinary course of business. Section 189 of the Bankruptcy Act.

These restrictions limit the usefulness of Part X. It is only in force in a province which has requested that it be declared in force in that province. These provinces are British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

Bill C-60 introduces more elaborate provisions to enable an insolvent consumer or wage-earner to satisfy his obligations to his creditors by paying them in full or in part. The Bill refers to these arrangements as "Arrangements by way of composition" (composition arrangement) and "Arrangements by way of Extension of Time" (extension arrangement). A consumer debtor is defined as an individual who is insolvent but does not include an individual who carries on business and has debts exceeding ten thousand dollars ($10,000) or such greater amount as may be prescribed by regulation. Section 63(1).

Arrangements are administered by the bankruptcy administrator with whom the debtor files a request. The administrator prepares a proposal for either a composition arrangement or an extension arrangement. Although never defined, a composition arrangement involves part payment on account of the debts and the release of the debtor from the balance of the debts admissible under the arrangement. Section 72. An extension agreement is intended to involve payment of the debts in full including interest as it accrues, over a period of time not exceeding three years.

Proceedings by creditors whose claims are admissible in the arrangement are stayed. In an extension arrangement no claim is admissible for a debt secured by:

- (a) real property
- (b) personal property if
 - (i) less than two-thirds of the debt has been paid
 - (ii) the security agreement was given less than 60 days prior to the date of the proposal, and

- (iii) the creditor elects not to participate in the arrangement (Section 78(1)).

In a composition arrangement no claim is admissible where the debt is secured by:

- (a) real property
- (b) personal property if
 - (i) less than two-thirds of the debt has been paid, and
 - (ii) the creditor elects not to participate.

A proposal for a composition agreement must be approved by a majority of the creditors voting at a meeting of creditors called by the administrator. No meeting of creditors is required for the approval of an extension arrangement. A copy of the proposal for an extension arrangement is mailed to all creditors and any objection is filed with the administrator. Any objecting creditor is entitled to have a hearing before the administrator who is then empowered to ratify or amend the proposal. Sections 75 and 76.

If no objections are filed the administrator is deemed to have ratified the proposal which then becomes an extension arrangement. Section 76(2) (3).

The administrator is required to assist the debtor to rehabilitate himself financially and to carry out his financial obligations (Section 80). An arrangement may be for a term not exceeding three years but the administrator has the right to extend the term for an additional year to four years. Section 87(1) (2).

The duties of the administrator with respect to consumer arrangements are quite extensive and time consuming. Your Committee is concerned that the benefit achieved will not justify the administrative costs involved. Many debtors have difficulty meeting their normal living expenses and with the best intentions will be unable to perform their obligations under a consumer arrangement. Unexpected problems such as medical expenses or the repair of an automobile may also cause the debtor to default on an arrangement.

The definition of "debtor" in Section 63(1) will cause problems. Is an individual who practises a profession deemed to carry on business? What about a debtor who has ceased to carry on business? After a request is filed there is no time limit within which an administrator must prepare a proposal. Section 65(1). Nevertheless proceedings by a creditor are stayed by the filing of a request for a proposal. Section 68, which creates the stay of proceedings, is confusing since it provides all admissible claims are stayed upon the filing of a request but until the arrangement is proposed it is impossible to determine which type of secured claims are admissible.

The right of a creditor to object to the terms of an extension arrangement is very limited. The final decision as to whether or not the extension arrangement is reasonable is granted to the administrator who prepared it in the first instance. In the case of a composition all creditors, whether secured or unsecured, vote on the proposal as a class. A majority of the votes of the unsecured creditors have the power to approve a proposal against the wishes of secured creditors. Section 69(3)(5). There is no provision giving secured creditors any greater rights than unsecured creditors in an arrangement.

There is no mention in the Bill of what happens to the rights of creditors who hold security on real property. Since their claims are not admissible in an arrangement, proceedings by such creditors against the debtor are not stayed. Many creditors may take advantage of this loophole to avoid being subject to an arrangement by insisting on a mortgage on real property owned by the debtor whether or not there is any equity in it. Such a creditor could proceed to sue the debtor and garnishee his wages notwithstanding a request for an arrangement has been filed.

The administrator is given limited control over the assets of the debtor. He may arrange for a certificate of judgment or a writ of execution to be filed as a charge against property of the debtor. Section 84. He is also entitled to require the debtor to execute an assignment of his future wages as security for the performance of his obligations under an arrangement. Section 83(3).

Where a debtor is in default for more than three consecutive months, the arrangement is deemed to have been annulled. Section 88(3). This seems to mean that there must be at least four months consecutive default before an arrangement may be annulled. It would be possible for a debtor to make a payment, miss three monthly payments, make another payment and not have his arrangement annulled. This could lead to very serious abuse by debtors.

If an assignment is annulled the rights of creditors are revived. Section 88(4)(c). Does this mean that the portion of a debt which is released by Section 72 is reinstated?

Section 82 will greatly annoy the creditors. It provides that a creditor who is already suffering a loss must pay a fee to the administrator in order to ascertain the terms of an arrangement and how it is being performed.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. A debtor entitled to make a consumer arrangement should not include a debtor with liabilities in excess of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) or such other amount as may be prescribed excluding any debt secured by real property. Using the total amount of the liabilities of the debtor gives the most precise method of determining which debtor is entitled to make a consumer arrangement as opposed to a commercial arrangement.

2. The terms "extension arrangement" and "composition arrangement" should be defined in order to avoid any doubt as to the meaning of the terms.

3. The period of time which may elapse between the filing of a request for a proposal and the filing of a proposal or the rejection of the request should be limited to ten days.

4. A creditor whose debt is secured by real property should be required by the administrator to value his security. The difference between the debt and the value of the security should constitute a claim admissible in an arrangement. If a creditor does not value his security he shall be deemed to be fully secured.

5. Proceedings by all creditors to exercise a remedy against the debtor or his property should be stayed by the filing of a request for a proposal, save and except proceedings by a creditor to realize upon real property of the debtor subject to his security.

6. A creditor should be given the right to vote by voting letter on both an extension arrangement and composition arrangement. If a majority of the creditors do not approve an extension arrangement it should be held to be rejected. An extension arrangement is an offer of payment to the creditors which permits the debtor to continue using his assets. This privilege should only be accorded to a debtor if his creditors consent thereto.

7. Voting by creditors should be simplified by basing a creditor's votes on the dollar value of his claim.

8. Secured creditors whose claims are admissible in an arrangement should be given the right to realize upon property of the debtor subject to their security if there is one month's default in the performance by the debtor of his obligations under an arrangement.

9. An arrangement should be annulled if there is three months default in an arrangement, whether consecutive or not, unless such default is waived by the administrator.

10. If a proposal is annulled the debtor should be deemed to be automatically bankrupt. This would avoid any harassment of the debtor by his creditors and the administrative cost of separate bankruptcy proceedings. Any money deposited with an administrator on hand when an arrangement is annulled should be paid to the creditors of the debtor by the trustee in bankruptcy of the debtor. For ease of administrative convenience the administrator should act as trustee in bankruptcy where a consumer arrangement has been annulled.

11. The creditor should not be required to pay a fee to the administrator on any reasonable request by him for information concerning an arrangement and the performance by the debtor of his obligations thereunder.

12. Creditors should be required to file claims with the administrator. The provisions in the Bill waiving such a filing if the debt is acknowledged by the administrator could lead to serious abuse by collusion between the debtor and a creditor.

COMMERCIAL ARRANGEMENTS

(a) TERMS

In the present Bankruptcy Act, the term "proposal" is used to cover an offer of compromise to the creditors both before and after it is accepted by the creditors and both before and after it is approved by the court. No distinction is made between a proposal that is made before a bankruptcy and a proposal that is made after the bankruptcy of the debtor. The use of the term "proposal" as being applicable to the different stages of the proceedings has not created any difficulties in understanding and practise. Bill C-60 uses different terms depending on the stage of the proceedings. It uses the terms "proposal" for an "arrangement", "commercial arrangement" and "preventive arrangement". The use of these different terms depending on the stage and type of proceeding does not add clarity to the legislation and they are not used consistently throughout Bill C-60.

RECOMMENDATION

The only term which should be used under part IV of Bill C-60 is the term "commercial arrangement". It should have a meaning equivalent to the meaning of "proposal" under the present Bankruptcy Act. The use of the adjective "commercial" will enable the proceeding to be distinguished from an arrangement by a consumer debtor.

(b) WHO IS AFFECTED BY AN ARRANGEMENT

Section 91(2) of Bill C-60 stipulates that a creditor is deemed to be affected by an arrangement only where his interest or rights are materially and adversely affected thereby. It is possible that a creditor may have a secured claim against the debtor and not be subject to the arrangement. Also the same creditor may have an unsecured claim which would be affected by the arrangement.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Section 91(2) of Bill C-60 should be amended in order to provide that a creditor is deemed to be affected by an arrangement only if his claim or any part thereof, is materially or adversely affected by the arrangement.

2. Recognition should be given to the fact that one creditor with several classes of claims may be affected by an arrangement in respect of one class of claim and may not be affected by an arrangement in respect of another class of claim.

3. Section 91 (3) of Bill C-60 should permit the court to determine to what extent a creditor may be affected by an arrangement.

(c) WHO MAY MAKE A COMMERCIAL ARRANGEMENT

Under the present Bankruptcy Act, only the debtor, whether bankrupt or not, may make a proposal. Section 93 (3) of Bill C-60 enlarges the category of persons who are entitled to make a commercial arrangement in respect of a bankrupt and a debtor. These persons include the trustee in bankruptcy, the liquidator of the debtor, a creditor of a bankrupt and a trustee under a trust indenture if the corporation is a bankrupt. The intent of Bill C-60 is admirable but no provisions are set up to enable such parties to take control of and manage the affairs of the debtor. What happens if the debtor is unwilling or unable to carry out the commercial arrangement proposed by a creditor? Who is entitled to the shares of a corporation if the commercial arrangement is made by the trustee in bankruptcy? After the commercial arrangement is approved by the court, who is entitled to elect the board of directors of a corporation?

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The provisions of Bill C-60 which allow persons other than the debtor to make a commercial arrangement for the debtor will only be viable if powers are given to such parties to control the property and affairs of the debtor.

2. If a commercial arrangement is made on behalf of the debtor by someone else pursuant to the provisions of Section 93(3) of Bill C-60:

(a) if the debtor is a corporation the trustee named in the commercial arrangement should be entitled to vote the shares of the corporation at all meetings of creditors of the corporation held during the period in which the arrangement is outstanding. Thus the trustee would be entitled to elect the board of directors of the corporation.

(b) if the debtor is an individual the trustee named in the commercial arrangement should be appointed attorney for the debtor with complete powers to manage the business affairs of the debtor and to control the non-exempt property of the debtor during the period in which the arrangement is outstanding.

(d) NOTICE OF INTENTION

Section 94 of Bill C-60 allows a debtor who intends to make a commercial arrangement with his creditors to file a notice of his intention to make such an arrangement. This is a new and useful procedure that is not available under the present Bankruptcy Act. It will give the debtor an opportunity to formulate a realistic and practical commercial arrangement.

It is intended that the filing of a notice of intention will stay proceedings by creditors of the debtor. Section 94(2). The language of Bill C-60 does not accomplish this. The combined effect of Sections 94 (2), 95 (4) and 103 is that creditors who are affected by an arrangement have their proceedings stayed. However, at the time a notice of intention is filed, it is impossible to determine which creditors will be affected by the arrangement since the terms of the arrangement will not have been settled.

The filing of a notice of intention to make a commercial arrangement is an acknowledgment of insolvency on the part of the debtor. In order to prevent an unscrupulous debtor from taking advantage of this procedure by improperly disposing of his assets, it is desirable that an interim receiver of the assets of the debtor should be appointed by the court at the same time as a notice of intention is filed. It has been suggested that this procedure might impose a heavy burden on the debtor since he would be required to pay the costs of the interim receiver. At the present time, most orders appointing an interim receiver give the interim receiver the power to take possession of the assets of the debtor and to control his receipts and disbursements.

Performing these functions, which may involve twenty-four hour protection of several premises, may result in heavy costs. This could be avoided by giving the court flexibility in the powers it would grant to the interim receiver.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Section 94 (2) should be amended to provide that where a notice of intention has been filed with respect to a debtor no creditor of the debtor may exercise a remedy against the debtor or his property or institute or continue a proceeding for the recovery of a claim without leave of the court.

2. The debtor must obtain leave of the court to file a notice of intention to make a commercial arrangement and such leave should not be granted unless a licensed trustee is appointed interim receiver of the property and assets of the debtor.

3. Immediately after the filing of a proposal, the trustee named in the proposal should be appointed interim receiver of the property of the debtor with such powers as may be set out in the proposal or as the court may determine.

4. The court could authorize the interim receiver to perform one or more of the following functions depending upon the circumstances:

- (i) to take possession of the property and assets of the debtor;
- (ii) to control the receipts and disbursements of the debtor;
- (iii) to manage the business of the debtor;
- (iv) to inspect the books and records of the debtor;
- (v) to make an inventory of the property and assets of the debtor;
- (vi) to borrow for the purpose of financing the business of the debtor and to pledge the assets of the debtor as security for such loans;
- (vii) to receive daily the cash receipts of the business of the debtor and to control the disbursements of the debtor.

5. The trustee named in the notice of intention or in the proposal should be required to stipulate which of the above mentioned powers would provide the creditors with sufficient protection without undue expense.

(e) ACCEPTANCE BY CREDITORS

Under the present Bankruptcy Act a proposal is accepted by the creditors if it is accepted by a majority in number of the creditors voting and by the creditors with 75% of the total of the claims of creditors voting on the proposal. Section 104 (3) of Bill C-60 provides that a proposal is accepted by the unsecured creditors if the majority of votes cast by the unsecured creditors, regardless of class, are in favour of a proposal. This could result in an unjust and unfair treatment of small creditors. Creditors with claims of large amounts could accept a commercial arrangement which provided for lesser benefits to the small creditors. It would be preferable to stipulate that a proposal could only be accepted by the unsecured creditors if each sub-class of creditors affected by the proposal accepts the proposal. Section 104 (4) of Bill C-60 states that a proposal is accepted by a class of secured creditors where 75% of the votes cast by that class of creditor is in favour of the acceptance of the proposal.

The present provisions of the Bankruptcy Act give too great a control over the acceptance of a proposal to the larger creditors. Creditors with 26% of the total amount of the claims of creditors voting on a proposal are given the power to veto a proposal. This problem is continued by the provisions of Bill C-60 relating to the acceptance of a proposal by a class of secured creditors. On the other hand requiring only a majority of votes by unsecured creditors for the acceptance of a proposal appears to be retreating too far in the opposite direction. A proper balance should be maintained between the rights of creditors who are in favour of the acceptance of a commercial arrangement and those who oppose it.

A commercial arrangement is a plan for the reorganization of an insolvent person. It is an attempt to permit the financial survival of the debtor. In most situations the terms of a commercial arrangement are interdependent and payments to one class or sub-class of creditors are dependent on each class or sub-class of creditors accepting the commercial arrangement.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Acceptance of a commercial arrangement by any class or sub-class of creditors should require an affirmative vote equal to 60% of the votes cast.

2. If one class or sub-class of creditors does not vote in favour of acceptance of a proposal the proposal should be held to be not to have been accepted by the creditors.

(f) DEFINITION OF CLASSES OF CREDITORS

Under the present Bankruptcy Act proposals only affect the rights of unsecured creditors and they are generally treated as one class. No power is given to affect the rights of secured creditors. Bill C-60 clearly attempts to rectify the situation and Section 96 (1) provides that a proposal may affect various classes of creditors which may include secured creditors. This is very desirable particularly with respect to insolvencies in the construction industry when mechanics' liens are filed. Unfortunately, the definition of what constitutes a class as set out in Section 284 (3) is very confusing. It refers to an order of priority for secured creditors as set out in the Act. Bill C-60 does not and should not contain any provisions determining the priority of secured creditors. These priorities should be determined by provincial law.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Unsecured creditors whose claims rank on the same level in the order of priority set out in Section 254 of Bill C-60 should constitute a separate class.

2. Secured creditors whose claims are payable out of the same property pro rata on an equal basis should constitute a separate class.

3. For the purposes of a commercial arrangement, a class of creditors may be divided into a sub-class based on the amount of the claim or the type of claim or creditor.

4. A commercial arrangement may stipulate that the classes and sub-classes of creditors may be affected differently.

(g) (i) CHAIRMAN OF MEETING OF CREDITORS

At the present time the Official Receiver, an employee of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy, acts as chairman at the first meeting of creditors in a bankruptcy. The trustee acts as chairman of the meeting of creditors to consider a proposal. The practise of the trustee chairing the meeting of creditors to consider a proposal is undesirable. In most cases, the trustee has been involved in the formulation of the terms of the proposal. He is required to investigate the affairs of the debtor and report to the creditors the results of his investigation. The creditors expect the trustee to make a recommendation whether or not a proposal should be accepted. The duties imposed upon him by the present Bankruptcy Act which are enlarged by Bill C-60 do not permit him to maintain an impartial role at the meeting of creditors. The many contentious issues which arise at meeting of creditors to consider a proposal should be decided by a person who is and appears to be impartial. This role can only be effectively performed by the bankruptcy administrator.

RECOMMENDATION

Bill C-60 should retain Section 279 (1) which stipulates that at every meeting of creditors, the administrator or his nominee, shall act as chairman.

(ii) Voting

Under the present Bankruptcy Act, a creditor has the right to vote on a proposal by voting letter. This saves the creditors the time and expense of attending the meeting of creditors. There is no mention of the use of a voting letter in Bill C-60. It has been suggested that the right to vote by voting letter is retained by the provision in the Bill giving a creditor the right to vote by proxy. Section 286 (1). This is a cumbersome method which could easily be avoided by the simple and direct method of using a voting letter.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The right of a creditor to vote by voting letter on a commercial arrangement should be retained.

2. The trustee should be required to mail a voting letter to each creditor with the notice of the meeting of creditors.

(h) INSPECTORS

Under the present Bankruptcy Act the creditors have the right to appoint inspectors to supervise the performance of the obligations of the debtor under a proposal. This power has proven very useful for both the creditors and the trustee. The creditors have the opportunity of being much better informed on the progress of the proposal. Unfortunately, Bill C-60 has omitted any reference to inspectors being appointed for a commercial arrangement.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. At the first meeting of creditors held to consider the terms of a commercial arrangement, the creditors shall be entitled to elect inspectors for the purpose of advising the trustee acting in the commercial arrangement.

2. The inspectors should be entitled to all the powers of inspectors in a bankruptcy insofar as they may be applicable to the commercial arrangement unless such powers are restricted or enlarged by the terms of the commercial arrangement.

(i) EFFECT ON SECURITY AGREEMENTS

Many security agreements provide that repayment of the loan is accelerated if the debtor makes a proposal under the Bankruptcy Act.

RECOMMENDATION

Notwithstanding the terms of a security agreement, the court should be granted the power to determine whether the filing of a proposal should accelerate repayment of a loan or constitute default under the terms of a security agreement. This would be very desirable if the constitutional problems created could be resolved.

(j) AMENDMENT TO COMMERCIAL ARRANGEMENTS

The present Bankruptcy Act and Bill C-60 give no guidance as to when and how a proposal or commercial arrangement may be amended. Neither of them have any provisions setting out the effect of an amendment.

RECOMMENDATION

Specific references in Bill C-60 should deal with the right to amend a commercial arrangement and the problems arising from an amendment. Such provisions should include the following:

(a) If a proposal is amended prior to the mailing of notices of the first meeting of creditors, only the amended proposal should be mailed to the creditors.

(b) An amended proposal, whether amended before or after the meeting of creditors, or before or after the approval of the proposal by the Court, should be deemed to have taken effect as of the date of the filing of the original proposal. This result would contrast with the consequence of a second proposal being filed by the debtor. A second proposal would only take effect as of the date it was filed.

- (c) A proposal may be amended and voted upon at a meeting of creditors without further notice to the creditors if the amended proposal provides all the creditors affected by it with benefits equal to or better than those provided by the original proposal.

(k) DEFAULT IN PERFORMANCE OF TERMS OF COMMERCIAL ARRANGEMENTS

Section 43 (1) of the present Bankruptcy Act provides that if there is default in the performance of the provisions of a proposal, the court may annul the proposal. Upon such an order being made, the debtor is deemed to have made an assignment in bankruptcy on the date of the annulment order. This date becomes the date of bankruptcy for the purposes of determining whether or not fraudulent preferences and other fraudulent transactions may be attacked.

Section 124 of Bill C-60 continues the present practise by providing that where an arrangement is annulled, the debtor is deemed to have filed a bankruptcy petition on the date of the annulment order. The trustee in bankruptcy may be precluded from attacking the improper transactions which took place prior to the filing of the proposal because of the lapse of time between the date of the proposal and the date of the annulment order.

RECOMMENDATION

For the purpose of attacking improper transactions such as fraudulent preferences after the proposal has been annulled, the date of bankruptcy should be deemed to be the date of the filing of the notice of intention or of the proposal.

SECURED CREDITORS

(a) PRIORITY OF WAGE EARNERS

A very significant aspect of Bill C-60 is the treatment accorded to secured creditors vis-à-vis wage earners. A secured creditor is a person holding an interest or charge upon property as security for the payment of a debt. Section 238 (2) provides that a claim for wages up to $2,000.00 has priority to all other secured creditors. Under the present Bankruptcy Act claims for arrears of wages rank as preferred creditors to a maximum amount of $500.00. Preferred creditors rank behind secured creditors. Bill C-60 contains procedures whereby the trustee in bankruptcy may borrow funds to pay wage claims and give security on the assets of the bankrupt for such borrowing in priority over all existing security covering such assets. Sections 238(4), (5), (6) and (7). A secured creditor who is affected by the borrowings of the trustee to pay wages is entitled to be subrogated to the preference of the wage earner against other assets of the bankrupt and to the wage earner's rights against the directors if the bankrupt is a corporation.

After the bankruptcy has occurred, the employees of a bankrupt company should be promptly paid the wages they have earned. Bill C-60 attempts to accomplish this but at the expense of a serious disruption of the commercial lending system. The ability of the borrower to obtain credit to finance the ongoing operations of his business may be seriously hampered since secured financing will be rendered uncertain. In particular, labour intensive industries may find it extremely difficult to borrow funds. A marginal borrower may be unable to satisfy a lender that he has sufficient equity in his assets to support a loan after provision is made for possible unpaid wages.

The granting of priority does not assure the employees of the wage protection that is intended. Sophisticated lenders may stipulate that their loans be made to an associated holding company which owns all the valuable assets leaving no assets in the operating company available to pay arrears of wages. Alternatively, the assets of a bankrupt may be of such a nature that they are not readily convertible into cash and a lender may be very reluctant to loan money against them. In addition, arrangements to borrow sufficient funds to pay the arrears of wages may take an extended period of time while the lender satisfies itself as to the value of the assets.

The borrowing by the trustee creates administrative problems. Many disputes may arise between the trustee, the lender and the secured creditors because there are no specific details in Bill C-60 setting out the type of security interest which may be given to the lender or the terms applicable thereto. The final allocation of any moneys borrowed against assets covered by security held by several secured creditors will be very complicated.

Since the secured position of the wage earner only arises when a bankruptcy occurs, a secured creditor who feels insecure may attempt to realize upon his security very quickly before bankruptcy proceedings are commenced. This may result in the premature termination of an ongoing business. It also may result in a lower recovery from the assets and a lesser amount available for distribution to other creditors.

RECOMMENDATION

It is the opinion of your Committee that the provisions of Bill C-60 providing that a claim for wages up to $2,000.00 has priority over all other secured creditors should be struck out. Consideration should be given to the creation of a government administered fund under the authority of the Bankruptcy Act out of which unpaid wages of employees could be paid forthwith upon the bankruptcy. The claim for unpaid wages would cover wages in arrears to a limit of $2,000.00 and should not include vacation pay, severance pay and fringe benefits. Contributions to this fund could be received from employers and employees. The trustee in bankruptcy would ascertain complete details of the unpaid wages, provide the necessary information to the officials administering the fund and distribute the payments to the unpaid employees. The fund could be subro-gated to the rights of the employees and rank as an unsecured creditor in the distribution of the assets of the bankrupt.

The representatives of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs who appeared before us estimated that the annual amount to be disbursed by such a fund throughout Canada would not likely exceed $4,000,000.00 if severance pay is not included. Since there are over 9,000,000 employees in the work force in Canada, the amount of each contribution would be relatively modest.

The representatives of the Department who appeared before us stated that a fund of the nature contemplated would provide the employees with the best possible protection. The creation of an insurance fund would assure payment of wages in arrears to a maximum of $2,000.00 whereas the method of priority proposed under the Bill gives no such assurance.

(b) STAY OF PROCEEDINGS

Under the present Bankruptcy Act, proceedings by secured creditors are not automatically stayed by a bankruptcy. The trustee of the bankrupt estate has the power to apply to the court for an order staying proceedings by a secured creditor for a period not exceeding six months under Section 49 of the present Bankruptcy Act.

Bill C-60 completely reverses the position of the trustee and secured creditor. The filing of a petition for bankruptcy, a notice of intention to file a proposal, or a proposal stays proceedings by a secured creditor. Sections 94(1), 95(4) and 138.

In addition, Section 238(3) provides that after a proposal or petition for bankruptcy is filed, a secured creditor shall not realize or deal with the property of the debtor for a period of ten days after the date of the proposal or the date a bankruptcy order is made. A secured creditor is not entitled to realize upon the property covered by his security until both a proof of claim is filed with the trustee and the trustee has not exercised his right to redeem the property. Section 240(1). The trustee has thirty days from the date of the filing of the proof of claim to exercise his right to redeem. Section 241(2). These restrictions do not apply if the property is perishable or likely to depreciate in value. Section 240(5). Also, the court may postpone the right of realization by a secured creditor if the postponement does not cause hardship and no payment of principal or interest is in arrears for more than six months. Section 242(1).

The provisions of Bill C-60 staying proceedings by secured creditors without leave of the court place the burden on the secured creditor to satisfy the court that he is being prejudiced by the stay of proceedings. This reverses the present law which places upon the trustee the burden of proving that the secured creditor will not be prejudiced by the stay of proceedings. A problem created by the terms of Bill C-60 effecting such a stay results from the fact that secured creditors such as mechanic's lien claimants are subject to rigid time deadlines to perfect their security. Under Ontario law, if a mechanic's lien is not filed within 37 days after the last work was done, the right to a mechanic's lien is lost. Other filing deadlines apply to debentures, chattel mortgages, conditional sale contracts and assignments of book debts. Section 402 of Bill C-60 attempts to rectify this problem by removing the period during which the rights of a creditor are stayed from any limitation period deadline. This would be completely ineffective if a creditor had a right to file a mechanic's lien and the trustee in bankruptcy sold the property before the mechanic's lien was filed.

RECOMMENDATION

All creditors should be permitted to take any steps necessary to perfect their security such as registration or giving notice to third parties, notwithstanding the fact that bankruptcy proceedings have been commenced. This does not mean that there would be no restrictions with respect to their realization upon the assets of the debtor subject to their security.

(c) REALIZATION BY SECURED CREDITORS

Under the present Bankruptcy Act, the trustee in bankruptcy has very little power or control over the realization by a secured creditor on the assets of a bankrupt subject to his security and the costs incurred. Bill C-60 attempts to rectify this problem. Under it the trustee may require the property to be sold on terms and conditions satisfactory to the secured creditor and the trustee or as the court may direct. Section 240(3). A secured creditor may require a trustee to elect whether he will exercise his power to redeem the security interest or require the property to be transferred. Section 241(1). The trustee has thirty days to reply to the above notice from the secured creditor. Section 241(2). Even if the trustee does not receive such a notice, he has the right to redeem the security interest or to require the property to be realized. Section 241(3). Upon giving notice of intention to redeem or to require the property to be realized, within three months after the service of the notice of election the trustee must pay to the secured creditor the amount of the secured debt or the value of the property as set out in the proof of claim or the net proceeds of realization, whichever is the lesser. If the trustee fails to redeem the property, he loses his right to redeem or to require the property to be realized, the interest of the trustee in the property vests in the creditor, the debt owed to the secured creditor is reduced by the amount of the valuation in the proof of claim and the trustee loses his right to inspect the property. Section 241(5).

The thirty day stay upon realization will create many practical problems. Who will be responsible for protecting the assets? Who will be responsible for payment of rent for the premises if the assets are located on leased premises? Who will collect the accounts receivable? Will the trustee or the secured creditor be entitled to carry on the business of the bankrupt? If so, who will finance the continued operation of the business of the bankrupt?

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The stay of proceedings imposed upon the realization by a secured creditor should be modified. If permitted by the security instrument, the secured creditor should be allowed to take possession of the property of the bankrupt subject to his security, to carry on the business of the bankrupt and to collect the accounts receivable of the bankrupt. Upon the making of a bankruptcy order, the right of the secured creditor to realize or sell the property of the bankrupt out of the ordinary course of business should be stayed for ten days from the date the secured creditor files with the trustee a proof of claim setting out the following information if applicable or for ten days after the first meeting of creditors, whichever is the later:

- (a) The total balance owing;
- (b) The amount of any payments in arrears;
- (c) The security agreement;
- (d) The court order appointing a receiver;
- (e) The instrument appointing an agent or receiver;
- (f) All acts taken to date and expenses incurred;
- (g) The method of sale proposed by the secured creditor;
- (h) An estimate of the value of the property;
- (i) Details of the property in the possession of the secured creditor.

2. Such a proof of claim should be filed by the secured creditor with the trustee within ten days after receiving a notice from the trustee requiring the same. If the secured creditor does not file such a claim, the secured creditor should be required to deliver all the property of the bankrupt in his possession to the trustee.

3. Upon the filing of the notice of an intention to make a proposal, a proposal or a petition for a bankruptcy order, any party, including an interim receiver, should be entitled to apply to the court for a stay of the proceedings by a secured creditor. Such an order should only be granted if the postponement does not cause hardship to the secured creditor and no payment of principal or interest is delayed for more than six months. A similar power is given to the trustee in bankruptcy in Section 242(1).

4. In addition, the court should be given the power to control the method of realization by a secured creditor and the costs incurred in the realization. The costs and expenses of realization by a secured creditor should be subject to taxation by the court. The secured creditor should be required to pay to the trustee any surplus remaining within fifteen days after the accounts have been taxed.

In these recommendations, your Committee has attempted to maintain an even balance between the right of a secured creditor to realize upon the assets covered by the security agreement for which he bargained when he loaned the money to the bankrupt and the need of the trustee in bankruptcy to have a reasonable time to assess the situation in order to obtain the maximum recovery for unsecured creditors.

EXEMPT PROPERTY

Section 47 of the present Bankruptcy Act stipulates that property of the bankrupt which is exempt from seizure under the laws of the province within which the property is situated and within which the bankrupt resides does not vest in the trustee in bankruptcy for distribution among the creditors. The nature and value of the assets which are exempt from execution vary from province to province. Most provinces have stipulated the type of tangible assets which are exempt up to a maximum value. In addition, intangible benefits and rights such as pension benefits, armed service allowances, family allowances, unemployment insurance and Mothers' allowances are exempt from seizure. No maximum limitation is imposed on these benefits.

Most provinces provide that insurance policies are exempt if the beneficiary is either the spouse or child of the insured. The purpose of this is to encourage a man to maintain life insurance for the protection of his family.

Section 145 of Bill C-60 states that all the property of the bankrupt at the date of the bankruptcy order vests in the trustee except:

- (a) real and personal property exempt from seizure under provincial law
- (b) rights under an insurance policy if an amount equal to the cash surrender value thereof is paid to the trustee
- (c) benefits payable to a disabled person under an insurance policy, a retirement savings plan or a pension fund or plan.

Bill C-60 also establishes a uniform exemption across Canada of three thousand dollars ($3,000) in respect of the value of assets which will not vest in the trustee in bankruptcy for distribution among the creditors. This is effected by an awkward method. A bankrupt who retains exempt property with a value in excess of three thousand dollars ($3,000) will not be discharged from his debts. Section 150. This low limit on exempt assets is in accordance with the general philosophy of Bill C-60, the thrust of which directs and encourages insolvent persons to make an arrangement for payment to their creditors rather than use the last resort solution of bankruptcy.

The definition of property in Section 2 of Bill C-60 is all encompassing and includes intangible rights such as pension benefits, family allowances and wages. To apply the maximum exemption to the total value of both tangible and intangible assets belonging to the debtor at the date of bankruptcy would create a very onerous result. The ability of a bankrupt to re-establish himself will be seriously hampered.

The definition of exempt assets in Bill C-60 with regard to insurance policies is more restrictive than the present laws of most provinces which provide that insurance policies are exempt from seizure if the beneficiary is the spouse or child of the insured. It is also more severe with regard to pension and other types of benefits since only benefits payable to disabled persons are exempt. Your Committee is of the opinion that these provisions of Bill

C-60 are regressive and the present policy of encouraging a person to maintain protection for his family and to make satisfactory provision for his old age should be continued.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Property that does not vest in the trustee for distribution among the creditors of the bankrupt should include all property which is exempt from seizure under federal and provincial law.

2. No maximum limit should be imposed upon the value of such exempt property.

3. Uniformity of exemption across the country is not necessary.

UNENFORCEABILITY AND REVIEW OF TRANSFERS

(a) DEFINITION OF INSOLVENCY

Under the present Bankruptcy Act the term "insolvent" by itself is not defined. In Section 2 (j) of the present Bankruptcy Act the term "insolvent person" is defined:

as a person who is not a bankrupt and who resides or carries on business in Canada, whose liabilities amount to $1,000.00, and

- (i) who for any reason is unable to meet his obligations as they generally become due, or
- (ii) who has ceased paying his current obligations in the ordinary course of business as they generally become due, or
- (iii) the aggregate of whose property is not, at a fair valuation, sufficient, or if disposed of at a fairly conducted sale under legal process would not be sufficient to enable payment of all his obligations, due and accruing due.

Section 5 of Bill C-60 has a very limited definition of "insolvent". It provides that a person is insolvent where the property of the person, if it were realized at a fair valuation, would be insufficient to pay all the certain and liquidated debts of that person whether or not the debts are due. Section 6 of Bill C-60 contains provisions as to when a person is deemed to have ceased to pay his debts and also when a person is presumed to have ceased to pay his debts generally as they become due. However, the phrase "ceased to pay his debts generally as they fall due" is never used in Bill C-60. In Sections 140 (3)(b) and 165 the converse term "paying his debts generally as they become due" is used. Section 7 (1) provides that a person is unable to pay his debts if he is unable to pay all his debts that are certain, liquidated and payable. Section 7 (2) provides that a person who has ceased to pay his debts generally as they become due is deemed to be unable to pay his debts. These provisions of Bill C-60 are very cumbersome. A much simpler approach to the problem would be to use the term "insolvent" in the sections of Bill C-60 where the terms "insolvent", "unable to pay his debts" or "cease to pay his debts generally as they fall due" are used. In the following sections the phrase "insolvent or unable to pay his debts" could be condensed to insolvent if there was an enlarged definition of insolvent: Sections 128, 154 (c), 158 (1)(b), 159 (2)(a) and 164 (1).

RECOMMENDATION

The definition of "insolvent" should be enlarged to read as follows:

"A person is insolvent if:

- (a) a fair realizable value of his property would be insufficient to pay all his certain and liquidated debts whether due or not, or
- (b) if he is unable to pay all his debts which are certain, liquidated and payable, or
- (c) if he has ceased to pay his debts generally as they become due."

(b) DEFINITION OF GIFT

In Bill C-60 the definition of gift in Section 2 includes a designation of a beneficiary under an insurance contract by way of gift. This creates a circuitous definition.

RECOMMENDATION

The definition should be changed to read:

"(b) a gratuitous designation of a beneficiary under an insurance contract."

(c) USE OF TERM UNENFORCEABLE

In almost every section of Bill C-60 relating to the right of a trustee to set aside transactions prior to bankruptcy, the transaction is stated to be "unenforceable". The term "unenforceable" is not defined in Bill C-60. It is a new term which has not been used in the present Bankruptcy Act. In Bill C-60 it is used in situations where the trustee would be entitled to recover assets improperly transferred away by the bankrupt. The normal meaning of the word does not give the trustee any power to compel repayment or reconveyance of an asset. It only permits the trustee to defend any attempt by a third party to enforce a claim against assets in the possession or control of the trustee. The present Bankruptcy Act uses the term "void against the trustee". This term has traditionally been interpreted as giving the trustee the right to recover the transferred assets from the person who received it.

RECOMMENDATION

The word "invalid" should be substituted for the word "unenforceable". It should also be used in Section 155 (5) of Bill C-60 which uses the term "void" with a relation to reviewable transactions.

(d) RIGHT OF TRUSTEE TO RELY ON PROVINCIAL LEGISLATION AVOIDING TRANSACTIONS

At the present time, the courts of various provinces have handed down conflicting decisions as to whether or not a trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to rely on provincial legislation setting aside fraudulent preferences. The courts have unanimously upheld the right of the trustee in bankruptcy to rely on provincial laws setting aside fraudulent conveyances made with the intent to defeat and defraud creditors. Usually the most significant difference between the provincial law and the federal Bankruptcy Act is the time within which a transaction must take place prior to the date of bankruptcy in order to be subject to attack. For example, under Section 73 of the present Bankruptcy Act, a fraudulent preference in favour of a creditor who dealt at arms length with the bankrupt is only subject to attack if it took place within three months prior to the date of bankruptcy. Under Article 1036 of the Civil Code of Quebec, there is no time limit within which a fraudulent preference must have taken place prior to the date of bankruptcy. It is only necessary for the trustee to prove that the payment was made at a time when the debtor was insolvent. The provincial laws and the federal Bankruptcy Act also have certain different requirements with respect to the onus of proof.

Section 155 (1) (b) of Bill C-60 provides that a trustee may review a transfer between parties dealing at arm's length if it took place within one year of the date of bankruptcy and had the intent known to both parties, to impede, obstruct, delay or defraud a creditor. If the effect of the reviewable transaction was to impede, obstruct, delay or defraud the creditors or any of them, the court may make an order declaring the transfer void and restoring each party to the transfer insofar as possible to the state he was in immediately prior to the transfer. Section 155 (5).

There is a very real possibility that Sections 155 (1) and (5) could be interpreted so as to preclude the trustee from relying on the fraudulent conveyance statute of any province for the purpose of setting aside fraudulent conveyances on the ground that the Bankruptcy Act supersedes provincial legislation. These sub-sections are restricted in that they only apply to transactions which occurred within one year of the filing of the bankruptcy petition. Under most provincial fraudulent conveyance acts, transactions occurring within six years prior to the date of bankruptcy may be attacked.

RECOMMENDATION

A specific section should be included in Bill C-60 to provide that a trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to rely on provincial legislation to set aside fraudulent conveyances, fraudulent preferences and any other transactions which are invalid as against creditors under provincial law. Creditors are entitled to the maximum amount of protection available.

(e) SECURITY FOR PRE-EXISTING DEBT

Section 161 (1) of Bill C-60 introduces a completely new provision which provides that a transfer by way of a security interest is unenforceable against the trustee unless the transfer was made within thirty days after the debt was incurred, or within ten days after the property was acquired by the debtor and pursuant to an agreement entered into at the time the debt was incurred. This section prevents a creditor from taking security for a pre-existing debt if the debtor is insolvent at the date of the granting of the security.

No time limit is established within which a bankruptcy petition must be filed. Security taken many years before a bankruptcy may be set aside if the debtor was insolvent at the time such security was given and remained insolvent up to the date of bankruptcy. A transfer could be set aside if there was a bona fide delay in the execution of the security documents or if the security document was executed prior to the date the debt was incurred. It would set aside a conventional building mortgage when the mortgage is signed and registered before the money is advanced.

RECOMMENDATION

Section 161 (1) should be deleted since the provisions relating to the avoidance of fraudulent preferences are sufficient to protect creditors.

(f) VALIDITY OF ASSIGNMENTS OF BOOK DEBTS AND OTHER SECURITY INSTRUMENTS

Section 72 of the present Bankruptcy Act provides that an assignment of book debts is void as against the trustee as regards any book debts that have not been paid at the date of bankruptcy unless it is registered in accordance with provincial law. Section 166 (1) of Bill C-60 varies this and stipulates that an assignment of book debts is unenforceable unless the assignment is registered under a statute that provides for perfection of such an assignment by registration.

The term "perfection" is taken from the Uniform Commercial Code of the United States and the Personal Property Security Act of Ontario which is not yet in force. It is not applicable to most provincial statutes requiring registration of assignments of book debts.

Section 169 of Bill C-60 provides for the purposes of Sections 154 to 168 that where any acts are required by law to make a transfer effective as against third parties and when such acts are not performed within thirty days after the transfer, the transfer is deemed to have been made on the date the last act required was performed. The transfer is deemed to have been made immediately prior to the filing of the petition if every act was not performed prior to the bankruptcy petition.

A problem arises with regard to assignments of book debts. Under the laws of most provinces, registration of an assignment of book debts makes it valid as against a trustee in bankruptcy and the creditors of the assignor. However, to make an assignment of book debts effective as against subsequent assignees of the book debts or a third party demand issued by Revenue Canada it is necessary to give notice to the debtors of the assignor. In order to permit the normal business operations of the borrower most lenders taking the assignment of book debts as security for a loan do not give notice to the debtors of the assignor at the time of the granting of the assignment. Notice is given when the borrower defaults. The lender accepts the commercial risk that his assignment of book debts is not effective as against all third parties.

Similarly under the laws of the province of Ontario an unregistered conditional sale contract covering goods which are not sold for the purposes of resale will be effective as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the conditional purchaser. It will not be effective as against subsequent purchasers or mortgagees of the goods. Section 169 of Bill C-60 as drafted would deem such a conditional sale contract to have been executed immediately prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Section 166 (1) of Bill C-60 should be deleted. The present Bankruptcy Act and Bill C-60 do not require registration of debentures, chattel mortgages or conditional sale contracts. The validity of these security agreements depends on provincial law. There is no logical reason for the treating assignments of book debts any differently.

2. Section 169 should be varied by deleting the words "third parties" and inserting in their place the words "a trustee in bankruptcy of the transferor".

(g) RIGHTS OF TRUSTEE IF TRANSFER UNENFORCEABLE

Section 76 of the present Bankruptcy Act provides a trustee in bankruptcy with rights against a transferee of property of the bankrupt under a transaction that is set aside, where the transferee has sold, disposed of, realized or collected the property or any part thereof. Similar provisions have not been included in Bill C-60. Section 161 (2) of Bill C-60 does stipulate that when a transfer by way of a security interest is unenforceable, the court may direct the holder of the security interest to preserve the property for the benefit of the estate or may vest the property subject to the security interest in the estate, if such an order does not prejudice a security interest that is prior in time but lower in rank to the security interest that is unenforceable against the trustee. Neither of these alternatives is very practical and it is very difficult to determine when the second alternative would be applicable.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Subject to recommendation 2, if a transfer is unenforceable as against the trustee, the trustee should be entitled to recover the property or the value thereof or the money or proceeds therefrom from the person who acquired the property from the bankrupt or from any other person to whom the original transferee may have resold or paid over the proceeds of the property.

2. If the subsequent transferee of the property has paid or given adequate valuable consideration for the property in good faith, a trustee should not be entitled to have recourse against him but should only be entitled to have recourse against the original transferee of the property for recovery of the consideration paid or the value thereof.

3. Where the consideration payable for or upon any sale or resale of such property or any part thereof remains unsatisfied the trustee should be subrogated to the rights of the vendor to compel payment of the amount unpaid.

4. The provisions of Section 161 (2) of Bill C-60 should be deleted.

(h) AVOIDANCE OF PREFERENCES

Under Section 73 of the present Bankruptcy Act a payment to a creditor is set aside as a fraudulent preference if it was made with a view to giving such creditor a preference over other creditors. There have been many court decisions dealing with the issue as to whether or not it is necessary for the trustee to establish that there was concurrent intent on the part of the debtor to give a preference and upon the creditor to receive a preference or whether it is only necessary to prove that there was an intent on the part of the debtor to give the creditor a preference. At the present time this issue has been argued in a case before the Supreme Court of Canada and the decision has been reserved.

Sections 158 and 159 of Bill C-60 setting aside preferential transfers incorporate in their provisions the words "in the normal course of affairs". No reference is made to "intent" or "view". The term "normal course of affairs" is not defined and until there have been many court decisions interpreting it, uncertainty will prevail. It is extremely difficult to determine when the payment of a legitimate debt owing to a creditor would be other than in the normal course of affairs. Nevertheless, the payment could clearly have been made by the debtor with the intent to prefer that creditor. The drafting of a new statute gives an excellent opportunity to establish certainty with respect to the law relating to fraudulent preferences.

(i) TREATMENT OF ARM'S LENGTH CREDITORS

The present Bankruptcy Act contains the presumption that any payment made to a creditor who dealt at arm's length with the bankrupt within three months prior to the date of bankruptcy by an insolvent person is made with the intent to prefer the creditor. This presumption has generated unnecessary litigation. Many creditors who have dealt at arm's length with the debtor have been harassed by trustees relying on this presumption and have been forced to defend proceedings by the trustee to recover such payments. Section 158 (1) of Bill C-60 avoids preferential payments to a creditor who dealt at arm's length with the bankrupt if the payment was made within six months of the date of filing of the bankruptcy petition. Section 158 (2) provides that if such a payment is made within three months of the filing of the bankruptcy petition, it is deemed to be made other than in the normal course of affairs unless the contrary is proved.

(j) TREATMENT OF NON-ARM'S LENGTH CREDITORS

Section 74 of the present Bankruptcy Act sets aside preferential payments made by an insolvent person to a related creditor within one year prior to the date of bankruptcy. Bill C-60 avoids preferential transfers to non-arm's length creditors without any limitation. However, if the transfer was made more than one month and less than one year prior to the filing of a bankruptcy petition, the onus is shifted to the creditor to uphold the validity of the transfer. If the preferential transfer is made to a non-arm's length creditor within one month of the date of the bankruptcy petition, it is only valid if it is in satisfaction of a debt incurred within thirty days of the transfer. This provision will have the effect of rendering invalid almost all preferential transfers to non-arm's length creditors within one month of the date of the bankruptcy petition.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Your Committee is in agreement with the provisions of Bill C-60 which provide that preferential transfers within longer periods prior to the date of bankruptcy may be attacked by the trustee but it is not in agreement with the introduction of the new untested terms and concepts.

2. A transfer that is a preference should only be set aside if it is proven that the transfer was made with the intent of the debtor to prefer the creditor.

3. A transfer that is a preference in favour of a creditor with whom the debtor was dealing at arm's length should be invalid against the trustee where the transfer is made:

- (a) when the debtor is insolvent,
- (b) less than six months before filing of a bankruptcy petition, and
- (c) the debtor intended to give the creditor a preference.

The presumption contained in the present Bankruptcy Act that if such a transfer took place less than three months before the filing of a petition, the transfer was made by the debtor with the intent to prefer the arm's length creditor should be deleted.

4. A transfer that is a preference in favour of a creditor with whom the debtor was not at arm's length should be invalid as against the trustee where the transfer is made:

- (a) when the debtor is insolvent, and
- (b) the debtor intended to prefer the creditor.

If such a transfer took place less than twelve months before the filing of a bankruptcy petition, there should be presumption that the transfer was made by the debtor with the intent to prefer the creditor and the onus should be placed upon the creditor to rebut that presumption.

5. In addition, if the preferential transfer was made to non-arm's length creditor within one month prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition, it should only be upheld if the consideration therefor was given within thirty days prior to the date of the transfer.

LANDLORD AND TENANT

(a) EFFECT OF INSOLVENCY CLAUSES IN LEASES

Under most real estate leases the filing of an assignment in bankruptcy or a proposal under the Bankruptcy Act by the tenant gives the landlord the right to terminate the lease. This may produce a very unjust benefit for the landlord, whose rent has been paid in full, but wishes to cancel the lease because he can relet the premises at a higher price. Similarly, in many leases of chattels, the filing of a proposal under the Bankruptcy Act gives the lessor the right to terminate the lease.

Section 183 of Bill C-60 gives the trustee in bankruptcy of the tenant the right to occupy the premises leased by the bankrupt for three months, to elect to retain the lease for the balance of its term and/or to assign the lease. It is intended although not specifically stated that the trustee in bankruptcy should be entitled to exercise these powers notwithstanding a term in the lease giving the landlord the right to terminate the lease upon the bankruptcy of the tenant.

Similar provisions were included in the Bankruptcy Act of 1919. They were deleted from the Act when they were held to be ultra vires of the legislative power of the Dominion Parliament in the case of re Stober; Ex parte Mark Workman Invt. Corp. (1923) 4 C.B.R. 34 a decision of a judge of the Superior Court of Quebec.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The rights given to a trustee in bankruptcy of a tenant by Section 183 of Bill C-60 are desirable but that section should specifically state that such rights may be exercised by a trustee notwithstanding any term or stipulation in the lease to the contrary.

2. Bill C-60 should include a provision that a debtor who has filed a commercial arrangement shall be entitled to retain the leased premises for the balance of the unexpired term of the lease notwithstanding any provision in the lease which gives the lessor the right to terminate it as a result of the filing of a commercial arrangement. Of course, the debtor must observe the other terms and conditions of the lease.

3. A similar provision should apply to leases of chattels.

(b) PREFERRED CLAIM OF LANDLORD

Section 107 of the present Bankruptcy Act allows a landlord to rank as a preferred claim for arrears of rent for a period of three months immediately preceding the date of the bankruptcy and for three months accelerated rent. A landlord is also entitled to an unsecured claim for any additional rent in arrears. In most provinces the landlord is not entitled to any additional claim for rent owing for the period after the date of bankruptcy. The allowance for accelerated rent has been considered to be compensation to the landlord for the termination of his lease as a result of the bankruptcy of the tenant.

Bill C-60 continues to allow a landlord to rank as a preferred creditor for three months arrears of rent but abolishes his right to any accelerated rent as a preferred claim. Instead the landlord is allowed an unsecured claim for damages arising out of disclaimer of a lease by a trustee after deducting any deposit, accelerated rent and rent paid in advance by the tenant. Section 183(13). This provision will create an administrative problem for a trustee. It will be very difficult for the proper amount of such a claim to be determined. What will be the amount of the claim if the trustee disclaims a long term lease and the landlord re-lets the premises for a shorter term at a lower rent? Who will be able to properly assess the rent which the landlord may receive for the period covered by the remainder of the term of the original lease?

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Section 183(13) which gives a landlord an unsecured claim for damages as a result of the disclaimer of the lease by the trustee should be deleted.

2. The right of a landlord to a preferred claim for three months accelerated rent should be continued.

3. Any payment made by the trustee on account of occupation rent should be credited against the claim of the landlord for accelerated rent.

4. A landlord should not be entitled to rank as a secured creditor for rent in the event of the bankruptcy of a tenant. This is the law in certain of the provinces at the present time. It is desirable to have uniformity in respect of this matter throughout the country.

INQUIRIES BY THE ADMINISTRATOR

The Bill provides for an extensive inquiry to be carried out by the administrator either on his own initiative or at the request of the Superintendent of Bankruptcy. The consequences of this examination which is based on hindsight and a hypothesis of the financial circumstances at a time prior to the bankruptcy could have a serious effect on the bankrupt and/or his agents.

RECOMMENDATION

We recommend that the Bill be amended to provide for input into the investigation by the administrator by interested parties such as creditors, inspectors and the Trustee; and that prior to the administrator's report being filed a summary procedure be established for a reply to the report by the Trustee, the bankrupt and/or his agents.

OBLIGATIONS IMPOSED UPON OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS

(a) LIABILITY FOR DEFICIENCY IN BANKRUPT ESTATE

Section 176 (1) of Bill C-60 provides that an agent is liable for any deficiency in an estate if the agent in his own interest or in the interest in someone related to him caused the bankrupt corporation when insolvent:

- (i) to carry on business or to enter into a transaction which could not reasonably be considered to be in the interest of the bankrupt;
- (ii) to refrain from carrying on business or from entering into a transaction that at the time would have reasonably been considered to be in the interest of the bankrupt corporation;
- (iii) to continue a business by resorting to sales below cost, ruinous borrowings, or similar acts in circumstances where it was not reasonable to expect that bankruptcy could be prevented, or
- (iv) to conduct a business with a view to impeding, defrauding, obstructing or delaying the creditors of the corporation generally.

An agent is defined in Bill C-60 to include an officer or director of a corporation, the controlling shareholder of a corporation or a person who performed the functions of an officer of a corporation. Section 2. An agent is not liable if at a later time he can prove the debtor was insolvent, the debtor was able to pay his debts and the debtor was paying his debts generally as they become due. Section 176 (3). The liability of the agent is limited to the amount of the loss or damage caused to the estate. Section 178. These sections are new and impose civil liability on persons who are abusing the corporate veil to their own advantage and to the detriment of the creditors of the company. The provisions of Section 176 are applicable if the agent for his own advantage caused the corporation to do a legal act which was not in the best interests of the corporation. The term "in his own interest" is imprecise. In many cases an agent will also be a shareholder of the corporation and an attempt to restore the corporation to financial health is always in the interest of a shareholder. Any step taken by a shareholder to avoid bankruptcy of the corporation could be interpreted to be in the interest of that person. Directors may be reluctant to attempt to rejuvenate a failing corporation if at a later time they could be held responsible for the failure of their efforts.

The term "agent" may also include a receiver or manager appointed by the court or by a creditor to carry on the business of the company. If such a person acts in his own personal interest, he should be subject to the same sanctions as an officer or director of the company. He should not be subject to such sanctions if he acts solely in the interests of the corporation. It has been suggested that the words "someone related to him" could be interpreted as meaning the company for which he is acting as receiver or manager. It is clear that it is not the intention of the section to impose an obligation on a receiver and manager who acts in good faith in what he considers the best interests of the corporation.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The phrase "in his own interest" should be clarified in order to establish that it does not include any benefit enjoyed by the agent and others in their capacity as shareholders of the company.

2. The words "other than the corporation" should be inserted after the words "or the interest of someone related to him" in order to clarify the fact that the person related to the agent must be someone other than the corporation.

3. Sub-sections 1(a), (b), (c) and (d) of Section 176 should use similar language. We would recommend that Section 176 (1)(a) read as follows:

"to carry on business in a manner that, at the time, would not have reasonably been considered to be in the interests of the person."

Sub-section (b) would read:

"to enter into a transaction that, at the time of the transaction, would not have reasonably been considered to be in the interests of the person."

Sub-section (c) would read as follows:

"to refrain from carrying on business in a manner that, at the time, would reasonably be considered to be in the interests of the person."

Sub-section (d) would remain the same.

(b) IMPOSING THE STATUS OF A BANKRUPT

At the present time, an officer or director of a bankrupt company is only subject to censure if a criminal offence or an offence under the Bankruptcy Act can be proven. An officer or director of a bankrupt company may set up a similar business as the business carried on by the bankrupt corporation using information and contacts acquired while running the bankrupt corporation. On the other hand, an undischarged individual bankrupt is guilty of an offence under Section 170 of the present Bankruptcy Act if he carries on a business without disclosing to each person he deals with that he is an undischarged bankrupt. He is also guilty of an offence if he obtains credit, other than the supply of necessities, for a total of more than five hundred dollars ($500.00) without disclosing he is an undischarged bankrupt. No civil disability is placed on contracts between bankrupt and third parties.

Bill C-60 attempts to rectify the present inequities between the restrictions imposed upon an individual who personally goes bankrupt and the lack of restrictions imposed upon officers and directors of bankrupt corporations. It provides that an agent of a corporation may be deemed a bankrupt for the purposes of Sections 210 to 217 and Section 359 if he is found by the court to be primarily responsible for the bankruptcy or if he substantially aggravated the insolvency or if any of the circumstances under Section 200 are proven. An agent of a corporation who is found guilty of culpable conduct is punished by being subject to the same restrictions as an individual who has gone bankrupt. Such an order will be effective for five years from the date of the bankruptcy of the corporation. Section 221 (3)(c).

These sections create an absurd situation. A person who is solvent and able to pay his debts in full is declared to have the status of a bankrupt. They are also very rigid in their nature. The court is not given any discretion in making the order declaring the agent to have the status of a bankrupt.

No variation in the length of time during which the deemed bankrupt's status is imposed is permitted. No flexibility in the sanctions imposed is allowed. In addition, the restrictions imposed upon undischarged bankrupts generally are very cumbersome. They impose penalties on third parties dealing with a bankrupt. For example, a person extending credit to a bankrupt directly or indirectly for the purpose of assisting him in carrying on his business cannot enforce repayment of the debt unless the lender can prove he extended such credit in good faith. Section 211. Failure to inquire whether the other party to the agreement is a bankrupt is not proof of bad faith. Section 213. An unfair and unnecessary burden is imposed on credit grantors. An undischarged bankrupt could receive credit and subsequently refuse to repay the debt by alleging that the lender was aware of the fact that he was an undischarged bankrupt when the debt was incurred. This type of abuse of the Bankruptcy Act should not be permitted. Restrictions created by the status of a bankrupt should only be imposed upon the bankrupt himself and should not derogate from the rights of third parties.

The most common complaint concerning bankruptcy is that a person may go bankrupt but still carry on the same business. This may be accomplished by the use of a corporation or by a bankrupt working for his wife, under the present law.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The concept of deeming an officer or director of a bankrupt corporation to be a bankrupt should be deleted.
2. An officer or director of a bankrupt corporation who has been guilty of culpable conduct with respect to the affairs of the bankrupt corporation should have sanctions imposed upon him similar to those sanctions which may be imposed on an individual bankrupt who is guilty of improper conduct.
3. The sanctions imposed upon a bankrupt should not derogate or affect the rights of third parties.
4. The complicated civil sanctions imposed upon an undischarged bankrupt as set out in Sections 210, 211, 212, 213 and 214 of Bill C-60 should be deleted.
5. An undischarged bankrupt and an agent for a bankrupt corporation should be prohibited from directly or indirectly carrying on the same or similar business to that carried on by the bankrupt for a period of two years from the date of bankruptcy. This prohibition would be automatically imposed upon the making of the bankruptcy order without the necessity of an investigation by the administrator. The court should have the power to reduce the period of prohibition or to remove that prohibition if the conduct of the bankrupt or agent was not subject to censure. The court should also have the power to extend the period of prohibition.
6. If a court found that the conduct of a bankrupt or the conduct of an agent of a bankrupt corporation was subject to censure, the following restrictions may be imposed by the court for such period of time as the court may determine:
 - (a) He shall not be entitled to act as an officer, director or agent of a corporation;
 - (b) He shall be prohibited from directly or indirectly managing or carrying on any type of business.Such an application could be brought by the administrator, the trustee or a creditor.
7. An individual bankrupt should be required to disclose the fact that he is subject to an order of the court vesting in the trustee the whole or part of his income or property to:
 - (a) all persons with whom he incurs debts in the course of carrying on a trade or business, and
 - (b) all persons from whom he obtains credit to the extent of $500.00 or more.
8. A bankrupt or agent of a corporation who fails to follow these restrictions should be guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction.

MEETINGS OF CREDITORS

Section 87 of the Bankruptcy Act provides that a creditor is entitled to vote at any meeting of creditors if he has deposited with the trustee a proof of claim at any time prior to the time appointed for the meeting. The Bill provides that in order to vote at a first meeting of creditors a creditor must file a proof of claim "at least one clear day before the date fixed for the meeting".

The Bankruptcy Act provides that voting at a meeting of creditors be calculated as follows:

- (a) One vote for every claim of over twenty-five dollars and not exceeding two hundred dollars;
- (b) Two votes for every claim of over two hundred dollars and not exceeding five hundred dollars;
- (c) Three votes for every claim of over five hundred dollars and not exceeding one thousand dollars;
- (d) Three votes for every claim of one thousand dollars and one additional vote for each additional one thousand dollars or fraction thereof.

The Bill provides that voting at a meeting of creditors will be calculated on the basis of one vote for every claim of $1,000 or less and one additional vote for each additional $1,000 or part thereof.

Section 94(4) of the Bankruptcy Act provides for the creditors or the inspectors to fill any vacancy on the board of inspectors. The Bill provides that the only mechanism for filling a vacancy on the board of inspectors is through a meeting of creditors.

RECOMMENDATION

1. We are of the opinion that the requirement to file a proof of claim "at least one clear day before the date fixed for the meeting" may be an onerous burden placed on the creditors and accordingly recommend that the creditor should be entitled to vote provided he files a claim up to the time called for the meeting and at the place the meeting is held. This method which is provided in the present Bankruptcy Act has not placed any undue hardships on the creditors and on the chairman of the meeting.

2. We recommend that voting be based on the actual dollar value of the claim allowed by the chairman of the meeting for purposes of voting.

3. We are of the opinion that the filling of a vacancy on the board of inspectors by a meeting of creditors is a costly and unnecessary expense to the bankrupt estate and recommend that the present practice continue whereby a vacancy on a board of inspectors can be filled by a meeting of inspectors.

BOARD OF INSPECTORS

Bill C-60 continues the practice of the present Bankruptcy Act which provides that a meeting of creditors 5 representatives from the trade and service creditors may be elected to the board of inspectors. Bill C-60, however, goes further and provides that in addition the Superintendent may appoint an inspector where Her Majesty in right of Canada has filed a claim which has not been disallowed and where Her Majesty in right of a province has filed a claim which has not been disallowed. In addition, the Superintendent may appoint a Supervisor of an estate who shall exercise surveillance over the administration of the estate by the Trustee.

Section 294(4) provides that at every meeting of inspectors a chairman be appointed.

Section 295(2) requires a meeting of creditors to be called to fill vacancies on the board of inspectors.

RECOMMENDATION

1. We are of the opinion that the maximum number of inspectors in an estate should be 5 and that representatives of the Crown must be elected by the creditors to be an inspector. Also, the position of Supervisor should be eliminated and in its stead the Trustee should be required to send notices of all meetings of inspectors to the Bankruptcy Administrator, who may designate a person to attend such meetings of inspectors as he deems necessary.

2. In our opinion, the present provision where a Trustee is a chairman of inspector meetings works well and should be continued.

3. We are of the opinion that implementation of the provision of Section 295(2) will result in an unnecessary expense and vacancies should be filled by the surviving inspectors on any estate.

4. In addition to the powers of inspectors, we recommend that the Trustee must present annually for approval to the inspectors a statement of receipts and disbursements on his administration, which statement or a summary thereof when approved should be forwarded for information purposes to all known creditors in a file.

ORDER OF PRIORITY

The present Bankruptcy Act provides for claims of the Crown to be paid in priority to unsecured creditors. It is generally felt that this is the reason for creditor apathy in the administration of a bankrupt estate. Bill C-60 removes the preferred position of claims of the Crown save and except for the right of the Crown to monies held in trust.

Section 254(1)(i)(vi) of Bill C-60 defers all claims for interest in excess of five per cent which may be owing prior to the date of bankruptcy. Section 257(2) requires the trustee to review any account which was settled between the debtor and the creditor within three years prior to the date of the bankruptcy to determine if interest at a rate in excess of five per cent has been charged. This provision is most unrealistic and will create an administrative nightmare. Why is the rate of five per cent chosen when the rate of interest presently charged by the Bank of Canada is nine and one half per cent per annum? Section 249(2) of Bill C-60 already gives the trustee the right to disallow all or part of a claim if the cost of money borrowed by the debtor is excessive or the terms of the transaction are harsh or unconscionable.

Section 254(1)(j) which is the last subsection in the order of priority provides for the payment of interest at the rate of five per cent from the date of the bankruptcy or the date of the filing of a proposal. Your committee is of the opinion that the payment of such interest to ordinary creditors should have priority over the payment of the claims set out in Subsection 254(1)(i) such as a claim arising from a gift, Subsection 254(1)(i)(iii). It is very doubtful as to whether the type of claims set out in Subsection 254(1)(i) should even rank as claims.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Your Committee concurs with the removal of the preferred position of claims of the Crown.

2. Subsections 254(1)(i)(vi), 257(2), 257(3), and 257(4) should be deleted.

3. Subsection 254(1)(j) which provides for payment of interest after the date of bankruptcy should have priority over Subsection 254(1)(i). The order of priority of the subsections should be reversed.

DISCHARGED OF DEBTS

One of the purposes of the Bankruptcy Act is to provide an insolvent person with relief from the burden of his debts. Under Section 148 of the Bankruptcy Act, once discharged a bankrupt is released from the following debts:

- (a) any fine or penalty imposed by a court or any debt arising out of a recognizance or bail bond;
- (b) any debt or liability for alimony;
- (c) any debt or liability under a maintenance or affiliation order or under an agreement for maintenance and support of a spouse or child living apart from the bankrupt;
- (d) any debt or liability arising out of fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity;
- (e) any debt or liability for obtaining property by false pretences or fraudulent misrepresentation;
- (f) liability for the dividend that a creditor would have been entitled to receive on any provable claim not disclosed to the Trustee, unless such creditor had notice or knowledge of the bankruptcy and failed to take reasonable action to prove his claim; or
- (g) any debt or liability for goods supplied as necessities of life and the court may make such order for payment thereof as it deems just or expedient.

Section 233 of Bill C-60 provides that the bankrupt is not released from the following debts:

- (a) a fine or penalty imposed by a Court;
- (b) a debt arising out of a recognizance or bail bond;
- (c) a liability to pay maintenance and support in respect of another person for a period subsequent to the date of bankruptcy or the filing of a proposal.

Your committee does not support the provisions of Bill C-60 which have the effect of releasing a bankrupt from debts for fraud or necessities of life. The release of a bankrupt from debts incurred as a result of fraud could lead to very serious abuse. The release of a bankrupt from debts for necessities of life might prevent a person from obtaining credit for such necessities in a time of need.

Your committee considers the provisions of the present Bankruptcy Act with relation to those debts which are not discharged by a bankruptcy satisfactory. However, a bankrupt who receives his discharge is left in the uncertain position of being unaware of whether or not a creditor is intending to allege that a particular debt is not discharged by the bankruptcy.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The present provisions of the Bankruptcy Act should be retained subject to the removal of the anomaly that only debts for goods supplied as necessities of life are not discharged. All debts incurred for goods supplied or services rendered for necessities of life should not be discharged.

2. If a creditor seeks to establish that the debt owing to him by the bankrupt is not discharged by the bankruptcy he should be required to file a notice of opposition to the discharge of the bankrupt. The failure to file such a notice shall have the effect that such a debt and all other debts of the bankrupt outstanding at the date of the bankruptcy shall be discharged with the exception of those debts listed in Section 233 of Bill C-60. Upon the filing of such a notice of opposition the court should direct a trial of an issue before the Registrar or any judge or officer of any of the courts of the province in order to determine whether or not the particular debt is discharged by the bankruptcy. The order of discharge should set out any debts for necessities or incurred as a result of fraud which are not discharged.

STOCKBROKERS

The present Bankruptcy Act does not contain provisions which apply specifically to stockbrokers or to the administration of the estates of bankrupt stockbrokers. However, such bankruptcies have given rise to many unique and difficult problems. Three situations generate most of these problems:

- (a) Property held in safekeeping or "segregation".

This is property of the client which is left in the possession of the stockbroker for the convenience of both the client and the stockbroker. It is normally, but not always, identified specifically to one client and the relationship is one of bailment or trust.

- (b) Property in transit.

A stockbroker may be indebted to his customer with respect to funds provided for the purchase of securities or resulting from the sale of securities or the stockbroker may have received securities which are to be sold or which have just been purchased. Such funds or securities are normally referred to as "property in transit".

- (c) Property provided to the stockbroker to secure indebtedness.

Some clients borrow money from stockbrokers for security transactions and pledge securities as collateral security therefor. These pledged securities are put into transferrable form by the client. The stockbroker will borrow funds from a bank and pledge these securities as security for such loans. There is no allocation with respect to an individual client when the securities are pledged to a bank.

At the time of a bankruptcy, the bank will sell the most marketable securities held by it. These may be securities of clients which are in default to the broker, but in many cases they are securities of clients who are not in default. When the trustee takes possession, he is often faced with books of account which do not reflect the current status of transactions and deliveries, improper realization and, at times, improper segregation or misuse of securities in safekeeping. Although the property in safekeeping is technically not part of the estate of the bankrupt stockbroker, the trustee is reluctant to return securities to clients until he is certain that they are solely the property of that client. This has caused trustees to seek court approval before dealing with the securities. The result has been substantial time delays and significant expense. This problem is compounded by the volatile nature of the securities market and the potential damages caused by such delays. In most cases when a trustee has brought such an application to the court, the equitable doctrine of tracing has been applied.

A second area of difficulty arises because some clients have had their securities sold by the bank while others have not. The courts have attempted to deal with this problem in several ways. One method has been to decide that tracing is not applicable to securities which have been endorsed into transferrable form and pledged to a financial institution. The effect of this has been to put all of those clients on an equal footing with one another and with the creditors of the stockbroker. The assets of the firm, including any pledged securities which have been returned, are divided equally among such clients and creditors. Another method has been to adopt the concept of "sharing the burden of the loss". In that case, the proceeds of the returned securities are allocated among all the clients having pledged securities.

Bill C-60 contains specific provisions relating only to the bankruptcy of a stockbroker. The Bill attempts to solve the problems created by the application of the doctrine of tracing and by the sale of pledged securities by means of the simple expedient of vesting all assets of clients held by the stockbroker in the trustee. A separate fund is established which consists of all money and securities in the possession of the stockbroker at the date of the bankruptcy. Such securities and moneys are treated in the same manner, although they may be held for numerous different purposes and under various differing legal relationships. Clients of the stockbrokers who have claims against the stockbroker for the delivery of securities or the payment of money will have a first claim against the fund after payment of administrative costs. Section 310. The Bill differentiates between normal clients, (which the Bill refers to as "customers"), members of the firm who were trading in securities, ("related customers"), clients who had contributed to the bankruptcy ("deferred customers"), and trade creditors. The Bill creates an order of priorities for each of these groups against the pool of money and securities held by the stockbroker, with the normal customers having first priority and the deferred customers last.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Where securities are in safekeeping or "segregation", they should not be treated as assets of the stockbroker. Those securities should be returned to the clients as quickly and as inexpensively as possible. In most cases there is little difficulty in determining which securities are in safekeeping and to whom they belong.

This recommendation is not intended to continue the cumbersome concepts of tracing. The rights of the trustee to return securities under these circumstances should be strictly limited to securities in "safekeeping" which should be defined in the Bill. Securities in transit should not fall within this definition.

2. Securities belonging to related or deferred customers should vest in the trustee in bankruptcy for the benefit first of customers whose securities are lost or misplaced or whose pledged securities have been sold, and subsequently in the order of priorities provided in the Bill.

3. The following provision should become applicable if a compensation or contingency fund established by the securities industry is in existence and participates in a bankruptcy. Where such a contingency fund is in existence and participates in a bankruptcy, its involvement is normally either:

- (i) to guarantee the bank indebtedness or the stockbroker so that the bank will not realize on its security and there will not be a shortfall, or
- (ii) to reimburse individual customers with respect to any shortfall resulting from the sale of pledged securities or from any loss or misappropriation of securities or money.

Customers with claims for securities in transit should be treated in the same fashion as customers whose securities were delivered to the stockbroker to secure the indebtedness of the customer to the stockbroker. All such customers should share equally in the money and securities in the possession of the trustee at the date of bankruptcy save and except the securities held by the stockbroker in safekeeping which should be returned to the customer by the trustee as soon as possible after the bankruptcy has occurred. The concept of a special customers' fund should be maintained to give the customer whose securities were not in safekeeping the greatest possible protection. This would result in a general sharing of the burden of the loss among such customers and simplify administrative problems.

There are a number of problems to this approach. The first of these is to determine what kind of contingency fund should permit the use of this provision. Provincial securities legislation refer to compensation funds or contingency trust funds required in respect of registrants under such legislation. If such a fund is satisfactory for the purposes of that legislation, it should be considered to qualify for the purposes of the Bankruptcy Act.

A second difficulty is the determination by the trustee in Bankruptcy of when the contingency fund has become committed to involvement in a bankruptcy. Such a fund should be required to do some overt act to establish its involvement. Once it becomes involved, the claims of all customers, other than related and deferred customers, should be satisfied by the assets of the stockbroker and the fund. The securities in safekeeping would be returned to the customers immediately. Any deficiencies arising with respect to securities in transit, proceeds of pledged securities or securities which have been lost, misappropriated or misplaced should be made up by the contingency funds. Thus, the customers would be completely protected.

The specific commitment that a trustee in bankruptcy would require from the fund would be for it to either guarantee all bank indebtedness or to undertake that all customers other than related or deferred customers were fully compensated at the conclusion of the bankruptcy for any loss suffered as a result of the bankruptcy.

4. If no contingency or compensation fund was in existence or if such fund could not or did not participate, the following provisions would apply:

- (a) All securities in safekeeping would be returned to the customers.
- (b) Customers who are able to trace their securities using tracing rules specifically set out in the Bill would be entitled to receive all the securities which they could trace. A codification of the rules relating to tracing would alleviate the necessity of the trustee in bankruptcy spending time and money to obtain court approval with respect to all but the most unusual situations. This would result in a more rapid and less expensive resolution of stockbroker bankruptcies.

The rules of tracing should be based on the following principles:

- (i) Securities which are "in transit" may be claimed where they can be identified or traced to the customer.
- (ii) Where the securities of a particular type on hand equal or exceed the claims of customers, other than related and deferred customers, for securities of that type, the securities would be returned.
- (iii) Where the securities of a particular type on hand are less than the claims of customers, other than related and deferred customers, for securities of that type, a pro rata distribution of the securities on hand would be made.
- (c) All other moneys and securities of all customers, including related and deferred customers and the stockbroker would be pooled and either liquidated or used in specie at their values as at the date of the bankruptcy. The distribution of the proceeds and/or the securities would be made to all customers, other than related and deferred customers, on a pro rata basis.

INSURANCE

Part III of the Winding Up Act of Canada applies to the liquidation of insolvent insurance companies. The present Bankruptcy Act specifically excludes insurance companies from the definition of corporations to which the Bankruptcy Act applies. Section 2(f). Section 162 of the Winding Up Act provides that claims against an insolvent insurance company shall be paid in the following order of priority:

- (a) costs of liquidation
- (b) claims of preferred creditors
- (c) if no reinsurance is effected, claims under policies and claims for the value of policies rateably
- (d) if there is reinsurance, first claims under policies, secondly claims for the cost of reinsurance.

Bill C-60 contains Part VIII, a separate part, which is only applicable to insolvent insurance companies. It permits the federal or a provincial superintendent of insurance to act as a trustee of a bankrupt insurance company. A provincial superintendent of insurance may act as trustee in respect of a company incorporated pursuant to an Act of a provincial legislature if the company is not registered under the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act. The federal superintendent of insurance may act as trustee of all other insurance companies carrying on business in Canada. Different sections apply to the distribution of assets of a life insurance company and insurance companies which are other than life insurance companies (non-life insurance companies) Section 340(1) and 341 (1). Under Bill C-60 the assets of a bankrupt life insurance company shall be applied in the following order or priority:

- (a) debts incurred by an interim receiver or a trustee while carrying on the business of the debtor
- (b) the costs of administration
- (c) the following claims rateably:
 - (i) claims under policies
 - (ii) claims for value of policies
 - (iii) claims for proceeds of settlements left on deposit
- (d) claims of all other creditors in order of priority of Section 254(1).

The assets of a bankrupt non-life insurance company are distributed differently. After similar provision for the payment of business debts incurred by a trustee or an interim receiver and the costs of administration, the following is the order of priority:

- (a) claims arising out of the liability of the insurance (third party liability claims)
- (b) other types of claims under a policy
- (c) claims for the value of subsisting policies
- (d) claims of all other creditors in order of priority of Section 254(1).

Your Committee is of the opinion that in the case of non-life insurance companies third party liability claims should not be paid in priority to other claims arising under a policy such as a fire loss claim. The policy holder who has suffered a fire loss deserves the same protection as a policy holder involved in a motor vehicle accident.

A concern has been expressed that the bankruptcy of an insurance company could be caused by a catastrophic loss to one large insured. With the provision that all claimants are paid rateably the small claimants would be required to absorb the loss which should have been reinsured. To relieve the small claimants of this burden, it has been suggested that third party liability claims against non-life insurance companies should be subject to a limit of $50,000 in any one occurrence.

Your Committee is of the opinion that imposing a maximum limit on the amount of a third party liability claim payable out of the assets of a non-life insurance company places too great a hardship on the policy holder who expected to be fully protected. Even if his claim is allowed in full he might suffer a loss if the assets are not sufficient to pay all the claims in full. To impose upon him an additional loss by virtue of the fact that only a third party claim up to $50,000 would be allowed priority seems unjust and inequitable.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. With respect to a non-life insurance company, third party liability claims should rank rateably with other types of claims under a policy. This maintains the law as it presently exists under the Winding Up Act.

2. Claims for the value of subsisting policies should be subordinated to claims arising under a policy issued by a non-life insurance company.

RECEIVERSHIPS

Many sophisticated lenders require the borrower to issue a debenture as security for the repayment of the loan. Most debentures contain a floating charge on all the property, assets and undertaking of the borrower. The most effective way of enforcing this type of security is the appointment of a receiver and manager who takes possession of all the assets of the debtor and proceeds to realize upon them to satisfy the debt owing to the debenture holder. Similar security is available in the Province of Quebec under the Special Corporate Powers Act using a trust deed which is enforced by the appointment of an agent. Such a person comes within the definition of receiver in Section 342 of Bill C-60.

In the present Bankruptcy Act there are no provisions specifically relating to receiverships. The general law relating to secured creditors is applicable. It permits a secured creditor to proceed with the realization of the assets of the debtor unless the trustee intervenes and obtains a court order staying proceedings by the secured creditor. A common complaint by an ordinary creditor is that he is unable to obtain information about the receivership and the disposition of the assets of the debtor. It is most important that an equitable balance should be maintained between the right of a secured creditor to have his indebtedness repaid within a reasonable time in the event of default by the debtor and the rights of the trustee and the creditors to obtain the maximum amount from the sale of the assets of the debtor.

Bill C-60 attempts to solve these problems by making all receiverships subject to the order of the court (Section 343 and 344). These sections are applicable whether or not the receiver was appointed by an order of the court. The powers granted to the court are extremely broad and include the power to abrogate or modify the terms of the original security agreement. Section 343 (3). The court may make any order it thinks fit. Section 344. No restrictions or guidelines are imposed upon the discretion of the court.

Your Committee is of the opinion that the provisions of Sections 343 and 344 are unduly restrictive with respect to the rights of secured creditors to enforce the security held by them in accordance with its terms. We are in agreement with the provisions which improve the right of a trustee or a creditor to obtain information from a receiver.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The Bill should stipulate a standard of conduct which a secured creditor or a receiver is required to adopt in realizing on security and out of which he cannot contract. We would recommend that the secured creditor or receiver should be required to act in a commercially reasonable manner with respect to matters relating to realizing upon the property of the debtor. If a secured creditor or receiver deviates from such a standard he would be liable to the trustee for any damages suffered.

2. The provisions of Section 242(1) of Bill C-60 which provide the trustee with the right to apply to the court for an order postponing realization by a secured creditor should also be applicable to realization by a receiver.

3. Sections 343 and 344 of Bill C-60 should be deleted.

4. The court should have the power to tax the remuneration and the expenses of the receiver and to order the receiver to pay to the trustee any surplus funds realized from the assets of the debtor.

COURTS

(a) REGISTRAR IN BANKRUPTCY

Bill C-60 continues the present practice of giving the Supreme or Superior Court of the province or territory where the bankruptcy occurs the right to adjudicate on bankruptcy matters. It also gives the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs with the concurrence of the Minister of Justice the power to authorize a judge of a county court to exercise any or all of the powers of the Supreme or Superior Court in bankruptcy matters.

The position of registrar in bankruptcy has been abolished and matters previously decided by the registrar will be heard by officers and judges of the trial division of the Supreme or Superior Court of the province and by the bankruptcy administrator. As a result, the adjudication on bankruptcy matters will be delayed because in most cases the regular civil court process takes longer to determine an issue than the length of time taken by the registrar under the present system. At the present time the registrar in bankruptcy gives precedence to urgent bankruptcy matters, such as the appointment of an interim receiver and the making of a receiving order when a petition in bankruptcy is not disputed. It is unlikely that the officers and judges of the Supreme or Superior Court hearing all types of civil matters will be able to give these bankruptcy matters the same precedence.

Appeals from the disallowance of claims by the trustee will be heard by the regular civil trial division of the courts. This will delay the winding up of estates and the payment of final dividends because in most cases the length of time for a civil matter to come to trial is much longer than the length of time taken by the registrar to decide cases involving the disallowance of claims. The usual civil procedure for hearing appeals from disallowance of claims is more complicated and elaborate than the procedure followed in most instances by the registrar. This will also delay the final adjudication and increase the legal costs involved in the proceedings.

Judicial matters, such as determining the amount of the remuneration of the trustee and the solicitor have been delegated to the bankruptcy administrator who most likely will not have a legal background or judicial training. The present system using the registrar in bankruptcy to decide minor judicial matters is working efficiently and economically. No valid reason has been given for the abolishment of the present system which uses registrars in bankruptcy. It is most unlikely that the provincial authorities administering justice will give priority to bankruptcy matters.

The registrar under the present Bankruptcy Act is appointed by the Chief Justice of the province and has independent status subject only to an appeal from his decision. At the present time there is no statutory requirement that the office of registrar must be filled by a lawyer but this has been the practice in most provinces.

Under Bill C-60 the bankruptcy administrator will be appointed by the Superintendent of Bankruptcy and will be subject to the control and general direction of the Superintendent. Section 12 (b). This will prevent the administrator from appearing to have an independent status when he is required to adjudicate upon controversial matters.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The office of the registrar in bankruptcy should be retained. The registrar should continue to perform functions similar to those being performed at the present time, such as:

- (a) adjudicating on unopposed matters;
- (b) the appointment of an interim receiver;
- (c) ruling on disallowance of claims;
- (d) setting the remuneration of the trustee, interim receiver and accountant;
- (e) taxation of the costs of realization of a secured creditor including the costs of a receiver;
- (f) taxation of solicitors' accounts;
- (g) hearing matters relating to practise and procedure;
- (h) hearing trials of issues referred to him by a judge of the Supreme or Superior Court;
- (i) settling and signing orders and judgments.

2. The office of the registrar should maintain its traditional independence and should be free from outside direction and control.

3. The office of registrar should only be filled by a lawyer.

(b) DESIGNATION OF A BANKRUPTCY JUDGE

Section 155 (1) of the present Bankruptcy Act is omitted from Bill C-60. It provides that the Chief Justice of a province may nominate one or more judges of the Supreme or Superior Court to exercise the judicial powers and jurisdiction conferred by the Bankruptcy Act. In the provinces with the largest number of bankruptcies, Ontario and Quebec, specific judges have been designated to hear bankruptcy matters. This has resulted in bankruptcy matters being set down for a hearing by these judges in priority to regular civil matters. This is very important since many bankruptcy matters such as a hearing of a disputed involuntary petition require urgent adjudication and should not be delayed until adjudicated upon in the normal civil process. In addition, the judges designated to hear bankruptcy matters have developed a familiarity or expertise in deciding bankruptcy matters.

RECOMMENDATION

The present system whereby the Chief Justice of a province may designate specific judges to hear bankruptcy matters should be continued.

(c) POWERS OF THE COURT

(i) to Discharge the Bankrupt

Under the present Bankruptcy Act, every bankrupt must apply to the court for his discharge. Notice of the application for discharge is given to each creditor who has filed a claim with the trustee. The creditor has the right to attend in court and oppose the discharge. This procedure is a serious waste of time and effort in the majority of cases where there is no opposition to the discharge.

Bill C-60 attempts to solve the problem by providing that an individual ceases to be a bankrupt after ninety days elapses from the date of bankruptcy if the administrator has not filed a caveat. Section 221 (1). The right to make the initial determination of whether a bankrupt is entitled to be discharged from bankruptcy has been transferred from the court to the administrator.

No allowance is made for a trustee or a creditor to oppose the bankrupt's discharge. If the bankrupt is discharged from bankruptcy the court does not have the power to order him to pay a portion of his earnings to the trustee for distribution among his creditors or to vest in the trustee property acquired by the bankrupt after the date of his bankruptcy.

Under Bill C-60 the bankrupt is protected because he has the right to appeal to the court from a decision of the administrator to refuse to grant the bankrupt a discharge. No similar right of appeal from the administrator's decision is given to the trustee or to a creditor.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Bill C-60 provides that upon his discharge, the bankrupt is entitled to a certificate of non-responsibility. The more accurate description of the procedure in our view would be achieved by the use of the term "discharge" as in the present Bankruptcy Act.

2. The ninety day period provided in Bill C-60 for the filing of a caveat by the administrator is too short a period of time in our view. If a notice of opposition has not been filed within six months after the date of the bankruptcy a certificate of discharge should be issued without an order of the court.

3. The creditors and the trustee in bankruptcy should be given the right to oppose the discharge of the bankrupt along with the bankruptcy administrator.

4. If a notice of opposition is filed, the trustee must apply for a date for the hearing of the bankrupt's application for discharge and notice of the date of hearing must be given to the person filing the notice of opposition and to the bankrupt.

5. Each creditor and the administrator would be given thirty days' notice by the trustee of the fact that the bankrupt would be entitled to a certificate of discharge automatically unless a notice of opposition was filed.

6. The court upon an application for discharge could:

- (a) suspend the granting of the certificate of discharge for any period of time up to a maximum of five years;
- (b) order the bankrupt to pay a portion of his future earnings to the trustee for distribution among his creditors, provided that the amount to be paid shall leave the bankrupt with earnings not less than the amount of the earnings which are exempt from seizure under provincial law.

(c) POWERS OF THE COURT

- (ii) To Authorize an Advance to the Trustee or Solicitor on Account of his Remuneration

Section 13(3) of the present Bankruptcy Act provides that a trustee can only receive an advance on account of his remuneration with the permission of the inspectors or the court. By directive to the trustees, the Superintendent of Bankruptcy has stipulated that the trustees must obtain the permission of the court rather than the permission of the inspectors. Section 38 of Bill C-60 provides that the administrator may authorize payment to an interim receiver, a trustee, a solicitor or an accountant of an advance on his remuneration.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The present practise of requiring the trustee to obtain court approval of an advance on account of his remuneration should be retained.

2. A similar approval of the court should be required for an advance to a solicitor.

(iii) Taxation of Accounts

(a) Accounts of Trustee

The present Bankruptcy Act provides that the accounts of a trustee for services rendered to the bankrupt estate must be taxed by the court. The trustee prepares his final statement of receipts and disbursements and submits it to the Superintendent of Bankruptcy for his comments. Then he applies to the registrar to have the statement of receipts and disbursements approved. Included in the statement of receipts and disbursements is the amount claimed by the trustee for his remuneration. After the registrar approves the statement of receipts and disbursements, it is sent to all creditors and they have fifteen days to object to the final statement. This objection is heard by the registrar. If there is no objection, the trustee applies to the registrar for an order discharging him as trustee.

This procedure is cumbersome and involves duplication of effort. Both the Superintendent and the registrar are required to peruse each item in the accounts of the trustee. The creditor is also at a disadvantage when he opposes the trustee's final statement of receipts and disbursements because it has already been approved by the registrar.

Bill C-60 transfers the power to tax accounts of the trustee to the bankruptcy administrator with the right of appeal to the court. Sections 37 and 45. This is an attempt to eliminate the present duplication of work. However, fixing the amount of the remuneration of the trustee, if it is contested, is a judicial function as opposed to an administrative function. In many instances there is no dispute over the amount of the remuneration. In these cases, it should be unnecessary to have the accounts taxed by the court. The court should only become involved in taxing the accounts if any interested party, including the administrator, objects to the amount of the remuneration claimed.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The trustee should prepare his final statement of receipts and disbursements and insert therein the amount claimed for remuneration. A copy of this statement should be sent to all creditors and to the bankruptcy administrator for the district. If there is an objection by a creditor and/or the administrator, the trustee must apply to the court for an order fixing the amount of his remuneration. Notice of the application and all supporting material should be served on the person filing the notice of opposition at least ten days prior to the date of the hearing.

2. If there is no objection to the statement of receipts and disbursements, the trustee should be entitled to apply ex parte to the administrator to have his accounts taxed. Upon the passing of the accounts the administrator would not have the power to vary the amount claimed for remuneration. If the administrator is satisfied that the accounts are correct, he would issue a certificate of termination which would certify that the appointment of the trustee has been terminated.

(b) Accounts of Solicitors

The present Bankruptcy Act and Rules require that all accounts of solicitors in excess of $50.00 for services rendered to a bankrupt estate be taxed by the court. This taxation is performed by the registrar with a right of appeal to the bankruptcy court judge.

Bill C-60 has transferred this power of taxation of a solicitor's fees where such fees are not fixed by the court to the bankruptcy administrator. Section 37. There is a right of review by the Superintendent at the request of the solicitor and the right of appeal to the court. Sections 41 and 45.

In many instances there is no dispute as to the amount of the fees claimed. In these cases the burdensome procedure of taxation should not be required.

RECOMMENDATION

The account of a solicitor for services rendered to the bankrupt estate should be submitted to the trustee and to the administrator. If either party objects to the amount of the account within fifteen days, the solicitor must take out an appointment for taxation of the account by the court. Notice of the appointment should be served upon the trustee and the administrator at least ten days prior to the date of hearing. If no objection to the account is served, the account should be paid by the trustee as soon as sufficient funds are available.

(iv) Control Over the Administrator

Section 19 of the present Bankruptcy Act provides that the court has the power to control and overrule the acts and decisions of a trustee. Bill C-60 continues this provision. Section 383. However, Bill C-60 grants many additional powers to the administrator but there is no provision for any review of the decisions of the administrator by the court.

RECOMMENDATION

The court should be given the power to review and overrule the decisions of the administrator upon the application of the bankrupt, any of the creditors or any other person who is aggrieved by his decision. This power should not apply to decisions of the administrator in routine administrative matters.

CONCLUSION

Bill C-60 represents the culmination of many years of study of bankruptcy and insolvency matters which are necessarily very complex. Your Committee was of the opinion that a detailed review and analysis of the Bill was necessary in order to consider the extent of the legal and commercial impact of its provisions. The recommendations we have made are designed to minimize the effect of the new legislation on the commercial lending system and to avoid practical administrative problems. Your Committee has recommended the retention of the existing judicial system which is functioning well. Novel concepts in the new Bill have been rejected in situations where your committee is of the opinion that no benefit from a change would be achieved. It is desirable to maintain as much certainty as possible when new legislation is enacted.

Throughout our deliberations we have been assisted by our advisers Melvin C. Zwaig and David E. Baird. We wish to thank them for their efforts on behalf of the Committee.

Your Committee also wishes to thank the representatives of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs for their co-operation.

Drafting a bill as detailed and complex as Bill C-60 is a difficult task. Nevertheless, we are confident that the combined efforts of everyone concerned will achieve the goal of producing for Canada a modern practical statute regulating bankruptcy and insolvency matters.

Respectfully submitted,

December 11, 1975

Salter A. Hayden,
Chairman

SCHEDULE "A"

BRIEFS SUBMITTED

1. The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants.
2. The Canadian Bar Association.
3. The Canadian Consumer Loan Association.
4. The Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver Stock Exchanges, and the Investment Dealers Association.
5. The Retail Merchants Association of Canada Incorporated.
6. Insurance Bureau of Canada.
7. Federation of Automobile Dealer Associations of Canada.
8. The Canadian Bankers' Association.
9. Federated Council of Sales Finance Companies.

SCHEDULE "B"

ORAL SUBMISSIONS

1. The Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants.
2. The Canadian Bar Association.
3. The Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver Stock Exchanges, and the Investment Dealers Association.
4. The Canadian Bankers' Association.

THE SENATE

Monday, December 15, 1975

The Senate met at 8 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
OTTAWA

December 15, 1975

Madam,

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable Wishart F. Spence, O. B. E., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber to-day, the 15th day of December at 8.00 p.m. for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain bills.

I have the honour to be,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,
Edmond Joly de Lotbinière
Administrative Secretary to the Governor General.

The Honourable

The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable Wishart F. Spence, O. B. E., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, acting as Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the following bills:

An Act to provide for the restraint of profit margins, prices, dividends and compensation in Canada.

An Act to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Bank Act and to repeal an Act to amend an Act to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Criminal Code.

An Act to amend the Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation Act.

An Act to wind up The King George V Silver Jubilee Cancer Fund for Canada and to authorize the sale of the assets and securities of the Fund and to transfer the sale proceeds and the balance of moneys to the National Cancer Institute of Canada.

The Honourable James Jerome, Speaker of the House of Commons, then addressed the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General as follows:

May it please Your Honour:

The Commons of Canada have voted certain supplies required to enable the Government to defray the expenses of the public service.

In the name of the Commons, I present to Your Honour the following bill:

An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1976.

To which bill I humbly request Your Honour's assent.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give the Royal Assent to the said bill.

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

NATIONAL CAPITAL REGION

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons to acquaint the Senate that the name of Mr. Baker (Gander-Twilligate) had been substituted for that of Mr. Poulin on the list of members appointed to serve on the Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS COOPERATIVE MARKETING ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-21, to amend the Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing Act.

Bill read first time.

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 44(1)(f), moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES IMPROVEMENT BILL

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-75, to increase the rate of return on Government Annuity contracts, to increase their flexibility and to discontinue future sales thereof.

Bill read first time.

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 44(1)(f), moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

ANIMAL CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-28, to amend the Animal Contagious Diseases Act.

Bill read first time.

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 44(1)(f), moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Langlois tabled:

Copies of Press Release setting out a decision of the Governor in Council relating to the proposed Agreement between Treasury Board and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, dated December 11, 1975.

● (2020)

BROADCASTING

APPEARANCE OF GERDA MUNSINGER ON CBC TELEVISION PROGRAM—QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I rise on a question of privilege arising out of one of a series of questions which I asked last June 17 on the subject of Mrs. Gerda Munsinger's appearance on the Barbara Frum program.

I asked a series of questions to which I received a series of haughty non-answers. The first question was:

1. How much did the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation pay Mrs. Gerda Munsinger for her appearance on the Barbara Frum Program on CBC TV at 9.00 o'clock Saturday evening, June 7, 1975,

(a) by way of expenses,

(b) by way of fees?

That appears at page 1073 of our Debates.

[The Hon. the Speaker.]

On July 24, at page 1256 of our Debates, we find the following haughty non-answer:

It has not been customary to require the CBC to supply such details of its internal management and administration.

I let the matter rest there, with some improving observations, for the time being, and a few days ago, in the Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments I got the surprise of a lifetime. We had before us a witness, Mr. Cooper, the CBC ombudsman, and he at one point in his evidence referred to a program of his on which I had appeared in which he had asked me if I had had any difficulty myself with government secrecy or the secrecy observed by crown corporations, and I replied with gusto, "Yes, I had, in connection with the CBC itself," and I told him about this particular question.

To my almost unutterable astonishment the other day in the committee—and this can be found in the committee's proceedings, in issue No. 52, Thursday, December 4, at page 34—I got this:

He—

That is, myself:

—had tried to get information from an institution with which I am associated and he could not find out how much Gerda Munsinger was paid.

Then there were some slight, somewhat ribald, interruptions from certain members of the committee, and Mr. Cooper continued—and this is significant:

I would like to mention that I am not an employee of the CBC . . . I do not work for them in the sense of any full-time basis. However, I did obtain information that may be useful—that is, Gerda Munsinger was paid the sum of $150 plus her air fare and hotel for two days.

The question of privilege that I am raising, honourable senators, is that here we have a case where the Senate was denied information in response to a question which a member of this house put. On the other hand, a gentleman who says he is not even a full-time employee of the CBC goes to that corporation and produces at least a partial answer to the question which the corporation refused to give an answer to when it was asked in the Senate.

I draw the attention of the Senate to this because I think it is one peculiarly glaring example of the somewhat off-hand way in which this crown corporation has chosen to treat the Senate on more occasions than one.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator McElman: Honourable senators, may I comment briefly on the question of privilege. The suggestion is that the CBC refused to answer the senator's question. In my opinion, that is entirely wrong. The CBC does not answer Parliament in the sense of answering inquiries. The minister responsible for the CBC did not provide the information.

Senator Forsey: That may be a technical correction, honourable senators, for which I am indebted to Senator McElman. The fact remains that the question was asked of the Leader of the Government who presumably presented the information. The lack of information, the non-answer, was presented by the Leader of the Government presumably as having come from the CBC. He was answering in place of the minister who in the other house is responsible for answering such questions. But certainly the CBC denied the information. They denied it by way of the minister responsible—par l'entremise du ministre responsable, if I may use the French phrase. It seems to me quite clear in any case that the CBC, in giving this information, at least the partial reply, to a part-time employee, a person who is apparently a part-time employee, and failing to provide it to the minister who then had to relay the failure to this house, was behaving in a way that was not respectful to this house.

Senator McElman: If I may reply to the argument, honourable senators, I repeat, the minister responsible did not provide the information as a matter of government policy. The CBC refused the honourable senator nothing. The CBC answers to honourable senators, and others, in committee. The CBC cannot—cannot—provide answers when government policy prevents it from doing so.

Senator Forsey: In that case, why did the CBC not say so? It didn't say that in the answer which I quoted. What was provided to us here in this house didn't mention anything of the sort. If it is a matter of government policy, then that should have been stated in the answer. There is nothing there about government policy. If it is government policy to deny information to this house, then the government should say so.

Senator McElman: The answer said it is not the policy.

Senator Forsey: It didn't say "government policy."

Senator Bélisle: Honourable senators, may I be permitted to ask a question of the Deputy Leader of the Government? In light of the answer that we have received from Senator McElman, has the minister in question now appointed the honourable senator the parliamentary secretary responsible for him in the Senate? Is the honourable senator acting in that capacity?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, before Senator Bélisle rose, I was about to rise myself to participate in this very interesting exchange. The Leader of the Government is unavoidably absent from the house this evening on official business. Although he is not the spokesman for the CBC in Parliament, I am sure he would be pleased to offer any comments he might wish to make to both honourable senators who have asked questions in this respect. I will bring this matter to his attention.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, in support of the position taken by Senator Forsey, we should remember, when a government spokesman gives this kind of answer in respect of the CBC or other organizations—we had it in committee the other day in respect of AECL—that in the other place, the minister, almost invariably, says, "I am informed by the CBC that it is not in the interest of the CBC..." This is the phrase that is used over and over again.

Senator Forsey: Quite.

Senator Grosart: For that reason, I concur completely with the question of privilege raised by Senator Forsey.

Senator Rowe: Honourable senators, I wonder if I might ask a question of Senator Forsey on this point?

Did this Mr. Cooper indicate where he got his information?

Senator Forsey: Well, honourable senators, I suppose he must have got it from the corporation, unless he was just plucking it from the air, or getting it by extrasensory perception from some source. I don't know. Possibly Senator McElman can offer some light on the mysterious processes by which this information was obtained. It is unknown to me, and it passes my understanding.

An Hon. Senator: Did you know Gerda?

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, may I be allowed to add a brief comment on what Senator Grosart said a few moments ago. He referred to similar information having been provided to parliamentary committees, including committees of this house. I am under the impression, due to these precedents in this respect, that if the information had been requested on a confidential basis in any committee of this house, it would have been provided.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, may I just make one observation on that? In this particular case, it was provided not even to a committee of the house; it was not provided on a confidential basis. It was provided to a part-time employee who then came before a committee of the house on another subject altogether and volunteered this observation. I still think that it is a most peculiar way to treat this house. We get the information, something, finally, by a side wind, by—and I hope the Hansard reporters will get that straight this time; they didn't seem to know what a "side wind" was the last time I mentioned it—we get it by a side wind; we get it indirectly. We get an offhand and jaunty observation from a witness before a committee on another subject.

I don't think it is at all proper, and I hope the Leader of the Government will take this under very serious consideration and see what can be done to fish out of this secretive organization some kind of respectful answers, and decent answers, and clear answers, to questions asked in this house.

Senator McElman: May I say, not as parliamentary secretary, that I agree with your point of privilege. I was only trying to get the lines straight as to who was responsible.

● (2030)

PRIVATE BILL

NORTHLAND BANK—THIRD READING

Senator Cameron moved the third reading of Bill C-1002, to incorporate the Northland Bank.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT INCENTIVES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the motion of the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Sparrow, for second reading of Bill C-74, intituled: "An Act to amend the Regional Development Incentives Act".—(Honourable Senator Asselin, P.C.).

Hon. George I. Smith: Honourable senators, in the unavoidable absence of my colleague, Senator Asselin, if I may I should like to make a few remarks on this occasion.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I rise to support this bill, but there are some things I should like to bring to the attention of the house.

The first point I should like to make is that an extension of five years in the duration of this program is far, far short of the time that will be required to do what has to be done in slow growth areas. The objective of the program under the act is to encourage the more rapid development of such areas, not only in financial and economic terms but also to create opportunities for the development to their full potential of people who live there. This is an objective, I submit, of fundamental importance to these people, of course, but also of very great importance to Canada as a whole, for Canada's optimum development as a nation can occur only if all her regions are able to contribute to it. I submit that such an objective, by its very nature, requires a long-term effort.

Although the act was passed in 1969, as was the companion act establishing the Department of Regional Economic Expansion to administer it, the program under it did not spring instantaneously into life. It was well into 1970 before the preliminary preparations were sufficiently advanced and sufficient staff mobilized to really begin to plan what should be done.

By December 31, 1981, the program will have been a going concern for about ten years. Again I submit that this is not nearly long enough substantially to narrow the gap between slow growth areas and the rest of the country. I venture to say that 20 to 30 years or more will be the minimum period needed if the people in these areas are to have anything like equal opportunity with other Canadians for developing their maximum potential and for making their maximum contribution to the development of the country.

Next I should like to draw attention to the wide disparity that exists between the areas this program is intended to help and other parts of the country. Let me make just two kinds of comparisons to demonstrate this disparity. The first is a comparison of unemployment in the various provinces as of the week ended November 15, 1975. These figures are from a document released by Statistics Canada on December 9, just last week, and are expressed in percentages of the labour forces.

The unadjusted figure for all of Canada was 6.4 per cent. For Newfoundland it was 15.3 per cent; Nova Scotia, 7.2 per cent; New Brunswick, 12 per cent; Quebec, 8.1 per cent; Ontario, 5.1 per cent; Manitoba, 3.6 per cent; Saskatchewan, 3.8 per cent; Alberta, 2.8 per cent, and British Columbia, 8.3 per cent. In this table there is no figure for Prince Edward Island or for the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

The average rate of unemployment for the four Eastern provinces of Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Quebec was just over 10.6 per cent as against the Canadian figure of 6.4 per cent. To put it another way, the average rate of unemployment for those four Eastern provinces was 165 per cent of the rate for Canada.

The second comparison is per capita income in this country. The figures for the latest year for which they are available, 1974, are as follows: The Canadian average was $4,966; Newfoundland, $3,319; Prince Edward Island, $3,274; Nova Scotia, $3,990; New Brunswick, $3,702; Quebec, $4,504; Ontario, $5,559; Manitoba, $4,733; Saskatchewan, $4,702; Alberta, $5,066; British Columbia $5,374, and the Yukon and Northwest Territories, $4,544.

Honourable senators, if you take those figures you will be able to calculate that the average per capita income for 1974 for the five Eastern provinces, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and Newfoundland was $3,740 as against the Canadian average of $4,966. To put it another way, the average for those five Eastern provinces was about 75.4 per cent of the average for Canada.

I do not suggest for a moment that the only slow growth areas to which this problem applies are in these Eastern provinces. I recognize there are such places in all of Canada. I have chosen these five provinces for this comparison simply because the comparison between them and the Canadian average, in both these indicators of slow growth, is the most striking, and I submit that it demonstrates clearly that a very wide gap in development and opportunity does indeed exist, a gap so wide that five years cannot possibly bridge it.

Accordingly, while I support the bill on the basis that an extension of five years is certainly helpful, I would say as emphatically as I can that many more than five years will be needed and I urge the government to keep this in mind.

Consider these figures once more just for emphasis: unemployment, 165 per cent of the national average; income, 75.4 per cent of the national average. This, indeed, is a striking combination and striking demonstration of the width of the gap which exists in development.

● (2040)

These figures do not stand in isolation as just having happened once. I believe they fairly represent the relationship which has existed for many decades and which this act was designed to improve and in respect of which this act has been most helpful.

I say again that while a five-year extension is encouraging, the fact must be faced that many more years will be needed, and even greater efforts, before we can hope to reach the point where we can say the situation is at all satisfactory.

From time to time, honourable senators, there have been various criticisms of the program or of the department. One was that the time consumed between making the application for assistance and final approval of the application was far too long. I am glad to note that a real effort has been made to meet that criticism by decentralizing the right to make approvals up to a certain amount on a regional basis. That appears to be a helpful move and I congratulate the minister and the government on having taken such a step.

However, honourable senators, it seems that all is not yet sunshine in this field. According to the Halifax Chronicle-

Herald of December 13, which, of course, was just last Saturday, the Ministers of Finance and Fisheries in Nova Scotia, in an interview with a representative of that newspaper, made it clear that they are not happy with delays in concluding certain agreements with the Department of Regional Economic Expansion and perhaps other departments concerned with agriculture and fishing.

The subheadline on the article reads: "Nicholson urges less study, more action." Mr. Nicholson is, of course, the Minister of Finance in Nova Scotia. While I will not attempt to weary the house by reading the whole of this article, there are one or two sentences which I should like to draw to your attention:

Mr. Nicholson said in an interview the province regards agriculture, farming and fishing as "areas of high priority" and is anxious to conclude agreements designed to aid and develop those industries...

Mr. Nicholson said... it was "easier to get money for studies than action on programs" from DREE.

"One gets the impression DREE requires very extensive study inputs into all these programs... it is a slow process," he said.

Mr. Nicholson said the delays in signing the subsidiary agreements had forced the government to hold back on programs for which there were allocations in the current budget.

In the same article reference is made to Mr. Cameron, the Minister of Fisheries in Nova Scotia. It reads:

"For the last eight to 10 months we have been battling around with different federal departments... DREE and fisheries."

"Things have just not been moving," Mr. Cameron complained...

"We had good discussions earlier this week... but I am hesitant to get optimistic because we have been up and down on a number of occasions," he said.

I hope the minister, who has only recently been appointed and has not had time enough yet to become fully acquainted with all the matters with which his department is dealing, will make a special effort to see what is involved in these Nova Scotian criticisms, and that if he finds them justified he will do everything he can to resolve the problem.

Another criticism sometimes made is that the department seems to be staying away from assistance to what are called "commercial operations." The act originally allowed incentives and assistance to be given only to manufacturing and to processing. It was amended by chapter 205 of the Statutes of Canada, 1970-71-72 to allow assistance to be given to "commercial undertakings," which are defined in such a way as obviously to mean all kinds of enterprises describable by that general terminology, including enterprises which are involved in the services sector. Thus far the department has not been much interested in helping that kind of undertaking, and, in fact, the minister has recently said that that lack of interest continues.

Honourable senators, it seems to me that some of the best opportunities for creating jobs lie in the services sector of the economy and that there ought to be some activity in providing assistance in that field. The reluctance to do so seems to be based on the feeling that this is such a wide field of endeavour that it is difficult to establish criteria to decide who should be helped. I respectfully suggest, however, that simply because it is difficult is no reason for not trying it. Obviously, in passing the amendment Parliament recognized that this was the kind of endeavour the department should undertake, and it seems to me that the will of Parliament should be recognized in this and acted upon. In fact, there is no doubt that it has been acted upon in some instances, despite the lack of enthusiasm I mentioned.

Indeed, there is an excellent example of it given on page 19 of the Annual Report of DREE for 1974-75. The reference there is to the Abenaki Motor Inn, a motel enterprise on the Micmac Indian Reserve near Truro—about two miles from my home, incidentally—which was assisted by DREE and by the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. The description of the enterprise is interesting. Among other things it says:

The main building houses 48 bedrooms, a dining room and lounge that each seat about 100, three conference rooms with capacities of from 40 to 225 people, four sample rooms, a games room and a children's nursery... Most of the staff are Indians from Millbrook and other reserves who have received training through the Nova Scotia Department of Education and Canada Manpower.

There, I submit, clearly set out by the department itself is an excellent instance of what can be done when assistance is rendered to the services sector.

It is too early to say how successful the Abenaki enterprise will be, but certainly on the various occasions when I visited the establishment this summer—it was opened in June of this year—it seemed to be doing well.

On another point, I am glad to note that the minister has indicated that he accepts the view that slow growth regions are more susceptible to the effects of inflation than other parts of the country. I am therefore encouraged to hope that the amount of expenditures authorized under the Regional Development Incentives Act will not suffer any more than is absolutely necessary under the anti-inflation measures adopted by the government. After all, as the figures I have quoted show, the necessity of the so-called "catch-up" action being allowed in the anti-inflation program certainly applies to these slow growth regions, for they are clearly well behind the national average and obviously need a great deal in order to catch up. The anti-inflation fight provides an excellent opportunity to take some "catch-up" action in the DREE program.

Honourable senators, I have expressed some criticism of the regional development program, and from time to time other criticisms by others have been made, some of them with reason and others no doubt unjustified, but I am sure that the usefulness of this program far outweighs any criticisms which can be made. It has indeed been most helpful to the slow growth regions, including my own province of Nova Scotia. I should like to see it continue to flourish; I should like to see it increase the intensity of its efforts. I believe it is good for such regions; I believe it is good for Canada. I support this bill and I ask others to do the same.

● (2050)

Hon. Alan A. Macnaughton: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, P.C., speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Macnaughton: Honourable senators, I would like to ask Senator Smith (Colchester) if he knows whether Senator Asselin intends to speak on this bill or not.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I am not sure, but I rather think the answer is no.

Senator Flynn: He may speak on third reading.

Senator Macnaughton: In that case, honourable senators, I do not have anything to add. As I said before, this bill provides for an extension of the act for a five-year period, with no other changes. If honourable senators would like it referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, well and good, though I really do not see the need for that. I am, however, in the hands of the Senate.

Senator Flynn: It would be as well to refer it to committee.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Macnaughton moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce.

Motion agreed to.

AGRICULTURE

CROP INSURANCE PROGRAMS—REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate resumed from Thursday, November 27, the debate on the motion of Senator Argue for the adoption of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture on Crop Insurance.

Hon. Hervé J. Michaud: Honourable senators, speaking on this motion on November 27, Senator Argue made some specific references to the application of crop insurance to the Prairie provinces, as it applies more particularly to grain production. I should like at this time to make reference to this measure as it applies specifically to the Maritime provinces.

The Nova Scotia Crop Insurance Commission issues crop insurance coverage for the following crops: spring grain, winter grain, corn, strawberries, blueberries, tree fruit, peas, beans and tobacco.

A total of 17,518 crop acres were under insurance coverage in 1975, for a total value of $2,238,971. The total premium value for the year was $196,285. The commission was formed in 1969, and in 1975 it had 475 farmers insured under the scheme. The Prince Edward Island Crop Insurance Agency issues crop insurance coverage on potatoes, grains, tobacco, turnips, white beans, field peas, processing peas, broccoli, brussels sprouts, cauliflower and strawberries. There were 44,486 crop acres under insurance coverage in 1975, for a coverage value of $10,320,231. The premium value for the year was $341,532. The agency reports an increase in every division, in 1975, over the preceding year. There were 703 contracts registered in 1975, as against 685 in 1974, and $1,579,705 more was collected in premiums than in 1974. The agency in Prince Edward Island was formed in 1962, and in 1975 had 620 farmers insured.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

The New Brunswick Crop Insurance Commission issues crop insurance coverage on apples, strawberries, grain, potatoes and turnips. There were 5,586 crop acres under insurance coverage in 1975, for a coverage value of $330,000. The premium value was $32,260. The commission was formed in 1974, and in 1975 had 225 farmers insured under that plan.

The story of crop insurance in the Maritime provinces is like many other enterprises of an economic nature when compared to larger and richer provinces: it is a story of "smallness," as against one of "bigness." In the Maritime provinces, the acreage of land suitable for farming is much smaller than it is in the other provinces. Consequently the number of farmers, in any of these three provinces, is also smaller. Since any insurance plan is always based on the principle of quantity, the task of organizing a viable crop insurance scheme in those provinces becomes that much harder. This is a situation which is apparently often overlooked by the central authorities. Too often, indeed, these same authorities tend to apply agricultural policies in a uniform way all across Canada, an attitude which often works to the disadvantage of smaller provinces like the Maritime provinces. This we have seen happen in a particular way in the matter of the Small Farms Development Program. This was a piece of legislation that in certain aspects was especially designed to be of assistance to small farms in Eastern Canada, but which in its final application proved to be of greater assistance to the larger western farms than it was to the smaller eastern farm structures.

It is obvious that federal agricultural policies will have to be more flexible in their application if they are to become equally beneficial to all farmers in all parts of Canada. The expansion of crop insurance in the Maritime provinces is one which deserves the special attention of the federal authorities if it is to fulfill the role it is called upon to play in the field of agriculture.

In the course of his remarks in this debate on November 27, Senator Argue stressed the fact that most provinces attached great importance to the matter of spot loss insurance. The province of New Brunswick particularly would derive great benefits from carrying spot loss insurance in the field of potato insurance.

Potato growers in New Brunswick are for the most part large growers, many sowing in the neighbourhood of 200 acres yearly. As most crop insurance contracts only guarantee compensation for 70 per cent of the crop value in any circumstances, it follows that a potato grower now would have to lose 60 acres of potatoes, out of 200, before recovering any part of the losses he may have sustained. This aspect of the situation more than any other possibly can be held responsible for the slight response potato growers in New Brunswick have been giving to the solicitations of the

New Brunswick Crop Insurance Commission to date. Special attention should be given therefore to the possibility of rendering spot insurance available in this regard. This could mean that a rider would be attached to the covering contract by which the growers wishing to acquire protection against such spot losses could do so at an additional rate. One is led to believe from reports coming from that area that unless such spot insurance becomes available under the crop insurance program that program will not be as successful as it could otherwise be expected to be in New Brunswick.

● (2100)

The matter of crop insurance is one of fundamental importance to Canadian agriculture. It is obvious that in the years to come it will become one of the basic policies designed to ensure stability of income to Canadian farmers. In certain provinces, more far-reaching programs are already being designed in that area. Collective crop insurance plans will be proposed, following which insurance would be provided to producers specializing in dairy enterprises, beef cattle, horses, sheep or other herbivorous animals.

Crops insurable would be collectively tame hay—grasses and legumes—silage corn, feed grain and pasture. Coverage would be based on a regional average yield, and adjustment would be on a regional basis. The level of coverage would probably be about 70 per cent of the regional average of the above-mentioned crops. Regional production would be determined by sampling prior to harvest rather than by measuring harvested production. All production samples would be dried before weighing to maintain uniformity.

Premiums would be based on regional estimates of requirements to cover indemnities, and would be assessed as a check-off from commodity marketing boards.

The insurance would be compulsory and intended as a disaster type protection only. Extra insurance on an individual basis on separate crops, except pasture, would be available in a similar manner to that which is presently available.

There have been no negotiations with the federal government as yet to determine if the province would be reimbursed for any or all of the provincial share of the premium. If it can be determined that the premium structure is actuarially sound, there is probably no reason why this proposal could not be included under the present Crop Insurance Act.

In concluding my remarks, I wish to concur in the words of Senator Argue, who, when speaking to this motion on November 27, said that the study of crop insurance by the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture is already a success story, and he felt confident that the continuing work of the committee would assist in achieving many further improvements in this field.

Honourable senators, I support Senator Argue's motion for the adoption of this report.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

FINAL ACT OF HELSINKI CONFERENCE ON SECURITY AND CO-OPERATION IN EUROPE—ORDER STANDS

On the Order:

Resuming the debate on the inquiry of the Honourable Senator Forsey calling the attention of the Senate to the Final Act of the Helsinki Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe.—(Honourable Senator Yuzyk).

Senator Macdonald: Stand until January 15, 1976.

Order stands.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, before the motion for adjournment is put, I should like to make two corrections to the Minutes of Proceedings of December 11 with respect to meetings of Senate committees for this week.

First, the meeting of the Special Committee of the Senate on Science Policy announced for Wednesday at 10 a.m. is cancelled. Secondly, the meeting of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments announced for Thursday December 18, at 11 a.m. will take place tomorrow morning, December 16, in the same room, 112-N, at 11 a.m.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Tuesday, December 16, 1975

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

INTERNAL ECONOMY

COMMITTEE ON EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RELATIONS IN THE PUBLIC SERVICE—SUPPLEMENTARY BUDGET TABLED

Senator Laird, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration tabled the committee's report approving the supplementary budget presented to it by the Joint Chairman of the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service for the proposed expenditures of the said committee respecting its consideration of and recommendations on Parts I, II and III of the paper entitled "Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service of Canada," prepared by the Chairman of the Public Service Staff Relations Board, authorized by the Senate on November 14, 1974.

CRIMINAL CODE

THERAPEUTIC ABORTIONS—ANSWER TO QUESTION

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, on November 19 Senator Sullivan asked a question regarding the Committee on the Operation of the Abortion Law. I would now like to offer this information.

The government appointed the members of the Committee on the Operation of the Abortion Law after a lengthy consultative and deliberative process, and the terms of reference were subjected to careful review in order to ensure comprehensiveness and objectivity.

The committee was established to make a scientific study of the way in which the existing abortion law is operating. On that basis the personal views of members of the committee on the desirability or undesirability of abortion are not directly relevant. It might be that in other circumstances it would be appropriate to appoint a royal commission and to take into account the respective viewpoints of the members in its selection. Such a royal commission would be asked to make recommendations on the policy underlying the law; that is, to offer its opinion on the wisdom of the legislation. In the present circumstances the government thought it to be more appropriate to establish a scientific committee since it is Parliament which must ultimately decide what, if any, changes should be made. The members of the committee were carefully selected on the basis of their knowledge and experience and their ability to conduct this kind of research.

There have been intimations from groups on both sides of the abortion issue that the composition of the committee represents a bias in favour of the other side. But to deal for the moment only with Senator Sullivan's criticism of the appointment of Dr. Marion G. Powell, I submit with respect that his comments on this physician are unfortunate and inappropriate. Dr. Powell is a distinguished physician and professor in the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Toronto. She was a medical officer of health for ten years and was for eight years on the staff of a missionary hospital in Japan. She also serves on the board of the Armagh Home for Girls, which is the maternity home sponsored by the Presbyterian Church in Canada. The question of family planning is quite relevant to the terms of reference, and Dr. Powell has very extensive expertise in this area. It is because of this expertise that her appointment has met with the strong approval of the Canadian Medical Association. I suggest that Dr. Powell's qualifications and professional background amply justify her appointment to this committee.

In his remarks, Senator Sullivan chose to refer only to a selected portion of the terms of reference. These terms are quite extensive and must be read in their entirety to appreciate the scope of the committee's mandate. One of two questions taken from the context cannot provide an acceptable basis for an allegation that the terms of reference lack objectivity.

The honourable senator suggested that the committee is operating in secrecy. This is not in accordance with the facts. The committee has already met with representatives of concerned groups and it plans to seek out established counselling organizations representing "pro-life" groups and those providing abortion counselling to obtain the benefit of their actual experience. It will be appreciated that as a scientific working group the committee is not authorized to hold public hearings. However, we are assured that the research design will provide in various ways for consulting the knowledge and experience of the public. The committee has advised the representatives of groups who have inquired that it is prepared to accept material falling within its terms of reference which will aid it in its task. I understand that the representatives of interested groups were delighted to hear this, though some expressed regret that formal briefs containing arguments in favour of their position could not be accepted.

● (1410)

The terms of reference state that the results of the study will be made public and will be tabled in the House of Commons. Certainly an effort will be made to table them also in this chamber. That report will contain an account of how the study was conducted, together with the necessary statistical material. There will be every opportunity for the report to be reviewed and criticized by experts in the various relevant areas after it is tabled.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, Senator Sullivan is not here and without my taking any position on the matter I wonder if the Leader of the Government would care to comment on why, if this was to be an objective study as he stated it was, the decision was taken that interested parties, obviously with some expertise, were not permitted to even put before the committee documentation of the facts as they would see them? Is there a reason for that? It seems most extraordinary. I cannot think of a case in which an objective study was called for by the government at any level in which those who might wish to present briefs were denied the right to do so. Was there a specific reason for this being so decided?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have no knowledge that groups who wish to present information to this committee are denied the opportunity to do so. I would think that the committee would wish to receive just as much material as possible. I have no other answer to give the honourable senator at this time, but, if necessary, I shall undertake a further inquiry.

Senator Grosart: I wonder if I may ask the Leader of the Government if he did not actually say during the statement he made that the committee decided not to receive such documents? It was on that basis that I asked the question, and if I was incorrect I hope he will correct me.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I may seek the opportunity to make a fuller statement in this connection later. I must review exactly what the procedures are, after which I will be glad to reply to the question of the honourable senator. I did read to the Senate a reply provided by the responsible minister and if there are some apparent discrepancies I shall certainly attempt to clear them up as quickly as I can.

BROADCASTING

APPEARANCE OF GERDA MUNSINGER ON CBC TELEVISION PROGRAM—REPLY TO QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, a question of privilege was raised in this chamber last night by the Honourable Senator Forsey with respect to Mrs. Gerda Munsinger. This particular line of questioning is becoming what those in gardening call a "hardy perennial." Senator Forsey raised this question of privilege in relation to the appearance of Gerda Munsinger on a CBC television program. I regret that I was absent from the house on official duties in connection with the royal assent, as honourable senators are aware. There was comment last night on my subsequent answer to a question raised in June of this year by Senator Forsey, a reply based on information provided me by the CBC. Honourable senators will recall that at the time of the question some weeks ago I conceded that there appeared to be validity in the comment made by the honourable senator with respect to the availability of information from the corporation. I undertook following that to contact the President of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Senator Forsey asked what could be done to, I think he said, "fish out of this secret organization, the CBC" some kind of "respectful answers," and "decent answers," and "clear answers," to questions asked in this house. I wish to inform honourable senators that it was never my personal intention or desire to provide a "non-answer" to my colleagues, as I observed on June 17.

Senator Forsey: Hear, hear!

Senator Perrault: However, in light of the situation, I want to inform the chamber that after contacting Mr. Al Johnson, President of the CBC, it was suggested by him that perhaps he could make a general statement personally to a committee of this place. He said he would be prepared to make an appearance and statement to a committee in the other place as well about the kind of information the corporation should be expected to provide. In this connection, the CBC's parliamentary services staff would search the history of CBC replies to Parliament, so that Mr. Johnson would have a comprehensive view of the way in which these replies have been handled over the years.

Mr. Johnson also stated that I had his personal assurance that the CBC had no wish to arbitrarily withhold information from those who were entitled to have it, and the CBC was always quite prepared to offer answers that are as complete as possible. What "complete as possible" involves, honourable senator, I leave to your vivid imagination.

Senator Greene: Did Mrs. Munsinger withhold anything?

Senator Perrault: May I suggest that at an early opportunity we seek to invite Mr. Johnson to testify before a committee of this house and put the appropriate questions directly to him. He has only recently assumed his new responsibilities as President of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and in that role there may be a real opportunity here for new and constructive initiatives that will see a greater flow of information from the corporation. I want to assure the house that immediately following Senator Forsey's questions of June 17 last, I undertook to improve the flow of information available from the corporation.

Senator Rowe: Honourable senators, in relation to that statement, may I ask a question of Senator Forsey? My impression is that Senator Forsey asked that question before Mr. Johnson became head of the CBC. I wonder if he can confirm that?

Senator Forsey: From my own memory, honourable senator, I cannot confirm or deny it. It was very near the time that he became president, because I know that I then wrote him almost immediately afterwards and drew his attention to the statement which the Leader of the Government had made. I hasten to assure the Leader of the Government that it never entered my mind to suggest that he was giving a non-answer of his own mere will and motion. Nothing could be further from my mind. I wrote to Mr. Johnson almost at once and he very kindly invited me to lunch and said to me at lunch something very similar to what he said to the Leader of the Government, which he has just described. So I can't say whether it was just before he took office or immediately afterwards, but it was very close to the time that he took office because within a few days I met him in his capacity as president.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

CANADA-UNITED STATES RELATIONS—QUESTIONS

Senator Austin: Honourable senators, I would like to ask the government leader a question concerning Canada-United States relations. We have seen in the last few days a communication by the United States Ambassador, Mr. Porter, to the people of Canada, via the press, in the nature of a bill of complaint outlining their views of irritations raised from the Canadian side.

In particular, of course, I am concerned about the possibility of a change in the way in which one government communicates with another. Are we going to have, for example, our ambassador, Jake Warren, call a handy little conference of the press in Washington to tell them about our concerns about such matters as oil tanker traffic in the Straits of Juan de Fuca, or about the Skagit problem, or the Garrison Dam problem, or about the undue pressure brought by United States negotiators many years ago in respect of the Alaska Panhandle?

I wonder if Senator Perrault would comment in general on this question?

● (1420)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the alleged unofficial meeting between the Ambassador of the United States to Canada and a number of representatives of the media here in Ottawa a few days ago has been a matter of interest and concern in Canada in recent days. I can only quote, in part, from the remarks of the Prime Minister, to be found at page 9994 of House of Commons Debates of yesterday, in which he said:

I must say I am surprised that an experienced diplomat like Mr. Porter would not find other channels for expressing views if he thinks they are right.

As honourable senators are aware, there have been a number of interpretations about this alleged meeting. I can assure the house that inquiries have gone forward from the government as to the circumstances of this alleged meeting. I can say that the government has determined, through its own channels of communication in Washington, D.C., that Ambassador Porter was not speaking on instructions. Indeed, we understand that Ambassador Porter has left Ottawa for Washington for reasons as yet undetermined.

An Hon. Senator: Hear, hear!

Senator Perrault: However, it should be observed that one of the advantages of the propinquity between Ottawa and Washington is the ease with which our two ambassadors move back and forth frequently.

As part of the two-way communication process, the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Canada have an understanding that either can call the other at any time when an issue seems worthy of attention. This practice has been pursued in the past, and it is the belief of the Government of Canada that should the President of the United States feel that relations suggest the value of a meeting between the President and the Prime Minister, he would call the Prime Minister to make that suggestion and, conversely, the same procedure would apply. The fact remains, however, that the President of the United States has not felt it necessary to put this suggestion to the Prime Minister. It was this fact that led the Government of Canada to be surprised by reports of Ambassador Porter's alleged statement to the press on the weekend.

Since Confederation, as is inevitably the case between contiguous countries, there have been differences, mostly of a minor nature, between our two nations. As honourable senators are well aware, there have been problems. There always have been, and perhaps there always will be. There are various forms of irritants as well, irritants which both Canada and the United States are continually working to overcome.

[Senator Austin.]

It will be recalled that the Prime Minister has seen President Ford three times during the past year. Discussions at great length were held on those occasions. In addition, there have been a number of telephone conversations between the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Canada. Also, Secretary Kissinger was here a short while ago, and during his visit he made both private and public statements to the effect that our relations were very good.

The Government of Canada is somewhat surprised, as are most Canadians, at the tone of the remarks made on the weekend by Ambassador Porter, because neither do they correspond to what either the President of the United States and Secretary Kissinger have been telling the Prime Minister of Canada, nor do they really correspond to the relations which have existed and which continue to exist.

Honourable senators, I hope that the ambassador, when he arrives in Washington, will have an opportunity to have the situation clarified for him. Perhaps thereby our entire relationship will benefit.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Greene: Would the honourable Leader of the Government permit a supplementary question? Forgetting the abominable bad manners of the former ambassador to Canada, I am concerned with the merits of some of his indictments.

Does the government have any policy that can be made public here in the Senate vis-à-vis the laundering of TV commercials, which was one of his complaints—laundering the commercials out of TV broadcasts emanating from the United States—which would appear to have at least some moral reprehensibility? These are programs that apparently somebody steals out of the air, which are produced at American expense; they launder the commercials out and plant in them Canadian commercials. To a layman knowing little of electronics, this would seem to me to be a brand of electronic theft, and it may be that there is some merit in his comments in that regard. Does the government have a policy vis-à-vis that practice?

Senator Perrault: I understand that there has been a policy statement by the Canadian Radio and Television Commission that the matter of the commercial content carried by the cable systems shall be brought under review. Discussion have been held about a so-called commercial deletion policy, as to the way in which the Canadian television industry can be protected. However, I understand that at least three American television stations have appealed to the Federal Communications Commission in the United States asking for precisely that kind of commercial protection because of Canadian television channels being carried in certain American cities.

This, then, appears to be a matter on which both countries should attempt to negotiate a satisfactory solution, an amicable solution, as we have done so often in the past with our differences. Speaking personally and not for the government, it is the kind of problem which I believe is not a major one, or need not be; it is a problem that can be resolved in the way we have negotiated matters of this kind in the past, because there appear to be reconcilable differences of opinion on both sides of the border on this subject. Also, Ambassador Porter's repeated observations about the energy situation appear to indicate a certain lack of information about Canada's problems with respect to its energy resources, and the fact that we have to buy over 50 per cent of our oil requirements offshore at world prices.

Senator Austin: Perhaps I might be allowed to ask a supplementary question. Has the Leader of the Government any information on whether Ambassador Porter commented on the results of the recent British Columbia provincial election?

Senator Perrault: I have no information on that. It seems to me inevitable that the results of the British Columbia election would have been the subject of conversation at least at some point in the meeting.

Senator Forsey: It appeared in the newspaper reports that he said it was very reassuring, or words to that effect.

Senator Flynn: It would be interesting to know the personal views of the Leader of the Government. Of course, they would probably echo the views of Senator Austin. Does the Leader of the Government not think the Senate should await with interest the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs on Canada-United States Relations, which is to be tabled pretty soon? That report might give us some indication of who is right with regard to many of these issues.

Senator Perrault: Canada-United States relations has been the subject of a major study by the Foreign Affairs Committee, and I have been impressed, as I am sure has the Leader of the Opposition, with the dedication and diligence that has been applied to the preparation of that report. That report will represent the results of many meetings with many people on both sides of the border, and is the kind of effort that can accomplish some constructive good. I suggest it may be inestimably more worthwhile than off-the-record comments of Canadians or Americans on the subject of Canada-United States relations. The area is an important one where ill-informed ad-lib comments can be injurious to the relationship.

Senator Flynn: That was my suggestion.

Senator Perrault: I suggest that one of the constructive things we could do would be to send Ambassador Porter a copy of the report of our Foreign Affairs Committee on its study of Canada-United States relations.

Senator Flynn: In due course.

Senator Perrault: In due course.

ANTI-INFLATION BOARD

GOVERNMENT REJECTION OF BOARD'S OPINION ON CONTRACT SETTLEMENT WITH POSTAL WORKERS—

QUESTIONS

● (1430)

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, may I direct a question to the Leader of the Government? In a rather persuasive introduction of Bill C-73, the anti-inflation legislation, he used the terms "enforcer" and "persuader."

Senator Côté: He is the godfather.

Senator Phillips: Recently, the Cabinet, of which I believe he is a member, overruled a decision of the Anti-Inflation Board concerning the pay increases granted to the inside postal workers. I would ask if, in this case, Mr. Joe Davidson of the CUPW was the "persuader" or the "enforcer?"

Senator Perrault: Mr. Joe Davidson was neither of those things. He really played no role in that decision. This was a decision taken by the government, with some considerable reluctance.

Senator Flynn: Which one—the first or the second?

Senator Perrault: The decision taken by the government with respect to the inside postal workers—

Senator Flynn: It was overruled.

Senator Perrault: —was based on the fact that this group of workers had had no contract for some time. There were a number of factors which I think led to the government's decision to let the final offer and agreement with the postal workers stand. However, this is not to be considered a precedent for the future.

Senator Phillips: Would honourable senators permit a supplementary question? The Anti-Inflation Board was kind enough to distribute to all members of Parliament a statement in which they outlined their reasons for rejecting the settlement. May I ask the Leader of the Government to provide us with a similar document outlining the reasons of the Governor in Council for overriding the decision of the Anti-Inflation Board?

Senator Perrault: I see no problem in tabling a copy of the government's statement for the perusal of honourable senators, if that is satisfactory.

Senator Phillips: Last evening you tabled a copy of the agreement between the Treasury Board and the postal workers. May I have a copy of the reasons of the Governor in Council for overriding the Anti-Inflation Board?

Senator Perrault: Senator, a certain amount of data has been tabled with respect to that particular decision. I will undertake to review the material which has been made available, and perhaps we can incorporate in the records of this house the text of the statement made at the time the government announced its decision. That should be available to honourable senators in some form, and I shall undertake to see that is done.

Senator Phillips: Thank you.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I wonder if I may ask, with leave of the Senate, what I suppose would be a supplementary question? I find it a little unclear as to whether the Anti-Inflation Board made a decision rejecting or overruling the said agreement, or whether it referred the matter to the Governor in Council with its opinion that it ought to be rejected. Could the government leader enlighten me on that?

Senator Perrault: At the time the action was taken by the Anti-Inflation Board, the so-called "decision" of the board was in fact an "opinion."

Senator Flynn: It still would be.

Senator Perrault: It was an "opinion" referred to the Governor in Council.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Thank you.

Senator Forsey: I wonder if I could ask one supplementary question. Could the Leader of the Government tell us whether there is anyone on that board with any experience of collective bargaining, with the single exception of Mr. William Ladyman, the former vice-president of the Electrical Workers' Union? I could not help feeling that there was some lack of knowledge of collective bargaining displayed by the board, in the opinion which it offered.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the full complement of the board has not yet been appointed. It is hoped that during the next week there will be one or two additional appointments. It is my understanding that those to be appointed will have had considerable experience in the field of collective bargaining. It is hoped that those names will be made known shortly.

Senator Flynn: Does the government leader suggest that all expertise required will eventually be represented on the commission? That would require a regiment.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES IMPROVEMENT BILL

SECOND READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Hon. Augustus Irvine Barrow moved the second reading of Bill C-75, to increase the rate of return on Government Annuity contracts, to increase their flexibility and to discontinue future sales thereof.

He said: Honourable senators, I should like to outline briefly the history of government annuities legislation, and then attempt to explain the considerations which have led the government to propose the main features embodied in Bill C-75.

All of us here today will agree that we are too young to remember the lack of retirement plans and programs which characterized the days when our country was in the midst of rapid change brought about by the industrial revolution. However, in 1908 when the Canadian government decided to involve itself in the sale of annuities it was responding to an important social need, since public and private retirement plans so widely available today were then non-existent. From 1908 to 1928 the Canadian government made annuities available to people who wished to buy them in order to provide some financial security for their retirement.

In 1928 the government decided to actively promote the sale of annuities by appointing sales representatives, who encouraged people to invest for their future. However, by the 1960s the private sector was providing a wide range of retirement and pension plans, and thus the sales of government annuities declined. As a result, in 1968, as recommended by the Glassco Commission, the sales force was disbanded and advertising was discontinued.

[Senator Smith (Colchester).]

In recent years, there have been few sales of government annuities, but some 280,000 people still hold contracts. The last of these contracts will mature in the year 2031, and if the annuitant lives the expected 20 years, then annuities will likely be payable to the year 2050. Because of this we must recognize that government annuities are still important to a large number of people. It should be noted that the measure before us today, the Government Annuities Improvement bill, seems to improve this situation.

In the budget speech of June 23, 1975, the government announced that the rate of return on government annuities would be brought more into line with that paid by the private sector. At the same time it announced that the sale of annuities would be discontinued.

So, this bill, first of all, raises the rate of return on government annuities to 7 per cent, retroactive to April 1, 1975. The choice of this particular rate of return was based on a careful study of the current yield on comparable public and private investment portfolios, and I point out that the government annuities account should be regarded as an investment portfolio accumulated over the years. Interest rates in such a portfolio vary between 4 per cent and the current 10 per cent, with a yield situated between these two extremes.

● (1440)

We are proposing that the present yield of the annuities account, which is about 4 per cent, be increased to 7 per cent, approximating the current yield on equivalent public and private investment portfolios. At the present time, unmatured annuities have interest rates ranging from 3 to 5½ per cent. If this bill is passed, all contracts will then have the rate raised to 7 per cent as of April 1, 1975, the beginning of the present fiscal year. This means that for most unmatured annuities, contributions and interest at the new rate will accumulate until maturity, resulting in a higher capital value at maturity, and a consequent higher annuity. For example, if an annuity under a 4 per cent contract not covered by a special pension plan arrangement matures in 10 years, it will mean a 33 per cent increase in the annuity. If the annuity matures in 20 years, the increase will be 77 per cent.

In the case of approximately 150 pension plans, however, covering about 26 per cent of persons with unmatured contracts, the allocation of the increased return must be decided by the terms of the plan itself. In addition, at maturity, all presently unmatured annuities would become eligible for the rate which applies to matured annuities. For matured annuities the increase in the rate of return translates into an increase in the payments. Such increases will vary from 10 to 33 per cent, depending on the original contract. The average increase is approximately 22 per cent, and I refer honourable senators to the schedule on page 6 of the bill for a more detailed breakdown.

In applying the 7 per cent rate of return to matured annuities the government selected a method that considered all matured annuities with the same interest rate as a single average annuity. The new rate of return was then applied to the calculated capital value of each group, and a percentage increase was calculated for each contract rate. Contracts with low interest rates would receive a larger increase than those with higher rates. It was felt that this was an equitable method of allocation since it brings all annuitants to the same relative position.

It would appear, therefore, that the choice of a 7 per cent rate is reasonable by current standards, and that its method of application is fair. The government also feels, however, that reason and fairness demand that future administrations be given the facility to adjust the rate, depending on fluctuations in interest rates. Thus, while the 7 per cent rate should remain current for some time, the new act is flexible enough to provide for periodic review if circumstances require it. The Governor in Council, therefore, has the power to raise or lower the rate with the proviso that the rate for any contract cannot be lower than that originally applicable to the contract.

One consequence of the increased rate of return is an increase in the current ceiling of $1,200 on annuity payments, enabling annuitants at the maximum to benefit from the increased rate of return.

I should now like to discuss the other major aspect of this act, namely, the decision to cease all further sales of government annuities. While this would apply unconditionally to individual contracts, group contracts would be gradually phased out during the next three years, ending on March 31, 1979. This aspect of the legislation not only recognizes that government annuities have served their original purpose, but also indicates the extent of the government's confidence in the ability of other public and private enterprises to respond more than adequately to the social needs of Canadians.

Before concluding, I would like honourable senators to note that this bill includes a number of housekeeping changes as a result of which certain provisions have been inserted in the act or the regulations that give the annuitant more flexibility in the way his annuity is paid, and more protection when the purchaser is someone else, such as his employer, in the case of a group annuity contract.

Finally, the bill officially appoints the Auditor General as auditor, although he has acted in this capacity for many years. It also officially authorizes the use of the Consolidated Revenue Fund for eliminating deficits and surpluses in the annuities account, and provides a better schedule for reporting to Parliament.

In conclusion, I should like to say that this legislation provides an equitable solution to the problem of a low rate of return on government annuities, makes more flexible the ways in which annuitants can be paid, and recognizes that the private sector has, in the last 30 years, effectively taken over this role by providing Canadians with a wide range of retirement plans.

Hon. David A. Croll: Honourable senators, there is not very much anyone needs to say after what has already been said, but I rise to bid farewell to a very old friend. I well remember that when we began our agitation for old age security we were able to look back on the Government Annuities Act, which came on the statute books in 1908. It was the very first social security measure on the statute books of Canada.

Senator Flynn: Are you sure?

Senator Croll: Not only am I happy to say that, but also to remark that it was placed there by a Liberal government.

Senator Flynn: Who else?

Senator Croll: It stayed there for a great number of years. Of course, as has already been stated, there were neither private plans nor public plans in those days. Some employers of labour provided pensions for old-time employees, and they were very welcome, but that was about the extent of it. In 1908, however, the Government Annuities Act came into existence, and 20 years elapsed before another measure of the same kind, the Old Age Security Act, was passed. It is remarkable that nothing more came forward in those 20 years.

I do not know how to explain it, and I do not suppose I ever tried to understand it, but I remember that after the war the Government Annuities Act was administered by the Department of Labour, and each year, when we went over that department's estimates, we always dealt with it. I remember quite clearly the deputy minister telling us that during the depression they used to receive money orders for 10 cents, or a stamp for 10 cents, through the mails. It was all the people had. They could not pay anything else. They were determined to keep up the annuity as best they could. Of course, the annuity was always safe. If they could not make a payment today they could make it tomorrow, and it was always available to them; but these payments came from poor people across the country.

That has changed since, in that the private sector has made these annuities available. It is interesting to note that 70 per cent of the plans in existence in this country today are in the public sector, and 30 per cent are in the private sector. There is a great deal, therefore, to do.

I remember that at one time tax-free annuities of up to $5,000 were being sold. That did not last long, but they were available for a while. I assure you that a great number of people did not know about them, but when the government saw who was applying for the large ones, they immediately cancelled them. However, they did sell the $1,200 annuities for many years. There are a great number of those in existence today, and, of course, they are very helpful.

● (1450)

I do not like to see a social measure removed from the statute books under any circumstances, but in this case I must confess I cannot think of a good argument for retaining it because the field has now been occupied by people who can do much better. As a matter of fact, the corrections being made at the present time are long overdue. The government should have paid a much better interest rate a long time ago.

Senator Flynn: Like the perpetual bonds.

Senator Croll: Well, yes, but these are not as bad as the perpetual bonds. They have some hope yet.

In any event, honourable senators, this legislation served a very useful purpose when there was lack of opportunity for people to save. It was good legislation, the kind that the country should be proud of. From that legislation came many other useful acts now on the statute books. But time is up, and the reasons are good ones. The government is now being fair in providing some compensation that is overdue. I support this bill.

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, I wish to make two brief points if brevity is within my province.

First, I would respectfully submit to the sponsor of the bill that there is a mistake in the style and title thereof inasmuch as it indicates an intention to discontinue further sales. If my information is correct, there have been no sales of annuities since 1968. While there are some extant ones from the past, as the mover quite properly said, there have been no new sales since 1968. Now despite the style and title, you cannot discontinue sales unless they are continuing. Therefore, I respectfully suggest that that is a misnomer. Since there have been no sales since 1968, they cannot be cut out.

Senator Flynn: But they were offered for sale.

Senator Greene: No, they have not been offered for sale since 1968; at least, that is the case if my information is correct. If I am wrong I will withdraw the statement, but the information I have been given by officers of the Department of Finance is that new sales were finished in 1968. Naturally, they honoured pre-existing sales.

The second point I wish to make is that this revised interest rate obviously sweetens the pot for those who have founded their pension plans upon government annuities. It means that the pot is sweeter than it used to be, and under those circumstances I would very much hope that the government would see to it that those who are getting the benefit of this sweetener—I believe, for instance, the CNR pension fund is founded on government annuities—will pass it on to present and future pensioners by way of improved payments on their pensions, and that it does not all accrue merely to those who start drawing their pensions in the year 2031, or at whatever future date the actual cash accrual might come. I think that all present pensioners should benefit from the improvement in the package, and not just future pensioners.

Those are the two points I should like to make, honourable senators.

Senator Croll: Honourable senators, may I say in reply to Senator Greene that my notes indicate that in recent years there have been only a few new sales of annuities to individuals. During the 1974-75 fiscal year, only 11 were sold.

Senator Flynn: But, they continued to be offered.

Senator Barrow: Honourable senators, there are just a few that have been sold. There have been a few sold in this present year, and there are still some contracts with companies whereby they are able to cover people up until 1979, and it is these that the government wishes to discontinue.

With respect to the revised interest rates, these apply to all, including the present annuitants.

Senator Grosart: In a moment I am going to move the adjournment of the debate. However, before I do that, I wonder if Senator Croll has noticed the references in the other house to the role he played in the early days of this legislation. A distinguished member of the other house said that he had saved the bill. If Senator Croll does not know of this perhaps he would like to read the Commons Hansard, because there were some highly complimentary remarks made about him by Mr. Knowles.

[Senator Croll.]

With that, honourable senators, I move the adjournment of the debate.

On motion of Senator Grosart, debate adjourned.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS COOPERATIVE MARKETING ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

Hon. Sidney L. Buckwold moved the second reading of Bill C-21, to amend the Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing Act.

He said: Honourable senators, our colleague, Senator Laird, will go down in Senate history as being the one who, in moving second reading of a bill, indicated that it was a simple bill, and that proved to be a disastrous introduction. I can say that Bill C-21 is, in fact, a very short bill. I think it is understandable, and I hope to explain it briefly. I also hope that it meets with the approval of the members of this house.

I might say, honourable senators, in moving second reading of this bill, that in today's world of food shortages and starvation all countries must take action to increase the global food supply. Canada is fortunate to be among those nations which have a potential for playing an even greater role in food production than in the past. However, if the country is to reach its full potential, we must make sure that our agricultural industry has all the tools necessary to meet the challenge. I think we all agree that producers must have an adequate return for their input of labour, capital and managerial skills. The producer must have an assurance of a stable market, a good income from his investment, and this means he must have confidence in the long-term market opportunities. Stability for the producer will be reflected in stable production, stable prices for consumers, and, it is to be hoped, increased production to meet the growing food needs of this hungry world.

There have been many legislative enactments in the last little while that attempted to meet these criteria. One major advance in assuring this stability was represented by the recently passed amendments to the Agricultural Stabilization Act. Effective stabilization legislation encourages national production decisions. In addition, this chamber, not too long ago, passed amendments to the farm credit legislation making it easier for young people to start farming. This has also been most helpful.

One of the most important aspects of agriculture in this and in every country is marketing. In fact, orderly marketing is essential to a successful agricultural industry. Farmers usually are short of cash at harvest time, because in respect of many products that is the time when prices are lowest, and traditional storage systems cannot handle the sudden glut that occurs when everyone tries to market at the same time.

● (1500)

Very wisely, in 1939—some 35 years ago—the Government of Canada passed an act permitting the orderly marketing of farm products, known as the Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing Act. It allowed groups of producers who wished to market crops collectively to enter into agreements with the Minister of Agriculture. Under these agreements the Government of Canada acts as guarantor for bank loans made by these groups to cover initial payments, processing, carrying and selling costs. Since this act first became law, products marketed under its provisions have included forage crop seeds, potatoes, fresh apples and apples for processing, maple sugar, tobacco, beans, et cetera. The act provides that equal returns must be made to farmers for agricultural products of the same grade and the same quality. Final returns to the farmers are made after deducting processing, carrying and selling costs. That is the manner in which the act has been operated for the past 35 years.

I should indicate that it was based on a guarantee, which was never greater than 80 per cent of the previous three-year average return. Honourable senators are well aware that in many cases the average return over the past three years for a product falls far short of today's prices. As a result, the farmers have not been able to use this legislation effectively.

Ontario wheat producers, for example, recently found themselves in this predicament because of the recent increases in the price of wheat, and they started a pooling plan in 1973. With the 80 per cent limitation they would have been on the receiving end of an initial payment of $1.25 per bushel, determined when prices were approximately $3 per bushel. The $1.25 they would have received represented only 42 per cent of the value of their wheat at that time. The Ontario wheat producers wanted to use this act for government-guaranteed initial payments at reasonable levels. They used it in 1974, but with an initial price of $2.01, which represented less than 40 per cent of returns. Therefore, an amendment is needed so that they and other Canadian producers of agricultural products will have a realistic guaranteed initial price open to them.

Bill C-21 removes the 80 per cent ceiling, and instead allows the Governor in Council to establish an initial payment based on an estimate of wholesale market prices and marketing costs. The initial payment, therefore, will be based on the prospective market price for the year of the agreement, rather than on the historical basis of a three-year average with a limitation of 80 per cent.

Honourable senators, this is the legislation. I believe it is necessary for the continued growth and stability of the agricultural industry. I trust that all of you will appreciate the importance of the bill, and give it the speedy passage which I believe it warrants. I understand that Senator Argue, the Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, has examined the bill, and does not feel it requires to be referred to his committee. I am not in any way attempting to preclude such referral, but in view of the time limitations before the Christmas recess I am hopeful that the house, with this explanation and other comments from honourable senators, may see fit to give this bill second reading.

Senator Lang: I wonder if I may ask our colleague a question, although I am without knowledge in the field of agriculture and hesitate even to put it forward. Does he have any idea as to the extent that the Government of Canada has been called upon to pay under the guarantees to which he referred as a result of this legislation which has existed since 1939?

Senator Buckwold: In answer to the question, honourable senators, the reading I have on it is that I believe it has only been once that the Government of Canada has had to pay out as a guarantor. In that case, the price finally received by the producer was less than 80 per cent of the three-year average. That was for tobacco in one year when there was some kind of disastrous situation. Other than that, I know of no other pay-out, and the government has acted merely as a guarantor.

Hon. John M. Macdonald: Honourable senators, I am sure that we all listened with interest to the explanation given by the sponsor of this bill. In my opinion, there is general agreement that this change should be made. As he mentioned, this bill changes only one section of the act, and due to the change in times the existing 80 per cent level is no longer sufficient. Therefore, in order that there may be an orderly marketing of those products which come under the provisions of the legislation it is necessary that they not all be placed on the market at harvest time. When that is done it means that the price to the producer is low, and he does not receive full value for what he has produced. Through this type of payment, he can obtain a better return for his products throughout the years.

Perhaps it is of interest to note that this bill was given second reading in the House of Commons before the minister had time to rise to give his explanation. When he did rise, he found that it had already been given second reading. So there has been general agreement that the amendment is good, and I am sure that we all support it.

I might say that it was in 1962 that the government had to fulfill the guarantee with respect to the tobacco situation mentioned by Senator Buckwold. It was a case of so much being produced during that year that the price was very low.

I have one point to make, not with regard to the legislation itself, but to its drafting. When one reads Bill C-21, it is apparent that paragraph (c) contained in clause 1 thereof is comprised of one sentence containing 69 words of over two letters. The words of only two letters account for 22 more. In my opinion, this is atrocious drafting. There is no reason in the world why that paragraph could not have been designed in two or three sentences, so as to make it easier for ordinary people to understand.

I agree that there is no point in referring this bill to committee, and suggest that it be given third reading at the next sitting of the Senate.

Hon. Hazen Argue: Honourable senators, as my name has been mentioned during the debate, I feel I should give my own impression of this legislation. I do not feel it necessary for this bill to be referred to committee. This is not because I think the Senate is short of time to deal with it, but because the amendment is very simple. It has been discussed in the Agriculture Committee of the House of Commons. It is a non-controversial amendment in the sense that no objection has been raised. I certainly agree with Senator Macdonald that the draftsmanship leaves much to be desired. I know I had difficulty understanding the amendment. I had to study it and even now I am not certain that I know what it means. However, in my opinion it means that we are leaving the limit of 80 per cent of a three-year average. Producers in Ontario in situations where the price of wheat, for example, had been $3 per bushel before this amendment were limited to 80 per cent of the $3, which is $2.40. Should wheat increase to $5 per bushel, this does not place the limit at 80 per cent of that $5 price. It provides that the Cabinet can decide that the initial price will be the total amount, which is the difference between the selling price and the cost. If the price is $5 and the cost of storage and handling is 50 cents per bushel, the initial price could increase to as high as $4.50. In other words, it could be raised to the full amount. The only qualifying aspect I see in it as it now reads is that there appears to be a reasonable amount. Perhaps it will be said that $4.50 is not reasonable, that it is not reasonable to set the initial price at the floor price. Certainly it provides those who want to use this legislation with the possibility of getting an initial price which bears some reasonable relationship to the facts of the day, namely, a very much higher price for wheat. The effect of the requirement is quite simple, and if the Agriculture Committee did meet—and I have no objection to that—we would hear a brief but simple explanation of the bill. It would then pass. I see no reason why, when so many committees are sitting, we should send this bill to committee. I shall be quite happy if the bill does not go to committee.

● (1510)

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this be read the third time?

Senator Buckwold moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

ANIMAL CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—SECOND READING

Hon. Fred A. McGrand moved the second reading of Bill C-28, to amend the Animal Contagious Diseases Act.

He said: Honourable senators, I am pleased to speak to and support Bill C-28. It is interesting to note that the original Animal Contagious Diseases Act was passed in 1869, and was the first agricultural legislation to be passed by Parliament following Confederation in 1867. It is therefore of interest to us not only from the viewpoint of the control of diseases of animals but from an historical point of view. The act has, of course, been amended and brought up to date from time to time over the past 106 years, and the fundamental purpose of the present bill is again to bring it up to date with respect to changing times.

The Animal Contagious Diseases Act is the vehicle through which Canada has eradicated and controlled serious infectious and contagious diseases of animals to the point that today Canada's animal health standards are among the highest in the world. This recognized animal health status not only provides for a more economic production of livestock within Canada but, at the same time, safeguards Canada's human population from many animal diseases transmissible to man. In addition, it provides for the possibility of exports through recognized veterinary certification of our live animals, meat, poultry and livestock by-products which last year were exported to 120 countries to a value of close to $475 million. All of those countries require Canadian veterinary health certification of varying degrees.

[Senator Argue.]

The saving to the cattle industry, because bovine tuberculosis has been eradicated, amounts to more than $15 million annually, in addition to the saving in human misery and hospitalization costs from bovine tuberculosis in humans. The reduction of brucellosis in cattle to less than one per cent of the cattle population results in a similar saving, including reduction of undulant fever in humans. Over the past 60 years, it has cost Canada approximately one cent per marketed hog to maintain complete freedom from hog cholera. Prior to the present eradication program in the United States, it cost $1 per marketed hog to keep hog cholera under control through the use of vaccines.

These three examples, together with our livestock and livestock exports, which are dependent upon our animal health status, give adequate proof that it is to Canada's advantage, not only from a livestock production point of view but also from a human health point of view, to maintain the highest possible standards of animal health.

This bill extends the Animal Contagious Diseases Act to regulate the operation, construction, and maintenance of animal deadyards and rendering plants, together with authority to regulate the packaging and marking of products from such operations. It is important that the carcasses of animals that have died, and the inedible rendered products, do not enter the human food chain. The authority provided in this bill will permit adequate regulations which will ensure the proper processing and usage of such products.

The provision for compensation payments to livestock owners whose animals must be slaughtered under disease eradication programs is also being amended. The present system provides for compensation values with the owner also receiving the slaughter value of the animal, where such is permissible. This system has created inequities in that many cattle have varying slaughter values. For example, dairy cattle have a lower slaughter value than beef breeds and therefore an individual having a dairy animal slaughtered, of equal value to a beef type animal, would receive less compensation because of the lower slaughter value. The proposed amendment will change the basis for compensation to be the fair market value of the animal up to a maximum amount prescribed by the Governor in Council, less the gross slaughter value received by the owner. This change provides for more equitable returns to the owners of livestock ordered destroyed under the provisions of the act.

In addition, animal by-products, fodder and other articles must of necessity at times be ordered destroyed to prevent the spread of infectious and contagious diseases. The bill extends the authority to pay compensation so that appropriate payment can be made to owners when such a situation arises.

Another area added to the Animal Contagious Diseases Act is extended authority for the control of artificial insemination centres. The artificial insemination industry in Canada has undergone marked growth in recent years to the point where approximately 52 per cent of dairy cattle and 10 per cent of beef cattle are bred by artificial insemination and, in addition, exports of frozen semen have in recent years exceeded $13 million annually.

In its present form, the Animal Contagious Diseases Act provides for the control of the health of all bulls entering artificial insemination units, but because of the rapid development of the industry, both in domestic and foreign markets, it has become necessary, in order to further eliminate possible disease spread, to extend the control of such units to include the collection, processing, storage and identification of animal semen.

While in the present Animal Contagious Diseases Act there is adequate control with respect to the importation of livestock into Canada, from a disease control point of view there is no requirement with respect to the health of animals being exported. It is considered that if we are to maintain our foreign exports based upon veterinary certification there must be adequate authority to require such certification should we be faced with a situation where someone wishes to take animals out of the country without adequate disease certification, which could well jeopardize our reputation abroad.

The changes to the act will also provide for the setting up of health and disease control standards for zoos and game farms.

A number of existing areas of authority under the act are being amended to make them more clear and effective. For example, the feeding of collected garbage to livestock and poultry as a disease control measure presently under the act is being clarified and made more definitive. The same situation exists with respect to the control of veterinary biologics for domestic manufacture and imports. Likewise, the control of foreign meats aboard foreign ships arriving in Canadian waters is being more clearly defined, together with the authority for the establishment of areas for the control of infectious and contagious diseases on an area basis.

● (1520)

In order to implement all of the above, there are a number of additions and alterations with respect to definitions so that such terms as animal semen, poultry, other birds, bees, reptiles, hatching eggs, and fertilized ovum are specifically included in the jurisdiction of the act.

One of the major changes to the present Animal Contagious Diseases Act provided for in this bill is the provision for regulations regarding transportation of livestock. The care of livestock being transported has traditionally been controlled by the Criminal Code based upon the simple control of travel time, overcrowding, and segregation of bulls. But evidence has shown that this did not provide sufficient protection. The provisions of this bill regarding transportation will, in effect, be giving legislative approval to what the Health of Animals Branch, the transportation industry, the producer associations and the humane societies have achieved through cooperative action in the last few years.

In 1972, the Minister of Justice commissioned Dr. F. Lowe of the University of Saskatchewan and Dr. B. A. Young of the University of Alberta to undertake separate studies of the problem. Their reports formed the basis of a brief prepared by the Canadian Federation of Humane Societies, the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, and the Ontario Beef Improvement Association, with the assistance of the CN and CP railroads.

The brief recommended that the Minister of Agriculture set up a special committee to develop guidelines for the humane and efficient transportation of livestock, and that the guidelines be put into legislation to be administered by the Department of Agriculture. The brief was accepted in total by both the Honourable Mr. Lang, the then Minister of Justice, and the Honourable Mr. Whelan, and those guidelines have been working successfully for the last few years, even though they are not yet passed in legislation.

Basically, the guidelines provide that a Health of Animals Branch officer may examine cattle before loading to make sure they are fit to travel. All cattle originating west of Winnipeg are unloaded at St. Boniface for feed, rest and water. Ruminants are not shipped for more than 48 hours without a five-hour stop for feed, water and rest, and non-ruminants for not more than 24 hours.

As a result of these changes, losses of cattle arriving in Toronto in 1973 were 33 per cent below 1971 losses. In 1974, losses were reduced by another 20 per cent.

Bill C-28 is the enabling legislation to regulate the examination of animals before loading, the segregation of animals on the basis of class, age and sex, the provision of loading and unloading facilities, the maximum number of hours animals can be transported without being unloaded for feed and rest, the construction of vehicles and containers for transporting animals, and to control the movement of unfit animals. Before the regulations under the act are published, the transportation industry, humane societies, and producer organizations will be given the opportunity to discuss them in detail.

Because of the inclusion of this animal transportation authority, it was, of course, necessary to alter the name of the Animal Contagious Diseases Act and it is for this reason that it will now be known as the Animal Disease and Protection Act.

In conclusion, in commending Bill C-28 to honourable senators, I am convinced that the expanded authority provided through this bill with respect to the control of infectious and contagious diseases of animals will benefit and enhance not only the livestock industry of this country but the human population as well, for, as has been said, a number of the diseases dealt with under the Animal Contagious Diseases Act are transmissible to humans.

Finally, the full implementation of this bill will continue to make it possible for us to maintain a high level of exports, both for livestock and livestock products and, therefore, be of benefit to all Canadians.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, we are indebted to Senator McGrand for his comprehensive explanation of this bill.

Some of what I have to say on Bill C-28 may be repetitive. Its subject matter was discussed once before in the Senate, because it started out as a Senate bill, Bill S-2, having received first reading on March 12, 1974.

After second reading debate, Bill S-2 was referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, and as a result of the committee's study there were a number of amendments made to it. Bill S-2, in the form in which it received third reading in the Senate, and was sent to the House of Commons, was a better bill. The only problem was that it died on the Order Paper of the other place with the dissolution of Parliament. It now comes back to us as a House of Commons bill, incorporating all of the amendments made by the Senate to Bill S-2.

Even if it were my habit to find fault with government legislation—which, of course, it is not—I would be very hard-pressed in this instance to mount any major or detailed objection.

Senator Greene: Hear, hear!

Senator Flynn: I sometimes say things just to please my good friend, Senator Greene.

Senator Greene: Nothing that bears repeating.

Senator Flynn: Pleasantries bear repeating. We keep hoping you'll mellow. Since the Senate agreed with the principle of Bill S-2 in March of 1974, I do not see how we could justifiably change our position now.

The Animal Contagious Diseases Act is the vehicle used to maintain the country free of serious animal diseases, to eradicate those that can be eradicated, and bring under control those that cannot be eradicated.

● (1530)

Clauses 31 to 34, inclusive, of the bill are new. They give authority to regulate the care and treatment of animals while in transit. The idea is to reduce the incidence of sickness and disease in animals, and also to eliminate losses during transportation. To this end, the bill provides for the implementation of regulations affecting the movement of livestock by truck, air, rail and ship, both in and out of Canada, and Senator McGrand has given some further explanation on that point.

Other aspects of the bill are to clarify provisions of the act for which regulations already exist. The Department of Justice had expressed some doubt as to whether there was adequate authority in the act to justify the regulations under which the act has been operating. I must say that that bothers me somewhat. This strikes me as retroactive legislation to some extent. We notice that some civil servants have gone overboard in drafting regulations, and we plan to make it all right by giving them now the authority they should have had in the first place. It is a thoroughly unwholesome practice, and one which should not be encouraged.

That brings me to another point. The regulatory powers provided in this bill are very extensive and could easily lead to further abuse, this time on the part of those charged with implementing those regulations. I would ask Senator Argue, if and when this bill is sent to his committee, to pay special attention to the regulatory provisions with a view to ensuring that the basic rights of individuals are not unnecessarily tampered with.

The bill provides authority for the Governor in Council to regulate the importation, quarantine, destruction, disinfection or purification of animal products, by-products, fodder, fodder packing and anything else that might serve to spread infectious or contagious diseases.

[Senator Flynn.]

Also, regulations may be made under this bill to ensure that we do not export disease-bearing animals, animal products, or by-products, or anything else used in respect of animals which may have been infected. The logic behind this is obvious. We do not want to export disease for the simple reason that we do not want any other country to export it to us. Therefore, we are imposing stringent regulations on ourselves in the hope that the various countries which export animals, animal products, or animal by-products to us will do likewise.

The bill also authorizes the regulation of the conduct and operation of zoos and game farms to prevent animal diseases. My hope in March 1974, and it remains my hope now, was that these regulations would lead to better protection for the animals. I am sure that some of the illnesses suffered by zoo and game farm animals are caused by the neglect or downright cruelty and stupidity of some of the people who visit such establishments. We would also want to make sure, on this subject of zoos and game farms, that these places provide adequate accommodation for the animals, and properly trained staff to look after them.

The producers of dairy products will be forced to supply samples of milk and cream to protect human beings from consuming tainted food.

The bill provides that contagious diseases in animals will have to be reported as soon as detected, under pain of penalty for non-compliance. The penalty would be non-compensation when the disease is finally detected, and the animal or animals destroyed.

There are many other innovations in this bill, all of them commendable. They deal with artificial insemination, veterinary biologics, and the operation and maintenance of deadyards and rendering plants.

In March 1974, I raised the point that many recognized authorities in this field had not been consulted prior to the drafting of these amendments, and I mentioned two or three names. I now ask whether, in the period between March 1974 and the present, these people, or their replacements if they have moved on, were consulted? If our Agriculture Committee did not consult these men, perhaps Senator Argue could be prevailed upon to inquire of the departmental representatives, when they appear before the committee, if they consulted with these people.

In closing, I repeat that we support the principle of this bill. All these measures to be instituted to detect and protect against contagious diseases in animals are, ultimately, for the benefit of the human population. They are a protection for our own health, and it is for that reason binding upon us to see to it that they are realistic, effective and, more importantly, capable of application. For these reasons we support the bill.

Senator Norrie: Honourable senators, may I ask Senator McGrand a question? Has he any information on the cost of housing imported animals in quarantine in Quebec City? The last information I had was that the cost was exorbitant, which discourages any kind of importation of animals of that sort. It seems to me that somebody other than the farmer should bear the expense, or some of the expense, of the housing in quarantine of these animals.

Senator McGrand: I do not have that information.

Senator Flynn: You can ask in committee.

Senator Norrie: Yes, I will.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator McGrand moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture.

Motion agreed to.

FEEDS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—COMMONS AMENDMENTS—REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Senate resumed from Tuesday, December 2, the debate on the motion of Senator Langlois for concurrence in the amendments made by the House of Commons to Bill S-10, to amend the Feeds Act.

Hon. Hazen Argue: Honourable senators, I think there is a feeling among some members of this house that perhaps the other place made an error in one of its amendments to Bill S-10, wherein it seeks to limit to $2,000 the penalty upon conviction for indictable offences, in particular as it applies to corporations.

Since this report was made to the Senate there has been an informal meeting of members of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture. Although the meeting was informal, there was a good attendance, and there was unanimity amongst those present that this bill should be referred, with the proposed amendments, to the Agriculture Committee, where we can obtain the benefit of the advice of the Law Clerk of the Senate and, perhaps, officials of the Department of Justice. It is our view that we should take a look at these amendments, and decide whether or not the Senate should propose further amendment.

Since that time, four of us met informally with the Leader of the Government and put to him the request that this bill be referred to the Agriculture Committee. With me were Senator Macdonald, Senator McDonald and Senator Michaud. The Leader of the Government said he would be quite happy to see this done.

MOTION IN AMENDMENT

Senator Argue: Therefore, honourable senators, at this point I move, in amendment, seconded by Senator Greene:

That the amendments made by the House of Commons to Bill S-10, to amend the Feeds Act, be not now concurred in but that they be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture.

● (1540)

The Hon. the Speaker: In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Argue, seconded by the Honourable Senator Greene, that the amendments made by the House of Commons to Bill S-10, to amend the Feeds Act, be not now concurred in but that they be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, I wish to speak briefly to Senator Argue's amendment.

Senator Flynn: Certainly.

Senator Greene: What has happened—and I think it should be indelibly on the record of the Senate at this moment—is that the Senate, which is supposed to be the protector of corporate powers and the guardian of vested interests, put very tough restrictions in the bill to assure that the chief executive officers of corporations which are in violation of the act would be held personally responsible for such violation. We also inserted very severe penalties as against both the chief executive officers and the corporations who, in violation of the act, endangered the health, not only of animals, but of human beings.

It is rather ironic that the Senate, which took this step to protect the public, and which took a strong stand against any corporation and corporate officers who violate the provisions of the act, now see the House of Commons taking the teeth out of the bill and sending it back watered down by making the penalties for violations by corporations, and responsible officers of those corporations, much lighter.

If any part of the legislative arm of this country is the guardian of the rights of corporations, in this instance it is not the Senate; it is the other place. I think that should be very clearly on the record.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I have a few comments I should like to offer with reference to the speeches made by the mover and seconder of the motion in amendment.

I have read the minutes of the committee of the other place which studied this bill, but that reading failed to reveal any pressure or move on the part of either witnesses or members of that committee to amend the bill so as to take away from the presiding judge the discretion of imposing a severe sentence on a corporation convicted of an indictable offence. Consequently, I am inclined to believe the striking out of subsection (1.1) was an oversight on the part of the committee in its anxiety to correct two drafting errors in the wording of the Senate amendments to section 10.

As honourable senators will recall, the first amendment of the House of Commons was to strike out the adjective "natural" before the word "person" in the proposed new subsection 10(1) of the act because under the Interpretation Act the word "person" used alone in any statute includes both a physical, natural legal person, and a corporation.

The second amendment was to correct the imperfect wording of subsection (1.2) which contravened the Canadian Bill of Rights, in that it deprived the chief executive officer of a corporation, convicted of an indictable offence under the act, of his fundamental right to a fair hearing. I would at this point quote subsection (e) of section 2 of the Canadian Bill of Rights:

—no law of Canada shall be construed or applied so as to

(e) deprive a person of the right to a fair hearing in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice for the determination of his rights and obligations.

However, since the chief officer of a corporation so convicted is not a party to the case against the corporation itself, he is placed in a position where he is unable to offer a defence, and also is in no position to appeal the decision, which creates a presumption of guilt in respect of the offence committed by the corporation. This amendment is a very important one which ought to be made, and I am sure every senator will concur in this opinion.

The committee of the other place, in making this amendment, inadvertently, I presume, struck out the provision of subsection (1.1), leaving the imposition of the penalty to the presiding judge in the case of a corporation convicted of an indictable offence under the act.

In my opinion, the new wording of subsection (1.2) of section 10, as adopted by the committee of the House of Commons, is not all that bad in that it goes further than the wording of the original Senate amendment in not limiting the possibility of indictment to the chief officer of a corporation, but also to any officer or director. The relevant part of subsection (1.1), as amended by the committee of the House of Commons, is as follows:

(1.1) Where a corporation commits an offence under this Act or the Regulations, any director or officer of the corporation who authorizes or acquiesces in the offence or fails to exercise due diligence to prevent its commission is guilty of an offence and liable to the punishment provided for in subsection (1).

This wording goes further than the wording suggested by the Senate in its original amendment, limiting the possibility of indictment to the chief officers of corporations. If there is a deterrent to be found in this section, it is the possibility of indictment of any director or any officer of a corporation, because as honourable senators know, a corporation speaks through its officers.

I am in sympathy, as I think I have made quite clear up to now, with Senator Argue's motion to refer these amendments to the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture. However, I would suggest that care be taken not to lead the Senate into a deadlock with the House of Commons through a confrontation at this late stage of the session.

I am sure all honourable senators have vividly in their minds a similar situation which was allowed to develop a year or so ago when this house, in comparable circumstances, was in a deadlock with the other place. In the final analysis, the Senate had to accept the amendments of the House of Commons. Care should now be taken not to lead the Senate into a similar position.

I would even venture to suggest that the passing of these amendments, after a careful and thorough study of them by the Agriculture Committee with the officials and possibly the minister of the Department of Agriculture, would go a long way towards finding the most desirable solution to the problem if followed by a strong recommendation to the House of Commons that it introduce an acceptable amendment at the very next opportunity.

[Senator Langlois.]

I would, therefore, support this motion in amendment.

• (1550)

Senator Flynn: If the minister and other officials appearing before the committee are as convinced and as convincing as the deputy leader, it seems to me that the committee will report concurrence in the amendments.

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, I shall be pleased to have these amendments referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture. I believe the deputy leader is correct in his interpretation of the actions in the other place. They passed these amendments inadvertently, particularly the one which would remove fines from the discretion of the court.

When our committee was studying this bill, Senator Greene made the point that a large feed company could doctor its feeds and thereby illicitly make hundreds of thousands of dollars. In such a case, a fine of $1,000 or $2,000, far from being a penalty, would be merely a licence fee to continue committing the offence.

The impression I got from reading the evidence before the committee of the other place, with its four or five false starts concerning amendments, was that they really did not know what they were doing. Most interesting to me was the fact that in the debate on third reading in the other place, the members of the NDP, who consider themselves great friends of the little person and antagonists of the corporations, made no complaint at all about these amendments. Just imagine Stanley Knowles letting it get past him that Canada Packers can doctor the feeds, and get away with a small fine of $2,000. But the ironic aspect of that debate is that the last person to speak on third reading of this bill in the other place, Mr. Nystrom, the member for Yorkton-Melville, instead of dealing with the bill itself, called for the abolition of the Senate. Among other things, he said that the senators represent their parties, and lobby for corporations.

Well, we are trying to have penalties that fit the offence. We are not trying to make them unduly harsh. We simply feel that when a corporation commits an offence it should be up to the court to decide the amount of the fine. As a senator, I am happy that the Senate appears to be taking a reasonable course in not letting the corporations off the hook, as certain members of the other place apparently have succeeded in doing. To repeat, the best interpretation to be placed on their actions is that they really have not followed the matter carefully, and they certainly did not know what they were doing.

I can assure Senator Langlois that the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture will look at this matter in a responsible way. Anyone wishing to appear before the committee will be given a hearing. My own personal opinion, which is obviously that of a farmer, not a lawyer, is that we should use the words of Bill C-73, which was just passed by this house "... on conviction on indictment, to a fine in the discretion of the court..." I think it would be an improvement if we had such words in this particular bill. If we deleted the limit of $2,000, and substituted "a fine in the discretion of the court," we would be on pretty solid and reasonable ground.

In any event, we shall be looking at that quite carefully in committee, and I invite Senator Langlois to appear at the meeting of the committee to give us the benefit of his judgment.

I might just say that since this matter came before the Senate, I have been busy taking a quick course in law from a number of professors. I have found that the professors, the authorities, very seldom agree with one another, but—

Senator Flynn: It is the same thing in agriculture.

Senator Argue: —but perhaps the Senate will be able to improve the bill.

Motion in amendment agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Wednesday, December 17, 1975

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

NATIONAL CAPITAL REGION

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons to acquaint the Senate that the name of Mr. Poulin had been substituted for that of Mr. Baker (Gander-Twillingate) on the Special Joint Committee on the National Capital Region.

EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RELATIONS IN THE PUBLIC SERVICE

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons to acquaint the Senate that the name of Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich) had been substituted for that of Mr. Alexander on the Special Joint Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service.

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons to acquaint the Senate that the name of Mr. Fairweather had been substituted for that of Mr. Balfour on the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments.

SUPPLEMENTARY BORROWING AUTHORITY BILL, 1975

FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-80, to provide supplementary borrowing authority for public works and general purposes.

Bill read first time.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I move that this bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for second reading later this day.

Senator Flynn: With leave.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Senator Flynn: Of course.
Motion agreed to.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Report of Uranium Canada, Limited, including its accounts and financial statements certified by the Auditor General, for the year ended December 31, 1974, pursuant to sections 75(3) and 77(3) of the Financial Administration Act, Chapter F-10, R.S.C., 1970.

[Translation]

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE—SEVENTH REPORT TABLED

Senator Forsey, Joint Chairman of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, tabled the seventh report of the committee as follows:

Wednesday, December 17, 1975.

The Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments has the honour to present its Seventh Report as follows:

Your Committee approves in principle the concept of legislation relating to freedom of information and therefore recommends that:

(1) the references given to it by the House of Commons December 19, 1974, i.e. the subject-matter of Bill C-225, An Act respecting the right of the public to information concerning the public business, and the Guidelines for Motions for the Production of Papers tabled December 19, 1974, by the President of the Privy Council, be referred to it again in the next Session of this Parliament together with the evidence adduced in relation thereto;

(2) the House of Commons consider the advisability of expanding such terms of reference to include an examination of the Official Secrets Act, the Federal Court Act, the Statistics Act, Prerogative Writs, and other laws which are related to the question of freedom of information and the protection of privacy;

(3) the House of Commons further consider the advisability of directing the Committee to consider the question of automatic data processing in the above context, with due protection for privacy of persons.

Respectfully submitted,

Eugene A. Forsey
Joint Chairman.

[English]

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT INCENTIVES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Barrow, for Senator Macnaughton, Acting Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-74, to amend the Regional Development Incentives Act, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Barrow moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

AGRICULTURE

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO MEET DURING SITTING OF SENATE

Senator Langlois, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(a), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture have power to sit while the Senate is sitting today, and that rule 76(4) be suspended in relation thereto.

● (1410)

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Senator Flynn: Did the committee meet this morning?

Senator Argue: No, we were not able to. We hope to sit at 3 o'clock this afternoon to deal with a proposed amendment. If we have something substantial to report, I hope we will be able to report later today and proceed with the bill expeditiously.

Senator Flynn: Under those circumstances, I am of the view that leave should be granted. I was wondering whether the committee had undertaken a lengthy study of the bill.

Senator Greene: Don't be against the farmers.

Senator Flynn: I'm not.

Motion agreed to.

REPORT OF URANIUM CANADA, LIMITED

PROPOSED REFERRAL TO STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL FINANCE—QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, may I ask the Leader of the Government if it is his intention to move that the report of the Auditor General, which he has just tabled, be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance? I am sure that Senator Everett would welcome such a move.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I can see no objection to that procedure.

CRIMINAL CODE

THERAPEUTIC ABORTIONS—SUPPLEMENTARY ANSWER

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, may I endeavour to reply more fully to a question posed yesterday by the Deputy Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. Senator Grosart made an inquiry with respect to the operation of the Committee on the Operation of the Abortion Law. He asked whether I would agree to comment on why:

... the decision was taken that interested parties, obviously with some expertise, were not permitted to even put before the committee documentation of the facts as they would see them? Is there a reason for that?

I wish to provide assurances this afternoon that there is no intention on the part of the committee to deny the opportunity to any group to place material before it. It has not been constituted as a formal royal commission, however, and thus the opportunity for formal presentation does not exist within the terms of reference which brought the Committee on the Operation of the Abortion Law into existence.

I would remind honourable senators that the following words were part of the official statement which I provided yesterday:

It will be appreciated that as a scientific working group the committee is not authorized to hold public hearings. However, we are assured that the research design will provide in various ways for consulting the knowledge and experience of the public. The committee has advised the representatives of groups who have inquired that it is prepared to accept material falling within its terms of reference which will aid it in its task.

I have undertaken further inquiries this morning, and no group with material which it believes to be important for the deliberations of the committee has been denied the opportunity to make that material fully available to the committee. Therefore, I am pleased to provide the assurance that there is no attempt to exclude pertinent information from that committee.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT INCENTIVES ACT

QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, Bill C-74, to amend the Regional Development Incentives Act, has been placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading tomorrow. May I ask the Leader of the Government whether it is still the intention of the government to push the adoption of this bill in view of the possibility that this program may be one of those cut, according to an announcement which is to be made tomorrow with respect to various programs that are to be eliminated because of the government's new restraint program?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, present plans call for the advancement of this legislation in this chamber as expeditiously as possible. The Leader of the Opposition, in his comments with respect to a possible announcement tomorrow, must base his remarks on speculative stories which have appeared in the media.

Senator Flynn: The only assurance I wanted from the Leader of the Government is that we would not be making an empty gesture by giving third reading to this bill tomorrow.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I want to assure this chamber that the Senate is not interested in any kind of empty gestures. We are concerned about extending the regional development incentives program as effectively and efficiently as possible in those areas of the country where this kind of program is required. As of today, as of this hour, the intention is to proceed with the legislation. It may—

Senator Asselin: It may change tomorrow.

Senator Perrault: It may be, however, that members of the Opposition—and it will be their right to do so—may wish to suggest another course of action after certain announcements are made later this week.

Senator Flynn: Tomorrow is another day.

Senator Perrault: C'est vrai.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS COOPERATIVE MARKETING ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Senator Buckwold moved the third reading of Bill C-21, to amend the Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing Act.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES IMPROVEMENT BILL

SECOND READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Barrow for the second reading of Bill C-75, to increase the rate of return on Government Annuity contracts, to increase their flexibility and to discontinue future sales thereof.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, we had a thorough and excellent explanation of this bill given yesterday by the mover, Senator Barrow. I wish merely to add a few comments to his remarks.

The purpose of the bill is simple. It is to bring about some long overdue changes in the levels of annuity payments for both matured and unmatured contracts. The purpose of the bill is simple but the bill itself is quite complex, because it is not a simple matter to satisfy all the particular requirements of annuitants under the very complex arrangements that have grown up over the years. The ramifications are wide and long in the bill.

Bill C-75 had the support of all parties in the other place, with some qualifications to which I will refer in a moment. The prime purpose of the bill, of course, is to raise the rate of return on government annuities to 7 per cent, retroactive to April 1, 1975; that is, all contracts which have interest rates ranging from the present 3 per cent to 5¼ per cent—there are five levels of interest rates in force at the moment—will have these interest rates raised to 7 per cent for unmatured annuities. This will be a straight accumulation of contributions and interest at the new rate until maturity.

[Senator Perrault.]

For presently matured annuities and those which will mature in the future, the 7 per cent rate of return has been translated into a schedule of percentage increases applied to the contractual amounts of the annuities, depending on the original rates of interest. The increased rates vary from 10 per cent for 5¼ per cent contracts to 32 per cent for 3 per cent contracts.

It may have surprised honourable senators to know that there are still 3 per cent contracts in force. This, of course, is the case because this annuity program goes back some 67 years to 1908, as Senator Barrow told us yesterday.

• (1420)

Because of this increased rate of return there are some consequential changes, one of which is in respect of the ceiling, the total amounts of each annuity base. There are some other consequential changes to increase the flexibility of the bill in respect of benefits from the increased rate of return. There are some housekeeping changes, designed mostly to make it possible for the annuitant to have more flexibility in the way the annuity is paid, and to protect his interest where the purchaser may be a third party. Another change is the official appointment of the Auditor General to audit the annuity fund. Another is to officially authorize the use of the Consolidated Revenue Fund. The bill also provides for a much better schedule of reports to Parliament on the status and operation of the fund.

Finally, the bill gives official recognition to the fact that the time has come to bring this long-established program to an end. The question has been asked why this had not been done by a simple repeal of the act. The reason is that the interests of the annuitants are continuing, and will probably continue until about the year 2050 because of the long-range nature of some of the unmatured annuities.

About 280,000 Canadians will be affected, some 106,000 who now have matured contracts and 175,000 who have deferred contracts. Yesterday there was some discussion about the present status of sales contracts under the act, and we were told, quite correctly, that last year there were only eleven new sales, so public interest in using these annuities for pension protection has practically died out for both individuals and those corporations that were using the annuities as all or part of their pension funds.

A question was raised yesterday about the rather peculiar language of clause 8, which says:

Where an annuity contract under the Government Annuities Act does not permit the annuitant to request changes in his annuity without the purchaser's consent and—

This is the peculiar phrase.

—the purchaser has died or gone out of existence, the annuitant has the same right to request changes in his annuity as had the purchaser.

Senator Greene: It perhaps refers to ones that are in the Senate.

Senator Grosart: "... died or gone out of existence" could refer to some of us. The intent, of course, is to include both the individual and the corporate contracts that will go out of existence.

I said I would mention some of the qualifications that have been made, the first of which refers to the 7 per cent level. It has been understandably asked if this is not too low a level of return on cash investment under present circumstances in the financial markets. Suggestions have been made that 10 per cent would be a more realistic level of return on this kind of investment. However, I think we have to consider that this is an investment fund and is not therefore in the same category as other pension funds or funds relating to pension payments, such as those under the Canada Pension Plan, Old Age Security, and so on.

The 7 per cent rate is about the rate on the national debt, and it is said to be a synthesis of current returns in the private investment sector. I have no quarrel with that.

However, there is what I believe to be an important provision that the Governor in Council can raise or lower the interest rate on any contract, but not below the original rate at which the contract was entered into; that is, not below the 3 to 5½ per cent rates.

In reply to questions asked in the other place, an answer was given that it was expected that this 7 per cent rate would not be reviewed for about three years, but that it would be reviewed within three years.

The retroactive date of April 1, 1975, was complained of by some as not giving an adequate retroactive effect to this change in the interest rate, and the corresponding increase in the maturity value of the contracts. The estimated cost of this increase in the interest rates overall, on both matured contracts, is $38 million as indicated yesterday. The question was whether in the present circumstances that was a big enough drain to place on the Consolidated Revenue Fund at the present time. Of course, reference was made to the fact that there have recently been retroactive increases in reimbursements, some of which have been greater than to the date of April 1, 1975.

It also has been suggested that the yield of these annuity contracts should be indexed or, at least, related in some way to the increasing cost of living. The answer given here—again, I think it probably makes sense—is that this is an investment portfolio situation and not—again, for want of a better word—a welfare pension plan.

I think the reason for the discontinuation of sales is obvious. When sales drop to 11 per year, it is obvious that the Annuities Act has served its purpose, and I think well served its purpose, over the years. I do not know what the intention is of the sponsor as to the disposition of the bill. No doubt he will indicate whether, in his judgment, it is necessary for it to go to committee, in which case the Leader of the Opposition will make a response from this side.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, may I ask a question of either Senator Grosart or Senator Barrow about the discontinuance of this program? The apparent reason, of course, is that last year only 11 sales were made, but it seems to me that this drop is due mainly to prevailing conditions. They were paying only 3 per cent last year. If under new conditions there were to be a renewed demand, would the government consider continuing the program, or is discontinuance related to something else? Are there programs presently available in the private sector? That, to me, would seem to be the major consideration for the discontinuance because, after all, the drop in sales is obviously related to the conditions that attach to these annuities.

Senator Barrow: Honourable senators, it is my understanding in connection with this bill that there are other private plans, and it was considered unnecessary to continue with the present program.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I should like to make just a couple of brief comments on this legislation.

First of all, I think it is long overdue and I welcome it very warmly. In the second place, I share the misgivings just expressed by the Leader of the Opposition. I am disappointed that it is proposed to discontinue this program. I am not persuaded that annuities are being adequately handled now by private corporations. There is room to doubt whether the field is being adequately covered by private pension plans, and I regret very much that the legislation provides for the discontinuance of the annuity sales.

● (1430)

I feel confident that with the new rates which are proposed there will be a market, shall I say, for the annuities, or there will be a renewed interest or renewed demand for them, and I believe there is reason for such a renewed demand because the private sector has not as yet sufficiently met the requirement that people have for this kind of annuity.

Senator Barrow: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Barrow speaks now his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Barrow: Honourable senators, I have little to add to what I have already said. I should like to thank Senator Grosart for his review of the matter. In the event that there may be questions, I would suggest that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Barrow moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science.

Motion agreed to.

SUPPLEMENTARY BORROWING AUTHORITY BILL, 1975

SECOND READING

Hon. Léopold Langlois moved the second reading of Bill C-80, to provide supplementary borrowing authority for public works and general purposes.

He said: Honourable senators, the bill now before the Senate seeks to increase the statutory borrowing authority by $2 billion retroactive to April 1, 1975. This is exactly the same increase in borrowing authority as that sought in clause 5 of the last supply bill.

The Financial Administration Act, Part IV, section 36, requires that "no money shall be borrowed or security issued by or on behalf of Her Majesty without the authority of Parliament." This refers to new funds since section 38 of the same act permits the borrowing of such sums of money as are required for the repayment of any securities that were issued under the authority of Parliament, other than section 39, and which are maturing or have been called for redemption.

It has been the custom since Confederation to include requests for new borrowing authority in one of the first appropriation acts for a new fiscal year. Furthermore, when circumstances have necessitated increases in this borrowing authority, such increases have always been sought in subsequent appropriation acts. Any unused borrowing authority remaining at the end of the fiscal year is cancelled when new borrowing authority has been granted for the new fiscal year.

The need for the new borrowing powers during each fiscal year reflects several factors. It reflects, first, the amount of expenditures approved by Parliament in the main estimates, interim supply and supplementary estimates. It reflects also the budgetary and non-budgetary financial requirements resulting from the difference between the expenditures approved by Parliament and the sources of revenue approved by Parliament also.

The prime justification for including the new borrowing authority in the appropriation acts is that borrowing powers to make up any shortfall between revenues and expenditures should follow fairly automatically, since the shortfall and the borrowing requirements are a consequence of action already taken by Parliament. My information is that it is the government's intention to continue the long established practice of including requests for borrowing authority in appropriation acts in the future.

As a result of the highly successful Canada savings bonds campaign, the Government of Canada raised about $4,336 million in the current fiscal year to November 28, 1975. Of course, redemptions of Canada savings bonds are taking place continuously, and normally average about $100 million per month. In the absence of new borrowings the government would, therefore, be well within its present $4 billion statutory borrowing authority by the end of the fiscal year 1975-76. However, unless additional new borrowing authority is authorized by Parliament, the government will not be able to raise the additional funds which it needs in the remainder of the fiscal year.

In this connection it will be recalled that sales of this year's series of Canada savings bonds were terminated on November 14 last. This decision was taken because it then appeared possible that net sales of Canada savings bonds might use up most, if not all, of the unused statutory borrowing authority. At the same time, the on-going treasury bill financing program was brought to a temporary halt, and it was subsequently decided not to raise new cash in the December 15 marketable bond refunding issue which was announced on November 28.

The borrowing authority of $4 billion granted by Parliament not only reflected the shortfall between expenditures indicated in the main estimates and anticipated on-going sources of budgetary revenues, but also provided some margin for contingencies. In the budget presented to the House of Commons on June 23, budgetary and non-budgetary financial requirements were revised upwards to a figure of $5.3 billion. The various provisions introduced in the June budget were subsequently debated and approved by Parliament. On November 14 the House of Commons was informed that financial requirements for this fiscal year would be between $5 billion and $6 billion.

[Senator Langlois.]

While the $2 billion additional borrowing authority sought in this bill reflects the higher level of financial requirements anticipated for fiscal year 1975-76, new funds to be raised in capital markets during the balance of this fiscal year are expected to be substantially less than this amount. Without wishing to be too precise concerning the government's borrowing plans over the balance of the current fiscal year, I would say that, subject to prevailing market conditions, an amount equal to about half the increase in borrowing authority might be raised in the capital markets. The balance will provide a margin to deal with any unforeseen contingencies such as foreign exchange transactions, and to provide adequate flexibility in debt management and monetary policy.

I am also informed that it is the government's intention to recommence a regular borrowing program through the issue of treasury bills early in 1976, and to raise new funds through the issue of marketable bonds on February 1 next, when $150 million in Government of Canada bonds will mature.

It is for these reasons, honourable senators, that an increase in the statutory borrowing authority is being sought before the Christmas recess. If opportunities to raise new funds in the capital markets are missed now, then of necessity additional burdens will have to be placed on capital markets in the next fiscal year.

● (1440)

I commend this bill to the favourable consideration of this house.

Hon. Jacques Flynn: Honourable senators, before replying to the deputy leader, may I put three questions to him?

If I heard him correctly, he stated that, notwithstanding the decision of Mr. Speaker in the other place, it was the intention of the government to resume the inclusion of borrowing authority in appropriation bills. Is that correct?

Senator Langlois: Yes, it is correct, but I think it would be improper to discuss any decision of the Speaker in the other place in this chamber.

Senator Flynn: But I am not discussing the decision of the Speaker. I am asking if the government intends to challenge the decision.

Senator Langlois: Not to challenge it. I never said that.

Senator Flynn: You said it is going to do that despite the fact that the Speaker said it was improper.

Senator Langlois: I never said that it was despite the decision of the Speaker in the other place. I said I was informed that it was the intention of the government to continue the current practice which has been established ever since Confederation.

Senator Flynn: I said "resume" because the government had to change its mind in the present instance. In any event, I was not criticizing the decision of Mr. Speaker. I suggest that it was the deputy leader who was criticizing him, since he said that he would not take it into consideration.

The second point is that, if my understanding is correct, an objection was raised in the other place with regard to the requirement of a recommendation of his Excellency the Governor General prior to the presentation of this bill. If I have read Hansard correctly, Mr. Speaker has not made any decision in this respect. So, is the deputy leader satisfied that no such recommendation is required for such a bill?

Senator Langlois: Yes, but I would again remind the Leader of the Opposition that I did not criticize, nor did I take objection to, the decision taken by Mr. Speaker in the other place. I merely said that basically his decision was a result of the standing orders of the other place, which do not apply to this house. That is the only comment I made, and I even added that the position I took last year in this chamber was not even raised in the other place—that is, to the effect that borrowing authority is not an appropriation and, therefore, under the Constitution of Canada, need not be recommended to the house by his Excellency the Governor General. This is clear enough.

Senator Perrault: Hear, hear!

Senator Flynn: It is clear enough—that is to say, your interpretation is clear enough—but I do not agree that it is correct. I simply said that you were in one way criticizing the decision of Mr. Speaker. In any event, that was intended only to clear the road for the passage of this bill, and I am sure the Deputy Leader of the Government wishes that.

My last question is as to whether the deputy leader is willing to move that this bill be referred to committee after second reading in order that we might examine the problem of borrowing authority, the state of the debt, et cetera.

Senator Langlois: Well, honourable senators, since this is not a supply bill, and since it is a bill merely seeking authority to borrow money, I would have no objection to its being referred to committee, but I do not think it should be to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance.

Senator Flynn: I do not care which one, but why not the National Finance Committee?

Senator Langlois: But I would like, before concurring in the views of the Leader of the Opposition, to know the purpose he has in mind in insisting on sending this bill to a committee. Is it a question of checking on the wording? I think we need to know that in order to decide which committee it should be referred to.

Senator Flynn: For the purpose of looking into the practice of the government with regard to borrowing. It has been well explained by the Deputy Leader of the Government, and I am not trying to suggest that we would learn much more. But having the officials of the Department of Finance before the committee would be useful, I think. It would help us to find out exactly why these borrowing authorities are used, what the present state of the debt is, and so on and so forth. We could also find out how the last issue of savings bonds sold. I think there are quite a number of questions that can be asked with regard to this bill if the deputy leader is willing to move that it be referred to committee. It can be the committee of his choice; I do not mind. But it seems to me that the subject matter concerns national finance. Nevertheless, if he wants it to be referred to the Health, Welfare and Science Committee, or any other committee, then I have no objection. If I get that assurance, then I think we can give this bill second reading this afternoon.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, as I said in the house last year, and again this week, I have no objection to a bill of this kind being referred to an appropriate committee—that is, if it is a question of procedure or a question of wording. But, as I said, since the Senate has no power whatever to amend money bills—

Senator Flynn: No, no, no.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, we cannot amend money bills, and that is a fact.

Senator Grosart: No.

Senator Langlois: Well, that is your own opinion, but I am of the contrary view. If the Senate took the attitude that it could amend any money bill or any appropriation bill, or whatever you call it, I think the Senate would be taking a very wrong stand. On the other hand—and this is the point I have in mind just now—I am ready to have any such bill referred to the appropriate committee on a question of wording or a question of procedure.

Senator Flynn: It is on the question of substance.

Senator Langlois: This is really a bill seeking authority to borrow money under the Financial Administration Act. Now, I am ready to agree that this bill be sent to a committee, but I do not know as yet which one. I am in the hands of the Senate in this respect. I have no objection whatever, providing we are able to deal with the bill before we adjourn sometime later this week.

Senator Flynn: That is my point. I do not see any reason for the deputy leader's hesitation. If he says he is willing to refer the bill without any restriction to a committee of this house, then I leave it up to him to choose the committee. I am willing to resume my seat and let second reading take place at this time, and then the bill can be referred to committee. I do not think this is the kind of bill that should be dealt with by the whole Senate. There are very precise questions that I would like to put to officials, if we cannot have the minister himself. With that assurance on the part of the deputy leader, I am willing to resume my seat and let second reading take place.

Senator Grosart: May I ask the deputy leader if he would agree that this bill refers to government finance?

Senator Langlois: No.

Senator Grosart: It does not refer to government finance?

Senator Langlois: It is very germane to it but it is not referring to government finance. It is not an appropriation bill, and if you are trying to make it so, I disagree.

Senator Grosart: I am not saying it is a finance bill. I am asking if it deals with the financing of the government. Is it a government finance bill? Does it deal with the financing of the government? I am not saying it is an appropriation bill; I am asking if it is a government finance bill.

Senator Langlois: In one sense, it could be said to be so.

Senator Grosart: Would you say it refers to the estimates?

Senator Langlois: Yes.

Senator Grosart: Then I would draw your attention to rule 67(1)(h) which reads as follows:

The Senate Committee on National Finance... to which shall be referred on motion all bills, messages, petitions, inquiries, papers and other matters relating to federal estimates generally, including:

- (i) national accounts and the report of the Auditor General;
- (ii) government finance.

So, honourable senators, our rules say that any bill referring in any way to government finance or federal estimates "shall be referred".

● (1450)

Senator Langlois: The honourable senator may be right in some way, but this is not an appropriation bill per se.

Senator Grosart: I didn't say it was.

Senator Langlois: There is a fundamental difference in the stand we are taking here. I hope I may be permitted to explain my position.

I am trying to ascertain which is the appropriate committee. I have some doubt about whether this bill should go to the National Finance Committee. Although this is related to the financing of expenditures, it is not an expenditure per se that we are voting in this bill. If honourable senators are satisfied with the limitations which may arise during the debate in committee, I am prepared to move that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance.

Senator Smith (Colchester): May I ask a question of the deputy leader with respect to the capital markets which he mentioned? Was he referring to those in this country or in other countries?

Senator Langlois: In this country, and in other countries if financing is sought in foreign markets. It is not restricted to the domestic market.

Senator Smith (Colchester): I am well aware of that, and I thank the Deputy Leader of the Government for his reply.

Does the government expect to be able to raise the money in Canada, or will it have to go to United States markets?

Senator Langlois: I am not aware of the expectations and hopes in that direction, not being in that department. If the domestic market is not sufficient to supply the financing needed, we will no doubt seek financing outside Canada.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Exactly. I take it that the deputy leader's answer is that it is highly probable that resort will be made to capital markets in the United States for the borrowing of some of this money?

[Senator Grosart.]

Senator Langlois: It might be so.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Langlois moved that the bill be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance.

Motion agreed to.

COMMONWEALTH PARLIAMENTARY ASSOCIATION

TWENTY-FIRST GENERAL CONFERENCE AT NEW DELHI, INDIA—DEBATE CONCLUDED

The Senate resumed from Wednesday, December 3, the debate on the inquiry of Senator Bonnell calling the attention of the Senate to the Twenty-first General Conference of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, held at New Delhi, India, 26th October to 10th November, 1975, and in particular to the discussions and proceedings of the Conference and the participation therein of the delegation from Canada.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, I am speaking now to the inquiry calling the attention of the Senate to the Twenty-first General Conference of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association which was held recently in New Delhi.

Senator Bonnell—I am sorry he is not here—gave an excellent explanation of what went on at the conference, and made some very searching comments of his own on the proceedings. I want to compliment him on that. If he were here I would tell him that I had a message from New Delhi only today saying that they regarded his report to the Senate to be of such excellence that they want to publish it.

Senator Bonnell made an outstanding contribution. I believe this was his first attendance at a CPA general conference. He was active in the plenary sessions, the committees and the seminars, and I might add, because his wife was with him in New Delhi, that he was also very active in the shopping bazaars. He was the only senator who was a member of the Canadian delegation; I attended in another capacity.

I should perhaps say on this occasion that the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association is unique among the many interparliamentary associations. First it is the only association which includes delegates from all the provinces and states comprising the four federal countries which are members of the CPA—that is to say, India, Australia, Malaysia and Canada. It is also the only association which holds regular conferences, meetings and seminars in Canada, to which there are delegates from all the provinces.

At the present time it is the only interparliamentary association which has as chairman of its executive committee a distinguished provincial premier, the Honourable Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia. It has some 95 branches, and Senator Bonnell referred to the 35 countries represented.

The CPA differs from other such associations in that it has delegates from all the legislatures in those countries, and in our case this includes representatives of 14 legislatures. It is not always remembered that we have 14 legislatures in Canada—the two legislatures in the Parliament of Canada, the 10 provinces, and the councils of the Northwest Territories and the Yukon Territory, which are now officially regarded as legislatures because their members are elected.

This conference was held in India at a very unusual time in the history of that country. It took place during what is called there "The Emergency." Honourable senators are aware of the situation that has arisen, and of the criticism around the world of the steps which have been taken by the Indian government to meet that emergency.

I might say that one of the first remarks made to me by a very high level member of the Government of India was, "Is what we have done very different from what you did in Canada to meet the FLQ crisis?" I said I thought it was. I said that we had perhaps taken almost the same powers, but had not used them all. Certainly there were some that we would not have used unless—

Senator Langlois: Short of jailing the Opposition.

Senator Grosart: I was not going to go into that in detail. As an Opposition senator, I had no fear of going to jail, but that certainly was one of the differences, and there were others.

Senator Langlois: A big one, too.

Senator Grosart: Yes. Unquestionably there were some big differences. However, the fact remains that the Canadian Government did take very sweeping and undemocratic powers on that occasion.

● (1500)

I think all of us came away with at least the reaction that when in India the situation looked very different from the way it looked when outside India. I will say no more about that, except to add that the Indian Government makes what appears on the surface to be a good case, namely, that India was faced with anarchy. Whether that was a fair assessment, or whether the reaction was too great, I will not discuss at this time. I will merely say that, in my view, we should all be extremely careful in applying the standards of democracy as we see them in our country to emerging countries.

I, for one, have had a good deal to do with looking at the one-party systems in certain African countries and in one other, and I must say that in some respects the one-party state is not very much less democratic than our own. In one state, of which I know, five cabinet ministers were defeated in an election recently, which indicates some degree of democracy still existing even in a one-party state. Much the same applies to India. Their problems are unbelievable. For example, with respect to communications, I was told that one of their indicators of social progress is the fact that now one in five villages has a communal radio receiver. One can understand the problems there are of communicating with a population of almost 600 million people, the vast majority of whom are in those villages.

Senator Langlois: What about the use of dialects?

Senator Grosart: I think there are 15 officially recognized languages. And we think we have a problem in Canada!

Senator Langlois: And one radio receiver—

Senator Grosart: And one radio receiver in every fifth village. That is the situation.

Senator Denis: We are fighting hard to get only two languages in Canada.

Senator Grosart: When Senator Denis says we are fighting hard to keep down to two official languages, he may be right.

Senator Denis: We have three languages—English, French and my own.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): Who cares about your own?

Senator Grosart: We all care very much, because we always like to understand what Senator Denis is saying, since his remarks are always pertinent, short and very much to the point.

There was some discussion, not in the regular sessions but in private conversations, particularly my own, about the nuclear explosion in Rajasthan, which took place on May 18, 1974. The effect of this was, of course, to add India to the five other countries of the world that have set off underground or overground nuclear explosions, the other countries being the United States, the USSR, the United Kingdom, France and China. That in the last named country may have had something to do with India's decision to move along the nuclear explosion path as far as it has. The Indians make a very strong claim, indeed insist, that they have exploded the atom for purely civilian purposes.

The matter has become of interest in Canada because the plutonium used to bring about that atomic explosion came from a reactor supplied by Canada—not the Rajasthan reactor but a smaller, experimental reactor that we provided to India at the time of the Colombo Plan in about 1957. It is the CIRUS NRX reactor. This produced the plutonium used in the nuclear explosion in Rajasthan. As a result, the Canadian Government has notified India that we are delaying, perhaps withdrawing, all support for their nuclear program.

This is a matter of great concern to the Indian Government and to the Indian people, because their most successful reactor was provided by Canada, and we did enter into a contract with them to provide a second identical 220-megawatt reactor. This particular reciprocal exchange between Canada and India is now temporarily at an end. I can say that the Indian Government is very much concerned, and when asked about it my only comment was that I had no doubt the officials and statesmen on both sides would find a way to resolve this problem.

Canadian aid to India is by far our greatest single contribution to developing countries. Our aid to India is fifth amongst that of all the nations of the world, and India is most anxious to continue their reciprocal, and previously excellent, relations with Canada.

There was also an interesting reference to the fact that an Indian city is "twinned" with Calgary, namely the City of Jaipur, one of the ancient, historic cities of India. Some of us were there one evening when there was a celebration of that fact, and there was more than one suggestion that Indians would welcome similar "twinning" with Canadian cities.

One of the results of the General Council meeting was the election of the Speaker of the House of Commons, the Honourable James Jerome, as Vice-President of the Association, looking forward to 1977, when Mr. Speaker Jerome will be the President at the conference in Canada.

At this time I have no further comment to make on the situation, except to say that if any honourable senator is particularly interested in examining the facts upon which the very drastic and Draconian decisions of the Indian Government were taken, there is information available, and it will almost certainly change the viewpoint of anybody who has tended to condemn out of hand the steps the Indian Government has taken.

The Hon. the Speaker: As no other honourable senator wishes to participate in this debate, this inquiry is considered as having been debated.

CRIME AND VIOLENCE

MOTION TO ESTABLISH SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE— MOTION IN AMENDMENT—DEBATE ADJOURNED

The Senate resumed from Tuesday, October 21, the debate on the motion of Senator McGrand that the Senate considers it desirable that a special committee of the Senate be established at an early date to inquire into and report upon crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society.

Hon. Charles McElman: Honourable senators, I will detain you but briefly. However, I do wish to join other senators who have spoken in this debate in commending Senator McGrand for bringing this most important subject to the attention of the Senate. I also congratulate him on the clarity and quality of his remarks on that occasion.

Unfortunately, a considerable period of time has elapsed since Senator McGrand introduced this motion, and honourable senators are faced only with the very broad terminology of the motion itself rather than its real purpose, which was so well expressed by Senator McGrand.

● (1510)

It is readily understandable that concerns have arisen, such as those expressed recently by the Honourable Senator Choquette, that a study launched under such broad and imprecise terms could range in many directions, be very costly and take two or three years to complete. So we really have to return to the terminology used by Senator McGrand in his speech to determine his intent rather than look for it in the motion itself. Did Senator McGrand wish to have the Senate undertake a study of organized crime, the Mafia, in Canada? His remarks, of course, make it clear that he did not. A public study of organized crime is currently under way in the province of Quebec, and continuing studies of such matters are carried out by the provincial attorneys general and the solicitors general and the enforcement agencies which are answerable and responsible to them.

Did Senator McGrand wish the Senate to inquire into the drug culture, prostitution, rape and the variety of related criminal areas, as one speaker in this debate appeared to suggest? He did not, of course. Such a study might prove titillating to some and cause the media to give coverage to the Senate—a type of coverage we do not seek but which they might give us if there was sufficient sensationalism associated with it. But again these are matters under continuing study by the authorities mentioned a moment ago, as are penology, rehabilitation and many other programs which follow after the fact of crime and violence.

[Senator Grosart.]

Again Senator McGrand made it quite clear that it was not his purpose to delve into such matters in the study he proposed. He knows, as the Senate must know, that an inquiry of the whole broad spectrum of crime and violence as it now exists in contemporary Canada would be repetitive of past, current and continuing studies, would be wastefully expensive and would probably be more productive of media headlines than of concrete or useful results for Canada or Canadians.

Canada and many other nations spend substantial portions of their wealth and utilize much of their human resources in reaction to crime and violence. Canada and those same other nations spend relatively little of their wealth and utilize precious few of their human resources in determining basic and principal causes in the making of a child, a young man or young woman into a criminal or a violent member of society. They also spend little in determining policies and programs which would help in reducing, changing or eliminating those causes.

I do suggest it is time Canada devoted more of its resources in that direction. Resources committed to such a purpose would be returned manifold: first, in beginning to hold the line against the rapidly escalating costs of crime and violence to our society; second, in the longer term, by bringing about a reduction in the level of crime and violence and their costs.

Some people may believe that this is nothing but an academic exercise or a hopeless task to undertake, but, as Senator McGrand has so properly stated, we must start somewhere. An attitude of defeatism in the face of rising crime and violence and their dreadful costs, both in human lives and financially, will eventually turn the metropolitan areas of Canada into inhumane, armed camps similar to those which have evolved in the major cities of the United States.

It is readily understandable why Senator McGrand would wish the Senate to undertake a study of the causes of crime and violence and to determine measures that would prevent their continuance. For several decades the good senator was a respected general practitioner of medicine in rural New Brunswick. He was also Minister of Health in that province. In that capacity he learned well the respective and relative values of curative medicine and preventive medicine. Both are essential to human well-being. For example, the amount of money required to cure and correct the crippling effects of infantile paralysis on one child will pay for the immunization of literally thousands of children today. But such an equation could be made only after the cause of that crippling disease was found and the preventive measures discovered or developed.

Similar equations can be related to the once dreaded diseases of tuberculosis, smallpox, diphtheria, cholera and a host of others that formerly claimed untold thousands of lives.

The finding of the causes of those diseases and the medical and scientific knowledge which was developed to prevent them did not happen overnight either. They developed over the many decades. But a start, as Senator McGrand has said, had to be made somewhere by someone to bring about such immense savings in human lives and indeed in financial resources.

Honourable senators, it is in the spirit of that same philosophy of study and discovery that Senator McGrand proposes that the Senate should focus upon the causes and prevention of crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society. He proposes that Canada begin to learn and practise preventive criminology, to assist in holding the line against, and indeed reducing, those dreadful costs, and to apply preventive criminology rather than continue to apply only curative or reactionary criminology. I support him enthusiastically in that proposal. However, and with great respect for Senator McGrand, I do suggest that it would be premature at this time to establish a special committee of the Senate to pursue this inquiry without more precise terms of reference first being established.

Many of our standing committees are operating at a high level of activity at this time and there is no relief in sight either for the current session or the session we will be undertaking in the new year. Our support staff is heavily taxed to keep abreast of the current workload, and we are presently in the midst of a national program of restraint. However, this need not prevent the necessary work which must be undertaken before really meaningful studies can begin. Useful information is certainly available. Many reports of studies completed in North America and Europe within this whole broad field are available and should be assembled for study of their findings and conclusions in order to avoid covering the same ground again.

Senator McGrand has referred briefly to the work, for instance, of Dr. Anthony Storr, Dr. Nathan Blackman and Dr. Edward Lenoski, Eric Fromm and others, and to the recent findings of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in England. All of these are relevant studies. The Ontario Human Rights Commission has only recently released the results of a study on discrimination against black people, which could also provide some insight into the causes of reactive aggression in children and young adults.

A royal commission in Ontario is currently studying, and holding public hearings on, violence depicted by the communications industry—the media. Testimony taken by the commission concerning the effect upon children and young adults should be most helpful within the overall scope of the study proposed by Senator McGrand.

Studies conducted into some aspects of this total problem have recently been undertaken by the United States Government and the reports of those studies are now available. All such available information should be assembled, and all proven or useful conclusions should be summarized. Only then, in my view, will it be possible to determine the extent to which further studies and inquiries should be undertaken by the Senate into the whole great problem area that is suggested.

● (1520)

Such preliminary work need not be undertaken by a special committee of the Senate. I would therefore respectfully suggest to Senator McGrand and the Senate that this motion not be proceeded with at this time but that the subject matter of the motion be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science. I would further suggest that that committee might consider striking a subcommittee to undertake the assembling of the relative learned reports, findings and conclusions in this problem area. Such a small subcommittee, with the able assistance of our parliamentary library staff, could undertake this task effectively and without any further delay. The high cost of hiring special staff and the printing of verbatim committee reports would also be avoided through the adoption of such a procedure during the necessary preliminary work schedule leading up to the more formal studies by the full committee, if that were considered desirable. I would hope that these suggestions, which are meant only in a constructive vein, will commend themselves to Senator McGrand and to the Senate.

I would conclude by again commending Senator McGrand for his initiative in bringing this vitally important subject to the attention of the Senate, and by again expressing my support for the purpose he wishes to achieve.

Honourable senators, in order to bring these suggestions formally before the Senate, I now move, seconded by Senator Carter, in amendment:

That the motion be not now adopted but that the subject matter thereof be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator McGrand, seconded by the Honourable Senator Eudes:

That the Senate considers it desirable that a special committee of the Senate be established at an early date to inquire into and report upon crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society.

In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator McElman, seconded by the Honourable Senator Carter:

That the motion be not now adopted but that the subject matter thereof be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment?

Senator Asselin: I wish to adjourn the debate on the motion in amendment until tomorrow.

On motion of Senator Asselin debate adjourned.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, before moving the adjournment of the house I should like to make two announcements. The Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science will meet tomorrow at 11 a.m. in room 260-N. I have also asked that arrangements be made for the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance to meet tomorrow at 10 a.m., and that the Minister of Finance or the President of the Treasury Board, together with officials of the Department of Justice, be invited to attend.

Senator Flynn: Why the Department of Justice? Why not the Department of Finance?

Senator Langlois: I said that I had asked the Minister of Finance or the President of the Treasury Board and officials from the Department of Justice to be present. In this way members of the committee will not be limited in the questions they may wish to ask.

Senator Flynn: I was just wondering why officials from the Department of Justice should be invited.

Senator Langlois: In case there should be a question as to the wording. I am trying to do my best to cover the situation thoroughly.

Senator Flynn: There is no disagreement on that.

Senator Langlois: Any senator in attendance tomorrow will be able to ask any questions he wishes, and even for the attendance of any additional officials. I hope that the notices will be issued in time this evening so that honourable senators will be able to arrange to attend the meetings tomorrow morning.

Senator Flynn: I simply wanted to ask the Deputy Leader of the Government, since it seems to be the objective that Parliament recess not later than Friday of this week, what bills are expected to come to us from the other place between now and then, and what bills does the government want the Senate to pass before we adjourn for the Christmas recess?

An Hon. Senator: And when we come back?

Senator Flynn: That probably depends on the answer I get.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, we expect to be in a better position tomorrow to provide the information which honourable senators seek and to which they are entitled. It depends to a great extent on the activities in the other place this afternoon. I shall undertake both personally, and later in the chamber, to make that information available as soon as possible to the Leader of the Opposition.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

Thursday, December 18, 1975

The Senate met at 2 p.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES IMPROVEMENT BILL

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Carter, Chairman of the Senate Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Science, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-75, to increase the rate of return on Government Annuity contracts, to increase their flexibility and to discontinue future sales thereof, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Barrow moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

SUPPLEMENTARY BORROWING AUTHORITY BILL, 1975

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Everett, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-80, to provide supplementary borrowing authority for public works and general purposes, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Langlois: With leave of the Senate, I move, seconded by Senator Perrault, that the bill be read the third time now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by Senator Langlois, seconded by Senator Perrault, that the bill be now read the third time. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, the committee met this morning. I think it proved that it is very useful, generally speaking, to refer to committee an appropriation bill containing borrowing authority, or a separate bill such as this one providing specifically for borrowing authority for the government.

We had a very profitable meeting. Many pertinent questions were put and useful answers given. I suggest that in future this practice should be continued.

My second point is that the committee found that all such bills, whether they are supply bills containing borrowing authority or special bills such as this one providing distinctly for borrowing authority, could be improved were they to make more precise the authority which they seek.

My third point is that the wording of the present bill is ambiguous in certain areas. For instance, what is the period during which the borrowing authority could be used—that is the main thing—and could this borrowing authority be used after the fiscal year? There is no reference in the bill to the period covered by the borrowing authority which is sought for the government. Clearly, improvements must be made in the future if the present practice of presenting a separate bill providing borrowings authority for the government is to be continued. Such bill must be drafted in another way because this one, as presented, is lamentably imprecise.

The committee provided the Department of Justice and the Department of Finance with some ideas on the sort of improvements which should be made to this kind of bill, and we may yet provide others. On the whole, I do not think it is necessary at this time to make any amendments to the bill. However, it is my hope that in future there will be no doubt left in the mind of the Senate or of Parliament as to the exact purport or meaning of a bill such as this.

● (1410)

Senator Everett: Honourable senators, in reply I should like first of all to congratulate the Leader of the Government and his deputy on raising an issue the last time we considered estimates, which was to the effect that the borrowing authority, which was then $4 billion, was asked for in the supply bill.

The Senate considers supply bills in the form of the estimates, which are referred to the National Finance Committee. When it passes the estimates, it does so before the supply bill comes down from the other place. Immediately following that, it passes the supply bill without further reference because it has indeed examined all the items that are in the supply bill in the form of the estimates.

However, there was one item—and this was the point raised by the Leader of the Opposition and his deputy on the last occasion—where the borrowing authority which was included in the supply bill was not included in the estimates and, therefore, was not examined by the committee. As I said, the last borrowing authority that was granted was $4 billion, and the Leader of the Opposition and his deputy, quite rightly, raised the point that $4 billion in borrowing authority was being authorized without adequate examination by the committee. As a result, the government has separated the borrowing authority from the supply bill, so that now we have Bill C-79, which is a supply bill, and Bill C-80, which is a borrowing authority bill. This bill asks for $2 billion in additional borrowing authority for 1975.

The Leader of the Opposition raised a problem in connection with this bill yesterday. The bill itself was obviously drafted in a hurry and may have been subject to some rather bad draftsmanship. It suffers from one obvious defect in that it asks for $2 billion in supplementary borrowing authority retroactive to April 1, 1975. The reason for that is that the government as at this point has exceeded its borrowing authorities by $270 million as a result of the great success of the Canada Savings Bonds drive.

In addition, the draftsmanship does make it possible that this authority could run out at the end of the current calendar year, December 31, 1975, whereas it is the government's intention that the authority should run to the end of the fiscal year, which is March 31, 1976. However, the witnesses from the Department of Finance assured the committee that they are not concerned about that. They feel it does give them legal authority.

I do accept the suggestion by the Leader of the Opposition that the committee should examine this type of legislation and ensure that the drafting of it more particularly meets the requirements of the government. I do thank him for raising these issues and for causing a situation in which borrowing authority now forms a separate piece of legislation that can be examined by the appropriate committee in the proper manner.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, there are a few comments I wish to make on this bill. First of all, I join with Senator Everett in expressing appreciation to the Leader of the Opposition and his deputy for having brought the wording of Bill C-80 to the attention of the Senate. This morning in committee important points were raised by the Leader of the Opposition having to do, in particular, with the duration of this borrowing authority. I realize that the wording of the bill leaves something to be desired in that respect. In particular, although the long title of the bill is: "An Act to provide supplementary borrowing authority for public works and general purposes", the short title reads: "This Act may be cited as the Supplementary Borrowing Authority Act, 1975". This would tend to indicate that this authority is limited to the present calendar year.

In order to get the real meaning of this bill one has also to read clause 2(2):

Subsection (1) shall be deemed to have come into force on the first day of April, 1975.

Thus, the starting date mentioned in the bill is the starting date not of the calendar year but of the fiscal year. I think that is the only comfort we can find in the wording of this bill as to the extent in time of this authority.

I am sure that the discussion in committee this morning will go a long way towards convincing the draftsmen to be very careful in future to use exact language in wording such bills. On the other hand, I have no authority for considering that we are creating a precedent, but I have on two occasions in the past said that I would always welcome suggestions to refer the wording and procedural aspects of some bills to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance, or any other appropriate committee, for review and clarification.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

FEEDS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—COMMONS AMENDMENT—REPORT OF COMMITTEE—DEBATE AJOURNED

Senator Argue, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, to which were referred the amendments made by the House of Commons to Bill S-10, to amend the Feeds Act, presented the following report:

Thursday, December 18, 1975.

The Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, to which were referred the amendments made by the House of Commons to Bill S-10, intitled: "An Act to amend the Feeds Act" has, in obedience to the order of reference of Tuesday, December 16, 1975, examined the said amendments and now reports as follows:

Your committee recommends that the amendments be concurred in with the exception of the third amendment, which it proposes be amended as follows:

Strike out the third amendment and substitute therefor:

"3. Page 3, lines 7 to 30. Strike out lines 7 to 30 and substitute the following therefor:

'contravenes any provision of this Act or the regulations is guilty of an offence and,

(a) if an individual, is liable

(i) on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to both, or

(ii) on conviction upon indictment, to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, or to both; or

(b) if a corporation, is liable

(i) on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or

(ii) on conviction upon indictment to a fine in the discretion of the court.

(1.1) Where a corporation commits an offence under this Act or the regulations, any director or officer of the corporation who authorizes or acquiesces in the offence or fails to exercise due diligence to prevent its commission is guilty of an offence and liable to the punishment provided for in subsection (1)."

Respectfully submitted,

Hazen Argue,
Chairman.

• (1420)

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this report be taken into consideration?

Senator Argue: With leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(f), I move that the report be adopted now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, perhaps I should explain what our committee is recommending and some of the reasons for the recommendation. The Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture amended Bill S-10 as originally presented, and these amendments were approved by the Senate itself.

The bill as amended would have made the chief executive officer of a corporation convicted of an offence under the act personally responsible. It was argued that this was in contradiction of the Bill of Rights and was therefore unacceptable.

It would appear that the Committee on Agriculture of the other place inadvertently removed an important part of the provision whereby a corporation, after being found guilty, would be liable to pay a fine at the discretion of the court. Our amendment read:

(1.1) Every corporation that contravenes any provision of this Act or the Regulations is guilty of an indictable offence.

The Committee on Agriculture of the other place also said that it was not necessary to make a distinction between every natural person or every corporation. Our amendment read:

10. (1) Every natural person who contravenes any provision of this Act or the regulations is guilty of an offence and is liable

(a) on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to both; or

(b) on conviction upon indictment, to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, or to both.

(1.1) Every corporation that contravenes any provision of this Act or the Regulations is guilty of an indictable offence.

It was said in the committee of the other place that this distinction did not have to be made, that "person" in the Interpretation Act meant a natural person and a corporation. But by making that amendment, the House of Commons committee removed from the Senate bill the provision that every corporation contravening any provision of the act or the regulations would be guilty of an indictable offence and could be fined, in the discretion of the court, and substituted a limit of $2,000 being placed on the fine that could be set.

In committee yesterday the consensus was that there should be a higher penalty for a corporation. If a large corporation, such as Purina Foods, for example, were to be fined $2,000 for contravening this act, it would almost have the effect of constituting a licence for the corporation to continue its illegal practices.

I am sure honourable senators wonder if it is common for other acts to draw distinctions between individuals and corporations with respect to offences and penalties. Well, there are several statutes in which the penalties imposed on the corporations are heavier than those imposed on individuals, including the Canada Grain Act, the Motor Vehicle Safety Act, the Inland Water Freight Rates Act, the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act, the Foreign Insurance Companies Act, the Canada Labour Code and the National Trade Mark and True Labelling Act. Just from that list you can see that there is ample precedent for making a distinction between the types of penalties applicable to individuals and to corporations.

After reading the record of the committee proceedings in the other place, I really cannot understand the course of action of the Commons. Let me illustrate what I mean by reference to the committee proceedings as reported in issue No. 63 of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the Standing Committee on Agriculture in the House of Commons. You will see that the very questions we are raising today were being raised at that time. Mr. C. R. Phillips, the Director General of the Production and Marketing Branch of the Department of Agriculture, was responding to questions:

MR. PHILLIPS: It could well be what the member has said, and in terms of the corporation it could be higher—

That is, the fine could be higher.

—I think we could look at other bills, and we would find that the levels of fines are higher for corporations.

MR. ROBINSON: Why could you not insert a clause, something of this nature, in the case of individuals a fine not exceeding $2,000, in the case of a corporation a fine in greater amount as deemed necessary by the convicting judge?

MR. PHILLIPS: It is a possibility.

I would suggest, therefore, that Mr. Phillips, the Director General of Production and Marketing Services, was in sympathy with adopting such a law.

With respect to leaving to the discretion of the court the determination of the fine, I can say that in Bill C-73, which has already been passed, there is provision for a penalty on indictment in the discretion of the court. Moreover, in the Combines Investigation Act, section 38(4), the penalty section, reads as follows:

Every person who violates subsection (2) or (3) is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable on conviction to a fine in the discretion of the court or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to both.

● (1430)

That would, therefore, go even further than we are going in this bill, because this would say that any person found guilty of an indictable offence will have a fine set in the discretion of the court. Here we are narrowing it down to corporations found guilty of an indictable offence, and providing for a smaller penalty for a corporation found guilty on summary conviction.

One of the worries of the members of the other place was that by providing for two types of fines, one for an individual and one for a corporation, a farmer who operates a corporation, for example, that mixes feed in the name of himself and perhaps his family—in other words, a very small family corporation—might be caught twice: he might be found guilty as an individual, and then found guilty as a corporation, so that he might perhaps even be placed in bankruptcy.

I have been supplied with a report of a court case that dealt with this very situation in the Manitoba provincial court. The case is that of Regina vs. Gayle Air Limited and Belluz. Belluz was the owner of Gayle Air Limited, which was a small company. I believe the company owned one airplane that Belluz was using. The airplane crashed, and as a result Belluz was taken to court.

In his judgment, the judge stated as follows:

—in convicting both defendants, I feel that Gayle Air Limited and the accused, David George Bernard Belluz, are practically one and the same person, so that any penalty which I impose will be imposed as if it were against one accused, although it may be imposed against each on a proportionate basis.

I think the legitimate concern of members of the other house that they should do nothing to make it more difficult for small corporations does not arise.

Some here may say, "At this late date in the session we should not be confronting the House of Commons with an amendment." Well, I think we should be doing our duty as we see it, even though by so doing we confront the House of Commons with an amendment. An amendment is not in any way a delaying procedure. If we pass an amendment to this bill in this chamber, as I understand it, a message will go immediately to the other place informing them of what we have done. The Speaker of the House of Commons, having received that message, though he will not interrupt a member of the House of Commons who has the floor, will, once that member has concluded his speech, inform the house of the message. The message will then be recorded in the Votes and Proceedings of the House of Commons for today, and the item will appear on the list of government orders for tomorrow. If the government wanted to deal with this particular amendment very quickly, it could call that order within 24 hours of receiving the message.

What is the batting average of Senate amendments in the other place? It is pretty high. On only very few occasions over the years has the House of Commons felt it should attempt to block, or refuse to accept, amendments that have been sent to it by the Senate.

Senator Phillips: Is that the same argument you presented last week on the amendment to the anti-inflation bill?

Senator Argue: I do not think I presented any kind of different argument.

Senator Flynn: You voted in a certain way, though.

Senator Argue: Anyway, the history shows that discussion of a Senate amendment in the House of Commons is usually very brief, amounting to perhaps a page or two of Hansard. Stanley Knowles has complained that there are no real procedures in the House of Commons—

Senator Asselin: He is your friend.

Senator Argue: He has not been my friend for a longer time than you might think.

In any case, Stanley Knowles has said, "When you get these Senate amendments there is really no procedure in the House of Commons whereby they can be discussed." He went on, "But, you know, I do not think Senate amendments are worth fussing over, so I am going to let this one go through quickly."

[Senator Argue.]

In the House of Commons, when they received Bill S-10 as amended, which had in it a clause governing what happens when a large corporation is brought before a court and convicted of an indictable offence, and in terms of which we were prepared to have the fine left to the discretion of the judge, they said, "Oh no, we should place a ceiling on it of $2,000."

An Hon. Senator: Shame!

Senator Argue: When the bill was being read the third time in the other house, Lorne Nystrom, the member for Yorkton, rose in his place and objected to a government bill being initiated in the Senate. He said, "You know, the senators are not elected; they are there just lobbying for the corporations." Well, I would suggest that over in the other place—perhaps inadvertently, and perhaps because they did not know what they were doing, and that is the best interpretation I can put on it—they are the people who through this legislation are, in fact, aiding corporations, and lobbying for corporations, by placing in the bill a small restrictive penalty.

Now, honourable senators, the senators who are accused of working for the corporations have before them an amendment, originating in the Senate Standing Committee on Agriculture, proposing that in this legislation we include the same kind of provision as is to be found in the Combines Investigation Act. That is to say, if, in fact, a corporation is found guilty of an indictable offence, then the penalty shall be in the discretion of the court. I suggest that that is the best answer we can make to those who are saying that we are lobbying for the corporations when we in this chamber take our duties responsibly, and when we come up with what we consider to be a responsible amendment, which I hope will receive the unanimous approval of this house and will then be sent to the other place.

Perhaps I might be permitted to say for the record that I was extremely pleased that in the Agriculture Committee the report and the amendment now recommended was passed unanimously on a motion moved by Senator John M. Macdonald and seconded by Senator Paul Lafond.

Honourable senators, I have great pleasure in moving the adoption of this report, and in recommending it to the Senate. I hope it will be passed unanimously, and I hope we hear the end of this tripe coming from the other place to the effect that senators are here to lobby for corporations. We are here to see that justice is done, and I think that by proposing this amendment we are improving the process of justice in this country.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, if no other senator wishes to speak at this time I move that this debate be adjourned until later this day.

Senator Flynn: If Senator Langlois would yield, I would like to add a few words. I would say to Senator Argue, first of all, that I am not as optimistic as he is that by this action we are destroying the prejudice that exists against the Senate, and which finds its expression in the charge that we are forever supporting corporations. Were this to be the result of this report and amendment then I should be only too happy, but I am not convinced that this is likely to transpire. You don't upset prejudices that easily.

The second point I should like to make is that this experience of amendments made in committee to bills as originally drafted being themselves subsequently amended in the other place shows how difficult it is to word or to draft amendments. I think the first amendment made by the committee was not entirely satisfactory, and I am quite sure that the amendment made by the other place was not satisfactory either. I only hope the amendment as proposed by the committee has been looked into by legal counsel for the Senate and by the Department of Justice, because I am not in a position to say whether or not it is entirely satisfactory. I hope it is.

The last point I want to make, honourable senators, is that we on this side of the house are most grateful to Senator Argue for having explained to the majority that it is not difficult to have the other place accept an amendment that could easily be made. With some understanding in the House of Commons we could move amendments—and probably could have moved one in connection with the anti-inflation bill—that would have been accepted. Of course, at that time Senator Argue did not see things in the same light as he does today, which we can understand. We are grateful for his contribution in this respect.

● (1440)

Senator Argue: Honourable senators, as a point of information, I would like to say that our committee did have the benefit of the advice of Mr. Raymond du Plessis, the Acting Assistant Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel of the Senate. I know he gave a good deal of thought to this and was concerned about many facets of it. I might say that members of the committee were also grateful to have advice from Mr. Guy Faggiolo, one of the legal officers of the Research Branch of the Library of Parliament. In my opinion, both gentlemen were very helpful to the committee. We feel that this is an excellent amendment, in both substance and language.

On motion of Senator Langlois, debate adjourned until later this day.

ANIMAL CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Senator Argue, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture, reported that the committee had considered Bill C-28, to amend the Animal Contagious Diseases Act, and had directed that the bill be reported without amendment.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Langlois moved that the bill be placed on the Orders of the Day for third reading at the next sitting.

Motion agreed to.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

COMMITTEE AUTHORIZED TO PUBLISH AND DISTRIBUTE VOLUME I OF REPORT ON CANADIAN RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES

Senator van Roggen, Chairman of the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(i), moved:

That the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs be authorized to publish and distribute Volume I of its Report on Canadian relations with the United States as soon as it becomes available, even though the Senate may not then be sitting.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator van Roggen: Honourable senators, I wonder if I could explain the reasons for my motion.

Senator Flynn: Are you speaking before the motion has been adopted, or following its adoption?

Senator van Roggen: The motion has been adopted. I may be out of order.

Senator Flynn: No, but if it has been adopted you would not wish to compromise that.

Senator van Roggen: I do not wish to do that, but in case honourable senators are wondering about the reason for this motion, I would say that it is our hope and intention to table this part of our report after the Senate reconvenes. However, there is to be a meeting of the Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group on January 29, 1976 and, in the unlikely event that the Senate has not then reconvened, this motion will enable us to publish our report in time for that meeting.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Flynn: I would ask the Leader of the Government if he has an answer to the question I put yesterday, in order to know what is expected of us before we adjourn for the Christmas recess?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I appreciate the opportunity to outline as accurately as possible at this juncture the work which appears to be before us prior to adjournment. I must say at the outset that there is no absolute assurance that it will be possible to adjourn this week. The course of the debate in the other place has been such that there has been an unforeseen prolongation of discussion on at least one measure there, and, of course, we must deal with it here as well before the adjournment.

The bills to be passed by the Senate before adjournment, in addition to the bills already before the house, are: Bill C-52, the Statute Law (Superannuation) Amendment bill, 1975; Bill C-69, to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971—there is a time limit involved in connection with Bill C-69, which makes it essential to have it passed before we adjourn—Bill C-77, to amend the National Housing Act and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation Act—this is also a measure which involves a time factor—and Bill C-78, the Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation bill.

There may be one other measure to come before this chamber. That measure will not be Bill C-58 which, as honourable senators are aware, relates to the proposed abolition of certain tax deductions for advertising placed in foreign-owned publications as well as tax deductions for advertising placed on American television stations along the Canadian border. Insofar as I am able to obtain information from the other place, this appears to be the schedule before us. I wish to say, and I believe it to be the feeling of honourable senators, that every effort will be made—involving, if necessary, extended hours—in order to make certain that all this proposed legislation is given the thoughtful and careful attention it merits.

Senator Neiman: I wonder if I might ask the honourable leader a question. Is there any intention of referring some of these bills to committee in advance of their arrival, in order that we may consider them beforehand?

Senator Perrault: No plans exist at the present time for that kind of referral with respect to the measures I have outlined. However, every avenue will be explored to make certain that they are considered as efficiently and expeditiously as possible. No arrangements have been made up to this time for a pre-referral to committee of these measures.

Senator Flynn: The Leader of the Government may say that such a treatment will not be required in connection with Bill C-58, because it has already been referred to a joint committee of the House of Commons and the Senate. Therefore, as far as that bill is concerned, I do not believe that there will be need to refer it to committee.

Senator Perrault: No. That is an accurate observation. I believe the honourable senator may have in mind the amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Senator Flynn: Yes.

CRIMINAL CODE

THERAPEUTIC ABORTIONS—SUPPLEMENTARY ANSWER

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, may I take this opportunity to provide further clarification in connection with a question asked earlier?

On previous occasions I made reference to the Committee on the Operation of the Abortion Law and do not intend to make a long statement today. I provided the assurance yesterday that the abortion committee had not refused, and will not refuse, material or information presented to it. At this time I would ask that the terms of reference of this committee be recorded in Hansard. This supplementary information may be of use and value to honourable senators, particularly Senator Sullivan who asked the original question on this subject.

● (1450)

The Hon. The Speaker: Honourable senators, is it agreed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(The terms of reference of the Committee on the Operation of the Abortion Law follow:)

1. The Committee on the Operation of the Abortion Law is to conduct a study to determine whether the procedure provided in the Criminal Code for obtaining therapeutic abortions is operating equitably across Canada.

2. The Committee is asked to make findings on the operation of this law rather than recommendations on the underlying policy. It will examine the following matters, among others:

[Senator Perrault.]

- a) the availability by location and type of institution of the procedure provided in the Criminal Code;
- b) the timeliness with which this procedure makes an abortion available in light of what is desirable for the safety of the applicant;
- c) the criteria being applied by therapeutic abortion committees.

3. In particular the following questions are to be answered if possible:

1) Is the procedure not available for any of the following reasons?

- a) there are not enough doctors in the area to form a committee;
- b) the views of doctors with respect to abortion do not permit them either to assist in an application to a therapeutic abortion committee or to sit on a committee;
- c) the views of hospital boards or administrators with respect to abortion dictate their refusal to permit the formation of a committee;
- d) hospitals cannot obtain accreditation by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation or approval by the provincial minister of health owing to inadequate facilities.

2) Are the applicants for abortion being discouraged from obtaining legal abortions in Canada because delays in obtaining medical examinations, decisions by therapeutic abortion committees, and termination of pregnancies where approval has been given, increase the risks to a point which applicants find unacceptable?

3) Do therapeutic abortion committees require the consent of the father or, in the case of an unmarried minor, the consent of a parent?

4) To what extent is the condition of danger to mental health being interpreted too liberally or in an overly-restrictive manner, and is the likelihood or certainty of defect in the foetus being accepted as sufficient indication for abortion?

5) To what extent has permitting the pregnancy to continue affected the woman or her family in cases where the woman would have preferred an abortion but did not obtain one?

6) What types of women are successful and what types not successful in obtaining legal abortions in Canada?

7) Are hospital employees required to participate in therapeutic abortion procedures regardless of their views with respect to abortion?

8) To what extent are abortions which are being performed in conformity with the present law seen to be the result of a failure of, or ignorance of, proper family planning?

9) How many Canadians are seeking therapeutic abortions outside the country, and, if this can be determined, for what reasons?

4. The Committee will consult periodically with an interdepartmental committee consisting of representatives of the Department of Justice, the Department of National Health and Welfare, the Treasury Board Secretariat and Statistics Canada which are to provide the Committee members with all relevant information available within the government.

5. The study is to be completed within six months from the time of establishment of the Committee.

6. The results of the study will be made public and will be tabled in the House for debate.

ANTI-INFLATION BOARD

GOVERNMENT REJECTION OF BOARD'S OPINION ON CONTRACT SETTLEMENT WITH POSTAL WORKERS— QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, questions were presented by Senator Phillips and Senator Forsey regarding the Anti-Inflation Board decision on the postal contract. The question asked by Senator Forsey dealt with the experience of the Anti-Inflation Board members in collective bargaining, and Senator Phillips asked for a copy of the reasons of the Governor in Council for ruling against acceptance of the opinion offered by the Anti-Inflation Board.

First, to answer Senator Forsey, Mr. Harold Renouf is a chartered accountant, and during his practice was involved in negotiating collective agreements for a period of 10 to 15 years. Mr. Claude Castonguay, as Minister of Social Affairs for the Province of Quebec, was responsible for numerous salary negotiations. Prior to his ministry he was involved in the medical insurance scheme in Quebec which involved collective bargaining. His experience totals 15 years in this field.

Senator Forsey was, of course, kind enough to outline the very extensive knowledge of Mr. W. Ladyman of Winnipeg in an arena of collective bargaining.

Also, as I informed honourable senators the other day, there is the intention to appoint further members of the board, and to designate additional members of the board, with collective bargaining experience. Those names may be available next week, but certainly just as soon as it is possible to have them named.

I should like now to provide for Senator Phillips and other honourable senators the text of the Governor in Council's statement on the occasion of the decision to let stand the settlement with the inside postal workers. It was made at the time the government announced its decision, and, with leave, because of the length of the text, I propose that it be printed in Hansard.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it agreed, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

(The statement follows:)

The proposed collective agreement between Treasury Board and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) has been referred by the Anti-Inflation Board to the Governor-in-Council. This action has been taken by the Board under the Order-in-Council which created it as a Commission of Inquiry. While the Governor-in-Council must act in this case, once the Anti-Inflation Act has been proclaimed references from the Board will proceed directly to the Administrator.

The Board has stated that, in its view, the proposed settlement lies beyond "the amount that it could accept in light of its responsibility under the anti-inflation program". The Board has noted that it recognizes a historical wage relationship between the CUPW and members of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada (LCUC), but that this historical relationship would only provide justification for a level of increase somewhat below that already agreed by the parties. The Board has taken the position, further, that this historical relationship, where it is relevant, does not necessarily justify immediate re-establishment of wage parity between groups.

The Board notes that it has consulted with both parties in an attempt to modify the proposed agreement so as to bring it within the limits and spirit of the guidelines. It has concluded that such discussions were unlikely to lead to changes in the proposed settlement.

The Governor-in-Council does not dispute that the Board's findings are consistent with the exercise of its mandate under the anti-inflation program. The Governor-in-Council must be mindful, however, that the present case presents certain unique aspects and bears heavily upon the national interest.

The government, in reaching the proposed agreement, acted on the basis of the Report of the Conciliation Board (the Moisan Report) and, following its recommendations, made what it was convinced was a fair offer to the CUPW. The government was mindful then, and is mindful now, of the following facts:

1. that the CUPW had signed its last contract well prior to January 1, 1974;
2. that the Union had been without a contract for almost a year;
3. that an obvious historical relationship existed between the CUPW and the LCUC in that they had, until February 1975, a single bargaining agent; and
4. that, over and above this historical relationship, there were important differences in the form of shift and weekend work demanded of the postal workers which are not demanded of the letter carriers.

In the White Paper which introduced the government's anti-inflation program, it was recognized that the transitional period from our recent inflationary experience to greater stability in prices and more reasonable rates of wage increase would be an extremely difficult one. Extenuating circumstances such as the recognition of historical relationships and the special treatment promised for those who last signed a contract prior to January 1, 1974, both cited in the White Paper, are two instances of the recognition that the application of the compensation guidelines must not be inflexible.

For all of these reasons, the Governor-in-Council believes the proposed agreement should stand and that further attempts at negotiation to modify its terms would not serve the national interest.

CRIMINAL CODE

PARTIAL ABOLITION OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT—EXPIRATION OF TRIAL PERIOD—QUESTION

Senator Greene: Would the Leader of the Government permit a question with respect to the parliamentary timetable he has outlined?

In view of the fact that the two-year extension to the original five-year trial period for partial abolition of capital punishment will expire on December 31, as I understand it, so that on January 1 we will have, in fact, the reinstitution of capital punishment as it was prior to the trial period, has the government leader considered whether the Senate should proceed with Bill S-23 at this time, because that would resolve that dilemma?

Senator Perrault: The honourable senator has raised an interesting point. No policy decision has yet been announced, but it may be of some use to attempt to have a clarification of the situation. I will undertake to obtain that information when it is possible to do so.

Senator Flynn: I have a supplementary question. Assuming that the information given by Senator Greene is correct, would the Leader of the Government tell us also what difference it would make if we were to return to the former status?

Senator Asselin: No.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I do not know whether that question constitutes an earnest search for information, or whether there are other motives.

Senator Asselin: Touché.

Senator Neiman: Is it not so that the present legislation continues to December 31, 1976? We have one more year to go.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, as I have said, I will attempt to obtain clarification to provide the reassurances which the honourable senator seeks.

THE SENATE

AUTHORITY TO AMEND MONEY BILLS—QUESTION

Senator Godfrey: Honourable senators, I have a question for the Leader of the Government with respect to the matter of amendments. I was surprised yesterday when the Deputy Leader of the Government—I am reading from Hansard at page 1643—said:

—the Senate has no power whatever to amend money bills.

I think he repeated that three times. In the well-known dispute between the Conservative government of 1961 and the Senate, I recall that Senator Roebuck referred to this archaic issue which had been discussed many times since Confederation. At that time the Senate insisted upon its right to amend money bills, as it had done many times before.

In his highly regarded book on the Senate, Robert A. MacKay goes into the subject rather intensively, and his last sentence is worth reading:

Yet it is abundantly clear that whatever the rules of the Commons, the Senate has made good its claim to have legal authority to amend money bills, and, of course, to reject them.

My question for the Leader of the Government is: Does he agree with the deputy leader that we do not have that power?

Senator Perrault: One of the encouraging facts about those honourable senators invested with the responsibility of attempting to guide government affairs in this chamber is the great unanimity of opinion, understanding and amity which exist between the Leader of the Government in the Senate and the distinguished Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate.

Senator Flynn: Is that the answer?

Senator Perrault: That, however, does not constitute my total reply.

Senator Phillips: Why don't you quit while you are ahead?

Senator Perrault: May I say that what we have here is perhaps a misunderstanding in the area of terminology.

Senator Grosart: No doubt.

Senator Perrault: We have here an instance where further clarification may be of real use to all members of the chamber.

Senator Flynn: Indeed.

Senator Perrault: I shall not attempt a long explanation of the position I hold on this matter, but I have before me a copy of the British North America Act, section 53 of which states:

Bills for appropriating any Part of the Public Revenue, or for imposing any Tax or Impost, shall originate in the House of Commons.

That is the only reference to the matter.

However, when we turn to the Ross report of May 1918, which has been referred to with such eloquence in the chamber by various senators, we note the following summing up regarding the question of the rights of the Senate in matters of financial legislation, and whether under the provisions of the British North America Act 1867 it is permissible—and to what extent—or forbidden for the Senate to amend a bill embodying financial clause—a money bill.

Section 1—and I know this is known to many honourable senators—says:

The Senate of Canada has, and always has had since it was created, the power to amend bills originating in the Commons appropriating any part of the revenue or imposing a tax by reducing the amounts therein, but has not the right to increase the same without consent of the Crown.

That is the position which I happily hold, together with the Deputy Leader of the Government in this chamber. It may be that on this occasion the deputy leader may wish to clarify and further explain some of the terminology employed by him yesterday, but that is his own prerogative.

Senator Flynn: He does not need to. He just has to concur.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I rise on a question of privilege, following the question just asked of the Leader of the Government by Senator Godfrey in connection with the remarks I made in the house yesterday, in order to place them in their proper perspective and context.

My remarks were made, as honourable senators will recall, in the course of rapid and numerous exchanges between Senator Flynn, Senator Grosart and myself following my introduction of Bill C-80, in the course of which I voiced my personal view to the effect that the Senate would take a wrong stand if it chose to amend an appropriation or supply bill.

● (1500)

I was then speaking off the top of my head, and inadvertently used—rather loosely, I confess—the expressions “money bills,” “supply bills” and “appropriation acts,” although those expressions have often been used to refer to any expenditure of public funds, and even to tax bills. Needless to say, circumstances yesterday hardly permitted me to present an elaborate and comprehensive thesis on the very important and somewhat complicated subject of the legislative powers of the Senate and the House of Commons.

To put my remarks in their proper context I should like to read from page 1643 of Debates of the Senate of yesterday, at which point I said, commenting on an observation made by Senator Grosart:

Well, that is your own opinion, but I am of the contrary view. If the Senate took the attitude that it could amend any money bill or any appropriation bill, or whatever you call it, I think the Senate would be taking a very wrong stand. On the other hand—and this is the point I have in mind just now—I am ready to have any such bill referred to the appropriate committee on a question of wording or a question of procedure.

The suggestion contained in the remarks I have just quoted makes it clear, to my mind, that in accepting the referral of a supply bill to a Senate committee, as I did yesterday, I was accepting, at the same time, the proposition that such bills were susceptible to amendment by the Senate, at least as to wording and procedural aspects.

This view—and again I wish to emphasize that it is my personal view—is, to some extent, supported by the following quotation from page 94 of The Unreformed Senate:

On the other hand, Todd, the leading authority for many decades after Confederation on the procedure of Parliament, strictly confines the term to “Tax Bills, Bills of Supply and Bills of Appropriation, all of which have a peculiar form of preamble which intimates that the revenue or grant of money is the peculiar gift of the House of Commons, and such Bills are invariably presented for the Royal Assent by the Speaker of the House of Commons.” Sir Wilfrid Laurier accepted this as the only workable definition. Unlike the United Kingdom Parliament, which under the Parliament Act of 1911 leaves to the Speaker of the Commons to certify bills as money bills, the Parliament of Canada has no procedure for settling differences of opinion between the Houses as to whether a particular bill is a money bill. Agreement between the Houses on definition is thus scarcely nearer than it was at Confederation.

The Senate, for its part, cannot be said to have abused its powers over money bills. It has never amended or rejected supply or appropriation bills, though it has amended or rejected specific bills authorizing public expenditure, as for example, in 1924 and 1925 a number of branch line railway bills, and the Old Age Pension Bill of 1926 pending an election, after which it was passed. It has not amended the principle of tax bills or rejected them, though it has amended their procedural aspects.

There is also a reference in the same book to the procedure followed when an appropriation bill is presented to the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, or to His Excellency himself, in the Senate for royal assent. Such presentation is not made by an official of the Senate, but by the Speaker of the House of Commons. I have always considered that procedure an affront to the Senate.

In presenting an appropriation bill for royal assent, the Speaker of the other place does not even mention that the bill in question has been passed by the Senate. He simply presents the bill to the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General as having been passed by the House of Commons, and requests the royal assent to same. There is no mention that the bill in question had gone through first, second and third readings in the Senate.

I repeat, I have always considered that procedure an affront to the Senate, and I take this opportunity to suggest that we look into this matter in an effort to remedy the situation.

In conclusion, as honourable senators will realize, the matter I raised yesterday is far from being settled in all its aspects. There is ample room left for debate, and even controversy.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, may I say just a word on the question of privilege?

I am convinced that in some of the statements Senator Langlois made yesterday, he may have gone a little further than he wanted. That can happen to any one of us, so he should not be embarrassed about that. I would suggest to him, however, that because something has or has not been done does not mean that it is right or wrong. The powers of the Senate with regard to money bills have been clearly enunciated over and over again. The only difference between this house and the House of Commons is that money bills should be initiated in the other place. That is all. Our powers are equal.

I share the opinion of Senator Langlois when he says that there is no justification whatsoever in the Constitution, or anywhere else, for the practice instituted whereby the Speaker of the House of Commons comes here and presents an appropriation bill as being exclusively the property of the House of Commons. By this example, I think Senator Langlois has shown that we should not become slaves of this practice. If a bad precedent has been established, there is nothing to say that we must follow it. For this reason, I think we should make it clear that the position of the Senate, as explained today by the Leader of the Government, is the proper position for the Senate in respect of money bills.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT INCENTIVES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING—DEBATE ADJOURNED

Senator Barrow moved the third reading of Bill C-74, to amend the Regional Development Incentives Act.

[Translation]

Hon. Martial Asselin: Honourable senators, before the bill is passed on third reading, I should like to make a few brief remarks.

Obviously, I can add nothing to what my colleague, Senator Smith (Colchester) said during the debate on second reading in reply to what Senator Macnaughton said when he introduced the bill.

It is obvious that the purpose of this bill, as was mentioned during the debate, is to attempt to reduce unemployment in those regions that are most seriously affected by it. I have a feeling that, on the whole, though huge amounts of money were spent in the poorer provinces, we do not have at this time tangible proof that the program of the government did much to decrease unemployment in those areas, especially in Quebec and the Maritimes. In Quebec, unemployment reached a rate of almost 10 per cent and in the Maritimes, if my memory serves me right, it reached 11 per cent. I have said that this bill, to my mind, does not attain the goals set by the government when it introduced the legislation.

● (1510)

In addition, I feel that, in the implementation of the measures resulting from the bill, such as LIP, there has been a sad lack of planning: planning, first of all in the authorization of the projects and also in their implementation. Often, a group of young people can get organized and suggest projects to the government under the LIP program, but I do not know on what basis those projects are authorized at the government level, or by the minister. But the fact remains that in some areas, in most areas, the local economic priorities are disregarded. Therefore, I say that in many programs provided for under this legislation or approved under this bill, there is a tremendous lack of planning, resulting in a large waste of money.

I had always thought that under these bills, one might turn first to the municipalities for these local initiative projects, and God knows that our municipalities need money to carry out priority work. We are indeed aware that the indebtedness of our municipalities is unacceptable and that the taxpayers must pay extravagant taxes to help municipalities make up their deficits.

Take for example the town where I live. This year the municipal assessment increased by 55 per cent. This means that if the municipality does not decide to lower its property tax, which was $1.25 last year, some people will be unable to keep their property.

Then, I say that the government should plan its local initiatives program better by asking first the municipalities to submit their priorities on the municipal economic level. I think we could then have better planning. We could escape shameless spending and waste. Besides, I am not the only one to say this, because the inspectors who audit the budgets of these local initiative projects often see that they are mismanaged and that money is shamelessly wasted in the implementation of these projects. Moreover, it is often recommended that such projects should not be renewed for the following year. That was the first point I wanted to make.

[Senator Flynn.]

I would like the Deputy Leader of the Government to give us an answer on another point which is, in my view, quite important, namely, that the Prime Minister on behalf of the government will make a declaration tonight at eight o'clock on the topic of government expenses cutting. We are very pleased to hear that. At last the government is heeding the appeals of the Progressive Conservative Party which has been pressing the government for a long time to reduce its spending to fight inflation. Moreover, during the debate on Bill C-73, the message of the Official Opposition in a nutshell was that the government was supposed to lead the way for the private sector and the public and set the example by cutting down on its own expenditures.

At noon, I was listening to the radio and I heard that the Prime Minister was about to curtail government spending pursuant to the bill which is now before us. If such is the case, is it wise for the Senate to pass this bill on third reading if, after the Prime Minister's statement tonight, the bill becomes invalid, and cannot be enforced?

The Prime Minister assures us that he intends to reduce public spending by $1 billion. We are proud of this decision because this is, as I have said before, what the Official Opposition had always advocated. Besides, I wonder if the Senate should not reconsider its intention to pass this bill on third reading if the government should decide to shelve the bill, that is, to lay aside the bill on regional expansion which is now under study in order to defer its application for a five-year period, particularly if we are told that this legislation will be pigeon-holed to save the monies allotted to it, in the hope of curtailing public spending. Would it not be better for the Senate to defer the third reading stage of this bill until tomorrow? We would then know what decisions were taken by the government, and decide whether it is necessary for the Senate to pass this legislation.

● (1520)

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I will reply briefly to the comments that were just made by my friend Senator Asselin. First of all, I am just as much in the dark as he is about the possibility that the Prime Minister may, in his broadcast tonight, announce certain cuts in federal expenditures. Like him, I read in this morning's papers that this had to be done, but perhaps I am not quite ready to accept my friend's suggestion that, if such a move is made tonight, it will be in response to the many requests to that effect made by the opposition parties, and more especially by his own.

In so doing, it will be shown, that if he is of that opinion, it is because it is easier to make pious wishes than to take action. Indeed, if Parliament has been slow in taking such a drastic stand with respect to the expenditures that will actually be reduced and if they are prepared to make a public statement about the items of the federal budget which will be affected, my friend will have to realize that such a decision cannot be made overnight, especially when a budget totalling approximately $30 billion is involved.

Furthermore, we know that during the past few months; that is, since October 14, the government has had to act promptly to draft, first, the anti-inflation bill that we passed—Bill C-73—and prepare the regulations governing the administration of that act. The establishment also of agencies to monitor the administration of the act and the regulations, all of which required a considerable amount of work. One should not be shocked, as my honourable friend seems to be, if the government waited until this day before giving the details, the particulars of its intentions regarding the estimates.

His second point is that it might be appropriate to postpone the passage of the legislation now before us until we know for sure whether the estimates provided for in this bill will be affected by the Prime Minister's statement tonight. First, let me tell him that the anti-inflation program proposed to date is for a three-year period with the possibility of it being shortened. There would be provincial agreements, we were told, that might be limited to 18 months. There is even provision in the bill for a total or partial interruption of the anti-inflation program after a period of time before the three-year period.

In view of all this, keeping in mind also the fact that the bill before us provides for an extension of the legislation to five years, I think there is no harm in passing the bill now. If the anti-inflation program lasts for five years, the act could remain in force for an additional two-year period after the program comes to an end. There again, I do not think it is necessary to take this drastic step of putting the bill aside in anticipation of a decision that might not affect it. We do not know, nobody in this house knows it yet, obviously.

The bill went through all stages in the House of Commons, and it has reached the final stage in this House. I do not see why we should postpone this bill for that sole reason. In view of what I have just said, I regretfully do not believe that my honourable friend's proposal, although it was made in good faith and certainly with the common good in mind, can be accepted at this stage.

● (1530)

[English]

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, I think it is quite obvious that it would be wise for the Senate to adjourn consideration of this bill on third reading until tomorrow. At least, we shall then be making a decision knowing all the circumstances. I therefore move the adjournment of this debate.

On motion of Senator Flynn, debate adjourned.

CRIME AND VIOLENCE

SUBJECT MATTER REFERRED TO STANDING SENATE COMMITTEE ON HEALTH, WELFARE AND SCIENCE

The Senate resumed from Wednesday, December 17, the debate on the motion, in amendment, of Senator McElman to the motion of Senator McGrand, that the Senate consider it desirable that a special committee of the Senate be established at an early date to inquire into and report upon crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society.

[Translation]

Senator Asselin: Honourable senators, I do not intend this afternoon to discuss in detail Senator McGrand's proposal concerning violence in our society but I wish to take this opportunity to congratulate Senator McGrand who has drawn the attention of the Senate to an extremely important problem. His submission is the end result of intensive research work. We realized when Senator McGrand introduced his motion that he knew his subject perfectly well. I must say that I am very much in agreement with his comments concerning violence.

It is obvious that, of late, the federal and provincial governments have been pondering over this highly important problem. I think that honourable senators are aware of the inquiry dealing with organized crime in Quebec, which shows in some detail to what extent violence is now an established fact among our young people and within our society generally. We also witness violence in the media, mostly TV, and we know that young people do commit crimes under the impulse of what they see on TV. This was confirmed recently by some authorities in that field. I think that today, as I said earlier, provincial governments are actually studying the problem for they are trying to curb violence even in sports.

Senator McGrand obviously made a very thorough investigation into the matter. Senator McGrand wanted to know the basic impulses of a person who becomes a criminal at age 15 or 16. Well, I think there we are dealing with psychology and psychiatry, and it would be extremely difficult for people like us to rule on such a delicate matter, since Senator McGrand has requested that the Senate consider establishing a committee which would make a thorough study of all those aspects I have just mentioned, the aspects of crime and the causes of crime, the intrinsic causes, as I said earlier, the inner, deep down reasons which prompt young people to commit crimes at some time or other in their life.

I listened very attentively yesterday to the excellent statement made by Senator McElman, in which he reviewed Senator McGrand's suggestions. I think he was right at the end of his remarks in suggesting that another kind of committee should study the important aspects and points raised by Senator McGrand's motion. I am talking about the amendment put forward by Senator McElman. The honourable senator said yesterday, and this is the motion he was putting forward, after explaining of course that the matter might be studied by a standing Senate committee, and not by any special committee—he was putting forward as I said, in amendment, the following motion:

[English]

That the motion be not now adopted but that the subject matter thereof be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science.

[Translation]

We on this side of the house have examined Senator McElman's amendment. We suggest that this amendment is too broad. We suggest that the terms of reference especially are not indicated. We suggest that if we were to adopt the amendment introduced by Senator McElman, the Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science would not have specific terms of reference with respect to the motion moved by Senator McGrand and now before the Senate.

We believe that we should limit or try to find a formula for the terms of reference that could be suggested to the committee referred to by Senator McElman.

I am not against the substance of the amendment introduced by Senator McElman, but I would like it to be more specific, and with this in mind, I wish to move the following motion:

● (1540)

[English]

MOTION IN AMENDMENT TO AMENDMENT

Senator Asselin: I move, seconded by Senator Choquette, in amendment to Senator McElman's amendment to Senator McGrand's motion, that the period at the end thereof be removed and the following words added:

and that the committee be instructed to look into and report upon the feasibility of a Senate committee's inquiring into and reporting upon crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society and that, if the committee decides that such a study is feasible and warranted, it be further instructed to set down clearly how, by whom, and under what precise terms of reference such a study should be undertaken.

[Translation]

This I move in amendment to the amendment. I repeat that I am not hitting at the substance of the amendment moved by Senator McElman, but I would like to define and specify the terms of reference to the committee that will be called upon to study Senator McElman's motion.

Besides, my colleague Senator Choquette has already raised the matter during the debate on the motion. Besides, those are more or less the terms which the Official Opposition wanted to include in the amendment so as to define, as I have said, and not limit the terms of reference, and give freedom to the committee to which the matter will be referred and also to determine the scope of the committee's study.

I would not want a vote to be taken on the amendment but I would like to know whether Senator McElman might be willing to withdraw his amendment and simply accept my amendment to his amendment.

I do so in all objectivity. The Official Opposition is not acting in this way to criticize Senator McElman's proposal, but only to define the terms of reference for the committee that will be called upon to consider the matter.

[English]

Senator McElman: Honourable senators, I should like to say that I believe the proposed amendment improves the terminology and is much more explicit in its instructions to the committee, and I would agree with it.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, it is moved by the Honourable Senator McGrand, seconded by the Honourable Senator Eudes:

That the Senate considers it desirable that a special committee of the Senate be established at an early date to inquire into and report upon crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society.

[Senator Asselin.]

In amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator McElman, seconded by the Honourable Senator Carter, that the motion be not now adopted but that the subject matter thereof be referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science.

In amendment to the amendment, it is moved by the Honourable Senator Asselin, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Choquette, that the period at the end of the amendment be removed and the following words added:

and that the committee be instructed to look into and report upon the feasibility of a Senate committee's inquiring into and reporting upon crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society and that, if the committee decides that such a study is feasible and warranted, it be further instructed to set down clearly how, by whom, and under what precise terms of reference such a study should be undertaken.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion in amendment to the amendment?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion in amendment to amendment agreed to.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the amendment as amended?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion as amended agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move that the Senate do now adjourn to reassemble at the call of the bell at approximately eight o'clock this evening.

Senator Flynn: Is that just in case some legislation comes over from the other place?

Senator Langlois: A bill is expected this afternoon, yes.

Senator Flynn: May I ask if any time has been envisaged for sitting tomorrow? I assume we shall be sitting in the morning.

Senator Langlois: Yes, it is intended to sit at eleven o'clock tomorrow morning.

Senator Asselin: Or perhaps ten o'clock?

Senator Flynn: Or ten o'clock, if it is necessary?

Senator Langlois: Yes.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 8.30 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

FEEDS ACT

BILL TO AMEND—COMMONS AMENDMENTS—REPORT OF COMMITTEE ADOPTED

The Senate resumed from earlier today the debate on the motion of Senator Argue for the adoption of the report of the Standing Senate Committee on Agriculture to which were referred the amendments made by the House of Commons to Bill S-10, to amend the Feeds Act.

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I do not wish to delay consideration of these amendments any longer. I explained my position when I spoke on the motion of Senator Argue referring the amendments made by the House of Commons to the committee. I have not changed my mind, and I support the amendment.

Senator Flynn: Is a message going to be sent right away, before the other place reads Senator Argue's speech in tomorrow's Hansard?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, may I make just one observation? Here is another example of very constructive work being done by one of the committees of the Senate. The chairman and members of that committee deserve great credit for simply stating that there are ways to improve legislation and that the Senate can play a very useful role by suggesting that there may be amendments to amendments from the other place. In discussions with representatives of the government today, they conceded that there was great value in this amendment, and I am delighted that this kind of action is going forward from this chamber.

Senator Flynn: I would hope that if the amendment to the amendment is concurred in by the other house, that will be interpreted here as a licence to do this kind of thing more often. I keep telling my friends opposite, we should never be afraid of delaying legislation when the reason for such a delay is to improve it.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I think this is an occasion when we should describe the Senate as "the defenders of the people."

Senator Greene: Honourable senators, I would like to join the Leader of the Government and the Leader of the Opposition in their commendation, chiefly of the Chairman of the Agriculture Committee, whose tenacity and astuteness made this possible.

I would like to say that I was speaking tonight with a leading member of the New Democratic Party, namely, the member for Timiskaming, who I think is a credit to any legislature, whatever his party affiliation may be, who commended us in the Senate for what we had done in this regard. He told me that he felt very badly about what Mr. Nystrom had done in committee in respect to emasculating the powers we had put in the bill.

Senator Argue: Honourable senators—

Senator Flynn: Let us pray!

Senator Argue: —I, too, am delighted with the progress we are making, but I just want to point out that the original initiative that brought this all about was taken in the committee by Senator Greene. I think he should have the credit that he deserves for having first brought it up, after which, others, seeing what a good idea it was, helped him take it along to this point.

Motion agreed to and report adopted.

The Hon. the Speaker: Ordered, that a message be sent to the House of Commons to acquaint that House that the Senate concurs in the first and second amendments made by the House of Commons to the Bill S-10, intituled: "An Act to amend the Feeds Act," but has amended the third amendment, to which they desire their concurrence.

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motion:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow at eleven o'clock in the morning.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, from the answer we were given earlier today by the Leader of the Government, it appears that the Senate will have to deal with four more pieces of legislation before winding up for the holidays. Bill C-52, as I said before, and as I think is generally agreed, will present no problem. The bill concerning the Halifax disaster fund does not present any problem either. There are, however, two pieces of legislation which are very important, namely, the housing bill and the unemployment insurance act amendment bill, Bill C-69. It seems to me that if these bills do not come to us before 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, it will be very difficult for the Senate to deal with them properly within the regular schedule. I do not even think it would be proper for us to try to do so.

What I should like to suggest to the Leader of the Government is that, if we do not receive these bills before 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, then the way to deal with the situation would be for the Senate to adjourn and come back in the new year to examine these bills free of the pressures of an impending adjournment. I do not think we should allow ourselves to be forced into the position that we have been forced into before. It seems to me that the period between Christmas and New Year's is not the proper time during which to deal with problems of this kind and with legislation of this importance. So, I should like the Leader of the Government to consider the possibility that when the Senate adjourns tomorrow it stand adjourned until the end of January—until the date which I believe was suggested in the other place—but subject to recall at the beginning of January to deal with these bills, if necessary. In my view, this would be the most effective way to show the other place that we do not intend to be pushed into the position of rubber stamping this kind of legislation.

I entirely agree that some bills can be dealt with in a matter of a few minutes or a few hours, but the two major pieces of legislation I have referred to would require more time and more suitable circumstances to be dealt with adequately by the Senate.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the suggestion made by the Leader of the Opposition will be given careful consideration. We may be in a better position tomorrow afternoon to judge exactly the best way to expedite the business before the house, after we have heard a progress report from the other place later this evening. Certainly the points made by the Leader of the Opposition will be studied very carefully.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

THE SENATE

Friday, December 19, 1975

The Senate met at 11 a.m., the Speaker in the Chair.
Prayers.

EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RELATIONS IN THE PUBLIC SERVICE

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—CHANGE IN COMMONS
MEMBERSHIP

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons to acquaint the Senate that the name of Mr. O'Connell had been substituted for that of Mr. Marchand (Kamloops-Cariboo) on the list of members appointed to serve on the Special Joint Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service.

ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAM

STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER—SALARIES OF JUDGES—QUESTION

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, as I am sure all of you did, I listened with great attention to the speech made by the Prime Minister last night, and I would like some clarification from the Leader of the Government about a statement made by the Prime Minister to the effect that the salaries of judges would be frozen. It seems to me that this must be an error. The Prime Minister intends to freeze their salaries. Yet, when we passed the last piece of legislation concerning this matter it was understood that the question would not be put before Parliament for another three years. Was that a mere public relations statement? The legislation gave them an increase but it was understood that would be for three years. So what are we freezing here? Nothing! They weren't going to get any more anyway.

Senator Grosart: Window dressing.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the announcement made by the Prime Minister, of course, will be followed by the appropriate measures required to bring into effect the announced salary freezes.

Senator Flynn: But that freeze is already in place in the case of judges. There is no provision in the law for any increase in the salaries of judges appointed by the federal government.

Senator Asselin: No indexation.

Senator Flynn: No indexation at all.

Senator Langlois: The freeze is for one year.

Senator Flynn: There is no freeze. Bill C-47 settled that matter. We were told there would be no increases for a period of three years. So, now I am trying to determine the basis for the statement made by the Prime Minister. There was nothing to freeze in their case. It was just empty rhetoric.

Senator Perrault: I misunderstood the question. The particulars of the Prime Minister's statement shall be obtained and tabled in the Senate, if that is the wish of the Leader of the Opposition.

Senator Flynn: I was hoping for a correction in this respect to the speech made by the Prime Minister last evening.

Senator Grosart: The particulars will not match up to the promises, generally.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT INCENTIVES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

The Senate resumed from yesterday the debate on the motion of Senator Barrow for third reading of Bill C-74, to amend the Regional Development Incentives Act.

Senator Flynn: Honourable senators, my purpose in adjourning the debate yesterday was to find out what the Prime Minister would be saying in relation to this program. As all senators are no doubt aware, there is to be quite a reduction, or at least a freeze, in this program. Before giving third reading to this bill, I think it would be useful if someone on the government side were to inform the Senate how last night's announcement will affect this particular program.

● (1110)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, this bill is of great importance to many areas of the country, and it seeks to extend the Regional Development Incentives Act administered by the Department of Regional Economic Expansion for at least five years. The statement by the Right Honourable the Prime Minister last night indicated areas where cutbacks are to be made in current government expenditures, as well as certain programs which had been scheduled in the next few months. However, the government continues to place high priority on the regional development program, which is implemented through the Regional Development Incentives Act. The bill before us does not incorporate any other changes, beyond the extension, of course, for that period of five years.

This is a program that we think is of real value. Last night it was announced by the Prime Minister that some programs are to be terminated. All programs initiated by governments are subject to termination as new economic challenges arise and new problems evolve. However, we as a government have been very encouraged, as have the provinces, by the beneficial way in which the Regional Development Incentives Act has worked.

I would urge you to consider the importance that is attached to the speedy processing of this legislation. There is a time factor involved here. From a purely practical and immediate point of view, the act, as honourable senators are aware, expires on December 31, 1976, and applicants with accepted incentive offers must be in commercial production by that date in order to receive incentive payments.

Senator Grosart: By what date?

Senator Perrault: December 31, 1976. Because of the lead time required on larger projects the deadline is already beginning to create an inhibiting atmosphere of uncertainty, and one of the problems we have in the country is the problem of economic uncertainty. Uncertainty is not a stimulus to growth in any sense. The intent of the bill is to extend the commercial project deadline to December 31, 1981. It is obvious, then, that we have before us legislation to which certainly some urgency attaches. However, I think we should attach equal importance to the long-range point of view. The incentives program has made a real contribution to the creation of a substantial number of long-term industrial jobs in the slow growth regions of the country, happily at costs that are generally far lower than other methods of support for job creation. In general, these jobs have tended to improve the quality of the higher employment manufacturing sector in the region concerned, and many of the RDIA-assisted firms have tended to be in economic sectors that will probably experience greater than average growth.

As many people at times forget, payments are made only when the industrial project concerned comes into viable operation. Since its introduction in 1969, the same year as the Department of Regional Economic Expansion was created, the RDIA has evolved into a principal instrument of the federal government for encouraging manufacturing and processing investment and employment in the slow growth parts of the country, and generally there have been successful experiences, which could be enumerated, in all provinces of Canada.

We believe it is a highly responsive federal mechanism, with fully more than 70 per cent of all decisions on incentives offers made by personnel living and working in the region eligible under the legislation.

Placing the incentives program in the broader context of the department's current regional development policy, it is important to note that RDIA works in effective concert with DREE's other principal policy mechanism—the General Development Agreement, or GDA.

As described during earlier deliberations, the GDAs are umbrella agreements with the provinces. As honourable senators may be aware, they allow for subsequent action to be taken to identify and act upon social and economic development opportunities.

The incentives program complements these development activities and together they constitute a comprehensive approach to the problem of reducing economic disparities in Canada, with flexibility adapted to both regional differences and changing social and economic circumstances.

For these reasons it is hoped that honourable members will agree to the extension of the Regional Development Incentives Act in order that this worthwhile program may continue.

In the light of the announcements made by the Right Honourable the Prime Minister last night, I want to provide assurance that it is the intention to carry on this valuable program for a further period of time, and to make it more efficient and more effective. This program is not subject to imminent termination, as are some of the other programs referred to last night.

I can appreciate the concern expressed by members of the Opposition when they asked that the debate be adjourned until we had heard from the Prime Minister. However, I can give the assurance that the government has a great deal of confidence in this development program. That is why I urge support for an extension of the Regional Development Incentives Act for a period of five years.

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, the President of the Treasury Board indicated last evening that the program would be limited to certain areas of high unemployment. Could the Leader of the Government indicate what regions of high unemployment will still be eligible for DREE grants, and which geographical areas of Canada will be removed from the program?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, the information which has been made available to me indicates that the Maritime provinces are going to continue to receive this kind of assistance. The Atlantic provinces—Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island—and parts of Quebec and Ontario, appear to be the highest unemployment areas in the country at the present time. The levels of employment in most areas of the Prairie provinces are quite encouraging. There are parts of British Columbia where unemployment levels are unsatisfactory, but on the basis of the national picture most of the regional development program, without excluding any region, will be directed to the higher unemployment area in the Atlantic provinces, and certain other eastern points.

Senator Flynn: Is the reduction of $11.6 million, as tabled in yesterday's Hansard in the other place, the correct figure?

Senator Perrault: Yes. There will be a reduction of that amount in proposed 1976-77 spending, but the amount of money spent on the program is not really an indicator of the efficacy of the program. We believe that in any kind of governmental operations, there can be found examples of where funds can be expended more efficiently and effectively. Merely to take the projected nominal reduction in the amount allocated for this program does not indicate a lack of government confidence in the program as such.

The government, for example, has been seeking ways to effect useful economies in a number of directions. I think the government, basically, with the support of all parties in Parliament, wants to make certain that taxpayers' money allocated for all purposes—including, for example, medical services and social programs—is expended efficiently and effectively and that this aid reaches those most in need of assistance. Even the so-called freeze and effective dollar reductions in this program, we believe, will not affect its basic value to the country.

Senator Flynn: Just for clarification, as I read it in Hansard, with respect to regional economic expansion it is $11.6 million.

Senator Langlois: Is that the House of Commons Hansard?

Senator Flynn: Yes. Apparently that is the reduction, but it is mentioned that it would be frozen at the 1975-76 level. Does that mean that the reduction is on the anticipated appropriations rather than on current expenditures? Because the last time we were told that the government would be slicing a billion dollars from its expenditures we learned afterwards that it was expected expenditures, or contemplated expenditures, that they would be reducing by $1 billion. It is cynical to indulge in such practices, and it can hardly be expected to fool anyone.

Senator Perrault: May I provide an additional assurance to the Leader of the Opposition? Part of the general program of cuts comprises reductions in expenditures in existing programs. There are cutbacks in moneys which had been allocated for certain programs. Part of this program of cutbacks represents reductions in budgeted amounts contemplated over the next fiscal year. So it is a mixture of both those types of reductions. By this procedure it is hoped that the original anticipated increase in the budget of in excess of 20 per cent can be reduced to a more acceptable level—something like 14 per cent.

I think the Honourable Leader of the Opposition must concede, after his long and effective work on the government side at one point in his career, that it is extremely difficult to effect the kind of economies that governments would wish to achieve. Many of the government programs are cost-sharing programs established by statute, so that to achieve the kinds of massive economies or cutbacks appropriate for these inflationary times in which we find ourselves is extremely difficult. It is all very well for the government to reduce programs such as Information Canada, which in fact it is eliminating—

Senator Asselin: It should have been eliminated a long time ago.

● (1120)

Senator Perrault: That may be a saving of $4 million, but in relation to a budget of $30 billion it does not represent a large amount of money in percentage terms. The government has carefully reviewed the present expenditures of all departments of government and all expenditures anticipated over the next few months. Some major actions have been taken to try to reduce these costs wherever possible. In most departments there have been reductions both in the amounts being expended currently and in the anticipated budgets.

Senator Grosart: Would the Leader of the Government agree that he now has an answer once again to the question he asks so often: where can savings be made in government expenditures?

Senator Perrault: Again, may I suggest to the honourable senator that if he has any insights or inspirations which may assist the government in this process, we shall eagerly await a communication from him.

Senator Grosart: Thank you. I will write you a letter.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, I am not quite sure whether we are engaged now in a debate upon the statement of the President of the Treasury Board,

[Senator Flynn.]

but if we are I should like to contribute to it. Before doing so, however, I should like to make the observation that I have not received a copy of yesterday's House of Commons Hansard, and that consequently I cannot speak on this matter except on the basis of what I have read in the newspapers and heard through the various media. This prompts me to wonder why the House of Commons Hansard has not been distributed, and also why the regulations have not been distributed. They are not on our desks either, and surely they are of interest to this house, which is at least an equal house of Parliament.

Senator Perrault: It is hoped that they will be available today.

Senator Smith (Colchester): One would have thought that they would be available to this house as soon as they were available to the other house, except for the time needed to bring them from one place to the other.

If, however, we are engaged in a discussion of the statement of the President of the Treasury Board, I should like to make this observation. I listened as carefully as I could to what was said on television, I read as carefully as I could what was published in the press, and I cannot help but get the impression, having gone through this exercise a good many times myself, that exactly what has happened is that the original estimates, as submitted by the various departments, were looked over carefully, perhaps pretty toughly, by the President of the Treasury Board and his staff, and all that has happened really is that we have been informed as to the reductions made in the requests of the various departments for funds for next year. That is the only impression I have formed from what I have been able to glean so far. If I had a copy of the statement of the President of the Treasury Board I might be able to form a different opinion, but when you end up with the conclusion that the government intends to increase its overall spending by 14 or 15 per cent, it is pretty hard to believe that there is anything more involved than the elimination of the programs which were mentioned, and, in one or two instances—perhaps more than one or two—an absolute reduction in expenditures next year. All that has happened is that the departments have had their expenditures for next year pared. This happens every year, and I venture to say that if one were to look back over the last five years, or any number of years, one would find a large figure representing the sums which have been pared by the Treasury Board from departmental estimates.

It seems to me, aside from the exceptions I have mentioned, that that is exactly what has happened now, but we are being told that a great effort is being made to enforce a program of austerity in government spending. One could go on for a long time about that, but at the moment I do not intend to do so. Can the Leader of the Government tell us—and I listened carefully to the exchange between him and the Leader of the Opposition a few moments ago—whether the change, if any, in expenditures with relation to the DREE programs is an absolute reduction projected for next year, as compared with expenditures this year, or whether it is simply a reduction in the amount requested by the department for next year, but which may still leave as much money or more in the program for next year as is the case this year.

Senator Perrault: Well, honourable senators, I do not have detailed information available. I repeat, however, that the program reduction represents both a cutback and a freeze. I had not anticipated that we would be into that kind of detail in this particular discussion.

When we talk in terms of freezing at the 1975-1976 levels, in terms of real purchasing power dollars, those dollars in 1976-77 will be subject to inflation. Thus the "freeze" would represent a reduction in real purchasing power. But there is no intent here on the part of the government to cripple this program or weaken it or make it less effective. As the honourable senator is aware, having served as a leader of one of the provinces, it is extremely difficult—and I said this earlier—to unlock major programs and effect the kind of major savings which may be required at a particular time under particular economic circumstances. For example, the expenditures by this government of taxpayers' money on behalf of the senior citizens of this country represent an enormous amount of money, but I do not think that any senator or any member of the other place would want to cut back on programs available to our senior citizens. Then we go to other major programs such as health and welfare, an extremely important area where we work in conjunction with the provinces, an area where it is difficult to achieve major cuts. The family allowance program is another area where the Prime Minister announced last night that for one year the cost-of-living index would not apply. I know of no way to effect painlessly the kind of tax savings which clearly the Canadian people and the economy require of all governments under present economic circumstances. It can be said, however, that despite the family allowance "freeze" many of the families of this nation who are receiving family allowances will have assistance in other directions made available to them because of the other range of government measures which have been implemented and are to be implemented on behalf of lower income groups. I assure honourable senators that the idea of freezing the indexing of family allowances for a 12-month period brings no joy to the hearts either of those who serve in government or those who serve in opposition. But it should be said and placed on the record that Canada has the most generous program of family allowances in the world, despite the situation. There is not a better program in existence.

● (1130)

Senator Grosart: Not so.

Senator Perrault: Well, if honourable senators know of a better one, then I would appreciate having the information which may be available to them.

Senator Grosart: Look at Sweden.

Senator Perrault: Our treatment of senior citizens in this country is as good as or better than that accorded in any other country in the world. Let us remember these facts when we consider the family allowance freeze and the fact that the index may not apply over the next 12 months.

I believe that this government deserves a great deal of credit for social reforms, and when there was a predecessor government in power, that government too brought in useful social legislation. Canadian governments generally have been in the forefront in initiating social reform in this country. So we need not apologize, I think, for the fact that for just one year, in order to save over $200 million—some of which may be spent in other areas to assist lower income groups—as I say, honourable senators, we need not apologize for the fact that this freeze is going to be necessary for 12 months, regrettable though that may be.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, perhaps to bring the discussion within the order paper and perhaps also within our rules, could I ask the Leader of the Government if sometime later in the day he would answer this quite simple question? Referring to the sum of $11 million set out in the Treasury Board appendix, do the reductions, which is the word used, refer to the departmental expenditure proposals received in March and/or to the first recommendations of the Treasury Board, or to actual cost cuts in expenditures? I say that because the phrase in the notes is "departmental expenditure proposals." This covers all reductions. It says, "departmental expenditure proposals were received in March and following analysis the Treasury Board developed their first recommendations on expenditures" and so on.

So it appears that they all refer, with the minor exceptions to which the Leader of the Opposition has referred, merely to departmental expenditure proposals.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, I shall seek clarification from the Treasury Board today and, hopefully, report back later. I do not have the particulars, but I shall certainly endeavour to obtain them.

Senator Grosart: Clarification of the one item would be sufficient. I did not expect you to have all the particulars today.

Senator Bélisle: In light of the information we have just received from the Leader of the Government, and also in light of information we received from the Right Honourable the Prime Minister last night, according to which many programs will disappear—programs such as Information Canada, DREE and, to a certain extent, many other programs, including family allowances—

Senator Perrault: DREE will not disappear.

Senator Bélisle: The salaries of senators and members of Parliament will be frozen; they will not receive the previously announced increase. My question is: Will this apply to the increase received by the deputy ministers recently? That, in my thinking, is a good question, because the deputy ministers received a large increase. If this is to apply to judges, then, in my opinion, it should also apply to deputy ministers.

I would also ask: Is it possible that Information Canada, DREE and LIP, which were supposed to be well-regarded, are now, as the commentator on the radio said this morning, the unwanted children and will be flushed away? Could it be that CIDA, for example, is the preferred child and will not be restricted or frozen in any way? We should have this information. In my opinion, CIDA is doing a good job, but so are DREE, LIP, and the family allowance program.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I wish to assure you that DREE is not being eliminated. LIP is undergoing some changes involving restructuring and, perhaps, a redeployment of dollars, formerly directed into certain types of projects, into those projects which employ a maximum amount of labour, in order to help meet the unemployment problem. Certainly the funds allocated to CIDA and other external programs are subject to restraints, but there is no total elimination. I give the assurance that CIDA is to be included in the anti-inflation governmental restraints. As well, the total budget requests of entities like the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation are not to be met. If, for example, the CBC is accorded an increase in the area of 10 per cent in terms of real purchasing power, taking into account the inflationary effects on the economy, that would just about represent a hold-the-line policy for expenditures by the corporation. The government, literally, has gone through every program to determine whether or not savings can be effected without crippling those programs of real value to the country. DREE is not being cancelled. Indeed, the proposed legislation which is before us indicates that we wish the Regional Incentives Program and associated programs to continue.

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, I notice included in the items listed for reduction one of $5 million under the Maritime Freight Rates Act and the Atlantic Region Freight Assistance Act. I should like to ask the Leader of the Government if he feels that this reduction in freight rate assistance in the Atlantic provinces will be at cross-purposes with, and will defeat, any benefit retained by this area in the DREE program?

● (1140)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I had not anticipated a general debate on the proposals tabled by the minister who heads the Treasury Board. However, with adequate notice we could well discuss this question further. I do not have the technical information available, and any comments I could make on this subject would not be very useful, helpful or informative.

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, may I rise to a point of order? Surely a great deal of this discussion has been completely out of order, and, I venture to think, also has been relatively useless, because in so many instances we have not got the documents before us which would enable us to discuss the thing with the degree of enlightenment that we should have.

The honourable Leader of the Opposition apparently has certain documents, the Honourable Senator Smith from Colchester has not got certain documents; I have a news release here. But there are a great many things that I should like to discuss on this subject. I think they would be completely out of order at this stage and I think we would be very much better advised to go ahead and deal with the bill before us and come back to a discussion on this on some proper basis when the Leader of the Government has presented the necessary papers to this chamber.

Senator Grosart: Sunday afternoon!

Senator Smith (Colchester): Honourable senators, before my colleague reminded us in such timely fashion that we were all out of order, I had attempted to be as far out of order as the Leader of the Government and deal with some of the things that he had said, which I agree were out of order.

However, I would like to remind him, if I may, that I did not call on him to apologize for anything. He seemed to be very tender about apologies. But if I were called upon to suggest what he should apologize for on behalf of the government, it is that they did not take this action a year or 18 months ago. Had they done so we would not be in this difficulty today.

[Senator Perrault.]

Some Hon. Senators: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Senators: Order.

Senator Smith (Colchester): Never mind. Please do not press me too far, or I shall say some other things that are out of order. I rose for the chief purpose of saying once more that it seems to me strange that there are not available to all of us copies of yesterday's Hansard of the other place. Some honourable senators apparently have them. My mail box was empty just a little while ago. Anyway, why should they be put in the mail box? Why should they not be put on the desks? If there is something that I should have done that I did not do in order to obtain Hansard, I would be glad to do it.

Everything else seems to have been distributed here, and copies of Commons Hansard have been distributed here on other occasions. I had no intimation that I should go to the mail box, although I went there a short time ago.

If I am wrong in making this assertion that it should be available, I regret having caused any difficulty. But I say again that the custom has been, in the short time I have been here, that Hansard has been distributed, and I expected it to be distributed today.

Hon. Senators: Question.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I want to say that most senators have received the House of Commons Hansard of yesterday. If it is more helpful to the honourable senator to have the statement of the head of the Treasury Board tabled in this chamber, then I will, of course, do that.

Some Hon. Senators: Question.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Barrow, seconded by the Honourable Senator Lefrançois, that the bill be now read the third time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

ANIMAL CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACT

BILL TO AMEND—THIRD READING

Senator Langlois moved the third reading of Bill C-28, to amend the Animal Contagious Diseases Act.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 5 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

NATIONAL HOUSING ACT CENTRAL MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION ACT

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-77, to amend the National Housing Act and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation Act.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, I move, with leave, that the bill be now read the second time.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, before Senator McIlraith proceeds I should like to rise, not on a point of privilege, but to ask for information. I am in a bit of a quandary. I have before me what is generally called the Scroll, which in this case is also an addition to the Order Paper. I read:

Senator McIlraith—

This is after Senator McIlraith has moved that the bill be now read the second time.

—moves that the bill be committed to a Committee of the Whole presently.

Then I read:

Resolved in the affirmative. The Senate accordingly adjourned during pleasure and put into a Committee of the Whole on the Bill, the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, P.C., in the Chair—

In the Committee

Pursuant to Rule 18, the Honourable Barnett J. Danson, P.C., Minister of State for Urban Affairs is escorted to seat in the Senate Chamber.

And then I read:

The Honourable Senator Macnaughton, P.C., from the Committee, reports that they have taken the Bill into consideration, and directed him to report the same to the Senate, without amendment.

Now, I am not altogether sure of the status of the Scroll, but it is part of the Order Paper in this form, because the message from the House of Commons which we have just received is now on the Order Paper. I therefore suggest that there is some kind of extraordinary presumption on the part of somebody when we are told in Order Paper form exactly what is going to happen before it happens.

I think some direction should be given to whoever prepares this document that this is not the way the Senate should be expected to conduct its business.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I want to assure Senator Grosart that this is not part of the Order Paper. This is part of the general format of our sitting; it is a guide to the activities of this chamber. It has been a useful aid in the past. There is no suggestion on the part of the government that because those words appear in the general suggested schedule for this particular sitting, it means in any sense that amendments may be excluded. Indeed, if the honourable senator has a list of amendments that he would like to propose to this particular bill, they will be given their usual courteous attention and consideration.

Senator Grosart: I am quite sure that is so, but the Honourable Leader of the Government has apparently missed my point. I was not objecting to the ordinary form of the Scroll. It was the use of the past tense to which I was objecting, where it states:

The Senate accordingly adjourned during pleasure and put into a Committee of the Whole on the Bill, the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, P.C., in the Chair.

If this was in the form of a suggestion, that would be one thing. I am objecting to it being in the past tense and stating, before we even consider the bill, that we have done certain things and that the committee reports the bill without amendment. I am objecting to this bit of presumption on the part of whoever prepared this, and I hope that directions will be given so that the Senate will not be faced with this type of situation when we start to consider a bill.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, the suggestions you have made will be given careful consideration. I want to provide assurance that no offence is intended, but that it is important for the procedural efficiency and—

Senator Grosart: I know the purpose of the Scroll. I am not objecting to that.

Senator Perrault: —the scheduling of business in this house to make certain all of us know the procedure.

Senator Grosart: I know the purpose of the Scroll. I have been dealing with the Scroll for 12 years. My objection is to the presumption. I am told what the Senate has done before it is done.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, that is not part of the Scroll; it is an addendum. It is a suggested procedural sheet to guide some of our actions in the chamber. I want to assure Senator Grosart that it is not going to be enshrined in the records of this house forevermore.

Senator Grosart: The honourable leader apparently is not aware of the facts. He said this is not part of the Scroll. It is page 3 of the Scroll. The other page to which I referred is page 4 of the Scroll.

Hon. George J. McIlraith: Honourable senators, before commencing to deal with the bill itself, I should perhaps acknowledge some responsibility for what has happened. Last spring when we used the procedure of the Committee of the Whole—I thought rather satisfactorily—it had not been used for some years. The result was that there was some confusion about the precise detail of the formalities involved. Therefore, last night, in case the Committee of the Whole procedure was acceptable to honourable senators with respect to this legislation, I suggested that the precise language of the formal part of the proceedings should be worked out in advance. Since coming to the Senate it has been my observation that this procedure has not been commonly used, and I did not want us to run into any uncertainties about its formal aspects, as was the case last year.

Honourable senators, I will now address myself to the legislation before the Senate. It proposes some significant amendments to the National Housing Act. These amendments are designed to increase the supply of moderately priced housing, both for purchase and for rental, by encouraging more private investment in the housing market in order to free public funds for public housing and non-profit and cooperative housing. It modifies and expands both the assisted home ownership program and the assisted rental program and it offers new incentives to municipalities for residential development.

The government's objective is a million new housing starts in the next four years. That is what will be needed if we take account of the rate of household formations, migration from province to province, necessary demolitions, and other factors usually taken into account in assessing needs. This rate of production can be maintained only with the cooperation and participation of the private sector of the economy—including builders, developers and financial institutions.

The annual investment, both public and private, in residential construction in Canada is now approaching $8 billion. By increasing private investment, more public funds will be available to help those groups of people in our society who are in most urgent need of help to obtain housing.

The Minister of State for Urban Affairs has announced that private lending institutions will be expected to increase their investment in housing in 1976 by some $750 million, and he has been given assurance that these additional funds will be forthcoming.

● (1710)

Through this bill the assisted home ownership program is expanded to make loans available interest free during the first five years to anyone, with or without children, who wants to buy a modestly priced home. Similar loans are available to entrepreneurs who will build modestly priced rental accommodations under agreement with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

It is anticipated that in most cases the assisted home ownership program and the assisted rental mortgages will be provided by private lenders. CMHC mortgages will be reserved for purchasers who do not have access to this private lending.

More private investment and housing and servicing for housing will allow us during this period of budgetary restraint to maintain and, hopefully, to increase our investment in federal-provincial housing programs.

The assisted home ownership program up until now has had two important restrictions: first, it has been confined for all practical purposes to households of three people or more; second, it has been available only to households whose mortgage payments and local taxes would exceed 25 per cent of their income without the assisted home ownership plan aid. Both these restrictions are being done away with under the proposals of this bill.

At the same time, however, the bulk of the assistance offered is being changed from an outright grant to an interest-free loan. Two-person households, regardless of income and provided they meet the house price limits, will now qualify for an interest-free loan sufficient to cover the difference in monthly payments on a mortgage at market interest rates and the same mortgage at 8 per cent. Outright grants will continue to be available in some cases, but only where a three-person household is involved and then only to the extent that taxes and mortgage payments at 8 per cent take up more than 25 per cent of the income of the borrower. The maximum annual amount of grant will be increased from its current level of $600 per year to $750. The loan component of the assistance is interest free during the first five years or until the home is sold or refinanced upwards. After that the loan is repayable at current rates of interest.

[Senator McIlraith.]

The program in its entirety is confined to moderate cost new housing and is therefore subject to price limits established by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for each of its branch office areas across the country.

It will be quite evident to honourable senators that this program, with its modifications, will be a great boon to many Canadians who need a boost to get into the home ownership market. At the same time, however, the program serves a broader purpose. It will provide a powerful stimulus to the housing industry to shift production away from the high end of the price scale towards more modest accommodation. The same purpose will be served by requiring lenders to restrict the most favourable arrangements—that is, high ratio, low down payment mortgages—to lower and medium priced housing. People who want to buy expensive housing will have to put up at least 25 per cent of the cost as their down payment.

I think all senators will be aware that the sector of the residential building industry faced with the most difficult problems is that of providing rental accommodation. The economics of building and renting housing is unattractive to potential investors at the present time. The result is that little rental accommodation is being built, and in some large urban areas the vacancy rate is less than 1 per cent. The role of the federal government in this situation is to help restore economic viability to this market, and, by increasing the supply, to help restrain the pressure on prices. This bill will allow Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to make interest-free loans during the support period to entrepreneurs who are prepared to erect modest rental accommodation under an agreement with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Maximum annual assistance is increased from $900 to $1,200.

● (1720)

One of the most serious obstacles to increased residential development is the lack of serviced land. Many municipalities consider residential development, especially low cost development, as a drain on revenues and are reluctant to encourage such projects. Although municipalities fall within provincial jurisdiction, delays in improving developments are so common they have become a matter of national concern and were discussed at some length at the most recent federal-provincial conference on housing. The federal government provides incentives for servicing of land for housing through loans and grants made under the sewage treatment assistance program. This bill increases these incentives by adding water treatment plants and the supply of water mains to the program where they are required to open new land for housing.

To serve the same purpose, this bill makes available grants to municipalities of $1,000 for each unit of moderately priced, medium density housing. These grants will be made with provincial concurrence and will support provincial plans for urban developments.

The final clauses of this bill involve changes in organizational arrangements within the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Provision is made for separating the position of chairman of the board of that corporation from that of the president, and permits the chairman to be one of the public service representatives on the board of directors. The purpose of these clauses is to allow the Secretary of the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs, at the same time, to be chairman of the board of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. This, it will be seen, should permit closer cooperation and coordination between the department and the housing corporation. While they are both answerable to the same minister, this new arrangement should provide better working machinery for the coordination of their efforts.

Honourable senators, I commend this legislation to your consideration. I hope it is in satisfactory form. It should stimulate housing production generally, and it should steer resources into the kind of modest, moderately priced housing Canadians need at this time in our history. By encouraging more private investment it should free more funds for the important public financed housing programs, and, because of the way it is designed, produce a greater number of much needed housing units in proportion to the total money spent.

Honourable senators, I do not think there is much more I could usefully say at this moment. If and when the bill receives second reading—and here I am in the hands of the Senate—I would be prepared to ask your consent to commit the bill to a Committee of the Whole, in accordance with rule 18, which carries with it an invitation to the minister to come into the chamber and answer questions. In the circumstances in which we find ourselves today, I think this would be the best way to deal with the legislation. The minister and the appropriate officials of the department are available for this purpose.

● (1730)

Hon. Orville H. Phillips: Honourable senators, I thank Senator McIlraith for his introduction and explanation of Bill C-77.

Every year at about this time we hear various profound announcements on the need to increase our efforts to provide housing for Canadians. I often think that when the red lights go on at Christmas they seem to affect both Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the government, and they appear to follow the pattern of red governments by announcing a program designed for the following four or five years. We have become quite accustomed to these announcements, but our own home supply is still inadequate and costs have become prohibitive.

In its latest program the government appears to be recognizing that most young Canadians will never own their own home or, at least, one suited to their own desires. Indeed, the minister responsible for housing has already stated that Canadians are expecting too much in housing, and that the day of the single family dwelling is over. The present legislation ignores the high cost of construction, and, if I may, I should like to refer to this for a moment.

The installation of services—that is, hydro, water, sewers, telephone, et cetera—costs approximately $200 per linear foot. For a lot with a frontage of 50 feet this amounts to $10,000. The average construction cost—and this is for the type of housing considered under this bill—is $25 per square foot. Therefore, a home comprising 2,000 square feet would cost $35,000. After investing, say, $60,000 in the house, it is logical that we should look for a lot on which to place the home, and the average building lot in Ontario now costs $30,000. All this makes the minimum cost of the house $90,000.00.

If we switch to row housing, stacked housing, town houses, condominiums, then we reach a lower figure. Cluster town houses—that is to say, those that have no frontage—can be purchased for approximately $59,000, while a high rise condominium of 700 square feet, with two bedrooms can be purchased, depending on the area, for $46,000 to around $49,000.

Under the proposed legislation the maximum cost of houses allowable under this program varies from centre to centre—in Toronto and Vancouver it is $47,000 per home; in Ottawa, $38,000; Halifax, $38,500; and Prince Edward Island, $32,000. Therefore, honourable senators, it is quite clear that in large centres, particularly, the only hope for a young couple wishing to own their own home under this legislation will be a high rise condominium somewhere, and it will be in the vicinity of 700 to 1,000 square feet. This is not a very large area in which to raise a family and it is hardly the environment in which most people would wish to bring up their children. It is, as a friend of mine said to me the other day, almost an automatic form of birth control.

The government states one of the objectives of this bill is a greater diversion of mortgage funds into low and moderately priced housing. This is a very well worthwhile objective, but the bill does not spell out how this will be accomplished. Perhaps the Minister of State for Urban Affairs is correct when he states that legislation can be introduced requiring Canadian institutions to direct a certain percentage of their funds to this type of housing. But, honourable senators, we must bear in mind that a great deal of our mortgage funding originates in foreign countries and they will not be legislated by any Canadian laws.

It is interesting to learn that the additional funds directed by this bill will provide for 22,000 to 25,000 homes per year, which cannot be considered a full solution to Canadian housing needs. It is all very well to provide a high ratio mortgage for an individual, but I would point out that the person who has taken out a 95 per cent mortgage has for all intents and purposes limited the amount of credit available to him for other requirements, such as appliances for the home.

I note that the bill does not provide any description of a minimum requirement for the home, either in size or materials. It also does not state whether the home shall contain certain appliances, such as a stove and a refrigerator. Some of the provinces of Canada have laid down rules and regulations in this regard, and I believe that we should have a uniform standard throughout Canada.

The extension of assisted home ownership to the private enterprise field as well as the public field indicates that the government has more faith in private developers than it has in its own crown corporation for the development of public housing. I would point out that one of the great drawbacks in the past with regard to public assisted home ownership has been the amount of time that it requires to complete an application. An individual moving into a new city and attempting to purchase a home under the assisted home ownership program finds himself filling forms for anywhere from six months to eight months. At the end of that time, most have become discouraged and have purchased a trailer.

The requirement for at least one child has been removed from the assisted home ownership program, as mentioned by Senator McIlraith. However, we have an increasing number of families known as one-parent families. Such families are not included under the provisions of this bill. A single parent can be a woman who is divorced, separated or widowed, with one or two children, or, indeed, it can be the male partner of the marriage who is usually considered to be the wage earner. Those people, because of the fact that they are single parents, need more assistance than others in purchasing a home.

● (1740)

Assistance for home acquisition takes two forms. There is a grant to a maximum of $750 per annum for a couple with children, in order to keep their so-called PIT payments to 25 per cent of the family income. Others will receive assistance in the form of a repayable loan designed to reduce the mortgage rate from the prevailing interest rate to an effective rate of 8 per cent. The loan will be interest-free for a period of five years. At the end of the five-year period the loan has to be repaid or refinanced at the going mortgage rate.

I should add, honourable senators, that if the house is sold before five years, the interest-reducing loan is payable in full on the date of the sale of the house. If that particular house is sold at the end of three years, the purchaser is not eligible for the assistance provided under this bill. It applies only to the first purchase, or so-called acquisition, of a house. I wonder what effect this will have on the resale of a house, because if the program is worthwhile it is obvious that a potential purchaser will want a new home rather than one that is three years old, in order to obtain the benefits of the program.

I find also an obvious conflict between the principle of the repayable loan and the anti-inflation program. If a family is unable to afford a home in view of today's costs and the state of the family income, how can we expect that family to meet an increased PIT in five years, or indeed less, when the salary increase is limited by the anti-inflation guidelines?

The situation in this case is further aggravated by the fact that the amount of the loan is reduced each year by one-fifth or $20 per month. If salary increases are limited, and the cost of food, utilities and municipal taxes are uncontrolled, many homeowners will regret their purchase of a home under this plan.

[Senator Phillips.]

Those considering purchasing a home under these proposals should recall the ad that was widely distributed throughout the United States during the last couple of years asking, "Would you buy a used car from this man?"

During the first years of a mortgage, especially those with an extended amortization period of 30 or 40 years, very little is paid on the principal. Most of the payments go toward interest. At the end of a five-year period, when an individual goes to refinance a mortgage—say, one of $45,000—he could easily find that he faces a mortgage of $48,000 at a much higher rate. About all this clause of the bill does, honourable senators, by providing interest-free loans, is to delay and extend the time the home purchaser will spend in financial purgatory.

A further question that must be asked concerning refinancing at the end of the five-year period is: Where will the individual find mortgage financing for an amount greater than the appraised value of the home? I consider the bill to be very deficient in this regard, in that it makes no provision to guarantee refinancing, even at a higher rate, at the expiry of the original five-year period. I should like honourable senators to give consideration to that fact.

Rent controls are being requested from the provinces in conjunction with this bill and the anti-inflation program. Apartment buildings for rental in the past have not been as profitable as many people believe. The real profit has been the appreciation, or increase, in the value of the buildings. Now, because cost of construction has become so high, so enormous, builders are beginning to ask themselves if they can expect any appreciation in the future. If we go too far in asking for controls, we are liable to find ourselves very much in the situation the former Government of British Columbia found itself, and in which many developers left the province.

The bill provides for loans on rental accommodation. This could create a very special problem on repayment. The owner of a 100-unit apartment building who received the maximum subsidy could owe $3 million at the end of a 25-year period, which would likely be more than the value of the building. About the only advice I could give the individual in that case would be to let CMHC take it back, and I think CMHC will find itself repossessing a good many of these buildings in 10 or 15 years' time.

The reorganization of the board of directors of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, in effect, places it more directly under the control of the Minister of State for Urban Affairs. I believe we should take a very close look at that change in the act and its desirability.

Recently, the board of directors of Air Canada received a great deal of criticism in the Estey report. Honourable senators will recall that the position of President of Air Canada was reduced to the point where the President was president in title only. I believe this bill will bring about the same result in relation to the President of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Whoever accepts the position of President of CMHC should be ready for a sudden retirement, because in two or three years' time he will become the scapegoat for the failure of this program.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, before I speak on second reading, I wonder if the Leader of the Government would indicate to us what time program he has in mind for the disposition of this bill by the Senate. The reason I ask that question is that we are approaching 6 o'clock, and there has been a suggestion by the sponsor of the bill that it might go to Committee of the Whole.

Is it his thought that we carry on right through, which might keep us here until 7 or 8 o'clock, or has he in mind that the Senate will adjourn at the usual time of 6 o'clock, and then carry on with whatever we have to do in connection with the bill after that?

Senator Perrault: If it is the wish of honourable senators to carry on, we will do so. I understand that the minister responsible for this legislation in the other place is in the gallery, and is ready to assist us with clarification of any of the clauses of this bill should we desire to proceed with it now.

If it is the desire of the house to adjourn now to resume at 8 o'clock, that, too, is a consideration. Perhaps the Deputy Leader of the Opposition could express his wishes in this regard.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I have no strong view on the matter at the moment. We on this side of the house are, of course, prepared to do all we can to expedite the passage of the bill, being aware of certain urgencies which have been expressed by the minister in the other place and at other times.

Perhaps I could ask a supplementary question. Would it be possible for us to have the bill as passed by the House of Commons before us before going very much further in our discussion? I do not have a copy of the bill as passed by the House of Commons before me.

I ask that question, of course, because the other place dealt with this bill and disposed of it, as far as they are concerned, only an hour or so ago, and we have no way of knowing at this time whether there were any amendments. We do not have the bill as passed by the House of Commons, which is our normal procedure.

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, perhaps I could clarify that point. The bill we have, as presented on first reading, is the bill as passed by the House of Commons. It has one virtue in that it has the explanatory notes, and that is a rather pleasing virtue as far as I am concerned. In any event, there were no amendments made to the bill by the House of Commons.

With respect to his second question, unless the Deputy Leader of the Opposition or any honourable senator has other views, I would prefer to continue.

Senator Grosart: Perhaps at the conclusion of my remarks we might deal with that, and the Leader of the Government or the sponsor of the bill can make a suggestion as to our next step.

Honourable senators, while adding a few comments to the excellent analysis of the bill given by Senator Phillips, I shall be raising a few points in a rather general way which honourable senators might want to deal with when we are in Committee of the Whole and are considering clause 1, on the principle, and the other clauses seriatim.

The reason I put these points before the Senate at this particular time is that I think it is important that they be on the record, Senate Hansard, and not merely on the record of the proceedings of the Committee of the Whole.

● (1750)

This is a very important bill, though to some extent it may well be an indication of some rather serious shortcomings in previous attempts to deal with this serious problem of housing shortage, particularly for low income and moderate income families.

There have been many bills and programs proposed at all levels of government, and to date they have not achieved any great success, and certainly this bill indicates that the federal government is now aware that it has to do something much more positive than it has done in the past. Whether or not this bill will live up to those expectations, I do not know.

There are reasons why one may have serious doubts about that, particularly in view of the lack of success that has accompanied previous attempts of the government to deal with this problem. The fact remains that at the present time over 800,000 Canadian families are spending more than 25 per cent of their income on shelter. The minister has said that approximately 280,000 Canadian families are spending over 50 per cent of the family income on providing themselves with shelter. This does not indicate a very successful approach to the problem up to this time.

The bill does recognize that there are special cases, other than the mere income cases, which have to be dealt with. There are no clear indications in the bill as to how the special cases will be dealt with. However, we have been told by the minister and others that the generalities of the bill will permit the government, and its agencies, to proceed in due course to a solution of such problems as those concerning senior citizens, the socially and economically deprived and handicapped persons, particularly handicapped native Canadians.

I shall perhaps go beyond speaking on the principle of the bill at this time because it is very difficult to discover what that principle is. It can be said that it is to provide more homes. We have been told by the minister that the hope is that the provisions of this bill will make possible the construction of some one million new units in Canada in the next four years. We are still uncertain as to whether or not the target for this year of 210,000 dwelling units will be reached. Here again the minister says he is optimistic. The predictions in the past have not been that good, but we can hope that the goals will be reached at least this year.

Throughout the discussion of this bill, and particularly the government's representations in regard to it, the phrase "moderately priced homes" has been repeated over and over again. A brief examination of the bill and some of the discussions that have taken place on it, finds me unable to define for myself the phrase "moderately priced homes."

The bill has loan ceilings, and ceilings on the price of the house that can be assisted by the provisions of this bill. It seems to me, in the cases where there are specific numbers, the ceiling is so close to, and in some cases below, the actual price at which a house can be obtained, that many of the provisions of this bill will be completely inoperative for those who need it the most. The point made by Senator Phillips—and I hope if and when the minister comes before us he will give us some assurance in this regard—was whether there is any room between the ceilings that will be imposed as a result of the bill and the regulations under it, and the actual practical cost at which a dwelling unit of one kind or another can be obtained.

The bill makes it clear that one of its objectives is to increase the percentage of federal funding and, therefore, the construction of public housing, yet the figures I have indicate that that percentage has actually been declining recently in spite of the programs that we have discussed here and which have been passed by Parliament. The figure for 1970 was 24.3 per cent; 1972, 37.3 per cent; and 1974, 19.2 per cent—a substantial drop. I hope the minister will be able to tell us what happened there, and why, and what are the prospects of improving the situation in years ahead.

There is also the question of a possible conflict here with the government's intention to achieve amelioration of inflation by certain controls. There is some indication that the bill itself, in the home-owner and rental areas, may actually be working against those controls. It is obvious that some of the subsidies—that is the word used by the minister, whether he was referring to loans, or interest on the loans or grants—may themselves become highly inflationary. We are told also that there will be funds reserved as a result of the implementation of the provisions of this bill for further government intervention in the housing market. I have seen no explanation of that, and again trust that we will have this information before we are asked to pass this bill on third reading.

There is room for confusion in some of the wording of the bill, which seems to provide for certain benefits on the acquisition of existing homes. My understanding is, although it is not in the bill, that it is merely enabling, but certainly it has created the impression around the country—this is clause 4 of the bill—that it will provide for the extension of benefits to the acquisition of existing homes.

I am not sure at the present time whether we have an indication of the capital cost which will be involved in this bill. I think it is most important that we have either that budget, which I presume is subject to Treasury Board approval, or at least a better indication than we have had so far of the total level of new federal expenditures that are involved.

There is also the question of not merely the quantity of new dwelling units, which is in itself very important, but also the quality. There are indications in the provisions of the bill that it may actually work against quality rather than in favour of quality. The minister, in speeches in other places, has said that the ministry and those responsible for the administration of the bill when it becomes an act will pay great attention to this.

● (1800)

This is of the utmost importance because, if there is not an adequate level of quality control in the administration of the bill when it becomes law, we shall have slums. Indeed, there is indication already that some of the government-funded housing throughout the country is coming close to the slum level. I think there is a danger of this in respect to the principle of this bill, because it aims to make sure that the kind of dwelling funded either for acquisition or rental under the bill will be moderate housing, and properly so described, but then there are restrictions which would tend to have an adverse effect on the quality of the housing.

For example, there are density restrictions—not the environmental type of restriction which prohibits the loading of houses one upon the other or back to back, with no proper frontages, and so on. Quite the contrary. This bill actually encourages density because it says, for example, that one acre of land must have so many houses on it, and from some of the arithmetic which has been given it would seem to me that it is unlikely that any of these new houses, either separate dwellings or other types of dwelling, will have more than about a 30-foot frontage, although someone suggested they would have a 40-foot frontage. Well, when you consider the general requirements of a driveway and garage, there seems to be a great danger here that the housing which may develop under the provisions of this bill, far from being good housing, will be bad housing.

Another problem seems to arise in connection with the resale provisions of this bill. It has been suggested that there is potential for a rip-off, because under the AHOP resale provisions the interest-free benefit is retained in the case of the sale of a dwelling by the owner, even though he may make a large capital gain on an investment, part of which has been provided by the public. From the preceding discussions I am unaware whether it is possible to do anything about that or not, but, personally, I am certainly not satisfied with the negative replies which have been given, and I would hope that in due course measures will be taken to prevent any so-called rip-off. Admittedly, the provisions of the bill in this respect are limited to a single sale. Nevertheless, it is an area in which the benefit from the acceptance of public funds could be quite substantial.

Having said that much, honourable senators, may I add that I realize that the bill before us is largely of an enabling nature, and therefore lacks precision with respect to what that enabling authority will be if it is passed by Parliament.

In due course, either in committee or on third reading, I assume we will be given rather more specific information than we have had so far with respect to the consequences of this bill. What will its actual results be? It is just not enough to say that it is hoped that the bill will result in the building of a million houses in four years. What kind of houses? What quality of houses? For whom will they be built?

I, for one, would like to see a fairly detailed breakdown of the persons in the various levels of Canadian society who are most likely to be benefited by the large expenditures—either on a grant basis or a loan basis—which will result from this bill.

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator McIlraith speaks now, his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, my remarks will be brief. I wish to thank honourable senators for their contributions to the debate on second reading.

I note Senator Grosart's desire for further and fuller information on certain aspects of the bill. It is my view that it would be better for the minister to give, in committee, detailed information as to anticipated results from the provisions of the bill, than for me to attempt to give it at the second reading stage. Normally, of course—certainly, at other times when I have ministerial authority—I should have preferred to give the information myself on second reading. I hope Senator Grosart understands that.

Further, I hope the pessimism he displayed in some parts of his remarks tonight will pass with the more cheerful season we are now approaching, and that it will not be justified in any way by the results. I hope, when he has occasion to look back on this bill, he will decide that at this stage he was wrong in being so pessimistic, and will tell us how the bill actually exceeded his expectations.

There is one point of interest which I should have mentioned in my earlier remarks, and which Senator Grosart touched upon in his, namely, the target this year of 210,000 housing and dwelling units. That figure should be exceeded by the end of December—in other words, in another 12 days—so that the promise that it will be exceeded is pretty firm, and I am happy to have that item of good news for honourable senators. I have nothing further to add at this time.

Senator Grosart: Perhaps the sponsor of the bill will allow me to say that if I appeared overpessimistic, it was only because I am aware that every cloud has a Barney Danson.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

CONSIDERED IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, as I indicated earlier, I propose asking the Senate to commit the bill to a Committee of the Whole, and, in accordance with rule 18, I would ask that the Senate invite the minister to come into the chamber to answer questions, if it agrees to so commit the bill.

Therefore, I move, seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C., that the bill be committed to a Committee of the Whole presently.

Motion agreed to.

● (1810)

The Senate was accordingly adjourned during pleasure and put into a Committee of the Whole on the bill, the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, P.C. in the Chair.

Pursuant to rule 18 of the Rules of the Senate, the Honourable Barney Danson, P.C., the Minister of State for Urban Affairs, was escorted to a seat in the Senate chamber.

The Chairman: Honourable senators, we have Bill C-77 before us. I should like to point out that several clauses are subdivided into three, four and five parts. For the record, may I suggest that when we discuss a clause we take the subclauses seriatim. It is usual, of course, to postpone discussion of the title until all clauses of the bill have been accepted.

May I now welcome on your behalf the Minister of State for Urban Affairs, the Honourable Barney Danson.

I refer now to clause 1. Shall clause 1 carry?

Senator Grosart: I think it is customary, Mr. Chairman, to hold clause 1 until we have gone through the other clauses. Perhaps I should say also that it is customary to discuss the bill with the minister first. I am wondering if the minister was in the gallery when Senator Phillips and I spoke.

Senator Perrault: He would not be able to take notes in the gallery.

Hon. Barney Danson (Minister of State for Urban Affairs): Yes, Mr. Chairman, I was.

Senator Grosart: Then, I suggest that the minister might reply to some of the questions that were raised, at any point he wishes, as we go through the bill. It is very difficult to relate them specifically to clauses, but I will try to do that as we go along.

Senator Phillips: Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that the minister was unable to make notes in the gallery, perhaps we could direct our questions to him before we start the clause-by-clause study. Would that be acceptable to the committee?

The Chairman: Do honourable senators agree to this mode of procedure?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Chairman: Mr. Minister, have you an opening statement?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Honourable senators, I listened with interest to the debate on second reading. The questions raised were of special interest to me. I hope I can recall each of them, but if not I am sure you will draw them to my attention.

The first question raised, if I recall correctly, was in connection with the inflationary effect of some of these measures. It was suggested that they might actually increase the cost of housing. This has not been our experience, I must say. Indeed, when I first came into this job just about a year ago—and I believe I was speaking here in Committee of the Whole at that very time—people were saying that the price limits we had put on houses were not realistic. They said they could not buy houses at those prices. And, indeed, they could not. On the other hand, builders were saying that they could not build houses at those prices. But they were wrong. When the mortgage market tightened up and the only mortgage money available was through these programs, the builders soon found that they could build houses, and quite good houses at that.

Senator Phillips asked about the quality of this housing. We found it to be quite good. The houses are built to NHA standards, which are very high, and are subject to NHA inspection. Their design is surprisingly good. Sometimes I am almost embarrassed when I notice the quality of some of the housing we are assisting with. Just last week in Saint John, New Brunswick, I saw semi-detached homes built under the AHOP program. Any of us would be proud to live in them. And here in Ottawa I noticed an advertisement in the Citizen for high rise condominiums which came within the price range of our AHOP program. Some of the two-storey condominiums were not eligible under the terms of our program, but single storey condominiums in the same building were. To see the advertisement showing pretty girls playing tennis and men relaxing in the sauna bath, and men and women sitting around the swimming pool, you would think that it was a country club that was being subsidized. We are endeavouring to reach agreement with the provinces and independent agencies to guarantee by way of a warranty scheme a high degree of quality.

The question of density was raised. This is an important matter. We are encouraging higher density. We are facing what is now a fact of life in our major cities across the country today, that the high cost of land, to which I believe Senator Phillips referred, is making it quite impossible for a young couple starting off in life to have their own home on a single family lot. These homes are expensive today, and we would be misleading people if we were to hold that out as a dream or even as an expectation.

We had reached the stage in our society where even newly married couples felt it was their right to own their own home on a single family lot wherever they wanted to live. That is just not possible. It is not realistic. Expectations had been increasing all along and until a very short time ago people were able to achieve those expectations because of inflation. This situation continued on and on. People made a small down payment and thought that their first home should be as good or better than the one they lived in with their parents, that they should have three or four bedrooms, two bathrooms, a finished recreation room with a chrome bar, a push-button kitchen, and even an extra car in the garage and an extra television set upstairs. And, of course, they also wanted to wear good clothes and take vacations. This was all very wonderful but it was not realistic, and I think most of us realized it. So, instead of trying to fulfill expectations we are endeavouring to look after needs.

There is a feature here which I think is unique. Under these new initiatives the assistance is in the form of a loan, except for those who really cannot afford it, in which case there is an additional grant. People say, "But this is not what we expect of governments. We expect governments to give things away." Well, we are saying something different here. We are saying, "Your fellow taxpayer is going to help you when you need help, and when you can afford to pay it back you will pay it back." That is rather a novel idea in these times, and one that we have to get used to and one that young people especially will get used to. The interesting part of it is that I have not found any resistance to this. I have gone across the country from coast to coast and I have spoken to young people and I have asked about their expectations and about these luxurious homes which many were able to get in the past but which they cannot get now. Many of them said, "If they were available we would be happy to get in on the action, but we want a decent place we can afford so that we can get a stake in the community and start raising a family."

● (1820)

There is another interesting point to which some honourable senators referred. Certain provisions of this bill are extended to two-person families, whereas previously there had to be at least one child in the family. That left out couples who wanted to work and establish a home before they started their family. Now, a two-person household is open to various interpretations. There are various family associations in society today, but generally the provisions of this bill are to enable a young family to establish a home. You may also have a single person with a parent or a handicapped brother or sister. You may also have the single parent family. I believe this is one of the questions raised.

[Hon. Mr. Danson.]

The question of design is an interesting one because of Senator Grosart's particular reference to "instant slums", and that is something that concerns me very much. We have established a target of a million starts in the next four years, and, like Senator Grosart, I would not like to look back and say, "I was minister at the time that commitment was made, and look at what we built." So, we are very concerned about design standards. Central Mortgage and Housing have always had impressive design awards. I presided at the presentation of those awards last year, and we were all impressed with the designs—beautiful ranch homes on Grouse Mountain, lovely places on the Bay of Fundy, but they were not the type of homes that we were, in the main, assisting. So, all our design awards now are going to be directed to the type of housing which we support. This is to ensure that we shall have good design and very good quality.

Returning to the question of density, which I started to deal with earlier, in the main parts of a city, as Senator Phillips indicated, we were talking about stacked town housing and, in some cases, medium-rise condominiums. The same applies to rental accommodation. There are some good housing forms. It was suggested that this was a form of enforced birth control. I can only comment on that by saying that my first home was a 700 square foot bungalow with two bedrooms, a recreation room, and a very small bathroom, which would be termed a powder room today. I was very pleased. We had a card table and four chairs and I was so proud that my wife cried. But with that enforced birth control we managed to produce four healthy sons. Somehow where there is a will there is a way. We got started in that home with a $1,300 army re-establishment credit and $700 I borrowed from my father and my uncle. Later we traded up and owned two more homes in Toronto before moving to Ottawa. I think this bill is really suited to that sort of expectation.

I hope we are not taking too long, but I should like to deal with what I regard as the overall thrust of the legislation. People speak of a housing crisis. I always say it is not a crisis but that there are critical areas in housing—rental housing, housing for the very poor, housing for native people, and so on. These are the areas to which we have to direct our attention. The marshalling of resources from the private sector relieves the funding normally applied to those families being helped and who are in the middle income range, and leaves the direct funding and the deep subsidies available to those who need that help the most.

One of the advantages I had in coming to this job was that I did not know anything about it. It seemed to me that there were three themes we had to develop: one was a regular steady flow of mortgage funds, instead of the start and stop, on and off sort of market we have so often seen. Another was the steady flow of serviced land. Here I am not speaking of land pure and simple, but serviced land which is expensive, particularly with today's high interest rates and carrying costs. The third was continuity in the industry itself so that people could plan for a prolonged period of time and gear up an industry so that it would operate at its greatest degree of efficiency.

So, in so far as funding is concerned, in addition to our increasing budget year after year we have asked private lenders to increase their lending in this area of moderately priced housing, and moderate density housing, to add $750 million on top of the sum of $7 billion that they normally put into this market. Now, people say that we should force them and legislate them, and we are prepared to do that if it is necessary. However, we have never found, at least at any time that I can remember, that when the government has indicated their wishes in this regard they have not been responded to. Indeed, in our discussions with the lenders, prior to this legislation, they were prepared to become involved. But this is a way of quantifying the amount needed, and we will have a mortgage monitoring committee to work with them.

So, the normal investment and borrowing patterns are respected. Banks are different from insurance companies, and insurance companies are different from trust companies, and trust companies are different from caisses populaires, and even within those categories they have different ways of lending. On the average it is an increase of 14 per cent. Some companies have an outstanding record where they might have 80 per cent or more of their portfolios—and some 90 per cent—in residential mortgages. It might not be realistic for them to go up another 14 per cent, but somebody who has only 40 per cent or 60 per cent may be able to go up 20 per cent. We have had a very encouraging response from the private lenders.

In so far as the regular stream of serviced land is concerned, there are several approaches to that. So much of it is not within our jurisdiction, being in provincial jurisdiction, but we find that perhaps the most basic is the provision of sewage services, which we have had for some time, or sanitary sewers. Last year when I appeared before you when you were dealing with Bill C-46, to amend the National Housing Act, storm sewers were added. Under this legislation we are adding water mains. These are the main trunk services and treatment plants. So, it should be a great encouragement where they get a two-thirds loan at an attractive interest rate and on favourable terms, and for which there is 25 per cent forgiveness. Those are the major factors in getting those services in.

In addition, we have our normal land assembly programs, each complementing the other. But many municipalities have been rather reluctant to approve zoning or building permits for more housing. It just does not pay them. In some cases it is a matter of economics, and in others it is a matter of, "I'm all right Jack, we are here now." They don't have to worry about anybody else. They will service libraries, fire stations schools and other things that have to be added. So, if they put in every one of these units that are approved, even multiple dwellings, and public housing, and not just what we are talking about in this legislation, the non-profit housing, then we say, "We will give you $1,000 for each unit." This can be pretty significant. It helps to pay for the services, and in many cities the services already exist.

I was in Windsor the other day and I could see the amount of vacant land within the city limits. Winnipeg is another good example of that. There it is close to the central core. There where you have medium or even high density, a hundred units puts $100,000 right into the city treasury. It is sort of buckshee for the municipality and is an incentive for them to do that. We are encouraging the provinces, and some provinces are most interested in complementing these sorts of programs.

● (1830)

The third one is the question of continuity. From my own personal business experience I know that if I knew what the size of the market was going to be and how long it was going to be sustained, I could tool up, set up my production, get my personnel organized, and really get my costs down. In that way I could be highly efficient. However, that does not bring prices down; it is competition that brings prices down—unless one is in the dredging business. However, this helps immensely in bringing the economies of scale to bear on the market. Then we will see the marketplace really work. So, after a few years, we hope to see these million new starts—235,000 in the coming year. As Senator McIlraith said, we will exceed the target of 210,000. People think that we should not stay with those targets. Just a few months ago people were urging me to abandon the target of 210,000. But I like targets. I think they are great, but they say that if you fail by even one you are a political failure. I do not think we should let that worry us. Failing is not a great sin; not trying is.

That is what we needed and we stuck with it, and even when it looked bad we met with the provinces. We had five meetings of the federal and provincial housing ministries this year. We also met with the industry. We found ways and we urged them and we squeezed those budgets and transferred money where necessary so that instead of coming to the end of the year as in the past with funds left over to be turned back to the treasury, the money was used up and the targets exceeded.

Honourable senators, I hope I have answered your questions; if not, I will be pleased to elaborate further.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, I have several questions listed and I believe that in the rather lengthy dissertation of the minister he touched on one. If I may, I will bring him back more specifically to the points. One question I raised in my earlier remarks referred to the standard of the housing. Are corridors to be a certain width? Are certain basic appliances included with the house? Must the living room have broadloom or may it be hardwood? Could we have some clarification as to the standards?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes, sir. Our building standards are the National Housing Act standards, which deal with construction quality and not with appliances or furnishings. In the rental accommodation that is something for the landlord to determine. It is provided in our agreements with the landlord that we see the quality of additional services he is supplying and ensure that the rent is consistent with the market, or below the market rates.

Senator Phillips: I also directed a question concerning the exclusion of the so-called single parent. I know that the minister touched briefly on this, but I did not get the point of his remarks. Would he elaborate on why a single parent is excluded?

Hon. Mr. Danson: A single-parent family is included in this legislation, where it was not previously. It is a two-person household, to particularly apply to the young married couple, but it also applies to the single parent. Normally it is the single-parent family, or the young family starting up.

Senator Phillips: I am pleased to receive the minister's answer. I have a further, probably two-part question. Why do the so-called subsidies apply only to the acquisition or first purchase of a house? Secondly, is there any indication of when AHOP will apply to existing houses?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Senator Phillips, the reason for it applying only to the first home is that we feel that people who have owned a home previously have had a stake in the housing market and have thus benefited from the inflationary effects. It is those who are starting for the first time who are having the most difficulties. The other point, as far as existing housing is concerned, is that we would like the provisions of the bill to apply as soon as the market is stabilized—as soon as there is a sufficient supply and sufficient funding available. When we are convinced that all the funding necessary is going into new housing to increase supply, which is our fundamental response, we can look at the situation to see whether budgets, cash flow and availability of mortgage funds will permit the inclusion of existing housing. It is socially just as good for a family, and sometimes better for a community, to recognize that. When I first came on the job, AHOP, which had been introduced by my predecessor, was always available to both types, but some 60 per cent of the funding was going into existing housing, and this was not getting to the root of the problem. So, on the advice of my officials I cancelled that and just made it available for new housing. We started to increase supply, but, almost more importantly, we got the building industry turned around so that they were thinking in terms of quality, size and price of housing, and they have done this remarkably well.

Senator Phillips: During my remarks on second reading, I expressed concern regarding the position of the person who has purchased a home, receiving both the grant and the interest-free loan, when it comes to refinancing in five years' time. I indicated that it is quite possible for him to require a mortgage greater than the original cost of the home. I also expressed concern regarding the availability of funds and whether he receives any guarantee that funds will be available for refinancing at the end of the five-year period.

Hon. Mr. Danson: Senator, in my experience and that of my advisers, the question of refinancing has never been a great problem in the normal mortgage market. I heard that part of your speech. I now understand the point was the accumulated debt. Obviously, you know the legislation pretty well because of the distinction between those who are also receiving the grant. In normal circumstances that amount of assistance reduces by 20 per cent per year, or, where there is the grant as well, that would reduce a maximum of $20 per month, but never more than 25 per cent of the person's income. It is not intended upon refinancing that they should pay off the loan portion. If they finance upwards, indeed, then they must pay it back. That is the time at which it must be paid back, but their indebtedness would not be that great. I would have to make some calculations and I am sure we can do them rather quickly. I do not think we could reach a situation—but I had better be sure of what I am saying—where the increased indebtedness would not be compensated for by the principal payments that have been made of the forgivable portion of their grant, which is non-repayable. I am saying that as a guess, but we can do some calculations and give you a more precise answer in a few moments.

[Hon. Mr. Danson.]

• (1840)

Senator Macdonald: Mr. Chairman, before leaving clause 1, may I refer to subsection (4), on page 2, which says:

No contribution or loan may be made—

And so forth. Does that mean the cost of the land and dwelling, or those costs plus legal costs, appraisal fees, and so on?

Hon. Mr. Danson: I am sorry, I did not fully hear.

Senator Macdonald: I refer you to page 2 of the bill, subsection (4). I was wondering what is meant by the provision:

No contribution or loan may be made pursuant to this section unless such limits as to costs—

And so on. I was wondering what those costs include.

Hon. Mr. Danson: We are referring there to the house price limit, which varies from city to city and region to region, and which we adjusted just last week. That refers to the cost of the house, which we follow rather carefully and adjust from time to time as market conditions change.

Senator Macdonald: Does it include legal, appraisal, fire insurance, loan insurance, and other costs, as well as the cost of the home?

Hon. Mr. Danson: It is the net cost of the house. The additional costs of the transaction are not included in that, although we hoped they would be or could be.

Senator Williams: I would like to ask the minister to clarify a point. He has several times used the phrase "construction quality." I am not sure in my own mind how to apply this. My own province, British Columbia, is known for the production of lumber and forestry materials. "Construction quality" means to me good workmanship in putting together the material that builds a house. That material could be what they used to call in British Columbia "D" grade, which is possibly the lowest type of material from the mills, and so on.

When you say "construction quality," what does that mean? I have reason to ask that question because a lot of the "D" grade material finds its way into the hands of contractors who build Indian homes.

Hon. Mr. Danson: That would be something that the CMHC inspectors would watch very carefully. It is not only the workmanship, but also the quality of the material. There is a wide variety of material. In British Columbia it is largely wood, with which you can get attractive designs and good economies. In Toronto, where I come from, it would be brick. The material varies. It has to be the quality of the material and the workmanship itself, which is extremely important. That is one of the reasons for the inspection, to ensure that a purchaser would not be stuck with substandard material. That is watched exceedingly carefully. We must bear in mind that a wide variety of material is used across the country. I have seen log housing in the Northwest Territories that is first rate, but that is quite different from what one would find in, say, Toronto or Ottawa.

The Chairman: Clause 1.

Senator Grosart: Mr. Chairman, this is the clause dealing with rental programs. It seems to me that this is very much related to the programs of rental controls in the provinces, and because there is a built-in rental control by CMHC we will have two systems of rental controls. To what extent will they conflict? If they do conflict, which rental control program will take priority?

Hon. Mr. Danson: There are two factors which apply there. I do not know if any of the provincial systems will apply their controls to new housing. Most of them will exclude that housing in which we participate and where we have a rental agreement. That is not absolutely certain. Sometimes a province might choose to go that route. It does not appear that they will want to duplicate.

Senator Grosart: What was the reason for moving away from the grant approach to the loan approach?

Hon. Mr. Danson: It gives us tremendous leverage—well, that is not precisely correct. They are going to private funding, because there is greater leverage for the minimum amount of taxpayers' dollars. Many people need assistance, and it is quite a heavy drain on the treasury. Ultimately their incomes may improve, or their equity increase, and if they sell at a profit it did not seem fair that they should profit from a windfall, if it were that, or a capital gain, after they received assistance from their fellow taxpayers. If they refinance upwards, or sell upwards, at a profit, they must pay back their loan.

It is helping people get in, and recycling that money back to the treasury so that it can be used to help more people. We have taken off the income limits, which makes a big difference. People who can quite well afford to pay it back may have a little difficulty in the beginning, but they should really pay it back.

Senator Grosart: Is the main purpose the recovery of the benefit to the Consolidated Revenue Fund or CMHC?

Hon. Mr. Danson: That would be the main purpose—to be reused. I have deep feelings about this, and it is one expressed in many quarters. As I alluded in my earlier remarks, governments should not constantly be giving money away. We should help people when they need help, and they should be prepared to pay back the money to their fellow taxpayers when they can. It may be old fashioned, but it seems to work, and we should do more of it.

Senator Grosart: There is a time limit on the loans—a time for pay-back. How would that work, in the circumstances, under clause 1?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Are you referring to clause 1, to home ownership?

Senator Grosart: No, the rental. After the support period there is to be repayment of the loan. There is a limited support period in respect of the loan. What is that period?

Hon. Mr. Danson: It could be up to about 15 years, and it could be as short as five years. It will probably average closer to 10 years in the rental field. That interest accrues and it is then paid off when the entrepreneur refinances, if that is the case. He either pays it off or re-amortizes it, and there is new financing. He is then free of the agreement with the corporation. We hope and expect by that time that we shall have a much greater supply of rental accommodation on the market.

Senator Grosart: But the interest does not accumulate until after the support period; is that correct?

Hon. Mr. Danson: That is correct, in the rental situation.

The Chairman: Clause 1. Shall clause 1 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 2.

Senator Grosart: Under clause 2, perhaps the minister would indicate—because this deals with the increase in direct lending, and other lending, from $12 billion to $14.5 billion in respect to CMHC—the estimated total cost of the benefits under the bill year by year?

Hon. Mr. Danson: I will have to obtain those figures.

Senator Grosart: Have you the total figures, say, for the first year? There was a figure of $131 million mentioned. Is that the figure?

● (1850)

Hon. Mr. Danson: I shall have to check that, because we are talking of a budget for last year of $1.62 billion, which will be increased this year, but there are several components involved. In relation to housing initiatives, it would be about $212.5 million.

Senator Grosart: That is for the first fiscal year?

Hon. Mr. Danson: That is the amount we are projecting for 1976. The actual expenditure, then, for 1976 is something in the order of $6 million, going to approximately $27.5 million in 1977 and $47.6 million in 1978. It then starts to decline as repayments begin to come in.

Senator Grosart: I was not really asking about the total commitment; I was asking about the total cost. If these are interest-free loans, and so forth, what is the program under this bill going to cost?

Hon. Mr. Danson: The cost of interest-free loans, starting in 1976, is $5.8 million; in 1977, $27.6 million; in 1978, $47.6 million; in 1979, $45.8 million, and in 1980, $33.9 million. Those figures relate to the assisted rental and the assisted home ownership programs.

Senator Grosart: How long is the new ceiling of $14.5 million expected to last?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Until 1978.

Senator Grosart: A period of three years?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes, that is correct.

Senator Grosart: That is becoming a familiar term around here.

Senator Bourget: Mr. Minister, how do you arrive at the cost of a building? Is it on a square footage basis, or do you make a complete and detailed estimate of the cost of the house, or have you a standard price, depending upon the quality of the house?

Hon. Mr. Danson: It is a detailed appraisal by our appraisers. It does, of course, vary with the market conditions of each locale. The top limit under the assisted home ownership program is $47,000, which is in effect in Vancouver and Toronto, and it goes down to a low of about $28,000. That may be up to $33,000 in some parts of the country.

Senator Bourget: What is the average square footage cost of a house coming under this program?

Hon. Mr. Danson: It is in the range of $25, exclusive of land costs.

The Chairman: Shall clause 2 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 3 carry?

Senator Macdonald: The proposed subsection 34.15(3) under clause 3 of the bill reads:

Loans may be made under the authority of this section only in respect of family housing units not exceeding such cost as may be prescribed by the Corporation—

I expect that the cost prescribed by the corporation will vary from province to province, and I am wondering whether it varies within the province. I am particularly interested in the province of Nova Scotia, and whether there is one cost province-wide or whether it is divided into regions and, if so, what are those regions?

Hon. Mr. Danson: It is divided not only into provinces, but into regions within the provinces, and the prescribed cost does vary. The figure for the assisted home ownership program in Halifax is now $38,500. Up until last week it was $36,000.

Senator Macdonald: Do you have the figure for Sydney?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes, Sydney is $34,000 as opposed to $38,500 for Halifax. The difference would be in the cost of the land. This is a very interesting thing too, because you can probably provide a more attractive house with that money in Sydney than in Halifax, and the attraction of Sydney itself would help too.

Senator Bourget: I wonder if there is a table showing the price by provinces? I do not want you to read it, but perhaps you could file it so that the figures will be on record.

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes, we can file a paper with that breakdown. That might be helpful.

Senator Grosart: On this clause dealing with AHOP, the minister might discuss with us briefly the question of the relationship between these loan ceilings and the average prices of houses.

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes. The average price of housing takes into account high priced housing, of course. What we are talking about is moderately priced housing. There is no such thing as low cost housing today, not according to the basic standards we consider reasonable. It is low cost to people who are subsidized to build it. We are looking at the low end of the market where, generally speaking, the average income of the people who have benefited from the assisted home ownership program is in the range of $10,000, or slightly below $10,000, per year. It has been as high as $17,000 in centres like Vancouver and Toronto. We expect the average will increase under this new program because the limit is off. We are trying to encourage people to buy. We are looking at supply and demand. We want them to accept good housing that is modestly priced, and increase the stock of that.

[Senator Grosart.]

Indeed, I expect we will be criticized because there will be a picture of one of our AHOP houses with a Rolls Royce in front of it one of these days. As someone suggested, you see pictures of council houses in England with a Jaguar in front of them. That should not disturb us too much. The advertising will indicate that a person can live in the same sort of house, and it will not have the word "poor" in it.

Of course, if that became an abuse, we would have to look at it. If there were people who could not move into low cost housing because wealthy people were taking it, I think we would want to take a very good look at that. I look forward to the socio-economic intermix that has been lacking in some of our developments in the past, and which may lead to some of the very concerns, Senator Grosart, which you expressed in your remarks.

Senator Grosart: Now that CMHC has the authority for the first time to set these local limits, how often will they be set, and will they be published? How are people to know in advance, if they are planning to purchase a house with a loan?

Hon. Mr. Danson: We watch this constantly, and we do a major review about twice a year, but it depends on market conditions. Indeed, last week some limits changed rather dramatically, and others did not change at all. None increased by more than 10 per cent; some went up by 2 per cent. We also have to watch the Anti-Inflation Board, because they keep an eye on us too.

The Chairman: Shall clause 3 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 4?

Senator Grosart: Clause 4 authorizes CMHC to make interest-free loans to people who buy homes as distinct from clause 1 which deals with rentals. I would be interested in knowing about the pay-back conditions in relation to this clause. Homes can be financed by approved lenders, provincial agencies or CMHC. Do I understand correctly that it is to be paid back at the end of five years? Is it to be paid back at the end of five years, or when the home is sold or refinanced? What is the purpose of the five-year clause?

Hon. Mr. Danson: That is when the meter starts ticking and interest is payable. In the first five years we ask that they reduce each year automatically.

• (1900)

The amount of loan assistance will be reduced by 20 per cent, or by a maximum of $20 at the lower rate. If it then exceeds 25 per cent of income, then they do not have to pay it back at that time. The loan keeps on accruing, but interest does not begin until after the sixth year, but then it is at the current mortgage rate.

The Chairman: Shall clause 4 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 5 carry?

Senator Macdonald: Mr. Chairman, with respect to clause 5, section 34.20, on page 5, states:

A loan made to a cooperative association under this Part—

Is that cooperative association a loose association of people who get together to build, or must it be incorporated under either provincial or federal legislation?

Hon. Mr. Danson: The cooperatives must be legally incorporated, senator. Cooperatives have been very popular, and, indeed, their birthplace is Nova Scotia.

Senator Macdonald: Yes, we have had them for 40 years, I think, in Nova Scotia.

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes, great assistance has been given there under our direct program, which is a 100 per cent loan at a favoured interest rate, which is currently 8 per cent. Only 90 per cent of it is repayable. For a cooperative to get started, and set up and make its plans, we will give it a grant of up to $10,000.

Something we encourage is our third sector houses, non-profit houses, which are financed in the same way. This is a type of tenure which we think should be encouraged not only in remote areas, but in the major cities, where, as a matter of fact, we have some major developments. We think it is best handled under a cooperative arrangement.

Senator Macdonald: As I recall it, under the Nova Scotia legislation with respect to the housing cooperative, the downpayment could be the members' own work on the building. Does that apply under this legislation?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes. We call that "sweat equity." I guess in this chamber it should be called "perspiration equity." It is included, and it can be counted.

Senator Grosart: Is there an estimate of the cost to the federal government of the grants to reduce the effective interest rate from the market rate? Have you made any estimate of the cost?

Hon. Mr. Danson: I am sorry, Senator Grosart, we do not seem to have that specific information here, although I guess it was part of my earlier answer. I will undertake to get that information for you as quickly as possible.

Senator Grosart: Would it be possible for you to let us have in due course the costs by these various items—the interest-free, the grants and other benefits? I do not want the total of commitments, but simply the cost of the commitments.

Hon. Mr. Danson: I shall undertake to get that information for you, and have it presented to the committee or tabled in the house.

The Chairman: Shall clause 5 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 6 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 7 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 8 carry?

Senator Macdonald: Mr. Chairman, under clause 8, on page 6, the proposed subsection 51(1.1) uses the words, "In order to encourage comprehensive land use . . .". It goes on to provide that a loan may be made to a municipality or to a water supply corporation for the purpose of assisting in the construction of water systems.

Would that apply to a municipality which already has a water supply system that is perhaps getting old, and cannot service all the vacant lots that might be available within the municipality, or does it only apply where there is a large area of vacant land to be serviced?

Hon. Mr. Danson: At this time it is being administered in such a way as to open up new land. What we are trying to do is increase the available stock of serviced land, and that is the way it is being applied.

While I am on my feet I might mention that we have found some of the figures Senator Grosart requested. The budgetary expenditures on the interest reduction grants in 1976 will be $1.6 million; in 1977, $5.1 million; in 1978, $10.1 million; and in 1979, $14.7 million. This is for the non-profits and cooperatives.

The Chairman: Shall clause 8 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 9 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 10 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 11.

Senator Macdonald: With regard to clause 11, is the approval of the province required before a loan can be made to a municipality within that province?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes. We always have an agreement with the province in respect to dealing with municipalities in this way.

Senator Macdonald: I presume the procedure is that the municipality will get in touch with the proper authorities in the province before making the application.

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes, that is correct, senator. Indeed, we make certain that it does work that way. It is an important jurisdictional matter.

The Chairman: Shall clause 11 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 12 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 13.

Senator Grosart: Mr. Chairman, I have a question on clause 13. The question really covers clauses 6 to 13, which are the amendments respecting water and sewerage projects.

There is a provision for an open-ended loan sharing with the provinces. I think this is in clause 12, specifically. Is there an estimate of the cost there? Perhaps we could also have an estimate of the grants and contributions with regard to the sharing of planning. I would just like to ask you if you would include those figures in those that you gave when you replied to my earlier question.

Hon. Mr. Danson: I am checking to see if we have those figures broken down in that fashion. You are talking about the fifty-fifty cost-sharing of plans as between ourselves and the local authority, whether it is a region, a municipality or a town.

Senator Macdonald: May I refer back to the idea of a loan to a water supply corporation or a municipality to expand the water supply? You mentioned that it might be new land. If the present water supply system is not sufficient to allow for more construction on vacant land within the municipality, and it has to be renewed, could a loan be applied for?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes, senator. As a matter of fact, it is intended to cover the expansion of existing water systems as well.

The Chairman: Shall clause 13 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 14 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 15.

Senator Phillips: I wonder if the minister can give us an indication of how much time the chairman of the board of directors of CMHC will spend at CMHC as opposed to the time he will spend on his other function as a member of the Public Service. To me there seems to be a possibility that CMHC will be downgraded, in that the corporation may become a secondary responsibility of the individual who will be appointed as chairman.

Hon. Mr. Danson: I cannot answer the question precisely, senator, because it is one that the acting secretary of the ministry is asking himself, and one that the president of CMHC is probably asking himself also. Basically, the president would carry on the day-to-day operations of the corporation, and the chairman would be based in the ministry. It could be one day a week, or it might be considerably less. I think this depends on what experience teaches us in this regard. I think it is important that the president of the corporation be the day-to-day operating officer. I do not mean that never the twain shall meet, but I think there have to be distinct responsibilities there—one for the delivery of the program and one for policy development. But, as chairman of the corporation he is also secretary of the ministry, and there is a major job to be done there in the matter of urban planning and intergovernmental working.

● (1910)

The Chairman: Shall clause 15 carry?

Senator Grosart: I think we are on clause 14.

The Chairman: We are on clause 15, honourable senators, but we can always revert.

Senator Grosart: Well, if I may revert, I would like to ask the minister about clause 14, which is the clause which provides for grants of $1,000 per housing unit to municipalities for low cost medium density housing. This is where we come across the suggestion of 10 to 30 units per acre. Assuming that this is a restriction that will be imposed under the municipal loan regulations, will it apply elsewhere than to the types of units referred to in clause 14? In other words, will there be the same restrictions on an individual borrower who might wish to have a home within the limits but on an acre of land?

Hon. Mr. Danson: No, the restriction will be applied to that person because the intention here is to encourage denser, lower cost housing, and the preservation of agricultural land as well. There are some new housing forms which can be very attractive. Ten per acre would allow a 40 by 100-foot lot, and that for a semi-detached house is quite adequate. For the new zero lot lines, which I am just becoming acquainted with, it is quite adequate as well, and, of course, town housing. Much of our housing in this country already is within that range. But it does not permit the person to move out to the country, and use a lot of good agricultural land. Indeed, this has a bias in it to discourage that. It is something you want and it is an option, but you do not get support for that option.

Senator Grosart: Since the quality of housing, to some extent, comes under this clause, could you, Mr. Minister, give us some information on the progress you are making with your suggestion for a national consumer warranty system?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Well, Senator Grosart, we discussed this last with the housing ministers on, I think, November 25. There was a meeting just earlier this week with representatives of the provinces, the building industry, the lenders, the mortgage insurers and consumers. I do not have a full report on that at this time. The housing ministers were virtually unanimous in wanting a national scheme. I understand from the preliminary information I have that there are those who might prefer to go either provincially or regionally. I am not able to give a specific report on that at this moment. As far as I am concerned, I am looking forward to that as an essential part of the national scheme.

Senator Grosart: Would it be possible for that to be brought in under federal legislation, or would it require federal-provincial cooperation? I am thinking again of the Standards Act, and so on.

Hon. Mr. Danson: Basically, this is within provincial jurisdiction and it would only be by agreement, except where we are particularly involved ourselves. I think that our lending in the past year or so has touched about 40 per cent of the new construction. Under these new initiatives I think it will be in the range of 60 per cent, or even higher, of the new construction—that on which we lend, which we subsidize, and that which we insure.

We could impose it in that way on that portion of the new housing production. I would rather see it, not even as a federal-provincial scheme, but as an independent scheme, free of domination by government and with participation by the industry which, in the main, has done a pretty good job. However, there are those who the industry would like to see brought under control, and I think there would be much greater satisfaction for people in knowing that there is such a scheme in effect.

The proposal made today, which has been discussed, leaves no single body with control. It is sufficiently diversified between provincial and federal governments, various aspects of the building industry, the building suppliers, the lenders and service associations, and it is a truly independent council. It is not easy to bring this about, and it is very frustrating. I am concerned that it has not got off the ground, having regard to the nature of an independent council with many different factors in it. We have to bring this to a head very soon. If it were necessary—and I indicated this to the provincial ministers—we would apply our scheme to our own housing. We are quite prepared to do that. I would prefer to see a scheme that is independent, but we want to see that consumer protection.

[Senator Grosart.]

Senator Grosart: Mr. Minister, would what you have in mind be a warranty from the builder to the new owner?

Hon. Mr. Danson: Yes, from the builder to the owner. The builders would be certified, and if they did not live up to their warranties they would be decertified.

The Chairman: Shall clause 14 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 15 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 16 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 17 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 18 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 19 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall the title of the bill, "An Act to amend the National Housing Act and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation Act," carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall I report the bill without amendment?

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): Mr. Chairman, I would like to compliment the minister, whom I do not know personally, for the manner, intelligence and common sense with which he has handled everything.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Grosart: Senator Fournier beat me to the punch.

Senator Perrault: We will make him an honorary senator.

Senator Grosart: I rose to say exactly the same thing, and to thank the minister for coming here. This is the second occasion on which he has done so. He is the only member of the present Cabinet who has honoured us by his presence. We have had Cabinet ministers before our committees, but he has the distinction of being the only one so far who has graced with his presence this more impressive part of the Senate's operations.

We thank him for his coming and, as he does elsewhere in other committees and in public, for doing such a good job of selling his program. In spite of my earlier pessimism, I wish him nothing but complete success.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

The Chairman: Shall I report the bill without amendment?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

● (1920)

The Hon. the Speaker: The sitting is resumed.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Senator Macnaughton: Madam Speaker, the Committee of the Whole, to which was referred Bill C-77, to amend the National Housing Act and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation Act, has considered the said bill and has the honour to report the same without amendment.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, with leave, I move third reading now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAM

STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER—SALARIES OF JUDGES— QUESTION ANSWERED

Leave having been given to revert to Question Period:

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have a brief reply to a question raised earlier this day regarding the salaries of judges.

I would draw the attention of the house to the statement made in the other place by the Honourable Jean Chrétien, President of the Treasury Board, as follows:

The salaries of all judges of the Supreme Court, the Federal Court and the provincial superior courts will not be allowed to rise in 1976-77. We have decided to freeze the level of 1976-77 man-years available for higher-salaried positions—those that command a salary maximum of $30,000 and over—at the level of 1975-76.

What that simply means is that while there is no automatic escalator in the present salaries of judges, no cost-of-living indexing plan, the government does not propose to increase them over and above the present levels during that period of time.

DOCUMENTS TABLED

Senator Perrault tabled:

Copies of Press Release, dated December 18, 1975, concerning Notes on the Government's Expenditure Reductions.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motion:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), I move that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until tomorrow, Saturday, December 20, 1975, at 12 o'clock noon.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I wonder if I could ask the Leader or the Deputy Leader of the Government what is expected of us throughout tomorrow.

Senator Perrault: We hope that the true spirit of Christmas and brotherhood will enthuse the other place so that they may arrive at a happy consensus regarding the unemployment insurance bill which is presently before them, so that we, in turn, may dedicate our spirit of brotherhood toward the passage of that same legislation.

Senator Grosart: Is it the intention to deal with that bill, as we have dealt with this one, in Committee of the Whole?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, at this time I am not able to say, but that is a real possibility.

Motion agreed to.

The Senate adjourned until tomorrow at 12 o'clock noon.

THE SENATE

Saturday, December 20, 1975

The Senate met at 12 noon, the Speaker in the Chair.

ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAM

FAMILY ALLOWANCES—QUESTION

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, I wonder if the Leader of the Government could give us any indication of the precise means by which the—what is the word—the freeze, the temporary freeze in the family allowance payments will be carried out? I should have supposed that the January payments would be made with the increase which was already provided for by law. Am I to understand that it is intended to recoup this from the recipients by subsequent changes in the legislation, operating retroactively?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, I have not been apprised of the exact method which will be employed to bring the freeze into effect. I hope that we can obtain that information and I will attempt to provide it later today.

Senator Forsey: The same might apply to the measure dealing with our own remuneration, I presume. It is easy enough to get it back out of us, I suppose.

WAGE GUIDELINES—QUESTION

Senator Phillips: Honourable Senators, I should like to direct a question to the Leader of the Government in the Senate. When the wage guidelines were first announced, Senator Perrault initiated a debate in this chamber which was most helpful and informative. The anti-inflation regulations have been made public and cutbacks in expenditures have been announced by Mr. Chrétien. I should like to ask the leader if he would consider initiating another debate or discussion on these aspects of the matter in the new year. I would not want it before Christmas. Early in the new year would be fine.

Senator Perrault: There is a good deal of merit in your suggestion, Senator Phillips. It would be helpful to have as great an understanding as possible of the program and the regulations pertaining thereto.

BUDGET REDUCTION IN DEPARTMENT OF REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, will recall that the other afternoon we had a discussion about certain budgetary reductions in the Department of Regional Economic Expansion. I should like to clarify the situation with respect to the estimated reduction in expenditures in that department, which was something in the order of $11.2 million. The $11.2 million reduction represents a cutback in the original budgetary request which went forward for the Department of Regional Economic Expansion for the fiscal year 1976-77. What this simply means is that during the fiscal year 1976-77 the budget will be frozen at the level of the fiscal year 1975-76. In terms of real purchasing power, however, because of the inflationary factor of approximately 10 per cent, the budget figure does represent a real reduction of something in the order of 8 to 10 per cent in the number of dollars which will be spent by this department. If this explanation sounds unduly complicated I apologize, but I think honourable senators understand. The budget next year is going to be the same as it was in the fiscal year 1975-76, but in terms of the power of those dollars to purchase goods and services there will be, in effect, a budget reduction.

● (1210)

Senator Phillips: A supplementary question if I may, honourable senators. Senator Perrault, in his reply, referred to the fact that certain items were frozen. In the history of the British Parliament, from which we have inherited most of our traditions, Parliaments became known as the "Long Parliament," the "Rump Parliament," and so on. I would like to ask him if he would consider it appropriate to call this Parliament the "Frozen Parliament"?

Senator Perrault: Certainly, in view of the temperature levels presently prevailing in the Ottawa area, one may well describe this as "The Frozen Parliament."

EFFECT OF NATIONAL DEFENCE CUTBACKS ON NOVA SCOTIA—QUESTION

Senator Macdonald: Honourable senators, I should like to direct a question to the Honourable Leader of the Government. I heard a news item on the radio this morning to the effect that some of the cutbacks in expenditures of the Department of National Defence would fall most heavily on the Maritime provinces, and that Nova Scotia would be especially hard hit. Could the leader give me any idea of what reductions are to take place there?

Senator Perrault: I must take that question as notice and I shall endeavour to obtain the information by the time we adjourn, which it is hoped will be some time later today. I do not have the detailed list of defence establishments to be affected by the announced freeze or cutback in that department.

Senator Phillips: May I add, honourable senators, that that was one of my reasons for requesting a full debate on this subject.

THE SENATE

THE CLERK'S SCROLL—QUESTION

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, might I ask the Leader of the Government if by any chance he has a copy of the Scroll before him. Has one been provided today?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I have a document described as the "Clerk's Scroll," which we have used over a great many years in this place as a general outline of events which it is anticipated will occur in this chamber. If the honourable senator requires any information from the Scroll I will be very pleased to provide it.

Senator Grosart: I would appreciate having it, because as far as I can find out no copy of the Scroll was provided today to the office of the Leader of the Opposition. I would ask the Leader of the Government if this was on his instructions, first of all, and, secondly, if he is aware that an employee of the Senate yesterday visited the office of the Leader of the Opposition, referred to the remarks I made yesterday, and said, "He will not get the Scroll tomorrow"? I would like to know if this was on the orders of the Leader of the Government.

I would further like to know if it is the intention to deny the Leader of the Opposition—and I am not speaking personally—a copy of the Scroll in the future. If the circumstances prove to be such as I suggest, I wonder if an apology is not due, not to me—indeed, not to any person—but to the office of the Leader of the Opposition.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, first of all, I issued no such order and I did not provide any such advice to any person. Secondly, I think honourable senators are aware that the provision of the Clerk's Scroll is not really a right or a privilege; it is a courtesy, a courtesy which has been extended in an informal way over a period of years to both parties in the chamber. The provision of a daily Scroll is not enshrined in any rule of this chamber.

I know of no details of any conversation of the kind alleged by the Honourable Deputy Leader of the Opposition. I place very little faith, however, in second hand accounts of fragmented conversations, and I question really whether it is of much use to exchange views regarding second hand accounts of alleged conversations in the corridors of this house or in the other place, or any place else for that matter.

In view of the critical remarks voiced yesterday in this chamber by the Deputy Leader of the Opposition, it may well be that those responsible for the preparation of the Scroll—who, I think, have done a superb job over the years and have won commendations on all sides—are studying a transcript of the remarks made by the Deputy Leader yesterday. Perhaps they are studying methods to alter the manner in which the Scroll is prepared. Again, there may be some hesitation on their part to provide the Deputy Leader with a copy of the Scroll today in view of the critical remarks of yesterday. Perhaps there will be an effort made to design the Scroll in a more acceptable fashion for the Opposition party in this chamber in the months to come.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I am sure the Leader of the Government would agree with me that it is much more than a matter of consideration at some level. I am sure he will also agree that it is much more than a matter of somebody on the staff on the Senate having decided to reconsider the whole matter. That is why I asked him if what happened had happened on his instructions. He said no, and he added that the provision of the Scroll was a matter of courtesy. Of course it is a matter of courtesy. That is what we are dealing with here all the time—courtesies between individual senators and courtesies between the Government side and the Opposition side. As the Leader of the Government says, it was a courtesy, and now it appears to have been a courtesy that has been discontinued without instructions from the Leader of the Government. In this instance it appears to have been discontinued by an employee of the Senate.

[Senator Grosart.]

The Leader of the Government has used the word "alleged" in respect of the statement I made. He has said that it may have been just a fragmented conversation, and that it may have taken place in the corridors of this house. I say to him that my information is that the statement was made to the office of the Leader of the Opposition. I say to him that it is a serious matter if this courtesy has been discontinued under the circumstances, and therefore I ask him if he will investigate the matter and report—not to me since it is a matter that does not concern me personally but is of concern—to the important office of the Leader of the Opposition.

I repeat that I am told, and I am prepared to produce a witness to the fact that the statement was made that because of the remarks I had made—and definite reference was made to them—"he will not get it tomorrow." I suggest to him that that is a serious situation in respect to the privileges which we all seek here in the Senate.

• (1220)

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, again I wish to reiterate that no instructions were issued from the office of the Leader of the Government at all about this matter. I know that the Honourable Deputy Leader of the Opposition is a very fair-minded person and believes in fair play. It could well be that inadvertently a copy of the Scroll was not placed in the letterbox. In any case, it seems to me unfair to pass judgments on any personnel in the Senate with respect to this matter. I can say from my personal experience that we are served superbly well by the personnel who assist us in this chamber.

Senator Grosart: That is not what we are talking about.

Senator Perrault: And those who put in many dedicated hours in the preparation of the Scroll and other tasks in this chamber deserve an enormous amount of credit for enabling the Senate to operate at the good level of efficiency which it does.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Perrault: I shall certainly undertake to inquire into the matters raised by the Honourable the Deputy Leader and attempt to ascertain why the Scroll has not been made available, apparently, to the office of the Leader of the Opposition today, whether it has been a problem of the mails or relates to messenger service or whatever. There appears to be no reason why the delivery of the Scroll to the loyal Opposition cannot be resumed if, indeed, it has been interrupted. I can see no real impediments, but in my opinion when we pass judgment on those who prepare the Scroll we must understand some of the problems which occur for them from time to time. I have always found that those who assist us here are earnestly endeavouring to assist all honourable senators, regardless of our political affiliation or whether we are in opposition or in government. I notice the remarks reported in the Debates of the Senate of yesterday at page 1667, at which point the Deputy Leader of the Opposition said:

I therefore suggest that there is some kind of extraordinary presumption on the part of somebody when we are told in Order Paper form exactly what is going to happen before it happens.

There was no such intent to do that. The Scroll is an approximate outline of events which may occur here and a guide which was brought into being originally by a former leader in the Senate who was of the same political persuasion as that of my honourable friend who has raised this point. It is perhaps a tribute to the party which occupies the benches opposite that they introduced the idea of the Scroll originally, a number of years ago. It is a useful institution and I cannot see why it should not be made available to both sides. However, none of us wishes to judge anyone unfairly here and I am sure that the honourable senator has no wish to do so.

Senator Grosart: No, that is so and I do not wish to prolong this unduly. I merely asked certain questions and I asked if the Leader of the Government would look into the situation and report back as to whether the situation is as I described it. I believe I said that that remark was made in the office of the Leader of the Government. I think it was not made there, but in the corridor. I may have misinformed the leader on that point. Still, I am told and it has been reasserted to me, that the particular statement was made. It is only with that statement that I am concerned, that this was said to be a punishment for the remarks I had made. My remarks may not have been acceptable to honourable senators. But that is not the point. The point is that the punishment should not be meted out, if it was, by an employee of the Senate.

Senator McIlraith: Honourable senators, this matter, raised in the form it was yesterday and again today, involves a very important question of privilege affecting all honourable senators.

"The Scroll" is an incorrect description of the document that was objected to yesterday. The Scroll is prepared at the Table by the Clerks at the Table as proceedings take place here and when a decision on each step is taken. That is what is meant by the Scroll—namely, the record as noted at the Table by the Clerks.

The document prepared in advance and now under discussion was instituted when an honourable colleague, now departed, was assigned the responsibility of being Leader of the Government in the Senate without being appointed a member of the Cabinet. At that time he had had no experience as a minister of the government, and the practice was started of trying to anticipate the proceedings and preparing for him what would be the Scroll if events happened in the anticipated way.

When he resigned for reasons of ill health and his successor was appointed by the same government of that day, his successor remained in the position for, if I remember correctly, less than a year. That document continued to be provided to him. At that time it was not provided to the Leader of the Opposition in the Senate.

When the honourable gentleman became Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, with the change of government in 1963, I am informed that after a short period, being without the Scroll, he asked for a copy. He was of the view that it was a very useful document in keeping the proceedings clearly before him, and that it helped him to fulfil his role as Leader of the Opposition, just as it had helped him when he was the Leader of the Government.

The document, of course, has the word "Scroll" on it, and it has been loosely referred to as the Scroll. If there are no changes in the anticipated proceedings during the day, it would be accurate. If there are changes, certain paragraphs are stricken and the appropriate item written in at the Table.

I thought I had explained yesterday that because we had not used a procedure which I had rather liked from my earlier experience of Committee of the Whole in another place, I had gone to those members whom I thought were most concerned with the housing legislation and suggested that we might deal with this bill in Committee of the Whole. In doing so, I refreshed their memory about what had been done in the spring.

I also went to the staff of the Senate and explained how I proposed to proceed in the chamber, and asked that the correct steps be written out—because last year there was some unfamiliarity with the proceedings—in order that we might use the correct language.

I asked that it be done in advance, because at that point I anticipated that we would have many measures before us and we might be pressed for time. I asked that it be done in a detailed way. Unfortunately, it involves writing in advance what it is anticipated will happen before it happens.

Honourable senators should understand exactly what the document is and how it is prepared. I must say I was a little shocked at some of the language used yesterday. It seemed to me a little imprecise—perhaps I will leave it at that—and a little harsh.

• (1230)

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES IMPROVEMENT BILL

THIRD READING—ORDER STANDS

On the Order:

Third reading of the Bill C-75, intituled "An Act to increase the rate of return on Government Annuity contracts, to increase their flexibility and to discontinue future sales thereof".—(Honourable Senator Barrow).

Senator Langlois: Stand until later today.

Senator Phillips: Why not now?

Order stands.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Senator Grosart: Senator Phillips just asked, "Why not now?" Perhaps this would give the Leader of the Government an opportunity to indicate to us the program that we may be faced with today. Unfortunately we do not have the Scroll here so we could see what items may be before us. One of the purposes of the Scroll is to indicate what might be the business of the Senate on any particular day.

Would the Leader of the Government give us a brief outline of what he anticipates he will be dealing with today, and perhaps tell us also what the situation in the other place on the bills that we might be waiting for?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it is expected that Bill C-69, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, will pass in the other place very soon. It may be a matter of a half hour or so. The Commons will then proceed with Bill C-52, relating to superannuation, after which it will deal with Bill C-78, to repeal an act respecting the Halifax Relief Commission and to authorize the continuation of pensions, grants or allowances paid by the Halifax Relief Commission. Each of these proposed measures will, of course, come to this chamber.

A question was asked regarding the status of Bill C-75. Honourable Senator Phillips asked why we stood this bill until later this day. This bill is tied into the adjournment motion in the other place. For that technical reason, it is not possible for us to deal with it here until later.

In connection with Bill C-69, I have been advised that there is a good possibility that the Honourable Mr. Andras, the Minister of Manpower and Immigration, may be available to appear before the Committee of the Whole, if this chamber decides that we should go into committee to discuss in detail Bill C-69, or any questions which honourable senators may have. I had an opportunity to speak with the minister about a half hour ago and he stated that if it is at all possible for him to do so, he is willing to appear before us.

Senator Grosart: Could I ask, first of all, if these bills come to us today, is it the intention of the government to request us to deal with them in all stages?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it is the intention to deal with these measures today. The content of many of these measures is well known to honourable senators. Most of these bills are not unduly complicated. Indeed, many of the senators have substantial expertise in certain of these areas and know a great deal about the proposed legislation. Bill C-52, as an example, was considered by a joint committee. For that reason, unless honourable senators believe that it may be too onerous a task to do so, I would propose that we attempt to complete this business which I have outlined today and we then may be in a position to adjourn for the recess.

Senator Côté: How about royal assent?

Senator Grosart: In the event that all three of these bills that were mentioned do not come to us today—I presume they were mentioned because it is the wish of the government to have them enacted into law before the end of the year—has the leader any information that he can give us as to how we might proceed to deal with them, if they do not all come before us today?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, first of all, if we are able to deal with these bills this afternoon there will, of course, be royal assent later this evening. We have standby arrangements for royal assent at approximately 6 o'clock, but the time, of course, depends upon the debating time which honourable senators may wish to take in dealing with these measures.

[Senator Grosart.]

If there is an unforeseen delay in the other place—this has happened many times in the past—it may well be that we will be back on Monday or Tuesday to complete this work.

Senator Phillips: Honourable senators, could I make a brief comment? The House of Commons has very definite adjournment hours. Yesterday afternoon they adjourned around 4.30. Since today is a rather special occasion, may I ask the Leader of the Government if he knows whether or not the House of Commons plans to adjourn at 4.30 today, as they did yesterday, or to continue sitting beyond the normal adjournment hour?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, we do not have that information as yet. We are, of course, in continuing communication with the other place. The government simply is not in a position to know the situation as of now. The adjournment is very much in the hands of Her Majesty's Opposition in the other place.

There have been some reports that there could be a prolonged debate on one or two of these proposed measures, but at this time we really do not know what will happen. It would be very much appreciated if we could maintain a healthy attendance, well above quorum, this afternoon in order to expedite the business when it does reach here.

Senator Phillips: You have a quorum; you can maintain it any time.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 3.55 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT, 1971

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-69, to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Molgat: Honourable senators, with leave, I move that the bill be now read the second time.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, before we proceed to discuss the motion, I wonder if the Leader of the Government is in a position to give us any indication, from information he may have gleaned over the lunch hour, as to the program he may have in mind for this and perhaps subsequent sittings of the Senate. I am particularly interested in any consideration he may have given to the suggestion made by the Leader of the Opposition, when he was here last, that should we not finish the business today we not come back on Monday, December 22, but on Tuesday, January 6.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it is to be hoped that we can complete our work today. Indeed, the progress in the other place indicates that there is a possibility of royal assent around 7 o'clock this evening. That would be the program, unless it is the wish of honourable senators to come back on January 6.

An Hon. Senator: Oh, no.

Senator Grosart: I should make it clear that that was not the suggestion.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Molgat, seconded by the Honourable Senator Petten, that this bill be now read the second time.

Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Gildas L. Molgat: Honourable senators, it is my pleasure and privilege to introduce Bill C-69, to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971. I trust that the head cold from which I am now suffering will not prevent anyone from hearing me clearly. On the other hand, it may mean that my comments will be more brief than would normally be the case. Because this is a very important measure, and one which is technical in a number of respects, I want to be sure that the comments I make will be completely accurate. For that reason, it is my intention to stick closely to my prepared text.

● (1600)

The history of the Unemployment Insurance Act goes back quite a number of years—in fact, some 35 years—and it came about in response to a growing economic and social need in our country. As we were moving out of the basically agrarian, primary industry stage into an industrialized nation, it was obvious that we needed some program of unemployment maintenance for temporarily unemployed workers. In 1935, the Government of Canada, following the lead of the governments of the United Kingdom, the United States, and a number of other nations, introduced the Unemployment and Social Insurance Act. However, there was a constitutional question at that time as to whether unemployment insurance was in fact a proper federal field, or whether it was a provincial field. The Supreme Court at that time ruled that the act was ultra vires of the British North America Act. As a result, it was not until 1940 that the act was brought forward, after agreement was reached with the provinces clearly establishing unemployment insurance as a federal responsibility.

The original program was financed through a fund which received its contributions from employers and employees on a roughly equal basis. In addition, there was a federal government grant of one-fifth of the combined employer-employee contribution to make up the balance.

The first payments, which were in 1941, averaged $6 per week, with a maximum level of $12 per week. Contributions ranged from 12 cents to 36 cents per week. Obviously, these figures are a far cry from the present situation. However, through the whole period of the history of unemployment insurance it has played a vital role in maintaining economic and social stability in our country. It gives workers and their families the security of knowing that, if their incomes are interrupted, temporary support is available in the form of unemployment insurance. In addition, it injects money into communities in times of high unemployment; it maintains purchasing power which benefits the whole of the community. A further advantage is that it prevents the loss of talent to the skilled labour pool which might take place if dire economic necessity forced trained people to seek semi-skilled or unskilled jobs when they became unemployed. In these ways, therefore, the program assists the proper functioning of the labour market and the economy as a whole.

Since the labour market is subject to a constant ebb and flow which has very far-reaching effects, the act must remain flexible. It must be prepared to respond to these changes and it requires a constant monitoring of the legislation itself.

The Unemployment Insurance Commission is conducting a continuing review of its legislation and the bill which is before us today is the result of that continuing review.

I want to emphasize that the bill which we are considering does not in any way represent a departure from the basic philosophy of the act originally passed by Parliament in 1941. Rather, it is a response to the changes in economic and social conditions in this country and in the world—changes which demand adaptation and follow-through on our part.

Essentially, Bill C-69 has four objectives. The first is to facilitate the effective operation of the labour market, particularly by reducing disincentives to work. The second is to rationalize the relationship between the unemployment insurance program and other components of the social security system. The third is to relate the direct financial participation by the private sector in this program more closely to the changed economic conditions in which we find ourselves. And the fourth is to reduce inequities and rigidities in the existing legislation.

In order to meet these objectives, Bill C-69 proposes the following amendments: First, to double the minimum period of disqualification from benefits for claimants who leave their employment voluntarily without just cause, for those who are dismissed for misconduct and for those who refuse suitable employment. Currently, the maximum period of disqualification for these actions is three weeks. However, the number of disqualifications based on voluntary quitting has continued to be alarmingly high despite high unemployment and a low ratio of job vacancies to the number of unemployed workers. So the three-week period disqualification period is being doubled to a six-week period, which is added to the two-week mandatory waiting period. It is hoped that this will cause people to consider more carefully before capriciously leaving jobs, or turning down suitable positions that are offered to them.

● (1610)

It should be emphasized again that decisions on disqualifications of this nature are based on 35 years of jurisprudence and are, of course, subject to appeal where claimants feel that decisions are unfair. No one will be victimized but, on the other hand, neither will working Canadians be expected to support those who would rather draw benefits than hold down jobs.

Two amendments are directed at reducing the overlap between unemployment insurance and other social security programs. One will eliminate the special benefit rate of 75 per cent of insurable earnings for claimants with dependants. The 66½ per cent rate of benefit will now apply to all claimants, an acknowledgment that significant increases in family allowance and the indexing of income tax are more appropriate means of recognizing the special needs of people with families. There will now, therefore, be only one base.

It is for this reason also that it is proposed to limit coverage to persons under the standard retirement age of 65. The government recognizes that some people do continue working beyond their sixty-fifth birthday. Nevertheless, at that stage a number of programs begin, offering income support to Canadians regardless of whether or not they work. These include old age security and the Canada pension plan, which have been substantially enriched in recent years. The Canada pension plan, particularly, has been upgraded with the removal of the earnings test, and a doubling of the pension itself. This plan reaches full maturity in 1976, so that workers who reach 65, when this amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Act comes into effect, will be eligible for the full pension provided for under the plan, if they have contributed to it since it began in 1966.

The maximum retirement pension available under the CPP increased from $65 in 1971 to approximately $130 on July 1, 1975. Old age security increased from $80 in 1971 to about $126 in 1975. The guaranteed income supplement was also boosted from roughly $34 for a single person, in 1971, to $88 this year. In addition, the personal income tax exemption was increased by $1,000 for persons aged 65 to 70 in 1972. Last year that exemption was indexed to rise with increases in the cost of living.

All of these income maintenance schemes are beamed directly at persons aged 65 and over, and offer a far more appropriate way of meeting their particular financial needs than does unemployment insurance.

I want to emphasize that the principle of an upper age limit on participation in the unemployment insurance program was established in 1971, when it was set at 70 years of age. At the time, that corresponded to the age at which the provisions of old age security and other pensions came into affect. In those programs the age of implementation was gradually reduced to 65, and so the unemployment insurance program is being adjusted accordingly.

I should note that the special retirement benefit will continue to be available to major attachment claimants reaching the age of 65, both to offer a financial bridge between the end of a person's working income and the beginning of pensions and other programs, and to recognize the reduced coverage which contributors receive in the year before their sixty-fifth birthday.

The third and major amendment in Bill C-69 will permit an extension of the qualifying period beyond the present 52 weeks to a maximum of 104 weeks for certain groups of claimants who find themselves out of the active labour force for certain periods of time due to reasons beyond their control. These groups include persons who are incapable of working because of sickness, disability or quarantine, people receiving workmen's compensation or claimants on approved training courses, and those who are inmates of penal institutions.

Sickness benefits are being made more flexible under Bill C-69. Major attachment claimants will be able to draw up to 15 weeks of sickness benefits during a total of 39 weeks instead of the present 29. In addition, the drawing of regular benefits will no longer result in a reduction in sickness benefit entitlement, so that claimants could draw up to 10 weeks of regular benefits without reducing the number of weeks of sickness benefits to which they are entitled.

A further amendment allows claimants to terminate a claim voluntarily in order to establish a new claim, where it is in their best interests to do so. For example, persons may establish a claim for benefit and then return to insurable employment for 20 or more weeks. Under the present act they cannot terminate a claim which they began before finding work. Thus they are ineligible for sickness or maternity benefits, which are only payable in the initial phases of the claim. The proposed amendments will be fairer to claimants under these circumstances and will remove this inadvertent disincentive to work.

Another area of inadvertent disincentive will also be dealt with through the removal of the advance pay provision. It was originally intended to provide major attachment claimants with a strong incentive to find work quickly, in the early weeks of their claim, by giving them an advance payment equal to three weeks of benefits without reference to whether or not they had earnings for that period. It was expected that they would then draw no further benefits. Active job search and availability requirements for those three weeks were waived. It has been found, however, that the purpose of the advance pay was not being served, and that in fact the recipients had a longer average duration on claim than non-recipients. As a result, this provision is being removed.

Another amendment in Bill C-69 relates to the issue of social insurance numbers. It authorizes the issue of new numbers where social insurance cards have been lost, stolen or fraudulently used. In such cases, where a second social insurance number is issued, the first number will be voided.

Other provisions of the bill will further reduce inequities and complexities which now exist. A number of powers presently given to the commission through regulation will be clarified and formalized through embodiment in the act itself. These concern the rights and obligations of claimants, and are thus of great importance. There is a proposed amendment to allow the commission to pay the travel expenses of persons and representatives to attend hearings of the umpire in cases concerning coverage under the act.

● (1620)

A fundamental change proposed by Bill C-69 relates to the formula for the way in which costs are shared between employees, employers and the government. The financing arrangements of the plan have remained unchanged for almost four years now. There have been rapid and dramatic changes in both Canadian society and the structure of the labour market. The 4 per cent unemployment threshold set in 1971 as the level at which the government would assume costs for initial benefits was related to economic conditions in the decade preceding 1970. The principle on which this formula was based, namely, that the government must recognize and bear financial responsibility for unemployment above a certain level, continues to hold true. However, principles of social insurance require that normal cost of an unemployment insurance program should be financed as much as possible through contributions from employers and employees.

Economic conditions have changed significantly in the past four years, so that an updating of the bench mark for calculating the self-financing component of the plan is now called for. Bill C-69 proposes a new threshold, to be adjusted automatically each year on the basis of a moving average of monthly unemployment rates over the preceding eight-year period. Under this formula the bench mark in 1976 will be approximately 5.6 per cent, a level based on average monthly rates of unemployment in the eight years preceding June 30, 1976.

The regular adjustment of the bench mark will apply only to the sharing of the costs of initial regular benefits. The cost of extended benefits payable to those who are unemployed for a longer period will continue to be the full responsibility of the federal government.

If the proposed amendments are passed by Parliament before the end of this year, which is what we are presently discussing, a net saving of approximately $150 million is expected in 1976, at a 7 per cent rate of unemployment. On the basis of the same assumption, the net increase in employer-employee costs for 1976 would be approximately $490 million, with a net reduction in government costs of approximately $660 million. In terms of current efforts by the government to allocate its resources in the most effective possible way, the bill is obviously of great importance. However, its impact in terms of reducing disincentives to work, the flexibility and fairness of this important feature of the Canadian economic scene, is equally crucial and deserves our most careful consideration and support.

Honourable senators, the minister responsible for this particular act has made himself available to members of the Senate. He is prepared to appear before us in Committee of the Whole, if that is our wish. I move that we proceed now with second reading. If it is the desire of honourable senators that we should go into Committee of the Whole, we will do that and the minister will be available.

Hon. John M. Macdonald: Honourable senators, I am sure we all listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks of the sponsor of the bill. I must congratulate him on his clear presentation; when obviously he is suffering from a rather severe cold.

I was interested also in the short resumé he gave of the history of the act. Basically, the whole purpose of unemployment insurance is to provide support, for a fairly short period, to unemployed workers while they are seeking new employment. Obviously, it is a very commendable measure and one which has become part and parcel of our economic life.

It is obvious also that the time element when unemployment insurance is needed will vary. In regions of high employment the period between jobs for working people will be short, but in regions of low employment opportunities the need will be there for a much longer period.

As has been mentioned, the act has been amended from time to time, and Bill C-69 is a further amendment. It proposes various changes, and at this time I want to discuss only two of them. One amendment deals with a change in the amount of government financial participation in the Unemployment Insurance Fund. Under the present act, the fund is self-supporting while unemployment is under 4 per cent. When it is more than 4 per cent, the federal government pays the additional cost—and there is good reason why it should do so.

Over the years it has become an accepted fact that the federal government is responsible for ensuring full employment. Whether we like it or not, it is a fact in our modern industrial society that the federal government has that responsibility. Indeed, we do not have to go too far back to remember when the federal government took a great deal of pride in saying that it was undertaking this responsibility, and proclaimed far and wide that it was keeping unemployment at an acceptable level, which was 4 per cent. It also took a great deal of pride in saying that its measures were responsible for keeping unemployment low.

While unemployment remained at acceptable levels, the government said it was due to its action, but once it became higher, no longer was it the government's responsibility or due to its actions, but to worldwide conditions.

Honourable senators, the government was more optimistic then than now. We find now that it has retreated from its former stand, and has abdicated its responsibilities to provide full employment. In effect, it is admitting that its policies have not worked, that those policies have not kept unemployment at an acceptable level. It is now saying, in effect, that its economic policies have been a dismal failure and, what to my mind is far worse, that it has lost face and confidence in its economic policies and its ability to introduce policies which will provide full employment. The government has given up hope of keeping unemployment even at the high rate of 4 per cent, which was fairly acceptable.

Not only is this amendment a confession of the dismal failure of its past policies, it is a melancholy admission that it has now no faith or confidence in its ability to develop new policies to bring unemployment under control.

It is a sad thing, honourable senators, to see a government in such a state of dejection that it has nothing to offer the unemployed except to say that its policies are costing too much money, that we must spend less on unemployment insurance even while unemployment is increasing. So the 4 per cent threshold is to be abandoned and a more complicated formula is to be used, which, in the year 1976, will make the acceptable level of unemployment 5.6 per cent; and no one knows what it may be in future years. This move, this deplorable action, is supposed to save the government a lot of money—and it will, because it will increase the burden on the employee and employer. But the government was not satisfied. It wanted to further decrease the amount it would have to pay into the fund due to the dismal failure of its policies. So, we have another amendment. The government struck out and struck out in a ruthless and savage manner at the one group covered by unemployment insurance which could not defend itself, those 65 and over. It has decreed that those men and women in the work force who are over 65 years of age will no longer be covered by unemployment insurance.

● (1630)

Honourable senators may remember that in the 1971 amendments to the act, persons over 70 years of age were dropped from the unemployment insurance program. It was surprise move at that time. I felt then, as I feel now, that a grave injustice was done to those people. Indeed, during our 1972 session I introduced a bill here, Bill S-2, which would have restored unemployment benefits to those people. That bill got a very sympathetic hearing. At that time, the government leader in the Senate was the Honourable Paul Martin. At his request, instead of voting on second reading, the subject matter of the bill was referred to the Standing Senate Committee on Health, Welfare and Science. Well, all I can say is that the Honourable Paul Martin must have taken that bill with him to London, because I have heard nothing of it since. That bill did not become law and now we are faced with a far worse situation. I was astonished and horrified when I saw that Bill C-69 proposed to deprive those in the work force who are over 65 from the benefits under the act.

Senator Forsey: Hear, hear.

Senator Macdonald: This is a deplorable act on the part of the government and should be condemned in the strongest terms. It will cause hardship to those less able to bear them. I must add, I have not been impressed by the weak and feeble defence that has been made of this cruel, this ruthless action. I read that the minister, in introducing the bill, said this of those over 65, and I quote from the House of Commons Hansard: "The fact is that most of them have, in effect, withdrawn from the labour market."

Yes, I expect that those who could afford to retire from active work at 65 have done so. These would be the persons with a decent pension from the industry for which they worked; these would be persons who had a powerful union to look after their interests. But it is those over 65 years of age who must continue to work in order to live that the government is making pay for the failure of its policies. While they are temporarily unemployed, they will get no benefits. There is no solicitude for them.

I was amused to hear the solicitude the government has for some of those who, through no fault of their own, were unable to contribute to unemployment insurance. They were unable to contribute because they were in jail. Yes, there is solicitude for those people, but not for those over 65 years of age.

The defence—and again I say it is a defence—given for this harsh treatment of those over 65 is so unconvincing as to be pathetic. I would have had more respect for the government had it come out and said, "We can save $120 million a year by cutting off unemployment benefits to those over 65 years of age, and that is why we are doing it."

Let these elderly people who must work to live have a lower standard of living. They have no powerful and influential advocates, so the government feels it can treat them in this harsh, this rough, this unfeeling way, with impunity. In my opinion, we have come to a sad state in Canada when our government is taking advantage of the weakest group in our society. Yes, these older citizens, men and women, will have to take whatever employment they can find. They will not be able to wait a week, two weeks, or a few weeks to get better employment, as younger workers can. They will have to accept the lowest wages; they will have to accept the worst working conditions, and they will have to do so because of the failure of the government to provide economic policies for full employment and its failure to keep them under the umbrella of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

[Senator Macdonald.]

In my opinion, this amendment will create a grave injustice to our older citizens. It is a deplorable fact, a melancholy fact, that the government has chosen to make these older workers pay for the failure of its own economic policies. I feel that the government could have saved this much, and more, without affecting our elderly citizens had it assumed its responsibility for providing full employment. By so doing, it could save $120 million, and more, without causing any hardship or injustice to anyone.

Honourable senators, feeling as I do about this proposed amendment, I could not, in good conscience, vote for this bill.

Hon. Eugene A. Forsey: Honourable senators, this bill contains some very good features, some very dubious features, and some bad features. On one of the bad features, the Honourable Senator Macdonald has just expressed himself with a generous warmth—and I use the word "generous" advisedly.

I share his views about this particular feature of the bill. I do not know that I should subscribe to every one of the harsh epithets that he used, though I was tempted to do so. In fact, when I first considered speaking on this, I sought in my mind for words to describe this particular provision and rejected them because they were not strong enough. I shall confine myself, however, at present to saying that this particular feature of the bill, and one other, upon which I shall comment in a moment, it seems to me, can at least be described as illiberal in the highest degree.

The Honourable Senator Molgat spoke of this bill providing for more fairness. Well, I can't see where the greater fairness comes in as far as these people over 65 are concerned. It seems to me that there is an extraordinary degree of insensitivity in the people who are responsible for this particular amendment. I hesitate to think that it is the minister or the members of the cabinet. It seems to me more probable that it is officials—well looked after officials—sitting in comfortable offices totally insulated from the circumstances of real life, enjoying the security and the benefits of an ivory tower, who think it is easy to provide for a certain amount of saving of public money by this particular proposal.

When we get into committee, I propose to inquire of the minister how much these two clauses—one subclause and one full clause—would actually save. I suspect that it is a relatively small amount, and I object most strongly to this small saving, or even a large saving, being thrust upon the helpless people who, after all, if they are genuinely seeking work and are genuinely in the labour force should in my judgment, be as much entitled to unemployment insurance as anybody at any other age.

Why should we discriminate against old people? Why should we discriminate even against those over 70, as Senator Macdonald has said? I am not talking about the people who try to welsh on the thing, who try to get money out of the Unemployment Insurance Fund because they have contributed to it for a long time. I am talking about old people who are generally seeking work, who need work, and it is a complete misunderstanding of the situation to say that old people don't really need work; that they can get along well enough; that they have, after all, the Old Age Security payments and the Canada Pension Plan.

Yes, they have those, and it is a splendid thing that they have, but these are not necessarily sufficient for every elderly person who is seeking work. Many of them find these amounts, which are not, after all, very princely, quite insufficient for their needs. The assumption that they have no dependants can, again, be completely false. Some of them may have married late in life; some of them may have a number of dependants. Some of them may have children going to university or to other post-secondary institutions of education. I protest most strongly against this whole notion that these people should be excluded from the labour force as, in effect, they will be by this, or, if they remain in the labour force, will be excluded from the benefits of the Unemployment Insurance Act. I think this is a shocking, a most regressive and a most reactionary provision of this bill.

● (1640)

Now, there is another provision of this bill which is, to my mind, most reactionary, regressive and, indeed, intolerable. Senator Macdonald did not touch on this, and that is the provision which would cut down the payment to claimants with dependants from 75 per cent of earnings to 66½ per cent. This seems to me, again, really shocking and the more so perhaps because this is going to cause the greatest hardship in the parts of the country where the need for the higher payment is the greatest, notably, the Atlantic provinces and Eastern Quebec and certain other areas of the country as well, but particularly the Atlantic provinces. I should hope that I will get a favourable hearing and support from the senators from the Atlantic provinces on this particular subject.

I may remark that when we get into committee, I propose to move amendments deleting the offensive clauses dealing with the old people, and with the benefits for dependants. It seems to me completely mad to suggest that people with dependants should get the same benefits as people without dependants. Who on earth thought up that? What wild brain conceived this monstrosity?

We are told, of course, "Don't worry, they have family allowances." If I heard correctly what the Honourable Senator Molgat said, he actually referred to the indexing of family allowances, just as we have been informed that the family allowances are to be de-indexed this year. There will be no escalation to provide for the increase in the cost of living this year. This piles one offence on another. You take away a large proportion of the benefits from these people who are in dire need, most of them, and you say, "Well, fall back on family allowances." Then you will find, when you fall back, there is a considerable amount less to fall back on. This is, again, a really staggering performance by the people who have drafted this bill.

I feel so strongly about this that I find it very difficult to express myself in terms which are either parliamentary or suitable to my Methodist bringing up. I regret very much that because of these most outrageous features of this bill, unless the objectionable features are removed, I shall feel obliged when the bill comes up for third reading, to vote against it, if there is a division in this house, as I hope there will be. I shall certainly rise to ask the house to divide upon the subject and I shall certainly vote against the bill unless these objectionable features are struck out.

Senator Grosart: I am wondering if there are any senators on the other side who will rise to speak on this bill? It seems unusual that they don't on a bill of this importance.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, it has been pointed out that the minister, the Honourable Mr. Andras, has made himself available for questioning this afternoon, and the Honourable Deputy Leader of the Opposition may subject the minister to an extensive cross-examination at that time, if he desires to obtain further information on the bill.

Hon. Allister Grosart: Honourable senators, I will now make a few brief comments in addition to those that have been made. We all recognize that unemployment insurance has been an important safeguard, called the first line of defence, against the consequences of unemployment. As has been stated over the years, the original concept of the bill has changed considerably. I understood Senator Molgat to say that the original principle had not changed, but I think the facts are that it has changed.

It has changed from what has been called, to use the minister's phrase, "straight term insurance" to one which now includes a good deal of social benefit completely beyond the original insurance concept. I make no objection to that because it seems the amendments now being made to the bill to some extent have the effect of moving the unemployment insurance back towards an insurance rather than a social benefit basis. The reason given is a very sound one, being that to some extent the extension into the social benefit field has been due to gaps in the overall social welfare plan in Canada. Changes have been made in the general social welfare program so that some of the practical requirements—the gaps—that were filled by the Unemployment Insurance Act may not now be as necessary as they once were. I would say that I am personally in favour of anything that can be done satisfactorily at this time to move the act back to its original basic insurance concept.

What has happened, of course, is that through a long series of what I might call bad arithmetic and bad planning and bad forecasting by the government, the whole situation got so completely out of hand that, in effect, the fund a few years ago went broke in the amount of approximately $1 billion. I have used that phrase before. It has not been controverted, and no one has yet proved to me that that is not exactly what happened. It happened because there was a sudden alarming increase in unemployment and there was no provision made in the act to provide for that huge deficit.

As honourable senators may be aware, we have even today the anomaly of that deficit being provided for in the estimates of the subsequent year. The deficit is not even projected in the main estimates that we get from year to year, which makes those estimates, at the beginning of any one year, completely unrealistic in this regard when the deficit may be a $1 billion or more as it has been in recent years. Apparently it will continue to be somewhere in that area, in spite of the new bench marks.

Now, having said that, I agree with previous speakers on this side, including Senator Forsey, whom I regard now as being on this side—

Senator Forsey: Thank you.

Senator Grosart:—and who very often we find psychologically on this side and sometimes socially. I am glad to have his support for the position we are taking here.

What I am saying is that it seems obvious that the changes have been made in the wrong places. As has been said, it seems utterly incredible that those who are to bear the largest share of the burden of these amendments are the poor, the underprivileged and the old. There are amendments which will make considerable savings and remove some abuses at other levels but the fact remains that the government, in looking over this whole problem and saying they have to save somewhere, has selected those whose incomes are low to bear a heavy part of the burden. I do not think there is any question about it. It has been admitted over and over again.

We are dealing with some two million Canadians who last year received something like $2 billion in total benefits. The largest percentage of those who received the $2 billion was at the income level of $6,000 or under. Therefore, it is inevitable that some part of the burden of the changes will bear on them.

The sponsor of the bill gave us some figures as to the financial effects of this bill. They were considerably different from some of the figures we heard before. I hope we will have an opportunity to get a clarification from the minister.

The main effect of this bill will be to transfer the very heavy deficit of a $2 billion cost of this insurance plan—the large percentage of which is a deficit—to transfer that from the general taxation levies to employers and employees in the contributions they will make. On that general principle I have no objection. In fact, I approve it. On the other hand, because of the way in which the government has chosen to do it at this particular time, the legislation becomes completely regressive. Over and over again we have been told that one of the finest features of our income tax legislation is that it is progressive. And that is so. It is progressive in its effects, in that in terms of taxes as a percentage of income it bears progressively more heavily on those who can afford it. But there is no question in my mind now that this legislation in that respect is completely regressive. It will bear most heavily on those who can least afford it.

● (1650)

In this context Senator Forsey quite properly used the word "regressive." It is regressive all down the line. It is difficult to find a progressive change in the various clauses. It is true that in certain aspects it is obviously the intention of the legislation to remove abuses. And with that we can agree. But does it have to be done in such a way that it becomes probably the most regressive piece of legislation to come before Parliament in years, if not at any time in our history?

[Senator Grosart.]

I should like to congratulate the Leader of the Government on having been able to arrange for the minister to come before us. Although we suggested that it would probably be the best way to satisfy ourselves about the questions which have arisen in our minds, we did not actually ask for it. I appreciate the fact that the leader decided to take this course. I assume that on the government side there are also questions waiting to be answered concerning this bill. In advance, therefore, I should like to thank the minister for agreeing to come. He will be the second minister in recent years to grace this chamber with his presence, and I am sure we all welcome him. I have had the opportunity myself of questioning him in committee and I have no doubt that the answers he will give will be persuasive, if not entirely convincing to some of us.

Undoubtedly in Committee of the Whole we will go through the bill clause by clause, and I must express the hope that ample opportunity will be afforded to us to ask our questions, because there have been occasions in the past when it seemed to be the intention on the part of those managing that type of committee to rush it along rather quickly.

This bill has only just come to us, and although it has been about for a long time and many speeches have been made on it, it is only quite recently that we who have the responsibility of dealing with it here have had an opportunity to get down to hard cases on the bill. Whether the matters actually arise directly under particular clauses, I hope the minister will be able to deal with basic figures as we go along.

Incidentally, I see that the minister is in the gallery. Naturally he is not permitted to take notes in the gallery, but I know he has a very good memory and I hope that he will be able to deal with these basic figures and tell us as we go along exactly what the savings are in certain of the amendments made to the bill and what the additional costs are so that we can add them up.

I know there are some areas in which it is difficult to come up with an exact figure owing to the fact that situations which may arise cannot be forecast exactly. Nevertheless, as both Senator Macdonald and Senator Forsey have pointed out, it is important for us to be in a position to compare the dollar savings made in certain of these items with the hardship they will unquestionably bring to some of those affected. I think this is an essential part of the consideration of this bill. If $3 million or $4 million is being saved at the cost of causing great hardship to former or continuing beneficiaries, then we should be in a position to relate that particular saving to the total savings under the bill.

I, myself, am not clear on the right of appeal under this bill. It seems to be dealt with in several clauses. I hope the minister will be good enough to spell out to us the philosophy of the bill in terms of appeals from the rulings under it.

It has been suggested, of course, that with respect to the problems which have arisen in unemployment insurance it would have been better to have dealt with them in an independent inquiry. In fact, within the department itself much excellent work was done in this direction, but it does not appear to have been proceeded with or brought to a conclusion. Nevertheless, some of the information which has been made public makes it much easier for some of us who are laymen to assess the problems. And I should like to emphasize that there are problems, problems which the government had to address itself to—and I am glad that it did so. Of course, those who drafted this bill were working on the basis of the facts as they were available to them, but it is obvious—and I believe the minister or one of his representatives has admitted it—that the facts are not all clear and are not all available.

That is the reason I still wonder why the suggestion has not been taken up that the whole matter be submitted to an independent inquiry, perhaps a royal commission. It would seem that in so many cases the facts are in dispute. I am not now just speaking of mathematical numbers; I am speaking, for example, of the degree to which the whole plan has become a disincentive to work. I do not mean at all levels, but we do know there are aspects of the bill which tend to be a disincentive, and that probably the most worrying sets of abuses are in this particular field.

I must admit immediately that there are clauses in the bill, proposed amendments, which are directed particularly to those kinds of abuses. But, based on some opportunities to look into the matter in one of our committees, it is definitely my impression that we do not know the facts. We do not know whether these abuses might cover 10, 15 or 20 per cent of those who are obtaining benefits under the act. We have had some evidence on that in one of our committees and I can only say that it is alarming.

In conclusion, let me say that I do not want to give the impression that I am opposed to drastic improvements in the act or that I am necessarily opposed to the benchmark philosophy; that is, the concept of moving the percentage point in the unemployment figures at which the burden of the deficit falls on taxpayers generally, rather than being restored to those who pay the premiums.

● (1700)

I am sure that the minister will give us some information on the changes that have taken place from the early days, when the costs of the insurance program were borne almost equally by employers and employees, with, in some years, a small government contribution, as opposed to the present time—and this is the problem the government is facing—when I understand that the total contribution of the premium payers is less than the deficit that has to be made up by the government.

I would not want to leave the impression that I am not in accord with the effort that has been made to tidy up some of the abuses that we have become aware of under this legislation, or with the effort that is being made here to relieve some portion of the burden carried by the general taxpayer.

With that, honourable senators, I am sure we all welcome now the opportunity to look at the bill in some greater detail.

Hon. Raymond J. Perrault: Honourable senators, I had not intended to speak; however, the remarks of the honourable Deputy Leader of the Opposition prompt me—

Senator Grosart: As usual.

Senator Perrault: —to make a few brief observations. Let me say at the outset that the operations of the Unemployment Insurance Act are not unknown to me. I was parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Labour when this measure was introduced. In a very real sense I assisted at the birth of this legislation and I am proud to have been associated with it.

No one has ever claimed that unemployment insurance in this country is a perfect vehicle of social security for those who lose their jobs. That is point No. 1. No one ever suggested, when this bill was introduced, that it was a perfect vehicle in any way. No one suggested that, in the light of experience, changes would not have to be made. No one suggested that we would not have to alter thresholds, or change benefit schedules; indeed, that was stated on the occasion of the introduction of legislation, and was stated subsequently by the minister time and time again. He said that we were venturing very much into the unknown and that we did not know precisely how the legislation was going to operate after implementation.

In the light of experience certain changes are indicated; indeed, others may be required; and we would be totally irresponsible as a government if we did not attempt to improve this program or make it feasible for the Canadian economy to support it effectively, which is, of course, another aspect of the present economic situation.

This legislation, which has been attacked by the Opposition with more sound and fury than logic and common sense, remains to this day the finest legislation of its type in the entire world, a point on which there is no possibility of contradiction.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Perrault: I can tell you that when this legislation was being developed by the government extensive studies were made in Europe, in the Scandinavian countries and in the United States. Today, ministers responsible for social measures in other countries of the world undertake pilgrimages to this country to study the Canadian unemployment insurance program, and many are now instituting some of its features in their own countries. Let us not state, therefore, that these amendments constitute some sort of repressive, illiberal action by the government and by the honourable the minister responsible for this legislation. It is, on the contrary, with or without amendments, the finest program of its kind in the world. But we want a more efficient, effective act, and as well it is obvious that the present economic situation in the world, and consequently the situation in Canada, is such that ways must be found to have this nation live within its means.

Senator Grosart: And the government.

Senator Perrault: That is another inevitable, indisputable fact that emerges from the present situation in this country. The Opposition becomes righteously eloquent when they talk about the need to “increase benefits” and “add new categories,” and yet in the next breath they are on their feet demanding that the federal budget be slashed and that we effect savings.

Senator Grosart: You can do both.

Senator Perrault: They have yet to suggest one serious, major way in which unemployment insurance can be made, as they say, more "efficient." They talk in very airy, woolly terms about wanting to achieve "economies," and wanting to "save money," and wanting to make it a better program, but not once do they suggest those specific meaningful measures which will effect the kind of efficiencies, improvements and savings we require in this country in all our social programs to make them better and to assist the budget situation.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): May I be permitted to put a question to the honourable leader? What did they do when they had the power in their hands?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senator, you raise a good point but you are capable of addressing yourself very eloquently to that point at some other time in this chamber.

If we could double the benefits, perhaps the government would do it. If we could extend benefits to the age of 90, perhaps the government would do it. Similarly, if we could further assist impoverished younger members of the work force, perhaps we would do it, but public resources are finite. Can the country afford to do everything, however, that our social conscience suggests should be done? That is a very fundamental question.

Senator Grosart: The answer is no.

Senator Perrault: Of course it is no. That is one of the more logical statements made by the Honourable the Deputy Leader of the Opposition today.

Senator Forsey: What has this to do with our objections?

Senator Perrault: And there is another point I want to make, though I am just about ready to resume my place because we want to hear from the minister.

Much gloom has spread around the chamber this afternoon, and there has been much talk about the "illiberal" attitude we have allegedly adopted towards people of 65 years and over. I deny that allegation. But let us also remember that many people in Canada question the nation's present ability to support a range of enriched social programs. Good programs are necessary, and I believe we can support them. Regarding senior citizens, this nation has as fine a program for senior citizens as any other nation in the world. Yesterday the Honourable the Deputy Leader of the Opposition said, "What about Scandinavia?" I would not trade our programs here for anything they have in Scandinavia.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Perrault: Let us therefore keep everything in perspective. We are doing well with our social programs.

I will conclude by reiterating that you cannot demand more services, or demand that there be no cuts in any direction, and simultaneously suggest that we have to have major slashes in the budget. Those two goals are mutually incompatible, and more and more Canadians are discovering this to be the case. You cannot run a deficit of $4 billion a year and then improve and extend all social benefits on the lavish scale demanded by the Opposition. There is a yawning credibility gap there, unless alternatives are advanced by the Opposition in ways that will lead to the major savings and efficiencies which they suggest are needed.

[Senator Grosart.]

I must apologize for intervening in this way, but I have a passionate personal interest in this legislation since I was associated with it for so long; indeed, I have some scars that I incurred in the process of defending it during my years in the other chamber.

Hon. Gildas L. Molgat: Honourable senators—

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, I wish to inform the Senate that if the Honourable Senator Molgat speaks now his speech will have the effect of closing the debate on the motion for second reading of this bill.

Senator Molgat: Honourable senators, I will not extend the debate to any extent. I am delighted that my leader has spoken as forcefully as he has, and that he has put such an excellent perspective on the whole scene that is before us.

The criticism of the present bill that has come forward centred basically, as I saw it, on three elements. One was the share that the federal government puts into the unemployment insurance program; another was the change from age 70 to age 65, and the third one was the change from 75 per cent to 66⅔ per cent for claimants with dependants.

My honourable friends across the way did not at any time speak—or if they did, in only a fleeting way—about the positive elements of the bill. We constantly hear complaints in many speeches that the program is being abused, that it is being used as a welfare measure rather than an insurance measure, and so on and so forth, but nothing was said today on that aspect of it. I will not go over all the details, however. I will simply deal specifically with the three main elements that were discussed.

My honourable friends have simply not looked at the other side of the question, when we are dealing with claimants between the ages of 65 and 70, and the claimants with dependants. They simply have not looked at what has happened in this country in the past few years to assist those very people, and to assist them with programs of social reform—not through an employment operation, not through a program of unemployment insurance, but by a very fundamental change in the whole social approach. One needs only to look at family allowances and the increases that have taken place there. Here we are not talking about old times, we are talking about the period between 1971 and now. In those four years—

● (1710)

Senator Grosart: You are not talking about next year either.

Senator Molgat: We are talking about what has happened between 1971 and now. A family with three children between the ages of one year and six years in 1971 received $18. That same family now receives $66. This reflects a very fundamental change. If we go to the old age pensioner we find a situation where in 1971 the maximum payment under the Canada Pension Plan was $65, whereas now it is $130—twice the amount. And that has come about in a period of four years. Old age security has gone from $80 to $126, and if we talk about the guaranteed income supplement for a single person we find that it has gone from $34 to $88, and all that in the same period of four years.

Add to that the other measures that have been undertaken. One need only look at housing for old age pensioners. You will find that millions of dollars have been invested by the Canadian public, through this government, to provide not only adequate housing, but to supplement the rents payable. The federal government is providing excellent housing throughout this country, subsidized by the Canadian public, for our old age pensioners.

My friends on the other side, when criticizing the bill, are forgetting completely those other aspects. But that is the way in which we should be assisting our old age pensioners and our poor, not through an insurance program but through these other methods. And I believe that is what the government has been doing.

One particular criticism that has been made concerned the sharing between the federal government and others with respect to unemployment insurance. I mentioned at the outset of my speech that the federal government's share amounted to one fifth of the total back in 1941. The remainder was shared equally by the employers and the employees. But let us look at what has happened since then. Had we continued with the situation prior to the passage of this act, based on the expected rates for 1976 the shares for government, for employers, and for employees would have been as follows: government, 53 per cent; employers, 27 per cent; employees 20 per cent. That is under the threshold of four per cent. After the passage of this bill the new share divisions will be: government, 38 per cent; employers, 36 per cent; employees, 26 per cent.

I have mentioned the situation when this legislation was first introduced in 1941. As recently as 1971 the share was 41½ per cent each for employers and employees, and only 17 per cent was paid by the government. But under this new bill the government will be paying 38 per cent. So how could anyone say that this is regressive, that the government is not doing its share? It is simply a case of not looking at the figures.

Motion agreed to and bill read second time, on division.

CONSIDERED IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, under the agreement we made earlier it is now the intention to invite the Honourable the Minister of Manpower and Immigration to take a seat on the floor of the chamber to answer any questions with respect to this legislation. Under Rule 18 of the Senate, as honourable senators are aware, the minister—

... may on invitation from the Senate enter the Senate chamber and, subject to the rules, orders, usages, forms and proceedings of the Senate, may take part in the debate.

I hereby, on behalf of honourable senators, invite the minister to take his place on the floor of the Senate.

Senator Grosart: Are you going to move that we go into Committee of the Whole first?

Senator Perrault: I so move.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Perrault, P.C., seconded by the Honourable Senator Langlois that this bill be referred to Committee of the Whole presently. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Motion agreed to.

● (1720)

The Senate was accordingly adjourned during pleasure and put into a Committee of the Whole on the bill, the Honourable Senator Macnaughton, P.C., in the Chair.

Pursuant to rule 18 of the Rules of the Senate, the Honourable Robert Knight Andras, P.C., the Minister of Manpower and Immigration, was escorted to a seat in the Senate chamber.

The Chairman: Honourable senators, on your behalf I welcome the Honourable Robert Andras, Minister of Manpower and Immigration, to our chamber.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

The Chairman: The Senate is in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-69, entitled, "An Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971."

Shall discussion on the title of the bill be postponed?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Chairman: Clause 1. I will ask the minister if he has an opening statement. Mr. Minister?

Hon. Robert Knight Andras (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Thank you very much, honourable senators, for according me the opportunity to join you to discuss this important piece of legislation.

I must say at the outset that I find the oratory in this chamber more stimulating in many ways than that in the other. If ever I am offered the opportunity to join you some day, I will find myself in much more competitive company having regard to the level of discussion in the other place recently.

I listened with great interest to the concerns expressed by some honourable senators, whom I know and whose opinions I respect very much. I will come to those, because they are the ones that are critical.

I also noted with appreciation the presentation of the theme of the legislation by Senator Perrault and Senator Molgat, and the clarity with which they explained the views of the government in these amendments to an important piece of legislation.

I do not know what licence I have in addressing you. I shall take it that I have some, and leave you to stop me if I transgress.

I do agree with a comment made by both Senator Perrault and Senator Molgat with respect to the positive nature of the bill. I feel that, perhaps, there has not been a great deal of attention paid to what I consider two very positive aspects of it. Frankly, honourable senators, it is my view, with a sense of responsibility for the whole bill, that it is, in fact, positive, and I will not hide behind any of my officials by suggesting that this is some concoction of the officials of the Public Service. This is my bill, and the government's bill, and I take full responsibility for it.

I say that, honourable senators, not suggesting that certain passages of the bill bring any joy or pleasure to me or the government in the necessity of proposing them. After all, within the government we are embarked—I think wisely—on the task of looking at our whole social security system. Primarily, that is under the responsibility of my colleague, the Minister of National Health and Welfare, but because many of the responsibilities of my department interface in a significant economic and social fashion, we are very closely associated with him.

The less controversial aspects of the bill, to which, in my opinion, Senator Forsey, Senator Macdonald and Senator Grosart have referred very sincerely—the ones that are joyless, and which I admit are joyless—are those pertaining to the amendment that would no longer have people of 65 years of age and older entitled to benefits, and the change in the dependency rate. I am quite sure that these figures will come out in more detail during the discussion, because I do not intend to speak for very long. However, I believe that the emphasis has to be on the fact that at some stage, if we in this fortunate and affluent nation of ours are going to continue to be capable of underpinning the weak, the unfortunate and the disadvantaged, we must do it in a rational fashion. We must put our resources into the programs which are best fitted to accomplish that and which do not confuse the issue. One senator made a very pertinent observation across the floor that we should really—and this has been said for years by most people who look at the plan with concern—try to make it an unemployment insurance plan and not a program that attempts to be all things to all people.

The dependency rate reduction from 75 per cent to 66½ per cent was a plan within the 1971 amendments, which permitted the additional benefit rate based on previous earnings to be payable to those with very low incomes. That represents two per cent of our total claim load. The additional dependency rate of 75 per cent was paid to those in the extended benefit period. Combined, those two represent 7.39 per cent of our claim load, but 0.2 per cent—two-tenths of one per cent—are in the low income group and they attract this additional benefit because they are in fact in the low income group. They will continue to get a minimum unemployment insurance benefit, assuming this bill is passed, but I believe—and I say this quite sincerely—that it is a moot point as to whether an unemployment insurance plan, which I consider to be a wage-related plan, should bear the additional burden of size of family.

I do not deny, I never would deny—and I will fight with anyone on the other side—increasing assistance under the appropriate program in recognition of size of family, which brings with it additional income needs. There is no argument about that, but if we really examine the principle, we are going to say then that wages and salaries should be related to the size of the family; we are going to say, if we continue to endorse the principle—which I consider to have been wrong in the 1971 amendments and which we are now attempting to correct—that wages should be based upon whether a person has two, three, four, five or six children. I happen to think that is the wrong way to provide what I admit is an income support need based on size of family. I do not think it should be a matter of consideration in a wage-related plan, which the unemployment insurance program should be.

I entirely agree with the thought that this should be provided by demogrants, to use the new jargon—in other words, by family allowances. Those family allowances have been trebled since the 1971 amendments. Indeed, it is an unfortunate necessity, decided by the government the other evening, that the indexing of the family allowance has to be suspended for one year. I frankly admit before you that that is a difficult and embarrassing position for me to be in with respect to this amendment. However, this amendment is an amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Act. What the government announced the other night is a necessary measure for one year, and the indexing will pick up from there.

So, I believe that we are trying by these amendments—the controversial ones that have been attacked—to return the program to being an insurance program, and not a welfare or a social program that is all things to all people.

The same principle really applies to the age of 65. It was established in 1971 that there would be an age at which unemployment insurance premiums would no longer be payable, and also that unemployment insurance benefits would no longer be payable, and that age was 70. At that time in the debates there was a great deal of discussion as to whether it should be age 70, or age 65, and as I interpret or analyze the discussion of only four years ago, age 70 was chosen because the Canada Pension Plan was not going to mature until 1976. This amendment is effective in 1976, at a time when the Canada Pension Plan has matured, and, as pointed out by preceding speakers, the Canada Pension Plan, the Old Age Security and the Guaranteed Income Supplement have been raised very considerably. In addition, in amendments to the Canada Pension Plan Act earlier this year there was a change which permitted the drawing of Canada Pension Plan at age 65 without a means test or a needs test. So, consequently, at age 65 all people are now able to get that additional income without a means test, whether or not they are working. In addition, as honourable senators know, there has been a change, making spouses of pensioners eligible from the age of 60.

● (1730)

To give honourable senators some indication of the magnitude—apart from the individual figures that were placed on the record by, I believe, Senator Molgat—in 1971 the government's expenditures in Canada Pension Plan, Old Age Security and Guaranteed Income Supplement were approximately $2.2 billion a year. In 1975, totally directed to those age 65 and over in the Canada Pension Plan, the Guaranteed Income Supplement and Old Age Security, the annual amount will be $4.3 billion. That is an increase of $2 billion a year directed towards people 65 and over, plus their spouses who are now eligible provided they are over 60. That is a 90 per cent increase, honourable senators.

It is always difficult to rationalize—a word I sometimes do not like very much, but it expresses what we are trying to do here—between the social and income maintenance programs of this country, to try to keep the right eggs in the right basket, if I might use that expression, because if we do not watch what we are doing in these programs we will have overlaps and the most impossible distortions, and we will end up like other countries, which shall be nameless in this forum, which have totally run out of control, even despite the best will in the world. I do not doubt their sincerity. I also want to help those people, but I want to do it through the right programs and not through an unemployment insurance program.

The final controversial amendment is the threshold change. It is really very simple. We are going to pay out $3.4 billion in unemployment insurance this year. Last year it was about $2.1 billion or $2.2 billion. Of course, it is greatly influenced by the significant rise in unemployment, but that is not all. There is in the act an automatic escalation of the eligible earnings and, therefore, the maximum benefits. They will be $200 a week in 1976, because they are related to the average of all the T-4 slips of wage earners in this country, as supplied by National Revenue. That figure is also escalating automatically. So there are built-in escalations in the program. In fact, in 1974, when unemployment came down from the previous year to a level of 5.4 per cent, the total benefits went up, and people asked, "How come?" First, there is a rapidly growing labour force, and 5.4 per cent of that labour force, in numerical figures, is somewhat higher in absolute terms than the previous year. We also have these other escalations taking place. The figures are absolutely accurate. We will still end up projecting, for illustration purposes, a 7 per cent rate. Thirty-eight per cent of the share of the cost will be borne by government, 36 per cent by employers, and, if I recall correctly, 26 per cent by employees.

We had to raise more money for the funding of this program. We had the choice of doing it through general taxation or through the premium increase which will be the result of this amendment. One can argue about regressivity. We had already established the principle of tripartite sharing of the cost of this program. That is the fundamental issue which should be discussed some day, as to whether this should be totally borne by the Consolidated Revenue Fund or whether it should continue to be a tripartite arrangement. That debate has not been entered into. It probably will be before long, because there are further adjustments and analyses to be made which will be more comprehensive than those we have done to date.

That is the fact of the matter, honourable senators. We had to raise more money. It was a choice of having an additional premium, changing the threshold, or going for a general taxation measure. I doubt whether, in the end, the difference in actual effect will be so great. This "terrible burden" we are being accused of inflicting upon the poor by imposing the additional premium will amount to six-tenths of one cent per hour—six-tenths of one cent per hour for an employee making $100 a week on a 40-hour week. That is the burden—six-tenths of one cent per hour. For the employer it will be about nine-tenths of one cent per hour. Honourable senators can double that for the maximum range, which, as I said, will be $200 in 1976. In my view, there is more smoke than fire in the accusation that this is placing an intolerable, unconscionable burden on the backs of the poor by introducing an additional premium of six-tenths of one cent per hour. At $100 a week the total cost of the premium is, I think, three and a half cents per hour. At $200 a week, which is a more decent income, it will be double; and that is where it stops.

If honourable senators want to compare that, from $200 a week up they stop and there is a ceiling on their premiums. If honourable senators look at the benefits drawn, the whole picture totally reverses itself, because most of those benefits, 60 per cent to 70 per cent, go to those earning less than $6,000 per year.

Honourable senators, I may have abused my privilege in talking too long. I am quite sure there is a great deal more information you will want from me, and I will do my best to try to answer questions as candidly as possible.

The Chairman: Shall clause 1 carry?

Senator Grosart: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the minister if he does not find a basic contradiction in his argument that the benefits should be wage related and not family related, because then he turns around and gives us a very long defence in the matter of the over 65s by saying, "Oh, no, in this case it should not be wage related. We had to relate it to the fact that there are family allowances or pensions." The minister is arguing both ways, but he cannot have it both ways.

Hon. Mr. Andras: No, I am not. I do not see any contradiction in that. In certain ways they are two separate issues. The dependency rate reduction is one. For people still in the labour force who have family allowances, that is a demogrant of one nature recognizing family size. But the fact is that, for good or bad, in this country we have established age 65 as the age at which all our so-called senior citizen programs begin to converge, and we now have Guaranteed Income Supplement, Old Age Security, Canada Pension Plan, the Quebec Pension Plan, senior citizens' housing, tax exemptions, and all the rest of it.

There is a point at which it becomes totally impossible to administer an unemployment insurance plan which requires the search for and acceptance of suitable work. This is not the only reason we have made this change, but I must say, to place these figures on the table, we have done an analysis of the labour force statistics produced by Statistics Canada for some length of time. We note that the average number of persons of 65 and over declaring themselves unemployed to Statistics Canada was 7,000 at the end of every month in 1974. Our unemployment insurance claimant rolls indicate that 17,500 persons were drawing regular benefits. This number did not take into account sickness, and a rather insignificant number of pregnancies.

Now, we do know that at age 65 there is a great tendency towards withdrawal from the labour force. In 1971, prior to this amendment to the act, because the Canada Pension Plan was not available at age 65 except with a means test, if an individual lost his or her job, or decided to resign or retire at age 65, that individual had the choice, as far as the Unemployment Insurance Commission was concerned, of taking Canada Pension Plan benefits and getting three weeks' benefits, which was considered a return of premium, or not to take that and, instead, apply for unemployment insurance benefits.

● (1740)

People very quickly realized that it was a lousy bargain to take the Canada Pension Plan benefits at that stage and the three weeks' premium when they could end up having both over a period of time. Unfortunately, that is what happened. Now, of course, Canada Pension Plan benefits are available at age 65 without a means test. We have to accept that it is logical that at a certain age people should no longer pay into the plan or draw benefits from it.

There is not one provision in this bill which would prevent a person from working; nor is there anything which would deny any person access to a job by virtue of these amendments.

Senator Grosart: A supplementary question, Mr. Chairman, if I may. If the concept of the plan is that it be wage-related—and as you have said, Mr. Minister, this amendment will not in any way prohibit anyone over 65 years of age from taking a job—surely there is a great contradiction here? If that person wishes to take a job, wishes to earn wages, is there any reason why he or she should then be discriminated against and not be given the same right as anybody else to insure his or her wages? Is this deliberately intended to be a disincentive aimed at keeping those over 65 years of age out of the labour force?

Hon. Mr. Andras: I can honestly say that this was not intended to be a move by which we would discourage people 65 years of age and over from seeking work. There are, as you know, many firms and corporations in this country which impose compulsory retirement at age 65, and that measure is contained in many union agreements. I think this bill is absolutely neutral and benign insofar as that particular theme or theory is concerned. There is no doubt about that. It does recognize, however, that through other social programs there is a convergence of incomes support starting at age 65. I would use my argument about wage relationship much more heavily in respect of the dependency amendment than I would on the amendment disqualifying those 65 years of age and over from benefit under the act.

Senator Grosart: I still do not understand, Mr. Minister, what the other social benefits that may be available to a person over 65 years of age have to do with that person's right to work and obtain wages and insure those wages. Surely this is discrimination, in this respect at least, against that person? He is denied a right that every other Canadian has.

Hon. Mr. Andras: He has assumed certain rights that every other Canadian does not have, too, senator. At age 65, we have deliberately and, I think, properly discriminated against people younger than 65 years by saying that those who are 65 years of age and over are entitled to pension plan benefits, albeit contributory, but also OAS and GIS, senior citizens' housing, and tax exemptions paid for by the state and, therefore, by other taxpayers.

It becomes almost impossible to enforce one of the obligations under the act, the active job search. It is brutal for us to monitor people of that age and send them out to search for work in the same fashion as we do younger people, to tramp around knocking on employers' doors when, unfortunately, in this country it gets more difficult to get a decent job as you get older. When we have 7,000 actually telling Statistics Canada that they are unemployed and 17,500 to 20,000 drawing unemployment insurance, it is obvious that many of these people themselves have withdrawn from the labour force. They are not telling us that, of course. Because of that, we have to disentitle them under the act, and to disentitle them under the act we have to monitor them by the very tough, very firm approaches that we take under the act to people much younger. That is not the only reason we are making the changes, but it is an additional difficulty.

[Hon. Mr. Andras.]

The Chairman: Senator Macdonald.

Senator Macdonald: I have just two questions, Mr. Chairman. The proposed subsection 3(1)(e) states:

"(e) employment in Canada of an individual as sponsor . . ."

If there are two or more persons sponsoring a project, would only one be covered by the act?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Under the programs to which this will apply, only one sponsor would be covered. As was announced the other night, this will not be applicable anyway in 1976 in respect of the Opportunities for Youth program. The Unemployment Insurance Act has not been applicable in that area. Officials of the Justice Department told us that such individuals were co-adventurers and, therefore, were not eligible for unemployment insurance benefits, apart from the sponsor, but those coming under a Local Initiatives Program were—which seemed unfair.

Senator Macdonald: Can you give us the actual number of people over 65 years of age who will be affected by this measure?

Hon. Mr. Andras: There will be 170,000 persons affected, which number includes 63,000 active claimants between 65 and 69 years of age whose claims will be terminated—that is about 2½ per cent of our claimants—64,000 between ages 65 and 69 still working who will be eligible for the special retirement benefit but no longer eligible for unemployment insurance benefits, and, we calculate, about 42,000 who will reach the age of 65 in 1976. That is our total active claim roll.

As I indicated a few minutes ago, last year we averaged 17,500 at the end of every month who were, in fact, over 65 and drawing regular benefits.

Senator Macdonald: Am I correct in assuming that the total saving would be $170 million a year?

Hon. Mr. Andras: The total net saving as a result of all the amendments will be $170 million a year, of which $120 million is attributable to the amendment affecting those 65 years of age and over. That is the net figure after the payment of the three weeks' retirement benefits, which recognizes, to a degree, a return of premiums.

Senator Grosart: Is that the net so-called saving?

Hon. Mr. Andras: The net saving in relation to that one amendment, based on a 7 per cent unemployment rate, and with all the other variables calculated—that is, the eligible earnings, and so forth, and our experience of the average weekly benefit for people in that age group—is $120 million net.

Senator Forsey: For this one provision?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Yes.

Senator Forsey: So, that is a major part of the total saving?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Yes, indeed it is, senator.

Senator Forsey: Have you any idea, Mr. Minister, in what parts of the country these people may be more heavily concentrated?

Hon. Mr. Andras: No, I do not. I can only give you an intuitive response, senator. It would be generally related to the age mix. There are some variations. I understand that people retire more in Victoria than they do, for instance, in Thunder Bay. There may be a social significance to the distribution, but I regret that I cannot give you that breakdown.

Senator Forsey: Mr. Chairman, I should like to move that subclause (2) of clause 1 be deleted. I should perhaps add that there is a later clause related to this which involves the same point, and I shall be moving a similar amendment to it.

● (1750)

The Chairman: Has the honourable senator anything further to say before I call for the vote?

Senator Forsey: No, nothing further.

The Chairman: It has been moved by the Honourable Senator Forsey that subclause (2) of clause 1 be deleted. Those in favour of the amendment will please rise.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): If you will permit a question, Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: Yes, Senator Fournier.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): I rise on a point of order. When an amendment or anything is proposed in the Senate, or in the other place, is it not necessary to have a seconder?

The Chairman: I do not believe that is so in the Committee of the Whole.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): So anyone can propose an amendment without a seconder?

The Chairman: I am sorry; I believe that the Honourable Senator Fournier is correct. Is there a seconder?

Senator Macdonald: I will second it.

The Chairman: Seconded by Senator Macdonald. Those in favour of the amendment will please rise.

The Clerk: Four.

The Chairman: Those against will please rise.

The Clerk: Seventeen.

The Chairman: I declare the amendment lost. Shall clause 1 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 2. Shall clause 2 carry?

Senator Grosart: This is the clause, as I understand it, concerning the self-employed. There is a change here from 50 per cent to 40 per cent, Mr. Minister. What is the purpose of that change, and what is the net saving?

Hon. Mr. Andras: We have not calculated the saving. We do not consider it to be significant in relation to the sums we are talking about, Senator Grosart. The reason for it is the recognition of one or two attempts, and there may be other attempts in the future, where there is a 50-50 shareholding, were one partner—perhaps not in the legal sense a partnership, but in the corporate sense—in a private company would say to the other, "Look, I am firing you so you can go on unemployment insurance," and then he carries on. This does not totally get rid of that possibility but, at least, it means that there has to be collusion or a genuine decision between more than two people, where the shareholdings are limited to 40 per cent.

Senator Grosart: Thank you.

The Chairman: Shall clause 2 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 3 carry?

Senator Grosart: Do not go too quickly, Mr. Chairman. On the government side they have so many people examining this and raising questions, but we are very few on this side. Perhaps you will give us just a little time.

An Hon. Senator: Where are your members?

Senator Grosart: I thought someone on the other side would be looking at the bill too.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): It is not so much a matter of looking at the bill as it is of intelligence.

Senator Choquette: Is that why you moved to that seat?

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): I just wanted to come close to the honourable minister in order to lose nothing of what was said.

Senator Choquette: We usually hear your applause way back there.

The Chairman: Order, please.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): I presumed he was an intelligent man—

The Chairman: Order, please.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): —and I came close to verify it, and I was right. You can think what you like.

The Chairman: Order, please.

Clause 3. Shall clause 3 carry?

Senator Grosart: This is a disentitlement clause which covers a good many clauses. I wonder if the minister would be good enough—particularly as it is consequential to clause 19—to give us a general indication of the changes in entitlement that will come under this clause.

Hon. Mr. Andras: Senator, there are really no changes in entitlement, or disentitlement. What we are doing—and it is in the face of considerable comment over the years, not only on this legislation but other—is that we are lifting the definition of criteria for disentitlement and, therefore, the criteria for entitlement, out of the regulations and putting it clearly in the act itself.

Senator Grosart: Is there no extension of disentitlement anywhere in the bill before us?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Only the three- to six-week disqualification.

Senator Grosart: That is the only addition to the disentitlement?

Hon. Mr. Andras: That is correct.

The Chairman: Shall clause 3 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 4 carry?

Senator Grosart: This is the extension of the aggregate of the qualifying time to 104 weeks. What is the reason for the 104 weeks, Mr. Minister?

Hon. Mr. Andras: This was at the request of several of the provinces and very many organizations, senator. We had thought, because of the reduced qualifying period—that is, the eligibility of number of weeks worked—that we did not need this in 1971. For instance, when a workman's entitlement to workmen's compensation ends, we often find that the period in which a claim could be made has expired. So, he has lost all his entitlement, and yet he still has the same basic problem of searching for work and needing income support after the workmen's compensation has expired.

The more controversial one, to which you referred in your speech on second reading—if I am permitted to make that reference—with regard to incarceration, has been included at the request of many provincial governments and many organizations throughout the country, recognizing the short sentence situation where a person who might be sentenced to a year has an additional 52 weeks in which the entitlement is retained that he has earned through legitimate work activity before going into prison. When he comes out he still has the other 52 weeks in which to claim whatever entitlement he has built up.

Senator Grosart: Would the same reasoning apply to the next clause, which extends the benefits?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Yes, that is a consequential change.

The Chairman: Shall clause 4 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 5 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 6.

Senator Forsey: Mr. Chairman, this clause involves the other provision of the bill to which I took strong objection, and I, therefore, do not wish to repeat my reasons for that. I have one question to ask the minister. What is the saving expected to be under this provision? Has he any idea what parts of the country it would affect most?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Again, I have to base all this on a fixed, illustrative level of unemployment, at 7 per cent, and the savings would be $30 million, Senator Forsey.

I can only give you the geographic breakdown in comparative terms. It is about $3½ million in Newfoundland, about $200,000 in Prince Edward Island, about $1.4 million in Nova Scotia, about $2.3 million in New Brunswick, about $12.4 million in Quebec, about $6.4 million in Ontario and about one-half million dollars in Manitoba and in Saskatchewan and Alberta, about $2.3 million in British Columbia, and about $100,000 in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

Senator Forsey: Thank you very much. I move that clause 6 be deleted.

Senator Grosart: Mr. Chairman, before you put the motion, I wonder if I could ask a supplementary question. Do I understand that this clause will not come into effect automatically on royal assent but will await proclamation?

[The Chairman.]

● (1800)

Hon. Mr. Andras: There is only one clause which will come in automatically on royal assent and that is the one including those on direct job creation as sponsors. There is a group of amendments which will come in by proclamation either on January 1 or January 4, 1976. I cannot give you the precise date at the moment. There are some benefit periods affected here and we have to work it out. The voluntary termination of claim will come into effect on January 1 or 4. It is only with respect to two clauses that the implementation and proclamation will be postponed. In other words, there is the extension to the 104 weeks which we discussed a minute ago, and the flexibility of sickness. The reason for that is that there is a considerable and complex computer programming element required in those two aspects of it. While my officials tell me that it will probably be June or July, I am pressing them to do it sooner than that. But one thing I do not want to get involved in is the administrative difficulties we faced in 1971 and 1972 when the commission was forced to implement a very complex bill and complex changes too quickly, which simply had the effect of creating chaos for a short period of time. Most of the recommendations will be implemented within a matter of two or three weeks, assuming the bill receives royal assent.

Senator Grosart: Would this be a single proclamation covering this large group?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Yes, each section will be identified, but there probably will be a group proclamation published in the Canada Gazette.

The Chairman: Honourable Senator Forsey moves, seconded by the Honourable Senator Macdonald, that clause 6 be deleted. Will all those in favour of the amendment please rise?

The Clerk: Five.

The Chairman: Will all those against the amendment please rise?

The Clerk: Seventeen.

The Chairman: I declare the amendment lost. Shall clause 6 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 7.

Senator Grosart: Mr. Minister, would you mind explaining this clause? As I understand it, it provides that claimants cannot claim sickness benefits after they leave the labour force. How does someone technically leave the labour force?

Hon. Mr. Andras: We just want it to be absolutely clear in the act, senator, because on occasion we have had claims from students who, having built up an entitlement, had left the labour force and gone back to school. We want to make it absolutely clear that that is not what was intended in the philosophy or the program of the act.

The Chairman: Shall clause 7 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 8 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 9 carry?

Senator Macdonald: Would any great saving be effected by reducing the time to one day in respect of workmen's compensation? What would be the estimated saving in this amendment?

Hon. Mr. Andras: There is no saving on this whatsoever, senator. As a matter of fact, this amendment is put in to remove a precise legal technicality which we ran into by which, in fact, we were barred from paying unemployment insurance to people we considered clearly entitled to it, simply by virtue of a highly technical wording: "total temporary" as opposed to "temporary total." It was incredibly complex and, with respect to our learned friends, I thought it was a silly legalistic problem and we have corrected it in this bill. But there is no saving involved.

Senator Macdonald: Thank you. You have made it very clear.

The Chairman: Shall clause 9 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 10.

Senator Bélisle: Under clause 10(4) would it be possible for the claimant reaching the age of 65 to be refunded the money he has paid in if he has not collected anything and if he has been a payee for a long time?

Hon. Mr. Andras: No, it would not, senator, and if I may venture to say so, that would be an absolute distortion of the insurance principle of the act. It is in fact term insurance just as there is a term on certain life insurance or on homes for fire insurance, and so forth. It would be most difficult to keep this program even close to being actuarially sound if people who had paid in over the years were entitled to get back all of their benefits. We do recognize, however, the gap in the 65th year when a claim would be terminated upon reaching age 65, as indeed we recognized in the 1971 act at age 70, when we are returning three weeks of benefits which really amount to in excess of two years of premium payments.

So, it would be an actuarial distortion to recognize the idea that people who had paid in over the years should get their payments back because they were fortunate enough never to have faced a temporary interruption of their earnings.

Senator Grosart: Mr. Minister, has an estimate been made of the total in dollars of the locked-in premiums from people now 65 or assumed to be over 65 as against the benefits they have drawn? I ask the question because obviously these persons, in paying premiums over the years, did not expect this sudden, drastic decision by the government to dash their expectations to the ground. They assumed that they were paying premiums the benefit of which they would be able to get so long as they remained in the labour force. Has any attempt been made to get the amount of money that is locked-in without any future benefit?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Senator Grosart, a person aged 65 now who had paid into the plan since its inception, which I believe was in 1940 or 1941, would have contributed something in excess of $1,400 in premiums, as a maximum, at the maximum level during those years. The average we note is that people over 65 draw a higher per weekly benefit than people under 65, in the ratio of about $87 a week to the average of $80, and they draw for 31 weeks compared to the average of about 68 weeks.

That amounts to about $2,800 to $2,900 in unemployment insurance benefits, and I think it does tie back to my unfortunate interpretation that there is a greatly excessive number of people drawing unemployment insurance at this age compared to those registered with the Canada labour force, particularly as being unemployed. But this is being used in fact as a supplement to pension plans. I certainly accept the argument, but I cannot agree with the opinion that because you have paid into the plan for a certain length of time there is an automatic entitlement either to the benefit or to a return of premiums.

Senator Grosart: Surely the minister would agree that this is not an ordinary case of term insurance, to use the phrase he has used. This is a case in which suddenly the termination date was determined by someone else and it had nothing to do with the original contract or the original understanding. These people assumed when they first became contributors that when they reached a certain age they would receive benefits. When they first became contributors, when they first entered into employment, they said, "I will pay these premiums." And suddenly the government says, "You are wrong. We have changed our minds. We have changed the plan. We have changed what was essentially a contract with you." And this is done unilaterally. Can I say this, that I was not impressed with the argument that people in this age group are now high level beneficiaries, because they were not always in that age group? That is the point I am making.

● (1810)

Hon. Mr. Andras: I did not intend to impress the honourable senator in a psychological way with that statement. It was simply an attempt to state some facts that I thought might be useful. I simply cannot accept, personally, the idea that when you pay a premium for this week you are entitled to unemployment insurance for this week. It is clearly term insurance. The principle of the arbitrary or unilateral cutoff, which the honourable senator is referring to, surely was established at age 70 in 1971 when a threshold age, at which the entitlement age would cease, was first introduced, as far as I know, in the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Senator Grosart: Let me make this comment. I have entered into a term insurance plan which is still good for a couple of years. I am paying in annual premiums. I would object strenuously if the insurance company now said, "We are sorry, but you cannot pay in any more premiums. You cannot have that protection for the last two years," when, as far as I know, these are the years when I will need them the most. It is exactly the same thing.

Hon. Mr. Andras: The honourable senator perhaps has a point. I can only establish that that principle was adopted in 1971 at age 70, when certain other social security measures were not yet available, and weighing this in the balance we have had to make this decision and make this recommendation.

Senator Macdonald: I am wondering whether there is any special reason why the special severance benefit is for three weeks. Why three weeks? Is that figure drawn out of the air, or is there something behind it?

Hon. Mr. Andras: It is a continuation of the three weeks' special retirement benefit in the 1971 amendments which were based on the recognition that the same problem applied at age 70 as to the sixty-ninth year, or as to the seventieth year, from age 69 up. It is now being applied to the 65-year-olds for the sixty-fourth year. The argument was then presented, which may still be valid, to try and breach that gap between application and processing by the administrator of the Canada Pension Plan, and before old age security, to get those payments rolling, as it were, or moving towards the person reaching that age.

The Chairman: Shall clause 10 carry?

Senator Forsey: If I might say so, on division. Had my previous amendment not been defeated I should have moved a similar amendment on this clause, but it is now obviously ridiculous to do so.

The Chairman: Clause 10 carried, on division.

Clause 11. Shall clause 11 carry?

Senator Grosart: Perhaps we might have an explanation here. This is the clause that deals with sickness benefits and the change from 29 to 39 weeks.

Hon. Mr. Andras: We found that this had been rather rigid in the 1971 amendments, in that major claimants could be entitled to 15 weeks of sickness benefits, although they had to draw them only in what was called the initial period, which under the act is the first 29 weeks. This is being extended to 39 weeks. We believe that the amendment will provide an incentive to work, since the employee would lose entitlement if he took, say, 10 weeks off work and extended it over the expiry day of the entitlement period. We feel it is an incentive for people, when they are capable of going back to work, to do so, without jeopardizing their entitlement.

The Chairman: Shall clause 11 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 12. Shall clause 12 carry?

Senator Macdonald: Just one thing. I notice that the rate of the extended benefits is 66% of the average weekly insurable earnings, or $20, whichever is the greater. Will there be many people drawing so little that they are getting $20?

Hon. Mr. Andras: That $20 does not have effect now, senator. It was dealt with at a time when one of the provincial minimum wage rates was such that it could produce this 66% per cent and that kind of figure; but it really has changed now, since all the provinces have raised their minimum wage rates to a considerable degree. The $20 figure would no longer apply. The minimum now would be $33 or $37. I guess it is $33.

Senator Grosart: May I ask the minister if there is a significant saving in this reduction from 75 per cent to 66% per cent?

Hon. Mr. Andras: That is the $30 million a year that I referred to a few minutes ago.

Senator Grosart: This is not the dependent one.

[Senator Macdonald.]

Hon. Mr. Andras: There are two sections to that one. This is the dependency rate, and the extended benefits period. The other one was in the initial benefit period. It is part of the same amendment.

The Chairman: Shall clause 12 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 13. Shall clause 13 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 14. Shall clause 14 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 15. Shall clause 15 carry?

Senator Macdonald: With regard to clause 15, there are two matters I want to raise. The claimant must come for his interview. I want to know how the notice of the interview is given. Must the manager at the unemployment insurance office, for example, have some proof that the claimant has received that notice? Secondly, is suitable employment determined by the manager of the unemployment insurance office?

Hon. Mr. Andras: This is the section raising the disqualification period from three to six weeks. This deals with the person who voluntarily quits his job without just cause, or refuses suitable work. The first indication of that, of course, would flow from the separation certificate by the employer, and when that indicates quitting without cause it raises a question and a notice is sent to the claimant. It is assumed by the fact that that notice is mailed that it has been received, but I would add that the person immediately has access to a formal appeal to the board of referees, and then, under certain conditions, to the umpire, who is a member of the Federal Court. There is, however, an informal appeal. The claimant may appear at the Unemployment Insurance Commission office and put his case before the insurance agent. This whole appeal system is under review now, and I expect a report by early next year from two sources, namely, our Unemployment Insurance Advisory Committee, and the Law Reform Commission. The preliminary information I have is that on examination both of these bodies are not dissatisfied with the present appeal system, but that they may make—and I hope they will—some fundamental recommendations to me.

Senator Grosart: I would like to ask the minister a question regarding what will be section (40(1)(e) of the act, whereby a claimant is disqualified from receiving benefits if without good cause he has failed to attend a course of instruction or training. Does this provide authority for compulsory attendance at training in a specific craft or industry?

Hon. Mr. Andras: No. It is not a compulsory attendance in that sense. It is certainly a strong suggestion that he would be wise to attend. He could make that decision of his own free will, but under this clause he attracts the disqualification for, up to now, under this amendment, six weeks' benefits.

Senator Grosart: So he is penalized the number of dollars that he would have got for those six weeks, if he does not go on this course. Is that how it will operate?

Hon. Mr. Andras: That is essentially correct, yes.

The Chairman: Shall clause 15 carry?

● (1820)

Senator Norrie: Mr. Chairman, if a claimant asked for a chance to attend Normal College, or college of any kind would such a person be disqualified and not get any unemployment insurance if he or she were to go to college right after?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Yes, but that has not been the result of a joint discussion and decision by the Unemployment Insurance Commission as to the attendance at a course. If it is not that, then the person is considered to have removed himself or herself from the active job search. If there was prima facie evidence of such taking place then they would attract a disentitlement in this case rather than a disqualification—because they are two different things.

Senator Grosart: Has the commission or the ministry developed any definitions of "suitable" employment? It is a matter that is raised from time to time on the assumption that claimants will refuse all jobs and find nothing suitable. How would this be applied, and how would the definition of "suitable" be applied in respect of the penalty under this clause?

Hon. Mr. Andras: There is no single definition, senator, but there are 35 years of jurisprudence, and—as we did, I believe, before the standing committee of the other place—we would be glad to table the extracts from the jurisprudence. I do not know what your procedures are for receiving such documents, but I would be glad to furnish you with that. It is, as I said, based on 35 years of jurisprudence, and there is a wide range. Each case has to be considered by itself, but it is not a case of a whim or fancy of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. It is subject to judicial scrutiny by the appeal board and, indeed, it can go as high as the Federal Court.

The Chairman: Shall clause 15 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 16. Shall clause 16 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 17. Shall clause 17 carry?

Senator Macdonald: There would appear to me to be somewhat of a contradiction here, in that a claimant is not entitled to receive benefit for any period during which he is the inmate of a prison or a similar institution. But the idea of this bill, according to the first reading, was that it would allow payments to persons in public institutions which are not penal institutions. Would that cover cases, for example, where a person is not in a penal institution but is in an institution for, let us say, the treatment of alcoholism, or something of that nature, on a temporary basis?

Hon. Mr. Andras: The act, as amended in 1971, really prohibited us from paying benefits to people in institutions of a penal nature, homes for unwed mothers and that kind of thing—that is the sort of thing we are trying to tidy up now—but a person in for alcohol rehabilitation would receive sickness benefits under this.

Senator Grosart: Apparently, there is an exception made in section 31 of the act to the implementation or to the effect of clause 17. Here I am referring particularly to the prohibition of benefits when a claimant or other beneficiary is not in Canada. Are there any circumstances in which unemployment benefits can be paid to somebody who is not in Canada? In other words, are there exceptions under section 31 of the act?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Yes, there are federal government employees in the armed forces and so on. There are also some reciprocal agreement arrangements. It involves rather a small number, but there are some of that nature.

Senator Grosart: Can a person be unemployed in the armed forces?

Hon. Mr. Andras: It applies more to sickness and maternity.

The Chairman: Shall clause 17 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 18.

Senator Grosart: This is the clause that provides that the federal government can recover welfare payments advanced to claimants in the same way as provincial and municipal governments can recover them. My first question is this: Was this not provided for before? Have we lost the opportunity to recover some money here because it was not provided for? Secondly, what is the manner in which these advance payments are recovered? Thirdly, what is the nature and what are the circumstances in which advance payments are made from the unemployment insurance fund to those who subsequently become in receipt of welfare payments and are required to repay them?

Hon. Mr. Andras: It is the other way around, senator, if I may say so. It refers to welfare paid and recovered from entitled unemployment insurance benefits paid. We do have situations with native people in remote areas where other departments of the federal government, Indian Affairs particularly, or, of course, the Yukon and Northwest Territories welfare departments, which are not provincial and are of the same jurisdiction, make advances which, either because of an administrative delay or disputed claims, eventually are resolved in favour of the claimant. We are now ensuring that the federal government has the legal right to get that money back because there was some fuzziness in the previous act.

Senator Grosart: In other words, the recipients are using the expected unemployment insurance benefits as a receivable.

Hon. Mr. Andras: Yes, that is a good way to describe it.

The Chairman: Shall clause 18 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 19.

Senator Macdonald: In clause 19 we have the actual procedure for a person to apply for unemployment insurance. He has to do it at the office of the commission, which is the unemployment insurance office in that district. There, the claimant must fill out an application form. Is the unemployment insurance office the only place where he can get that form, and must he apply in person for it?

Hon. Mr. Andras: He can get it from post offices, when they are open, from Canada Manpower centres, and we have also made distributions to large employers where there is a layoff possibility or a history of layoffs and that sort of thing.

Senator Macdonald: I know that should be so, but I must inform the minister that it is not always the case.

Hon. Mr. Andras: Well, senator, I would be very keen, as I have said in the other place, to look after any specific cases that might come to our attention. I say this although I know that the commission is doing its best to prevent this type of occurrence.

The Chairman: Shall clause 19 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Clause 20.

Senator Grosart: Mr. Chairman, since the appeal procedure is provided for here in subclause (2), would the minister give us a general overview of the rights of a claimant to appeal first-round decisions in respect of unemployment?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Any claimant who disagrees with the decision of the commission has a right of appeal with regard to payment of his or her benefits, or any decision about qualifications under the measures that we have given some attention to in the last few minutes, or disentanglements, or decisions about requirements to pay back overpayments. They are appealable in the informal administrative sense, first to the insurance officer of the commission at the office where he is dealing and where his claim file is located. Many of these are adjusted at that stage, where there has been a lack of information, or where there has been bad information or misinterpretation and the clarification indicates to the insurance officer that it is in order. The formal appeal is against the decision of the commission at that stage where they can appeal to the board of referees. We have vastly expanded the number of boards of referees throughout Canada because of the vast expansion of our clientele, as it were, or eligible people, since 1971, and because of the increased unemployment levels. I cannot give you the figures offhand, but I believe they have more or less doubled during the last two or three years, and we have entered into a considerable training program for members and chairmen of boards of referees.

● (1830)

A board of referees consists of three members. One is selected by the employee organizations in the area, recommended usually by the unions; he is a representative of the employee in that sense. One is the representative of the employers, and the employer organizations usually recommend someone. The chairman is selected as a neutral by us, through recommendations to the commission and, finally, by order in council. We check on candidates, and particularly prospective chairmen, regarding the possibility of conflict of interest in these types of proceedings, and the system is working reasonably well now. If there is a minority dissent from a decision of a board of referees to deny an appeal, one of the three members saying that the appeal should be allowed, the appellant may take it further, to the umpire, who is a judge of the Federal Court. If, in a majority decision or a unanimous decision of a board of referees, the appellant still feels the decision to be incorrect, he can appeal again to the chairman of the board of referees. Only on the recommendation of the chairman, where there has been a unanimous report, can he take it to the umpire. Exceptions are the commission itself, which can take anything to the umpire, and employee and employer organizations. They can appeal against a unanimous decision of the board of referees to the umpire. I tell you quite frankly that my officers are concerned about the missing one there. The individual who is not represented by a union or an employer organization, or something of that nature, does not have the same access. That is one of the areas I will consider when we are looking at improving the appeal system, but that will not require amendment of the act.

[Hon. Mr. Andras.]

Senator Grosart: Would the minister give a summary indication of the incidence or frequency of appeals?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Yes, we have the figures relating to appeals upheld and appeals rejected. In round figures, there were approximately 500,000 disentanglements to qualification. Please be careful on that, however, because the disqualification may be for a week, a month and so on. There were approximately 40,000 appeals to the board of referees, and approximately 14 to 15 per cent of those appeals were upheld, the remainder being rejected. This indicates that the commission decision had been correct in the first place. Four hundred of the residual appeals continued to higher appeal, which is to the umpire or the Federal Court.

The Chairman: Shall clause 20 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 21 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 22 carry?

Senator Grosart: Mr. Chairman, may I ask if the minister would indicate to us the anticipated numbers of the bench mark as of January 1?

Hon. Mr. Andras: The unemployment rate is the determinant of the eight-year rolling average. It dates to June 30 of each year, which allows six months to make the calculation. In 1976 it will be 5.6 per cent.

The Chairman: Shall clause 22 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 23 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 24 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 25 carry?

Senator Macdonald: I have one question in connection with the penalty section of clause 25, that a person is liable to a penalty of 10 per cent of the amount that he failed to remit. Does that mean a maximum of 10 per cent, or can it be any percentage up to 10 per cent?

Hon. Mr. Andras: Yes, this change was made, senator, to make it consistent with the Income Tax Act, at the request of the Department of National Revenue. It is the maximum when that is the set rate, as it will be as a result of this legislation.

The Chairman: Shall clause 25 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 26 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 27 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 28 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 29 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 30 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 31 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 32 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 33 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 34 carry?

Senator Grosart: Mr. Chairman, could I ask the minister to explain two matters? One is the question of the second social insurance number. I am not clear as to its purpose or how it will work. Secondly, it has been said that the national identification card which may arise from this—which I believe is called SIN, is it not?—will mean that no person will be able to get a job without national identification. Will this be the result, as has been said, of clause 34?

Hon. Mr. Andras: That takes it a little further, senator, than I would be prepared to agree with you at the moment. First of all, this came about as a result of our recognition of instances in which cards have been lost and found by a bad actor or have been stolen by a thief and used for identification in rolling up bills and other expenditures which have accumulated to the detriment of an innocent person. As soon as the bill receives royal assent, I hope to give the first new social insurance number to a young chap by the name of Lapke, in Mr. Kempling's riding, who suffered for years because the police came round to get him all the time because this awful person who stole his card was doing terrible things. However, under the present act we have no power to cancel one number and issue a new one. This, obviously, was unintended and must be corrected. To go beyond that, senator, to the question: yes, social insurance numbers are needed when applying for employment. We have further authority, which we intend to implement before very long, to require proof of identity for issuance of social insurance numbers. Although the card was never intended to be an identifier, it has de facto become so due to requirements, even of other departments of the federal government. So we might as well face up to it and clean it up.

Senator Grosart: Will you, Mr. Minister, still call it SIN—"sin"?

Hon. Mr. Andras: There seems to be a certain interesting connotation there. It would be rather dull in this country if we rescinded that description of the card. We are not in the business of licensing sin, but we will continue to issue the cards.

● (1840)

The Chairman: Shall clause 34 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 35 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 36 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 37 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall clause 38 carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall the title of the bill, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, carry?

Hon. Senators: Carried.

The Chairman: Shall I report the bill without amendment?

Senator Macdonald: On division.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, I am sure we all appreciate very much the courtesy shown this chamber by the Minister of Manpower and Immigration, who so eloquently described the features of the measure before us. As the Deputy Leader of the Opposition observed last night, this is a tradition which could well become enshrined in this chamber.

Hon. Mr. Andras: I very much appreciated the opportunity. I might say sincerely that I hope to have a drink one of these days with Senator Forsey. I probably will never convince him, but I so much respect his opinions that I really need another opportunity to discuss the matter with him. May I take the opportunity to explain that I have with me two officials from the commission: Mr. J. W. Douglas, Director of Legal Services, and Mr. L. E. St. Laurent, Deputy Executive Director of Policy Planning. They have been of great help to us today.

Senator Grosart: Mr. Chairman, before the minister leaves, may I say that I welcomed his appearance here and I would be derelict in my duty, and certainly not expressing my sentiments, if I were not to say that I welcome the fact that he did come.

Senator Forsey: I would like to add my thanks. I think I may have had something to do with the minister's coming here. I appreciate very much the excellent presentation he has given us. I am afraid his hopes of converting me over a drink are rather poor. I am a fourth generation teetotaler.

[Translation]

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): Honourable senators, with your permission I shall point out that today we witnessed a beautiful instance of democracy at work. A minister who did not have to come, who did not have to speak, chose to appear in front of us. He is a young man and I would like to pay tribute to his talent, integrity and knowledge of things. It is not easy to know things yet we were able to observe someone who knows them in depth. There is nothing better in life than to know things in depth, and today we have observed a minister and since it is not the first time—if you are finished, gentlemen, may I proceed? I won't be long.

We had a minister that I do not know, have never seen and no one can claim he is a friend of mine, but I admired him and I would like to express my admiration for him.

[English]

The Hon. the Speaker: The sitting is resumed.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Senator Macnaughton: Madam Speaker, the Committee of the Whole, to which was referred Bill C-69, to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, has considered the said bill and has the honour to report the same, without amendment, on division.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Molgat: With leave, now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted, honourable senators?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

The Hon. the Speaker: It is moved by the Honourable Senator Molgat, seconded by the Honourable Senator Petten, that this bill be now read the third time. Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, it is clear now, from what we have heard in committee, that the clauses I object to would account for $150 million of the total $170 million saved. This is even worse than I thought. Almost 90 per cent of the saving will fall on the poor, and therefore in spite of the numerous good features of the bill I feel compelled to vote against third reading.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, for the record it should be pointed out that there are other measures in other areas which make that figure of a net of $150 million or $130 million quoted by Senator Forsey not totally accurate and not totally indicative of this government's deep concern for the less privileged in our society.

Senator Forsey: There might also be extra expenditures as a result of these.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): Honourable senators, if you will permit me to speak—the honourable senator can understand French very well.

[Translation]

If he were in power, if power were in his hands, could he do any better than what the government proposes?

[Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière).]

Senator Forsey: In answer to Senator Fournier's question, I can say that I would delete those clauses. The rest of the bill is all right.

[English]

The Hon. the Speaker: Is it your pleasure, honourable senators, to adopt the motion?

Hon. Senators: On division.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed, on division.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES IMPROVEMENT BILL

THIRD READING

Senator Barrow moved third reading of Bill C-75, to increase the rate of return on Government Annuity contracts, to increase their flexibility and to discontinue future sales thereof.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

● (1850)

STATUTE LAW (SUPERANNUATION) AMENDMENT ACT, 1975

BILL TO AMEND—FIRST READING

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that a message had been received from the House of Commons with Bill C-52, to amend the Public Service Superannuation Act, the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act, the Defence Services Pension Continuation Act, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Superannuation Act, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Pension Continuation Act, the Diplomatic Service (Special) Superannuation Act, the Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act, the Governor General's Retiring Annuity Act, the Judges Act, the Tax Review Board Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act.

Bill read first time.

SECOND READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the second time?

Senator Stanbury: With leave, now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Is leave granted?

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, I am not rising to refuse leave, but to suggest that we have a break before proceeding further, even if it is only for 10 or 15 minutes.

Senator Perrault: If it is the wish of the house, we could adjourn during pleasure to the call of the bell in approximately 15 minutes, if that will provide some immediate relief for honourable senators.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 7 p.m. the sitting was resumed.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, is leave granted to proceed with second reading of Bill C-52 now?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Hon. Richard J. Stanbury: Honourable senators, you have heard the long list of acts which are amended by this bill. There are eleven acts affected by the bill. The origin, however, comes from the recommendation of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, relating to the equality between males and females in the various government plans and the need for the amendments. It is not only necessary to deal with that particular matter, but there were a number of other matters which were pointed out when this recommendation was put before the advisory committee on the Public Service Superannuation Act and the National Joint Council.

As a result, we now have a long bill of some 108 sections which are really dealing with a relatively small number of amendments, but which have to be put into each of the eleven acts.

The major proposals, however, arise from the recommendation of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women and relate to that equalization of the status between males and females under the government's own pension plans.

The most noticeable effects of these proposed amendments will occur in those plans where there was a difference in the benefits available to female employees who, in turn, contributed a lower percentage of their salaries to the pension funds than did their male counterparts. Thus, on the contribution side, under the three Superannuation Acts for the civilian Public Service, the Canadian Forces and the RCMP, the rate for female employees will increase from a basic rate of 5 per cent to 6.5 per cent. This will make a total rate of 7 per cent of salary for both male and female members when one includes the one-half of 1 per cent contributed towards the cost of pension increases under the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act and the amounts contributed to the Canada or Quebec Pension Plans.

There are also amendments on the benefit side, with the major change being the provision of widowers' benefits on the deaths of female members.

New provisions are being introduced to increase the minimum benefits payable under these plans. This will apply to all members but will be of particular benefit to single employees and to those who are not entitled to an annuity benefit on termination of employment.

In the case of those ceasing to be employed, after the legislation receives royal assent, the minimum benefit will be the greater of either a return of contributions with interest at 4 per cent from December 31 of 1973 and of each subsequent calendar year to December 31 of the year preceding cessation of employment; or an amount equal to five years of annuity payments at the initial level which would have been payable to the employee if he qualified for an annuity on ceasing to be employed.

The bill contains amendments concerning the present restrictions which are applied to payment of certain pensions to pensioners under one plan, who became members under a different pension plan in some other service of the Government of Canada. These restrictions have been the subject of continuing protest over the years. I know that senators on all sides are pleased to have this anomaly cleared up.

In response to various representations, the government undertook to conduct a complete review of the principles which should govern the pension plans for which it is responsible. As a result of this study the government has concluded that one of the basic principles under these pension plans should be that a person appointed to a position under a different plan should not forego his pension entitlement.

Another principle, which was confirmed by this study as still being appropriate, was that provisions of pension plans may vary for groups within the federal service. As a result, amendments are being introduced in the various acts where a restriction exists to permit a pensioner who is re-employed to receive his or her pension, unless he or she again becomes subject to the same pension plan under which that pension was paid.

Provisions are also included to permit the transfer of pension credits from one government plan to another in certain situations where such transfer provisions do not already exist.

Those are the principal amendments of broadest application to several of these acts. In addition, there are numerous amendments consequential upon new provisions in other legislation, designed to remove anomalies in the interest of greater consistency, dealing with problem cases and a variety of matters which have arisen in the course of administering the various acts to which this bill applies.

The amendments to the bill proposed by the Special Joint Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service—there were quite a number of these which you will find throughout the bill—and approved by the House of Commons were directed primarily to points of clarification and other amendments of a consequential nature.

The later amendments, which were included in the bill as a result of discussion in that committee, would extend the provisions of the Public Service Superannuation Act to the Parliamentary Centre for Foreign Affairs and Foreign Trade and would extend the life insurance provisions under the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act to members of the reserve force, such as those who are attached to regular force units serving in the Middle East.

The definition of "salary" under the Public Service Superannuation Act would be clarified and power would be given to the Governor in Council, in the case of Governor in Council appointees, and to the Treasury Board in other cases, to guarantee that a person's prospective pension will not be lower as a result of continuing in employment beyond the end of December in a year, thus losing the benefit of the pension indexing based on increases in the consumer price index.

This is a very brief and rapid summary of the bill which, as I say, contains some 108 clauses. There is much repetition in the bill because it is doing the same thing, generally speaking, to eleven different acts.

In view of the detailed consideration which has already been given to this bill in the Special Joint Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, of which a number of senators, including myself, have been members, it is now hoped that it will be possible for us to have second reading and subsequent passage of this bill.

I recommend that second reading be given this bill.

Hon. Rhéal Bélisle: Honourable senators, may I be permitted to express to Senator Stanbury our approval and thanks for the expert way, at this late date, in which he has presented this very important piece of legislation.

Just a little less than six months ago I spoke on another bill, the Statute Law (Status of Women) Amendment Bill, 1974, and like the bill before us today it had as a primary objective the equalization of the rights and responsibilities of men and women. At that earlier time I said:

We have before us an omnibus bill designed to correct certain inequities between men and women in those legislative and policy areas over which the federal government has control. It is fitting that in International Women's Year, which has for its theme equality, development and peace, the government should adjust acts in order that the sexes be not treated differently. I find I must agree, however, with my Liberal opponent in the other place, that the Statute Law (Status of Women) Amendment Act, 1974 "would have been good legislation in 1954." In 1974, it is certainly no earth-shattering contribution to the cause of female equality.

● (1910)

The same may be said of the bill before us. Nevertheless, it is fitting that this house should end its 1975 sittings discussing a bill which, whatever its limitations, does mark another advance in the implementation of the recommendations of the 1970 status of women report.

The objective of equality has been accomplished by adding to the acts a new section which asserts that male and female contributors enjoy equality of status and equal rights and obligations under the various acts. All of us, I am sure, welcome this addition as well as its interpretative subsection, which explains that any expression that imports a male person may be read and construed to import a female person and that any expression that imports a female person may be read and construed to import a male person, unless the provision of the act in which such an expression occurs expressly excludes this interpretation. While these insertions and the other changes flowing from them no doubt meet the needs of equality from a legal standpoint, they are nonetheless merely a gloss on a series of acts the wording of which suggests that it is men who will work and build up their contributions to the superannuation accounts, while it is women who will benefit as their survivors, and that it is men, not women, who will be prime ministers and governors general.

I fully realize that the task of completely redrafting these acts would have been prohibitive, delaying still further their presentation to and adoption by Parliament, and that the time of government officials is better spent studying ways and means of solving problems of more practical interest to women—ways and means of enabling homemakers to participate in the Canada Pension Plan or ways and means of providing more and better daycare facilities, for example. But it should have been possible to redraft at least the Governor General's Retiring Annuity Act and those sections of the Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act dealing with the Prime Minister to show, in an unequivocal way, that men and women are regarded as being equally likely to hold these offices. This may appear to honourable senators to be an insignificant criticism of the bill before us, but to a group subjected to discrimination and taught not to aspire to certain types of employment and offices, such a gesture would have been of great symbolic value; it would have had an impact not soon forgotten by either men or women. The struggle to advance the cause of equality is a struggle not only to have equality under the law but to eliminate old stereotypes which stand in the way of progress.

There is another general alteration to the relevant act that will substantially liberalize the conditions under which common-law spouses can receive survivor's benefits. At present, a woman must prove that she had lived with a contributor for at least the seven years immediately prior to his death, that she had been maintained by him for a "number of years," and that she had been publicly represented as his wife, before she can be deemed, for benefit purposes, to have been married to him. The proposed amendment at least removes the humiliating necessity of proving maintenance; it also reduces the seven-year period to a period of three years.

Personally, I have reservations about these amendments, particularly when I contrast this liberality toward concubinage with the stingy attitude of the legislation toward the married estate. These amendments offer no change in the situation by which, should a pensioner marry after retirement, the spouse will not be entitled to any survivor's benefit whatsoever. According to Mr. Whitehouse, the representative of the Federal Superannuates National Association, who testified before the joint committee on this bill, there are at least 700 or 800 public service widows across Canada, the great majority of whom were married to pensioners for 15 to 20 years before their husbands died, who are not receiving anything from the superannuation account. Being in receipt of no survivor's benefit, these widows at least have nothing to lose by remarriage. The recipient of a survivor's allowance, however, loses the allowance on remarriage and so would seem to face a moral dilemma: to refuse to marry, and in so doing place a greater value on a degree of financial independence than on affection; to remarry, and thus lose this independence; or to keep the allowance, but live in a common-law relationship. This act seems to favour the latter relationship.

The bill provides for interest after 1974 on a return of contributions at the general rate of 4 per cent per annum. I have not been able to do more than scan the debates on the bill in the other place and the proceedings in the joint committee, but it seems to me that no one has ever either questioned or explained why the government in effect should be able forcibly to borrow large sums of money, sometimes for a period of several years, from its employees at an interest rate of just 4 per cent. According to testimony before the committee, the average interest paid on the superannuation accounts is just over 7 per cent while new money brings close to 9.5 per cent.

[Senator Stanbury.]

Perhaps there is a connection between what seems to be a scandalously low rate of interest paid on a return of contributions and the fact that these short-term public service employees, and members of Parliament who serve less than four years, have no pressure group to represent their interests. The federal superannuates and the Canadian Forces long-service pensioners were ably represented before the joint committee by Mr. Whitehouse and Mr. Nadon respectively, while Mr. McGarry pressed for recognition of the special needs of the letter carriers union. Members of Parliament are also quick to support almost any suggestion that pension benefits be improved. I suspect that the government's short-service employees are being asked to help finance benefits for which they will not qualify, and I suspect that if I were to inquire I would be told that to return contributions at a reasonable rate of interest—for example, the rate of bank interest compounded or the rate of interest at which the government sells its savings bonds—would render the superannuation accounts actuarially unsound, necessitating greater contributions from both government and employees.

● (1920)

I do not deny that a reasonable portion of the government's contribution may have to be withheld to cover the administrative costs of the various superannuation plans and to cover certain actuarial contingencies; but what reason is there to continue to deny the short-service employee any portion of the government contribution whatsoever? This practice of returning contributions at a very low rate of interest combined with the refusal to yield up any portion of the employer's contribution discriminates most against young workers in general, because they are more likely to change jobs a few times before settling down, and against young women in particular because many of them will still interrupt their careers as a consequence of marriage or child rearing.

In concluding, honourable senators, I would like to mention one change that I welcome, and one injustice that has been left unchanged. I was pleased to see that the government has seen fit to repeal the present section 32 of the Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act, which provided that a former senator's or member of Parliament's pension allowance would be discontinued, not only for any period during which that person was a senator or member of the other place, but also for any period during which any office or position was held, directly or indirectly, under Her Majesty in right of Canada. They could nevertheless serve Her Majesty in right of one of the provinces. The only disability retained in the new section 32 will provide that a pension will be discontinued for the whole of any month in which a recipient is a senator or a member of the other place.

My final observation, honourable senators, deals with a matter that concerns me personally, but which nevertheless is, in my opinion, both an obvious defect in the bill before us and an example of what appears to be blatant discrimination against those senators who were summoned before 1965. I refer to the fact that widows of senators who were appointed before 1965 are entitled to a pension equal to only one-third of the senator's pension, whereas the widows of other members are entitled to pensions of between 50 and 60 per cent.

Senator Choquette: And widows of judges.

Senator Bélisle: And those of judges. Just because there are only 31 of us, and we are not a pressure group, we are put aside.

Under this one act the pension provisions of the Governor General, lieutenant governors, the Prime Minister, the police, widows, "concubinage", and everybody else are to be amended, but the widows of the 31 senators that I refer to will not be permitted to qualify for the 50 or 60 per cent. Why has this not been attended to?

As well as providing for equality between men and women who participate in government-managed pension plans, Bill C-52 also alters the contributions and benefits of certain categories of public officials, and most notably the Prime Minister, federal judges, the Governor General, lieutenant governors, members of the armed forces, and federal government employees, in order to bring them closer to the norm that generally prevails throughout the civil service. The principle embodied in these amendments seems to be that whether the individual contributor is a messenger or a prime minister or a senator, each shall contribute roughly the same percentage of his salary, and the widows or widowers shall receive roughly the same proportion of the contributor's pension as a survivor's benefit. It is unjust that there should be this small group of senators, numbering only 31, who began paying into the fund 10 years ago, whose widows will receive only $2,666 by way of pension, whereas in the case of everyone else it is either 50 or 60 per cent.

Honourable senators, this bill has been before the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons on Employer-Employee Relations, and I do not see any need to refer it to committee now. My suggestion would not move the government anyway. I think the bill should be dealt with now.

Hon. Lionel Choquette: Honourable senators, I had not intended to speak on this matter, but Senator Belisle has just put words right into my mouth in connection with pensions of widows of senators who were appointed before 1965.

As we all know, there are three categories of senator in this chamber. There are those who were appointed before 1965, and who have intimated by letter, for what it is worth, that if and when they reach the age of 75 they will retire. This was done in order to entitle the widow, the day after the letter was written, to a pension which was insignificant since it would be only one-third of the $8,000 pension of the senator, which would amount to $2,666 per year. The second category is that of those appointed after 1965 and who were never members of Parliament. The third category is that of senators appointed after having served in the other place. The two last categories are in a special class because some of them, the members of Parliament, have contributed to a pension fund from which they will derive some benefit.

The figures given by Senator Belisle, of course, were based on the $8,000 pension that senators would have received had they retired. I understand that the pension of senators will be raised by the provisions of this bill to $16,000 a year. It would have been the normal and advisable thing to do to give these senators' widows one-half of $16,000, though even on $8,000 you cannot go very far these days. What will the widows of these senators get, however? Five thousand three hundred dollars.

This is perhaps a long preamble, but my question to the sponsor of the bill is this: Did the sponsor work on this project at all? Did he make any representations with regard to the category of senators and their widows to which I refer, and is there any plausible reason for this legislation not providing for the granting of half the pension of deceased senators to their widows?

Senator Forsey: Honourable senators, may I ask the sponsor of the bill one question? Will the anti-inflation program have any effect on payments under this legislation? I realize that most of them are some distance in the future, but there might be some falling due within the period of the anti-inflation program, and I wonder if he could enlighten me on that subject.

Senator Stanbury: Honourable senators, I am not sure that I can adequately answer all of the questions that have been asked, but I will try.

I appreciate Senator Bélisle's concern as to whether the bill really covers the problem of the equality of males and females in a rather general sense, and that many of the acts still contain wording which has not been repaired from this point of view. This matter was drawn to the attention of the minister during discussion of the bill in committee. But, as Senator Bélisle has indicated, the amount of work involved in making all the revisions to these eleven acts all at once was quite obvious, and to make a change in the specific wording in each case would have been terribly time-consuming and perhaps wasteful. In the end the decision was made to do it on a general basis, and to leave until each individual act was being dealt with on its own the job of changing its wording to adapt it properly to the provisions of this bill. It may, however, be of interest to honourable senators, and perhaps significant of the government's real interest in the substance of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, that it was in fact a woman from the Department of Justice who was giving us advice on this particular bill.

● (1930)

The next question which was asked dealt with what one member of the committee called the "gold digger's clause" and had to do with the question of the time during which a couple should be living together before the benefits would become available to the widow. I think it is important to recognize that the government has under major review the whole question of the improvement of the widow's position with respect to all of these pensions in relationship to the Canadian human rights legislation which has already had first reading in the other place and is now under thorough review.

Coming to the question of the widow's rights in the pension legislation, despite the fact that we think of the present provisions in terms of discrimination against widows and women in general, the fact is that the repairing of those provisions and benefits will discriminate very substantially against single members of the public service, and therefore the whole matter has been referred for consideration in relation to the human rights legislation and it is hope of the government that this matter will be reviewed during the course of the next session, as this legislation comes forward.

[Senator Choquette.]

I am not sure that I have an adequate answer to the question as to why 4 per cent instead of a higher percentage. I should point out, however, that it is not simply 4 per cent; it is the contributions plus the 4 per cent, and it is the greater of the return of the contributions with interest at 4 per cent or an amount equal to five years of annuity payments at the initial level, which would have been payable to the employee if he had qualified for an annuity on ceasing to be employed.

Senator Bélisle: Will you permit a question at this time? I think you are referring to the five-year more element, but I was referring to the four-year less element concerning those employees who cannot qualify because they have not made five years' contributions. If they have not contributed for five years, then my information is that their money is returned only at 4 per cent interest and without the employer's contribution. Are we talking about the same thing?

Senator Stanbury: I think we are, but in any event that is the figure we have been discussing, and I am not aware of any discussion in committee or out of committee that has changed consideration of that figure. I may be able to get a better answer for you, Senator Bélisle, and I shall try to do so.

The other question which Senator Bélisle raised, and it is one which concerns all of us as senators, has to do with the benefit payable to widows of senators appointed before 1965. The only thing I can do is draw your attention to the earlier discussions we had in connection with Bill C-52, and point out that the pension of a prospective widow of a life senator increases immediately by 50 per cent, from $2,667 to $4,000 on the passage of this bill, C-52, and it doubles, to $5,333 with the sessional indemnity now at $24,000. The further increase, to $8,000, which has been discussed would be three times the level of the present pension, and it has not been agreed that it would be possible to make that kind of adjustment at the present time. The increases in widow's pensions of term senators and members of the House of Commons occur at a very much slower rate than that. I appreciate that that may not be an entirely satisfactory answer, in the sense that we are all appreciative of the hardships that may be involved, but that is the best answer I am able to give at this time.

To deal with Senator Choquette's question, which he put in more personal terms, in that he asked as to whether I had made personal representations in that matter, the fact is that it was not necessary for me to make representations because the representations were capably made by other senators who are members of the committee. The question was thoroughly discussed in committee and representations on the subject were very well put there.

Senator Choquette: Is there any reason why the wives of these same senators that you mentioned would not be on an equal footing with the wives of ordinary civil servants? The ordinary civil servant, as you know, if the law has not changed, gets two-thirds of his salary on retirement, and his widow gets half of that two-thirds. Why should there be that much difference between the widow of a life senator and the widow of an ordinary civil servant?

Senator Stanbury: I think the answer is that there is a very different background both on the question of contributions and the whole question of buildup of these benefits. While I think we would all be happy to agree that the situation is not satisfactory, the fact is that the benefits are doubled compared with what they were before.

The answer I have been given with respect to the 4 per cent question is that the 4 per cent interest was recommended by the advisory committee on the Superannuation Act, half of whose members represent the unions. This rate of return is at the usual level. The purpose of the pension plan is to provide annuities, not interest on the savings account. In other words, it is regarded in pension terms as being an adequate and usual recompense, even though it may not be so regarded in terms of savings accounts and other types of investment savings. The answer to Senator Forsey's question on the application of the anti-inflation legislation is that there is already before the House of Commons Bill C-81, which will have the effect of preventing anyone from getting more than the $2,400 as a result of last year's inflation under this act. It is dealt with in a different bill which has been put over until January for passage.

● (1940)

Motion agreed to and bill read second time.

THIRD READING

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, when shall this bill be read the third time?

Senator Stanbury: With leave, honourable senators, I move that it be read the third time now.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, you have heard the motion. Is there unanimous consent?

Hon. Senators: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and bill read third time and passed.

ROYAL ASSENT

NOTICE

The Hon. the Speaker informed the Senate that the following communication had been received:

Government House
Ottawa

December 20, 1975

Madam,

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable Wishart F. Spence, O.B.E., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 20th day of December at 8 p.m. for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain bills.

I have the honour to be,
Madam,
Your obedient servant,
Edmond Joly de Lotbinière
Administrative Secretary to the Governor General.

The Honourable

The Speaker of the Senate,
Ottawa.

ADJOURNMENT

Leave having been given to revert to Notices of Motions:

Senator Langlois: Honourable senators, I move, seconded by the Honourable Senator Perrault, with leave of the Senate and notwithstanding rule 45(1)(g), that when the Senate adjourns today it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, February 3, 1976, at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Honourable senators, before the question is put, I would like to add that this motion is made with the customary proviso that the Senate could be recalled earlier than February 3 if any legislation is received from the other place, which will be resuming its work one week before us.

Senator Grosart: Honourable senators, also before the motion is put, and in spirit of Christmas, may I thank the Leader of the Government for what I take to be his most generous response to the request I made for the continuation of a certain courtesy with respect to the Scroll. I say generous because not only has he provided the Opposition with the Scroll, but has done it three times now as events necessitated new Scrolls. I can think of no more generous response to my request than that.

Senator Langlois: You are spoiled.

Senator Grosart: Also in the spirit of the season, may I take this opportunity to thank and congratulate Her Honour on the wonderful way in which she has presided over our affairs, both in the chamber and outside. We are all such continual beneficiaries of her charm and great ability as a hostess that it is a pleasure to take this occasion once a year and, I hope, more often, to convey our feelings from this group to her. I extend our best wishes, of course, to our colleagues opposite, to the right and to the left and, in particular, to the Leader of the Government, the deputy leader, the whip and the others who guide our affairs here in various capacities from that side.

Senator Langlois: What about those behind you?

Senator Grosart: All of those behind me are in the group on whose behalf I extend these good wishes.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear.

Senator Grosart: Also, of course, to the Clerk of the Parliaments and his very able assistant, to Black Rod, the Acting Black Rod and other officials who look after us so well here, to the pages, male and female, and to all those who do so well by us in our many requirements here.

Senator Fournier (de Lanaudière): You do not always speak in that manner.

Senator Grosart: Senator Fournier says that I do not always speak this way. There may have been occasions on which I made some objections, but I assure the house that I share the sentiments of all honourable senators in connection with the loyalty and efficiency with which we are served here by those whom we regard as our staff.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Grosart: A special word, of course, for the official reporters. I have said it before and I say it again, that their great contribution as far as I am concerned, is to make what may be heard here read much better when it comes to me in the "blues". With that, honourable senators, to all a Merry Christmas, a Happy New Year and, for Senator Fournier, Joyeux Noël et Bonne Année.

Senator Perrault: Honourable senators, at this particular point in the proceedings, if the Honourable Deputy Leader of the Opposition had moved a motion giving official expression to the fine sentiments he expressed, I would have cheerfully seconded it, and I am sure that the vote would have passed unanimously. As well, I appreciate very much that the honourable senator has acknowledged the situation of this afternoon wherein he was provided with three copies of the "controversial" Scroll. I want you to know, however, honourable senators, that it will not be the practice of the government to provide all documentation in triplicate in the future, as is the reported custom of some government departments. Beyond practical considerations is the fact that I think this would violate the guidelines of the Anti-Inflation Board, and we want to keep the activities of this chamber very much within those guidelines. However, we are gratified that the deputy leader considers that his cup of documentation runneth over.

Honourable senators, may I take this occasion to not only thank the supporters of the government for their excellent work, cooperation and faithful attendance throughout the session thus far, but also to acknowledge the great contribution made here by supporters of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Hon. Senators: Hear, hear!

Senator Perrault: We are all aware that a successful chamber can only operate with cooperation, regardless of any differences we may have and the views we may hold on various pieces of legislation. It has even been the case in certain circumstances, as it was today, for supporters of the government to disagree with some of the legislation which is advanced; but that also is in the best tradition of the Senate.

I do not want to repeat all the well-expressed sentiments of the Deputy Leader of the Opposition, but I too want to thank Madam Speaker for her outstanding work, and all the personnel of the Senate, including those who report the proceedings of this assembly for our official record.

As for this Christmas season, as Tiny Tim would say, "God bless us every one!" It is hoped that we can have a very productive remainder of the session, and I am certain that the forthcoming session will be equally productive.

Motion agreed to.

The Hon. the Speaker: Honourable senators, following royal assent you are all invited to my chambers to attend a reception in honour of the Assistant Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, on the occasion of his retirement from the Senate.

The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

At 8.30 p.m. the sitting was resumed.
The Senate adjourned during pleasure.

ROYAL ASSENT

The Honourable Wishart F. Spence, O.B.E., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, having come and being seated at the foot of the Throne, and the House of Commons having been summoned, and being come with their Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to give Royal Assent to the following bills:

An Act to provide supplementary borrowing authority for public works and general purposes.

An Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971.

An Act to amend the Public Service Superannuation Act, the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act, the Defence Services Pension Continuation Act, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Superannuation Act, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Pension Continuation Act, the Diplomatic Service (Special) Superannuation Act, the Members of Parliament Retiring Allowances Act, the Governor General's Retiring Annuity Act, the Judges Act, the Tax Review Board Act and the Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act.

An Act to amend the National Housing Act and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation Act.

An Act to increase the rate of return on Government Annuity contracts, to increase their flexibility and to discontinue future sales thereof.

An Act to amend the Regional Development Incentives Act.

An Act to amend the Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing Act.

An Act to amend the Animal Contagious Diseases Act.

An Act to enable The Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company to amalgamate.

An Act to incorporate the Northland Bank.

The Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General: On behalf of His Excellency the Governor General, and his deputies, may I wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

The House of Commons withdrew.

The Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

The sitting of the Senate was resumed.

The Senate adjourned until Tuesday, February 3, 1976, at 8 p.m.

Abbreviations

| | |
|------------|--------------------------------|
| 1r, 2r, 3r | = First, second, third reading |
| amds | = amendments |
| com | = committee |
| div | = division |
| m | = motion |
| neg | = negated |
| ref | = referred |
| rep | = report |
| r.a. | = royal assent |

Abortion, 917

- France, 837
- Morgentaler, Dr. Henry, abortion charges, 1036, 1732, 1742-6, 1767-8
 - Admission of facts but denial of guilt, 1745, 1746
 - Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, survey results, 1767, 1774
 - Excerpts from notes of supreme court judges, 1773
 - Jury decision, reversal of court of appeal, 1767-8
 - Statement of Past President of Bar Association, 1773-4
- Priorities for government action, 121
- Removal from Criminal Code of item relating to abortion, 188, 838
- Status of Women News, statement issued by National Action Committee, 120-1
- Study of procedure for obtaining therapeutic abortions, question re committee on, 1428, 1624-5, 1639, 1654-5

Acadians, 18-19

- Bilingualism, 18-19
- Education, Royal Commission, Public Services and Provincial-Municipal Relations, Nova Scotia, 19
- Prominent Acadians, 18

Acts passed during the Session

PUBLIC ACTS

| Chapter | October 10, 1974 | Bill No. |
|--|--------------------------|-----------------|
| 1. West Coast Grain Handling Operations Act | | C-12 |
| | October 30, 1974 | |
| 2. Appropriation Act No. 3, 1974 | | C-31 |
| | November 27, 1974 | |
| 3. Army Benevolent Fund Act amendment | | C-17 |
| 4. Canada Pension Plan Act amendment | | C-22 |
| 5. Customs Act amendment | | S-4 |
| 6. Customs Tariff Act (No. 1) amendment | | C-27 |
| 7. Trust Companies Act and Loan Companies Act amendment | | S-7 |
| 8. War Veterans Allowance Act and Civilian War Pensions Allowances Act amendment | | C-4 |

Acts passed during the Session - *Continued*PUBLIC ACTS - Continued

| Chapter | | Bill No. |
|--|--------------------------|-----------------|
| | December 13, 1974 | |
| 9. Immigration Act amendment | | S-12 |
| 10. Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act amendment | | C-214 |
| 11. Alberta-British Columbia Boundary Act, 1974 | | S-13 |
| 12. Fire Losses Replacement Account Act amendment | | C-18 |
| | December 20, 1974 | |
| 13. Representation Act, 1974 | | C-36 |
| 14. Federal Business Development Bank Act | | C-14 |
| 15. Indian Oil and Gas Act | | C-15 |
| 16. Public Service Employment Act, Public Service Staff Relations Act, Public Service Superannuation Act, and Interpretation Act amendment | | C-38 |
| 17. Export Development Act amendment | | C-9 |
| 18. Supreme Court Act and Federal Court Act amendment | | S-2 |
| 19. Revision of references to Quebec Court of Queen's Bench Act | | S-16 |
| 20. Statute Revision Act | | S-3 |
| 21. Appropriation Act No. 4, 1974 | | C-42 |
| 22. Appropriation Act No. 5, 1974 | | C-45 |
| | February 27, 1975 | |
| 23. Customs Tariff Act (No. 2) amendment | | C-39 |
| 24. Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act amendment | | C-40 |
| 25. Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act amendment | | C-370 |
| | March 13, 1975 | |
| 26. Statute law relating to Income Tax Act amendment (No. 1) | | C-49 |
| 27. Canadian Wheat Board Act amendment | | S-6 |
| 28. Northwest Territories Representation Act | | C-51 |
| 29. Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Bruce-Grey) | | C-228 |
| 30. Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Lafontaine-Rosemount) | | C-229 |
| 31. Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act (Berthier-Maskinonge) | | C-365 |
| | March 24, 1975 | |
| 32. West Coast Ports Operations Act 1975 | | C-56 |
| 33. Canada Business Corporations Act | | C-29 |
| 34. Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act (No. 1) amendment | | C-10 |
| 35. Recognition of the Beaver (Castor canadensis) as a symbol of the sovereignty of Canada, an Act to provide for | | C-373 |
| | March 25, 1975 | |
| 36. Appropriation Act No. 1, 1975 | | C-54 |
| 37. Appropriation Act No. 2, 1975 | | C-55 |

Acts passed during the Session - *Continued*PUBLIC ACTS - Continued

| Chapter | | Bill No. |
|--|-----------------------|-----------------|
| | March 26, 1975 | |
| 38. National Housing Act amendment | | C-46 |
| | April 24, 1975 | |
| 39. St. Lawrence Ports Operations Act, 1975 | | C-59 |
| 40. Law Reform Commission Act amendment | | C-43 |
| 41. Railway Act amendment | | C-48 |
| 42. Civil Service Insurance Act amendment | | C-26 |
| 43. Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act repeal and Trade Marks Act (No. 1) amendment | | S-9 |
| | May 8, 1975 | |
| 44. Senate and House of Commons Act, Salaries Act, and Parliamentary Secretaries Act amendment..... | | C-44 |
| 45. Farm Credit Act amendment | | C-34 |
| 46. Fort-Falls Bridge Authority Act amendment | | C-367 |
| | June 19, 1975 | |
| 47. Petroleum Administration Act | | C-32 |
| 48. Judges Act and certain other Acts for related purposes and in respect of the reconstitution of the Supreme Courts of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island Act amendment | | C-47 |
| 49. Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission Act | | C-5 |
| 50. Cultural Property Export and Import Act | | C-33 |
| 51. Northern Canada Power Commission Act amendment | | C-13 |
| 52. Territorial Lands Act amendment | | S-20 |
| 53. British North America Acts, 1867 to 1975 Act amendment | | C-3 |
| 54. Two-Price Wheat Act..... | | C-19 |
| 55. Ocean Dumping Control Act..... | | C-37 |
| 56. Salaries Act amendment | | C-24 |
| 57. Appropriation Act No. 3, 1975 | | C-64 |
| 58. Old Age Security Act amendment | | C-62 |
| 59. Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce Act amendment | | S-15 |
| 60. Explosives Act amendment | | S-17 |
| | July 30, 1975 | |
| 61. Petro-Canada Act..... | | C-8 |
| 62. Excise Tax Act amendment..... | | C-66 |
| 63. Agricultural Stabilization Act amendment | | C-50 |
| 64. Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act (No. 2), amendment..... | | C-53 |
| 65. Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act 1972 amendment | | C-57 |
| 66. Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 Act amendment | | C-16 |
| 67. Public Service Staff Relations Act amendment..... | | C-70 |
| 68. Olympic (1976) Act amendment..... | | C-63 |
| 69. Privileges and Immunities (International Organization) Act amendment | | S-25 |
| 70. Customs Tariff Act (No. 3) amendment | | C-67 |

Acts passed during the Session - Continued

| PUBLIC ACTS - Continued | | Bill No. |
|---|--|----------|
| Chapter | | |
| December 2, 1975 | | |
| 71. Statute law relating to Income Tax Act amendment (No. 2) | | C-65 |
| 72. Environmental Contaminants Act..... | | C-25 |
| 73. Lieutenant Governors Superannuation Act | | C-23 |
| December 15, 1975 | | |
| 74. Appropriation Act No. 4, 1975 | | C-79 |
| 75. Anti-Inflation Act | | C-73 |
| 76. Combines Investigation Act and Bank Act amendment, and repeal of chapter 23, Statutes of Canada 1966-67..... | | C-2 |
| 77. Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation Act amendment | | S-27 |
| 78. King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up Act | | C-76 |
| December 20, 1975 | | |
| 79. Supplementary Borrowing Authority Act, 1975 | | C-80 |
| 80. Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 amendment | | C-69 |
| 81. Statute Law (Superannuation) Amendment Act, 1975 | | C-52 |
| 82. National Housing Act and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation Act amendment | | C-77 |
| 83. Government Annuities Improvement Act | | C-75 |
| 84. Regional Development Incentives Act amendment | | C-74 |
| 85. Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing Act amendment | | C-21 |
| 86. Animal Contagious Diseases Act amendment | | C-28 |
| February 25, 1976 | | |
| 87. Western Grain Stabilization Act..... | | C-41 |
| 88. Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation Act..... | | C-78 |
| March 30, 1976 | | |
| 89. Appropriation Act No. 1, 1976 | | C-90 |
| 90. Appropriation Act No. 2, 1976 | | C-91 |
| 91. Temporary Immigration Security Act | | C-85 |
| 92. Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) Amendment Act, 1976 | | C-86 |
| 93. Criminal Law Amendment Act (No. 1) 1975 | | C-71 |
| 94. Feeds Act amendment | | S-10 |
| May 5, 1976 | | |
| 95. Compensation for Former Prisoners of War Act..... | | C-92 |
| 96. Motor Vehicle Tire Safety Act | | S-8 |
| 97. Quarantine Act amendment | | S-31 |
| May 20, 1976 | | |
| 98. Anti-Inflation Act amendment | | C-89 |

Acts passed during the Session - *Concluded*PUBLIC ACTS - Concluded

| Chapter | Bill No. |
|---|-----------------|
| June 15, 1976 | |
| 99. Senate and House of Commons Act and Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act amendment with respect to escalation of certain payments thereunder | C-81 |
| 100. Aeronautics Act amendment | S-34 |
| 101. Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act repeal and Trade Marks Act (No. 2) amendment, an Act to amend | S-35 |
| June 29, 1976 | |
| 102. Appropriation Act No. 3, 1976 | C-93 |
| 103. Appropriation Act No. 4, 1976 | C-94 |
| 104. Canada and France, Canada and Belgium and Canada and Israel, an Act to implement conventions for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax between | S-32 |
| July 16, 1976 | |
| 105. Criminal Law Amendment Act (No. 2) 1976 | C-84 |
| 106. Income Tax Act amendment | C-58 |
| 107. Medical Care Act amendment | C-68 |
| 108. Citizenship Act | C-20 |
| 109. Canadian Wheat Board Act (No. 2) amendment | C-88 |
| LOCAL and PRIVATE ACTS | |
| December 13, 1974 | |
| 110. British Columbia Telephone Company Act amendment | S-11 |
| February 27, 1975 | |
| 111. International Air Transport Association Act | S-18 |
| July 30, 1975 | |
| 112. Royal Canadian Legion Act amendment | S-28 |
| 113. Marriage Law Exemption Act (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) Act | C-1001 |
| 114. Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank Act | S-24 |
| 115. Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. Act | S-26 |
| December 20, 1975 | |
| 116. Northland Bank Act | C-1002 |
| 117. Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company Act | S-29 |
| June 15, 1976 | |
| 118. United Grain Growers Limited Act | S-33 |

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne

Consideration of Speech from the Throne, 7; termination date of Address in reply, 13; engrossing and presenting of Address to His Excellency the Administrator of the Government of Canada, 188
 Motion for Address in reply, Hon. Joan Neiman, 14-18; seconded, Hon. Ernest G. Cotteau, 18-20

Speakers: Senators

| | |
|----------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| Bonnell, Lorne, 71-75 | Grosart, Allister, 21-26 |
| Burchill, G. Percival, 122 | Hicks, Henry D., 111-16 |
| Cameron, Donald, 37-45 | Laird, Keith, 144-6 |
| Carter, Chesley W., 116-20 | Macdonald, John M., 138-42 |
| Cotteau, Ernest G., 18-20 | Manning, Ernest C., 68-71 |
| Desruisseaux, Paul, 32-37 | Neiman, Joan, 14-18 |
| Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 184-8 | Norrie, Margaret, 120-2 |
| Flynn, Jacques, 180-4 | O'Leary, M. Grattan, 48-51 |
| Forsey, Eugene A., 51-58 | Perrault, Raymond J., 26-30 |
| Godfrey, John M., 58-59 | Rowe, Frederick William, 62-68, 71 |
| Graham, Alasdair, 174-7 | Williams, Guy, 142-4 |

Administration of justice

Allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1825-6, 1846-8, 1857-9, 1890-3, 1920-3, 1930-1

Administrator of the Government of Canada

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, P.C.

Royal Assent, 95, 220

Speech from the Throne at Opening of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, 2-7

Administrator of the Government of Canada, Deputy

Martland, Hon. Ronald

Opening of Parliament, 1-2

Spence, Hon. Wishart F.

Royal assent, 313-14

Aeronautics

Authorization re instituting of security measures, 2125

Canadian air carriers landing in foreign countries, 2125

Conventions, international, 2124, 2125, 2130-1

Costs of security measures, apportioning of, 2131

Enforcements of regulations by Canada, 2130

Inadequacy of security checks, 2131

Jurisdiction over aircraft landing in Canada, 2130

Landing of foreign air carriers without being subjected to security measures, 2125

Security measures for civil aircraft of foreign air carriers, 2124, 2131

Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 2125

Grosart, Allister, 2130-1

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2125

Thompson, Andrew, 2124-5, 2131-2

Aeronautics bill S-34. 1r, 2103; 2r, 2124-5, 2130-2; ref to com, 2132; rep without amdt, 2141; 3r, 2141; r.a., 2207

Aging

- Compulsory retirement and lack of consideration for talent potential, 186-7
- 'Salute to Senior Citizens Day', Toronto, excerpt from speech by Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, 186
- See following item*

Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report, 146-9, 320-3, 516-18

- Conferences on aging, provincial, 516-17
- Dilemmas of Modern Man, excerpt from speech of Dr. Nathan Shock, 516
- Employment of older citizens, 322
- Geriatric studies in faculties of medicine, 516
- Health departments, special research branches, 321
- National councils on social research and on aging, 322
- Old age security, reduction in age limit, 146
- Ontario Select Committee on Aging, 517, 518
- Population increase in respect of elderly persons, 516
- Recommendations accepted by government, 147; see Appendix to Debates of Oct. 22/74
- Senior Citizens' Week (US), 517; Ontario committee recommendations, 518
- Sociological aspects of aging, 516-17
- Suggestion that Hansard of Oct. 22/74 be sent to municipal and social agencies, 147

Speakers: Senators

- Carter, Chesley W., 320-3
- Croll, David A., 146-9
- Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 516-18

Agreements, conventions and treaties

- Air transport agreements, international, 1135
- Alaska Boundary Treaty, 578
- Canadian Airline Pilots, Memorandum of Understanding between Minister of Transport and Pilots Association, 2276-7
- Helsinki Declaration on Security and Co-operation in Europe, 1293, 1466, 1471-5, 1757-61
- Tax treaties or conventions, countries with which Canada has concluded agreements, 855, 867, 925
- Textiles, arrangement regarding international trade in, 947
- UNESCO Convention (Beirut), 515
- Visual and Auditory Materials of an Educational, Scientific and Cultural Character, international circulation of, 487

Agricultural products cooperative marketing

- Bank loans for initial payments, processing, selling costs, 1631
- Deficiencies in drafting of legislation, 1631
- Food production for foreign aid, 1630
- Marketing, 1630-1
- Ontario wheat producers problems, 1631
- Stabilization of agricultural industry, 1630
- Tobacco industry, government payment re, 1631

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 1631-2
- Buckwold, Sidney L., 1630-1
- Lang, Daniel, 1631
- Macdonald, John M., 1631

Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing bill C-21. 1r, 1617-18; 2r, 1630-2; 3r, 1640; r.a., 1712

Agricultural stabilization

Commodities covered by act, 1191
 Controlled production, 1193
 Cost of production formula, 1191
 Flexibility as to type of support program required, 1191
 Grain subsidies, 1191
 Instability of farm produce prices, 1190
 Production costs, 1191, 1192-3
 Production to alleviate world hunger, 1193
 Provincial and/or producer participation in program, 1191
 Regional stabilization plans, 1191
 Stop loss level, 1193
 Support price of 90% over 5 years, 1191
 Top loading, 1193-4

Speakers: Senators

Greene, John J., 1190-2
 Macdonald, John M., 1192-3

Agricultural Stabilization bill C-50. 1r, 1164; 2r, 1190-4; ref to com, 1194; rep without amdt, 1212; 3r, 1212; r.a., 1281

Agriculture

Agricultural products cooperative marketing, 1617-18, 1630-2, 1640
 Bank loans for initial payments, processing, selling costs, 1631
 Deficiencies in drafting of legislation, 1631
 Food production for foreign aid, 1630
 Marketing, 1630-1
 Ontario wheat producers problems, 1631
 Stabilization of agricultural industry, 1630
 Tobacco industry, government payment re, 1631
 Beef prices, 122
 Beef producers, federal assistance for, 240-1, 253
 Crop disasters, 84
 Crop insurance programs, 1227-9, 1468-71, 1622-3
 Excerpt from letter from Director of Crop Insurance Div. of Agricultural Canada, 1469-70
 Federal-provincial assistance, 1227
 Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, 1622
 Penalties for late payment of premiums, 1227, 1471
 Recommendations of Agriculture Committee, 1229
 Spot loss coverage, 1227-8, 1469, 1622-3
 Unit prices on selected crops, 1228-9, 1470-1
 Variations in provincial coverages, 1228, 1469
 Farm credit, 781, 788-91, 796-7, 803-07, 847-8, 863-5, 880-8, 889-93, 899
 Farm lands, need for conservation of, 121
 Feed grains, 47, 129-31, 157-9, 161-2, 584-6
 Freight assistance to Atlantic provinces, 1035
 Government policies, improvement in, 84-85
 Grain prices, 82, 84, 85
 New Brunswick
 Kent County, need for bilingualism in contacts with farmers, 122
 Small farms development program, applications unregistered at Moncton office, 1213
 Prairie grain advance payments, 583, 595-601, 614-15, 621-2, 684, 709, 731, 1136, 1156-7, 1166-8, 1180, 1198, 1281
 Quota restrictions, 85

Agriculture - Concluded

Small farms development program, number of loans approved for provinces, 1197-8, 1213
Two-price wheat, 900, 928-30, 942-4, 1088-90, 1095
Western Wheat Pools, 83
Wheat Board, 12, 106-07, 169-72, 255, 265-7, 656
Wheat Board annual report, 685

Agriculture, Standing Senate Committee

Expenses, 160, 348
Meetings during Senate sittings, 132, 243, 1022, 1045, 1196
Membership, motion for and question re, 591
Reports
 Agricultural Stabilization bill C-50, rep without amdt, 1212
 Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, rep without amdt, 1653
 Crop insurance programs, 1212, 1227-9, 1468-71, 1622-3
 Farm Credit bill C-34, rep with amdt and recommendations, 847-8, 863-5, 880-8, 889-92
 Feeds bill S-10, rep with amdts, 584-6
 Commons amdts ref to com, 1635-7; rep that Commons amdts be concurred in with one substitution, 1650-3, 1660-1
 Kent County, NB, 2308, 2334
 Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, rep without amdt, 684
 Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 2) C-53, rep without amdt, 1180
 Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 1088-90
 Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, rep without amdt, 1756
 Wheat Board bill (No. 1) S-6, rep without amdt, 255
 Wheat Board bill (No. 2) C-88, rep without amdt, 2356
Terms of reference, 161, 206
Western grain stabilization, com authorized to study subject matter of Bill C-41, 1615

Air Canada

Bilingualism of pilots, 2344-8, 2378-86
Service Fredericton-Ottawa, 854-5, 867
Service Ottawa-Halifax, 1479-80
Service St. John's-Ottawa, 506-08
See Air transport,
 Transportation.

Aircraft registry

Aircraft Convention, International Recognition of Rights in, 173
Central registry for property, federal-provincial conferences re, 1000
Conflict between creditors, 173-4
Constitutional problems in bill, 1000
Correspondence between Committee and provincial Attorneys General and certain federal depts., 990-7
Federal-provincial conferences, lack of, 1000-02
Notice of interest, 173
Property and civil rights of provinces, 1001
Rolling stock of railways, 1001
Seizure of aircraft, 173, 1000, 1001
Signatories to convention, 173
Transport and Communications Committee report, 980-1
Treaty-making authority of government, 1001

Aircraft registry - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Bourget, Maurice, 980-1, 990-7, 1002
 Connolly, John J., 1000-02
 Flynn, Jacques, 173-4, 981, 999-1000
 Giguere, Louis de G., 172-3
 Grosart, Allister, 174
 Langlois, Leopold, 1001

Aircraft Registry bill S-5. 1r, 12; 2r, 172-4; ref to com, 174; rep of com with recommendation that bill be not proceeded with, 980-1, 999-1002; bill removed from Order Paper, 1002

Aird, Hon. John B. (Resigned Nov. 28/74)

Tributes, 334-6

Air transport

Aircraft registry, 12, 172-4, 980-1, 999-1002
 Excise tax, 1268, 1271
 Flight delays due to labour dispute, 2062-3, 2168
 Fredericton-Ottawa, 854-5, 867
 International Air Transport Association, 265, 301-03, 373, 382, 581, 1122, 1135
 Official Languages Act, language rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2344-8, 2378-86
 Operating deficit, 1271
 St. John's-Ottawa, 506-08

Alaska Boundary Treaty of 1825, 100th anniversary of establishment of Canada's western boundaries, 578

Alberta-British Columbia boundary

Boundary commission, composition of, 219, 225
 Federal-provincial agreement on boundary lines, 225

Speakers: Senators

O'Leary, M. Grattan, 223-4
 Prowse, J. Harper, 219, 225

Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13. 1r, 136; 2r, 219, 223-5; 3r, 225; Commons amdt, 326, concurred in, 336-7; r.a., 397

Alberta parliamentarians, visit to Senate, 1087

Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26. 1r, 1022; 2r, 1053-4; ref to com, 1054; rep without amdt, 1074; 3r, 1091; Commons amdt concurred in, 1261; r.a., 1281

Amendments, observations or recommendations in committee reports regarding bills

Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 980-1, 999-1002
 Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 326, 336-7
 Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, 1261
 Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1573-81
 British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 325, 338
 Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, 666-71, 685, 712
 Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1571, 1589-95
 Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1367-9, 1405-06, 1407-08
 Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 848, 908-09
 Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29, 1355, 1372
 Farm Credit bill C-34, 847-8, 863-5, 880-8, 889-93, 899
 Feeds bill S-10, 584-6, 1635-7, 1650-3, 1660-1

Amendments, observations or recommendations in committee reports regarding bills - Concluded

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456, 969-71, 983, 1007-11, 1014-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9, 1066, 1074-80
 Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 348-9, 368
 Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1369
 Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 2058, 2066-8
 National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, 1057, 1062-3
 Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 840, 851, 1005
 Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 981-2, 1013, 1034
 Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill (No. 1) S-9, 240, 245
 Statute Law (Status of Women) bill C-16, 1122-3, 1136
 Territorial Lands bill S-20, 579
 Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 1088-90

Andras, Hon. Robert K., Minister of Manpower and Immigration

Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1695-1706
 Amdts to be proclaimed in Jan/76, 1700
 Appeal procedure, 1704; statistics on appeals, 1704
 Application form for unemployment insurance, 1704
 Claimants outside Canada, 1703
 Dependency reduction from 75% to 66⅔%, 1696, 1697
 Disentitlement, 1699
 Escalation in unemployment insurance payments, 1697
 Leaving employment voluntarily and refusal of suitable employment, 1702
 Minimum benefit, 1702
 Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1696, 1697, 1698
 OAS and GIS benefits, 1696, 1698
 Refund of UI contributions, 1701
 Retirement benefits, 1702
 Statistics on UI claims, 1698, 1701
 Prison or institutional inmate, 1703
 Qualifying time, extension of, 1700
 Recovery of advance payments, 1703
 Regional breakdown of government savings, 1700
 Self-employed persons or partnerships, 1699
 Sharing of costs between employees, employers and government, 1697
 Sick benefits, 1700-01, 1702
 Social insurance number, 1705
 Social security measures, increase in benefits, 1696
 Students returning to school, 1700
 Suitable employment, defining of, 1703
 Training or instruction for new employment, 1702-03
 Unemployment statistics (1974), 1697

Animal contagious diseases

Artificial insemination centres, 1632-3
 Compensation for diseased animals, 1632
 Export health certification, 1632, 1633
 Foreign meats, 1633
 Garbage feeding, 1633
 Maintenance of deadyards and rendering plants, 1632
 Penalty for non-reporting of disease, 1634
 Quarantine, 1634
 Regulatory powers of authorities, 1634
 Transportation and care of animals, 1633, 1634

Animal contagious diseases - Concluded

Tuberculosis, brucellosis, hog cholera, 1632

Zoos and game farms, 1634

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 1633-4

McGrand, Fred A., 1632-3

Norrie, Margaret, 1634

Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28. 1r, 1618; 2r, 1632-5; ref to com, 1635; rep without amdt, 1653; 3r, 1666; r.a., 1712

Animal Disease and Protection Act

See Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, 1618, 1632-5, 1653, 1666, 1712

Anti-inflation (Bill C-73)

Anti-Inflation Board, 1506, 1511-12

Functions and powers of board and administrator, 1506, 1511

Regulations of Governor in Council, 1506, 1511-12, 1583

Appeals, 1583

Budget reduction in Regional Economic Expansion Dept., 1683

Canadian Press article quoting statement of Hon. Mr. Pepin, 1576

Compensation, fringe benefits, etc., 1504, 1505

Constitutionality of legislation, question of, 1508

Cost inflation, wage and price controls to counteract, 1503

Energy food and housing supplies, 1504

Enforcement provisions, 1505-06, 1508

Existing contractual arrangements, 1505

Export profits, 1503

Family allowances, 1683

Federal-provincial cooperation in application of guidelines, 1507-08, 1512-13, 1586

Toronto high school teachers, 1507, 1508

Fish and farm products, exemption from guidelines, 1504

Government expenditures, 1504, 1507

Government rejection of Anti-Inflation Board's opinion on postal workers' contract, 1627-8

Interest rates, 1582, 1584

Bank profits, 1582

Judges' salaries, 1662, 1681

Labour leaders' attempts to defeat program, 1505, 1513

Low-income groups, 1504-05

Maintaining of balance of fiscal and monetary policies, 1504

National Defence cutbacks, effect on Nova Scotia economy, 1683

Postal workers, 1587

Prices and incomes policies, 1504, 1508

Productivity and compensation for, 1508-09

Professional categories, 1508, 1509

Voluntary compliance, 1504

Salaries of members, parliamentary secretaries and others, 1585

Termination clause, constitutionality of, 1505, 1573-87

US-Canada wage demands and productivity, 1507

Voting results on legislation in Commons, 1510-11

Wage guidelines, 1683

Anti-inflation (Bill C-73) - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 1558-9, 1563, 1578-9
 Asselin, Martial, 1509-13, 1574-5
 Austin, Jack, 1525-8
 Beaubien, L. P., 1582
 Benidickson, W. M., 1582, 1584-6
 Carter, Chesley W., 1575
 Denis, Azellus, 1580
 Desruisseaux, Paul, 1542-5
 Flynn, Jacques, 1578, 1579-80, 1586, 1587
 Forsey, Eugene A., 1508, 1532-7
 Greene, John J., 1507, 1508, 1532, 1535
 Grosart, Allister, 1508, 1538-42, 1578
 Hayden, Salter A., 1573
 Lawson, Edward M., 1582
 Manning, Ernest C., 1579
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 1580-1
 McIlraith, George, 1577
 Molson, Hartland de M., 1573-4
 Perrault, Raymond J., 1503-08, 1511, 1512-13, 1575-7, 1579, 1580, 1582, 1586, 1587
 Phillips, Orville H., 1575, 1583-4
 Robichaud, Louis-J., 1578-9
 Smith, George I., 1508, 1509, 1528-32, 1537, 1580
 van Roggen, George C., 1577, 1581

See Canadian economy

Anti-Inflation Bill (No. 1) C-73. 1r, 1500-01; 2r, 1503-13, 1524-37, 1538-45, 1550-64; ref to com, 1564; rep without amdt but with observations, 1573; m for 3r, 1573, m in amdt, 1573-81, neg, 1581; m for 3r cont, 1581-3; further m in amdt, 1583-7, neg, 1587; 3r, 1587; r.a., 1617

Anti-inflation (Bill C-89)

Anti-Inflation Commission, members, duties, staff and performance, 2135-6
 Appeals, 2098

Compensation cases, 2098
 Increases in compensation in excess of guidelines, 2098
 Right of notification to an appeal board, 2098

Appeal Tribunal members, 2106

Authority of Administrator, 2098

Bank of Canada, 2135

Blacklog of appeals to board, 2105, 2111, 2135

Canada's Income Policy, An Economic Assessment, article in Canadian Tax Journal, 2134

Compensation in Quebec industry, 2098

Conference Board of Canada, comments re anti-inflation program, 2133

Export levy, effect on resource industries, 2113-14

New plants and equipment, 2114

Financial Times survey re percentages of wage settlements, 2105

Foreign exchange, need for in balance of payments, 2114

Government spending, 2105

Gross National Product, 2138-9

Increase in workers affected by guidelines, 2112

Inflationary effects of high interest rates, food, fuel and transportation costs, 2104

Labour, failure of employers to file reports with AIB, 2139

Anti-inflation (Bill C-89) - Concluded

- Labour leaders' influence on inflationary trends, 2112
- Labour representation in Parliament, 2137
- Maritime wage settlements, 2104, 2106
- Money supply, 2105
- Price increases vs cost-of-living adjustments, 2112
- Small industries, 2113
- Statistics on inflationary trends (1971-77), 2133, 2135
 - Currency and demand costs (1968-75), 2133
 - Government spending, 2133, 2135
- Three-year limit, 2136
- US anti-inflation program, 2135-6
- US economy, 2138-9
- Women's professional and business groups, 2104
- Speakers: Senators
 - Asselin, Martial, 2133-6, 2150-1
 - Bell, A. E. Haddon, 2114
 - Flynn, Jacques, 2138
 - Greene, John J., 2136-7
 - Lawson, Edward M., 2139
 - Lamontagne, Maurice, 2112-13
 - Phillips, Orville H., 2104-05
 - Stanbury, Richard J., 2098, 2137-9
 - van Roggen, George C., 2113-15
- See* Canadian economy

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89. 1r, 2076; 2r, 2098, 2104-06, 2111-15, 2133-9; ref to com, 2139; rep without amdt, 2141; m for 3r, 2150, m in amdt, 2150-1, neg, 2151; 3r, 2151; r.a., 2152

Anti-inflation program

- Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1319-30, 1349-53, 1411-15, 1443-5
- Committee authorized to study legislation in advance of Bill C-73 coming before Senate, 1426
- See* Anti-Inflation bills C-73 and C-89

Anti-inflation program, questions

- Budget reduction in Regional Economic Expansion Dept., 1683
- Family allowances, 1683, 1716-17, 1721
- Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, 1815, 1860, 1861
- Judges salaries, 1662, 1681
- Meeting of Minister of Finance and provincial representatives re implementation of guidelines, 1549
- National Defence cutbacks in Nova Scotia, 1683, 1716
- Postal workers' contract, government rejection of Board's opinion on, 1627-8, 1655
- Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fare, 1815-16, 1846
- Wages guidelines, 1683

Appendixes

- Aging, recommendations of Special Senate Committee, report on action taken, see Appendix to Debates of Oct. 22/74
- Aircraft Registry bill S-5, correspondence between Transport and Communications Committee and provincial Attorneys General and certain federal departments, 990-7
- Air traffic
 - Letters from Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and Air Line Pilots Association, and letter to Minister of Transport, 2352-3
 - Memorandum of Understanding between the Minister of Transport and Pilots Association, 2276-7
- Bankruptcy and insolvency, rep of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee on subject matter of Bill C-60, see Appendix to Debates of Dec. 11/75
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Florida meeting, 2224-33
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Quebec meeting, 1144-55
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', report of Transport and Communications Committee, 1118-20
- Canadian textile problems, report of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 2055-6
- Combines Investigation bill C-2, rep of com, 1589-95
- Competition policy in Canada and Combines Investigation Act, report of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 675-83, 1135
- Conflict of interest, report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 2303-06
- Criminal law, interim report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs on subject matter of Bill C-83, 2127-8
- Crop insurance programs, report of Agriculture Committee, 1227-9
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service
 - Third report of Special Joint Committee, 1003-04
 - Sixth report of Special Joint Committee, 1799-1812
- Estimates
 - Year ending Mar. 31/75, supplementary (D), 695-702
 - Year ending Mar. 31/76, supplementary (A), 1565-70
 - Year ending Mar. 31/76, supplementary (B), 1948-53
 - Year ending Mar. 31/77, 2173-5
 - Year ending Mar. 31/77, supplementary (A), 2234-5
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, unveiling of portrait in Senate foyer, speeches at ceremony, 469-71
- Forestry, Spruce budworm problem, position statement prepared by Environment Department, 1230-2
- Immigration Policy Committee, third and final report, 1376-84
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, second rep of com, 2401-05
- Loto Canada, rep of com, 2234-5
- Mexico, communique of Parliamentary delegation to Canada, 1887-8
- New Brunswick economic conditions, letter to Hon. Michel Fournier from Diocese of Bathurst, N.B., 1854-5
- Rules of the Senate, report of Committee on Standing Rules and Orders, 1331-6
- Science Policy Committee, first report, 1171-3
- Social welfare forms, see Debates of May 19/76
- Standing Committees, Joint Committees, see appendix of Apr. 27/76
- United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, statement made in Commons by Secretary of State for External Affairs, 1248-9

Appropriation bill No. 3, 1974 C-31. 1r, 192; 2r, 192-3, 198-205; 3r, 213; r.a., 220

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42. 1r, 373; 2r, 379-80, 385-95, 406-10, m to ref bill to com, 410-17, neg, 417; m for 2r agreed to, on division, 417; m for 3r, 426-30, m that bill be ref to com, 430-4, neg, 434, 3r agreed to, on division, 435; r.a., 467

- Appropriation bill No. 5, 1974 C-45. 1r, 402; 2r, 424-5, 440-1, 444-6; 3r, 446; r.a., 467
- Appropriation bill No. 1, 1975 C-54. 1r, 703; 2r, 703-07, 715-23; 3r, 733-6; r.a., 740
- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1975 C-55. 1r, 707; 2r, 707-08, 736-9; 3r, 739; r.a., 740
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1975 C-64. 1r, 1097; 2r, 1129-32; 3r, 1133; r.a., 1134
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79. 1r, 1571; 2r, 1602-15; 3r, 1615; r.a., 1617
- Appropriation bill No. 1, 1976 C-90. 1r, 1954; 2r, 1972-3, 1976-82; 3r, 1982-4; r.a., 2002
- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91. 1r, 1965-6; 2r, 1972-3, 1984-91; 3r, 1991-2; r.a., 2002
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1976 C-93. 1r, 2252; 2r, 2259, 2286-8; 3r, 2288; r.a., 2301
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1976 C-94. 1r, 2252; 2r, 2259; 3r, 2267-9; r.a., 2301

Argue, Hon. Hazen

Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing bill C-21, 1631-2

Ontario wheat producers problems, 1632

Agriculture

Crop loss insurance, 1227-9, 1468-71

Comparison of 1976 prices for insurable crops, 1470-1

Excerpt from letter from Director of Crop Insurance Div. of Agriculture Canada, 1469-70

Penalties for late payment of premiums, 1470

Spot-loss coverage, 1469

Variations in provincial coverages, 1469

Agriculture, Standing Senate Committee

Expenses, 160, 348

Meetings during Senate sittings, 1045

Membership, question re motion for, 591

Reports

Agricultural Stabilization bill C-50, rep without amdt, 1212

Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, rep without amdt, 1653

Crop insurance programs, 1212, 1227-9, 1468-71

Farm Credit bill C-34, rep with amdt, 847-8, 863-5, 880-8, 889-92

Feeds bill S-10, rep with amdt, 584-6

Commons amdt ref to com, 1635-7; rep that Commons amdt be concurred in with one substitution, 1650-3, 1660-1

Kent County, NB, 2308, 2334

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, rep without amdt, 684

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 2) C-53, rep without amdt, 1180

Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, rep without amdt but with recommendations, 1088-90

Wheat Board bill S-6, rep without amdt, 255

Terms of reference, motion re, 161, 206

Argue, Hon. Hazen - Continued

- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1558-9, 1563, 1578-9
 - Agricultural organizations and farming community, 1558-9, 1563
 - Adverse aspects of legislation, 1558-9
 - Agricultural support programs, 1563
 - Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Eugene Whelan, 1559
 - Press report re acceptance of proposals, 1558
 - Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, 1558; press report of president's radio speech, 1558
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 133
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2406, 2415-17
 - Adjournment of debate on Bill S-23, 2416
 - Discrimination in past legislation, 2415
 - Lower income and minority groups, 2415
 - Senate responsibility, 2415, 2416
- Energy, conservation of fuel of car awaiting Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, 2209, 2443
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 791, 805-06, 847, 863, 886-8, 890-1
 - Age limit, 806, 863, 890
 - Eligibility criteria, 805
 - French Canadians enrolled in agricultural courses, 806
 - Interest rate, 791
 - Letter from Canadian Federation of Agriculture, 891
 - Small farm development, 805
- Feeds bill S-10, 129-31, 584-6, 1485-7, 1635, 1636-7, 1650-3, 1660-1
 - Commons amdts, 1635, 1636-7
 - Definition of 'feed', 130
 - Feed inspections, 585
 - Manufactured feeds, authority to regulate, 130
 - Medicaments, 585
 - Modifications proposed, 130
 - Penalty upon conviction for indictable offence, 1635, 1636
 - Pet foods, 585
 - Responsibilities of Agriculture Canada, 585
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 82-83
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee
 - Orders of the day, notification of item standing in senator's name, 2123
- Investigations in Parliament, point of order re discussion of subject, 1478
- Manitoba Indian Brotherhood, meeting with senators, 290-1
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 800-02, 1459
 - Deterrent aspect, 800
 - Government attitude towards total abolition of death sentence, 800
 - Murders of Toronto policemen cited, 800, 801
 - Occupational hazards vs loss of life, 801
 - Parole or leave of absence records, 801
 - Statistics on killings of policemen, 801
- Northland Bank bill C-1002, 1599-1600
- Olympic bill C-63, 1201-02
 - National context of Games, 1202
 - Western attitude towards expenditures undertaken for Games, 1201-02
 - Western Canada projects sponsored by federal government, 1202
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, 597-9, 600, 602
 - Crowsnest Pass Agreement re freight rates, 598
 - DREE, 599

Argue, Hon. Hazen - ContinuedPrairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) - Concluded

Elevator companies, question of commission for, 597

Flax, 597-8

Grants and subsidies, 599

Railway branch lines, proposed removal of, 598-9

Rules of the Senate

Debate procedure, 601

Point of order re amending of money bills, 886-7

Excerpt from The Modern Senate of Canada, 887

Precedents of money bills amendments by the Senate, 887

Rights of Senate in Matters of Financial Legislation, report of special committee, 887-8

Question of privilege re adjournment of debate on Bill S-23, 1459

Rules of the Senate, report of Standing Rules and Orders Committee, 1460-2

Adjournment of debates for prolonged periods, 1462

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 1462

Oral questions, 1460

Quorum of committee meetings, 1460

Quotations from speeches made in Commons, 1460

Terms of reference of committees, 1461

Procedure or practice inconsistent with practices and usages of Senate, 1461

Senate

Business, 1036, 1108, 2121

NDP member for Yorkton-Melville, statement re Senate, 1636

Protective staff, summer uniforms, 1156, 1213-14

Senate reform, discussion out of order, 1578-9

Tailoring service for members of Parliament, 2167-8, 2209

Televising of committee proceedings, 549-50

Senate and House of Commons (Supplementary Retirement Benefits) bill C-81, 2195, 2204

Press criticism of members of Parliament, 2195

Saskatchewan legislature, salary increases, 2195

Transportation, Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 889, 924

Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 928-30, 1088, 1089

Bread prices, 929

Government disregard of escalating costs, 929-30

Statements to Commons committee re floor price:

Canadian Federation of Agriculture, 929

National Farmers Union, 929

Ontario Wheat Producers' Marketing Board, 930

Palliser Wheat Growers Assoc., 930

West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 82-85

Agriculture policies, improvement in, 84-85

Crop disasters, 84

Grain prices, 85

Prairie farmers and grain handlers reaction to Perry report, 84

Quota restrictions, 85

Western Wheat Pools, 83

West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 727-8

Disruptions in economy due to strikes, 727

Western farmers, difficulties of communication with government, 727-8

Wheat Board annual report, 685, 732

Argue, Hon. Hazen - Concluded

- Wheat Board bill (No. 1) S-6, 170-2, 266-7
 - Cash advances, 267
 - Excerpts from press release by Senator Argue, 171
 - Final payments, 170
 - Grain prices, 170-1
 - Malting barley, 266
 - Operations of Board, 170
- Wheat Board bill (No. 2) C-88, 2331-3
 - Malting barley, 2332
 - Wheat grading, 2332

Argus Corporation Ltd., takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., reference to Senate Committee, inquiry dropped, 1063-4

Army benevolent fund

Statutory authority for management of Army Welfare Fund, 303-04

Speakers: Senators

- Grosart, Allister, 304
- Macnaughton, Alan A., 303-04

Army Benevolent Fund bill C-17. 1r., 280; 2r, 303-04; 3r, 307; r.a., 314

Asselin, Hon. Martial, P.C.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1509-13, 1574-5
 - Anti-Inflation Board, 1511-12
 - Functions and powers of Board and Administrator, 1511
 - Governor in Council's powers, 1511-12
 - Economic dictatorship aspect of legislation, 1509
 - Government expenditures, 1509-10
 - Labour attempts to defeat legislation, 1513
 - Private sector suppliers of commodities and services, 1512
 - Professional categories, 1508, 1509
 - Provincial jurisdiction over guidelines, 1512, 1513
 - Three-year period of program, 1510, 1512, 1574-5
 - Voting results in Commons, 1510-11
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2133-6, 2150-1
 - Anti-Inflation Commission, members, duties, staff and performance, 2135-6
 - Backlog of appeals to Board, 2135-6
 - Bank of Canada, 2135
 - Canada's Income Policy, An Economic Assessment*, article in Canadian Tax Journal, 2134
 - Conference Board of Canada, comments re anti-inflation program, 2133
 - Statistics on inflationary trends (1971-77), 2133, 2135
 - Currency and demand costs (1968-75), 2133
 - Government spending, 2133, 2135
 - Three-year period of program, 2136
 - US anti-inflation program, 2135-6
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 415-16
- Beef producers, federal assistance for, 240-1, 253
- Budget, date of presentation, 161

Asselin, Hon. Martial, P.C. - Continued

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1443-5

Excerpts from speeches by Prime Minister re government policies on controls, 1443

Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 1444

Government expenditures, 1443-4

Aircraft purchases, 1444

Consultants fees, 1444

Microsystems, 1444

Mirabel Airport, 1444

Gross National Product, 1443

Crime and violence, 1659-60

Motion in admt to amdt re terms of reference of proposed committee, 1660, agreed, 1660

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 587-9

Credibility of witnesses, 588

Miscarriage of justice, 588

Murders of policemen and prison guards, 588

Responsibility of judge and jury, 588-9

Royal prerogative, 587-9

Criminal Code, illegal abortions, acquittal of Dr. Henry Morgentaler of charges, 1036

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1767-70

Bail provisions, 1767

Crimes against internationally protected persons: Prevention and Punishment - an analysis of the UN Convention, 1769

Impaired driving, breathalyzer test, 1768-9

Rehabilitation of alcoholics, lack of facilities, 1769

Suspension of licence and sentence of imprisonment, 1768

Jury decision, reversal by court of appeal, 1767-8

Canadian Institute of Public Opinion survey re, 1767

Morgentaler case, 1767

Kidnapping and extortion, 1769

Quebec inquiry into organized crime, 1769

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2407-08

Expenses for maintenance of jail inmates, 2408

First and second degree murder and prison term for, 2408

Gallup poll, 2407

'Justice in the street' by policemen, danger of, 2408

Montreal and Quebec City statistics on murders, 2408

Parole Board, 2408

Rehabilitation, 2408

Responsibility of lawmakers, 2407

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-214, 377-8

Estimates, Loto Canada, 2245-6

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 402-04, 1007-10; m to amend com rep, 1010-11

Educational drawbacks as result of criminal record, 1008-09

Onus of proof for possession or trafficking of cannabis, 1008, 1011

Parole or unconditional release, 1008

Penalty for importing, exporting, trafficking or possession, 1009

'Traffic', 'give', and 'sell', definitions of, 1009-11

Grey Cup Game, Vancouver, 300, 301

Immigration bill S-12, 194-5, 214, 216

Asselin, Hon. Martial, P.C. - Continued

- Industry, Canadian textile problems, 901, 971, 978-9, motion that subject matter be ref to com, 978-9, agreed, 979
 - Agreements, importing countries disregard of, 844
 - Le Devoir* article re unemployment in Victoriaville, 844
 - Quebec textile workers, 844
 - Textile Board recommendations, 845
 - Textile companies converting to import companies, 844
 - Wages, Canada vs other countries, 844
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 245-8
 - Japan, economic expansion, 245-7; employment standards, 246-7; inflation, 246, 248
 - Labour unions and strikes in Canada, effect on foreign investments, 245-6
 - Middle East, 247-8; Canadian peacekeeping force, 247
- Judges bill C-47, 1051-2
 - Annuities for judges and deceased judges' spouses, 1052
 - Canadian Judicial Council, 1052
 - Pensions, 1052
 - Salary increases, 1051-2
 - Selection of judges, 1051
 - Superior Court workload, 1052
- Legislation, difficulty in dealing with omnibus bills, 1767
- Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, 1251
- Olympic bill C-63, 1200-01
 - Deficit forecast, 1200
 - Federal government responsibility re expenditures, 1200-01
 - Point of order re minister speaking on behalf of government, 1202
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1285, 1319, 1355
- Privileges and immunities of senators, 1435
- Public Service, strike of general labour and trades group, 642
- Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation for maintenance, 537-40
 - Agreements between federal-provincial governments for services of RCMP, 538
 - Financial implications, 538
 - Conferences and correspondence between Quebec Justice Minister and Solicitor General, 538-9
 - Constitutional jurisdiction of provinces over police matters, 539
 - Opting-out formula, 539
 - Police Costs - Where are all those Millions?*, booklet published by Quebec Justice Dept., 538
 - Separatism, danger of upsurge as result of federal-provincial differences on subject, 540
 - Staff and equipment, lack of facilities to fight Quebec organized crime, 538
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1658
- Representation bill 1974 C-36, 423-4
 - Amalgamation formula, 423-4
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 818-20
 - Bankruptcy of livestock breeders, 820
 - Deterioration of supplies in storage, 819
 - Injunction granted to manufacturers and millers, 819
 - Precedents of emergency legislation, 819, 820
 - Wage and job security demands, 819
- Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1091-3, 1094
 - Comparison to salaries of other officials, 1092
 - Pensions, 1092-3
 - Status of lieutenant governors, 1091-2
- Senate business, 923
- Television and radio coverage of proceedings of Senate and committees, 1487-8
 - Controls, 1488
 - Public reaction, 1487-8
 - Resolution adopted by Commons re broadcasting of proceedings, 1487

Asselin, Hon. Martial, P.C. - Concluded

- Work ethic in Canada, 339-42
 - Guaranteed annual income, 339-40
 - Real and fraudulent poverty, 341
 - Vaincre la pauvreté dans les pays riches*, by Lionel Stoleru, 341
 - Waste and duplication in social security programs, 340

Atlantic provinces

- Development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2070, 2142
- Feed grains, freight assistance, 1035
- Ferry service operating between PEI, NB, NS and NFLD, and North Sydney and Port aux Basques, possible increase in fares, 1815, 1860, 1861
- Forestry, devastation by Spruce budworm, 1158-63, 1169-70, 1218-20, 1230-2
- Migratory bird sanctuaries, contracts for warden services, 279
- Nova Scotia, storm damage, 135-6
- Offshore oil and gas resources, 2070, 2141-2
- Transportation, Prince Edward Island, 73
- See names of individual provinces*

Atlantic provinces, transportation

- British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2049-54, 2063-6, 2070, 2106-08, 2115-18, 2196-8

Auditor General of Canada

- Proposed referral to National Finance Committee of report on office of Auditor General of Canada, 796

Austin, Hon. Jacob (Introduced in the Senate Nov. 5/75)

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1525-8
 - Aspect of 'war' in economic outlook, 1526
 - Disappearance of values of social qualities of life, 1526
 - Economic specialization of interests, 1526
 - Energy crisis, 1527
 - Government spending in response to society's needs, 1526-7
 - Politicians' role and responsibility to public in combatting inflationary trends, 1527-8
- Canada-US relations
 - BC provincial election, question re comments of US ambassador, 1627
 - Canada-US boundary, government policy re demarcation line on Dixon Entrance on Strait of Juan de Fuca, George's Bank and northwards, 2308
 - Communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re remarks attributed to Senator Davey, 2192-3, 2377-8
 - Unofficial meeting of US ambassador with media representatives in Ottawa, 1626
- Canadian Labour Congress
 - Political affiliation, 2153-4
 - Possibility of general strike, newspaper report re meeting and proposals for liberal corporatism, 2130
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2444-5
 - Gallup poll, 2445
 - Parolees, potential for repeat of murders, 2444
 - Vengeance, 2444-5
- Energy
 - Construction of Arctic gas pipeline, supply of Arctic gas to southern Canada, 2037-8, 2069-70
 - Offshore oil and gas resources in Atlantic provinces, 2070, 2141-2, 2202-03
 - Proposed construction of pipeline from Prince Rupert to Edmonton, 2037
 - Proposed pipeline treaty between Canada and United States, 2037

Austin, Hon. Jacob - Concluded

- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2314-15, 2337
 - Broadcasting, 2315
 - KVOS-TV, 2315
 - Canadian ownership and advertising, percentage stipulation, 2314-15
 - 'Substantially the same', definition of, 2314
 - Time* magazine, 2314-15
- Labour, the working poor in Canada, 2154-9
 - Benefits for those under 65 yrs., 2157
 - Canada Pension Plan, 2157
 - Excerpt from speech of Prime Minister at Canadiana Conference, 2158
 - Expansion of money supply and redistribution of resources, 2155
 - Gallup poll results re income statistics, 2155
 - Misallocation of human and physical resources, 2155
 - Old age security, 2156-7
 - Responsibility to work, 2156
 - Social security review (1973), 2156
 - Welfare expenditures (1966-76), 2157
 - Women in the labour force, 2157
- Laing, Honourable Arthur, P.C., the late, 1525
- Marine safety, British Columbia fisheries, 1814-15
- Newfoundland, financial assistance for Come-By-Chance refinery, 1826-7, 1860
- Pacific Western Airlines, possible move of head office to Calgary, 1824-5, 1859, 1868-9, 2376, 2444
- Role of senators and responsibility to nation, 1525, 1527
- Trudeau, Right Honourable Pierre Elliott, Prime Minister, tribute to, 1525

Baltic Nations

- Visitors to the Senate, Acting Honorary Consul General of Estonia and Acting Honorary Consul of Latvia, 1867

Banking, Trade and Commerce, Standing Senate Committee

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, rep without amdt, 2141
- Anti-inflation policy, m to authorize com to study subject matter of Bill C-73, 1408, agreed, 1426
- Bankruptcy and insolvency, com authorized to examine and report on subject matter of Bill C-60, 911
- Budget, 160, 348, 524-5, 911, 1502, 1781, 2119
- Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act, com authorized to study, 109-10
- Engagement of services of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427-8
- Income tax, com authorized to study legislation prior to receipt of bills, 280, 298-9
- Industry, Canadian textile problems, subject matter ref to com, 979
- Meetings during adjournment, 2047-8
- Meetings during Senate sittings, 373, 505, 535, 563, 1006, 1035, 1403, 1416, 1438, 1485, 1502, 1856-7, 2069, 2098, 2120, 2192, 2216, 2338, 2376
- Members, 96
- Ottawa Journal* article re comments of President of Time Canada before Committee, 2140
- Reports
 - Alliance Security and Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, rep without amdt, 1074
 - Anti-inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, rep without amdt but with observation re termination clause, 1573
 - Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, rep without amdt, 2141
 - Bankruptcy and insolvency, 1596-7
 - Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, rep with amds, 666-71, 685
 - Canadian textile problems, 2055-6
 - Combines Investigation bill C-2, rep without amdt but with observations, 1571, 1589-95

Banking, Trade and Commerce, Standing Senate Committee - Concluded*Reports - Concluded*

- Competition policy and Combines Investigation Act, 663-6, 675-83, 1121-2, 1135
- Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, rep with amds, 1367-9, 1405-06; m to refer rep back to com, 1406; further rep of com, 1407-08, adopted, 1408
- Customs bill S-4, rep without amdt, 213
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27, rep without amdt, 280
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 2) C-39, rep without amdt, 499
- Eastern Canada and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29, rep with amds (French text only), 1355
- Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, rep without amdt but with observations re unlicensed wholesalers, 570
- Excise Tax bill C-66, rep without amdt, 1278
- Explosives bill S-17, rep without amdt, 280
- Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14, rep without amdt, 426
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, rep without amdt, 1197
- Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7, rep without amdt, 160
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, rep without amdt, 645
- Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, rep without amdt, 1454
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, rep with amds, 2252-5, 2269-75; further rep without amdt, 2389-2400, 2401-05
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, rep without amdt, 1867
- Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, rep without amdt, 402
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, rep with amds, 348-9, 368
- National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, rep with amds, 1057, 1062-3
- Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, rep with amds, 840, 851, 1005
- Olympic bill C-63, rep without amdt, 1211
- Petro-Canada bill C-8, rep without amdt, 1244
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, rep with amds, 981-2, 1002, 1034
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, rep without amdt, 1639
- United Growers Limited bill S-33, rep without amdt, 2003
- Terms of reference, 110, 1427-8
- Tributes to Chairman Senator Hayden, 1316-17

Bankruptcy and insolvency

- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee authorized to examine and report on subject matter of Bill C-60, 911; rep of com, 1596-7
- Bankruptcy judge, 1597
- Registrar's position, reinstatement of, 1596
- Rights and priorities of secured creditors, 1596

Barrow, Hon. Augustus Irvine (Introduced in the Senate Sept. 30/74)

- Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29, 1307-08
- Explosives bill S-17, 263-4
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1628-9, 1630
 - Auditor General's appt. as auditor, 1629
 - Background and statistics of annuities, 1628
 - Return rate increase, 1628-9
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1639

Beaubien, Hon. L. P.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1582
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2411

Beaubien, Hon. L. P. - Concluded

- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1929
 - Canada-US relations, 1929
 - Canadian companies controlled in US, 1929
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 281
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 835-6
 - Crime increase, 835-6
 - Montreal kidnappings, 835
 - Violation of parole conditions, 836
- Senate business, 1876

Beaver (Castor canadensis)

- See* Canadian Sovereignty bill C-373, 685-8, 709, 714, 731.

Beetz, Hon. Jean, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

- Royal assent, 1791-2, 2002, 2207

Belgium

- Canada-Belgium income tax convention, 1792, 1793-8

Belisle, Hon. Rheel

- Broadcasting, appearance of Gerda Munsinger on CBC television program, 1619
- Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5, 849-51
 - Canadian Transport Commission members and employees, protection re employment, 850
 - Communications: Some Federal Proposals*, 850
 - Licensing of cable television, 850
 - Provincial consultations and jurisdiction, 849-50
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 562, 564-7
 - Appeals at state expense, 565
 - Compensation for victims of crime, 564-5
 - Deterrent aspect, 565
 - Innocent persons convicted of crime, 565
 - Life sentence, duration of, 565
 - Police officers and prison guards, lack of law enforcement in murders of, 566
 - Rehabilitation of convicted persons, 565
 - Responsibilities of judge and jury, 565
 - Royal prerogative, 566-7
 - May's Parliamentary Practice*, Queen's Consent to Bills cited, 566
- Customs bill S-4, 167-9
 - Jurisdiction to outer limits of territorial sea of Canada, 168
 - Oil explorations of foreign origin off Atlantic coast, 168
 - Preferential tax exemptions to Canadian companies in resource explorations, 168-9
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27, 270-1
 - Tariff protection, effect on consumer, 270-1
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, 527, 528
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 891
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 167-8
- Fire Losses Replacement Account bill C-18, 353
 - Conditions covering replacement of or repair to buildings, 353
- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37, 1049-50
 - Alternate disposal, 1050
 - Conference on Law of the Sea, 1050
 - Deliberate or accidental dumping, 1051
 - Federal-provincial consultation, 1050
 - London Convention, 1050

Belisle, Hon. Rheal - Concluded

- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37 - Concluded
 - Ontario, pollution of lakes and rivers, 1050
 - Permits for dumping, 1050
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1665
- Rules of the Senate
 - Point of order re senators taking part in debate, 560
 - Use of unparliamentary language in debate, 562
- Senate business, 1881
- Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 bill C-16, 1104-07
 - Cadet organizations, 1106
 - Education, 1105
 - Labour force discriminations, 1105
 - Pension inequalities, 1106
 - Political status, 1105
 - Speakers of the Senate, 1105
 - Unemployment insurance, 1106
- Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1708-09, 1710
 - Common-law spouse, 1708
 - Equalization of benefits to male and female employees, 1708
 - Interest on return of contributions, 1708-09, 1710
 - Members of Parliament, 1709
 - Widows of senators, 1709
 - Widows without survivor benefits, 1708
- Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) bill C-4, 258-62
 - Common-law wife, 261
 - Dependent children, 260
 - Equality for male and female veterans, 260
 - Widowers of female veterans attaining age of 60 yrs., 261
- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1701
 - Refunds to persons 65 yrs. and over, 1701

Bell, Hon. A.E. Haddon

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2), C-89, 2114
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 132-3, 338
 - Capital stock, 132
 - Construction expenditures, 132
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2075
- Criminal Code bill S-21, 574-5
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-85, 2441-2
 - Abortion vs murder, 2441-2
 - Deterrent aspect, 2441
- Environmental affairs, protection of coastal waters from radio-active pollution, 889, 924
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1018-19, 1031-3, 1076
 - Certificate of analysis, 1033
 - Compulsory treatment, 1032
 - Criminal records of young offenders, 1032
 - Penalty, 1032
 - Possession for purpose of trafficking, 1032-3
 - Preventive detention of traffickers, 1032
- Immigration, Gulf Islands, BC, ministerial discretion permits, 2322
- Visitors to Parliament, abatement of noise in Senate precincts, 1012
- Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1725

Benidickson, Hon. W. M., P.C.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1584-6
 - Bank interest rates, 1582, 1584
 - Government expenditures, 1585
 - Ottawa Citizen* article titled 'Carpets escape the axe', 1585
 - Salaries of members, Parliamentary secretaries and others, 1585
 - Termination clause, 1584
- Appropriation bill No. 1, 1975 C-54, 703, 704
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79, 1609-12, 1614
- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1991
- Argus Corporation Ltd., takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., reference to Senate committee, inquiry dropped, 1063-4
- Committee proceedings, delay in printing and distribution of, 703-04
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27, 262, 263
 - Articles exempted, 262
 - Petroleum products, 262
 - Schedules omitted from bill format, 263
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 3) C-67, 1209-10, 1215
 - Aircraft and aircraft engines, 1210
 - Gifts, 1210
 - Petroleum products, 1210
- Estimates
 - Corporate power in relation to expenditures, 1611-12
 - Canadian Establishment*, by Peter Newman, 1612
 - Conflict of interest, excerpts from letters re, 1612
 - Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., 1611-12
 - Royal Commission re, 1611-12
 - Energy, Mines and Resources, 1609
 - Information Canada, 1610
 - Oil compensation program, 1609
 - Transport Department, 1609-11
 - Aircraft manufacturing, 1610-11
 - Canadair-Government of Canada option, 1610-11, 1614-15
 - Mirabel and Toronto Airports, 1610
 - STOL aircraft, 1609-10
- Law Reform Commission bill C-43, 624-5, 660-1
 - Assets distributed through bankruptcy, 661
 - Benefits available to lower income groups, 660-1
 - Canadian Welfare article by Prof. Friedland on 'Law for the Layman', 661
 - Composition of Commission, 624; members of legal profession, 625
 - Family property and sharing of assets in event of marriage breakup, 624
 - Judgment debtors, problems through ignorance of law, 661
 - Law educational system, 625
 - Legal profession statistics, Quebec and Ontario, 625
 - Objectives for year in field of criminal law, family law, code of sentencing, expropriation, etc., 624
 - Poor man's bankruptcy, 661
 - Studies of commission to date, 624
- Manpower and Immigration Dept., Manpower Division, 419-20
 - West Germany economic development, report on, 419-20; unemployment and inflation, plans re, 419
- Northland Bank bill C-1002, 1600
- Parliamentary immunity, 1399
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, 615

Benidickson, Hon. W. M., P.C. - Concluded

- Rules of the Senate
 - Point of order on inquiry re Air Canada service, 506, 507
 - Presentation of committee report before review by senators, 1606
 - Special procedure or practice in committee, approval of Senate for, 1364
 - Time of daily sittings, 1364
- Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1095
- Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) bill C-4, 269-70
- Televising of committee proceedings, 514, 521-2
- Welfare ministers' conference, statement by Minister of NHW re federal policy in social welfare field, 556, 564

Bilingualism and biculturalism

- Air Canada pilots, 2344-8, 2378-86
- Appointment of unilingual employees over 60 yrs. to bilingual positions, 290
- New Brunswick agricultural representatives, 121-2
- Nova Scotia Acadians, 18-19
- Official languages, implementation of resolution, report to Parliament tabled, 289-90
- Official languages, report of Commissioner tabled, 757
- Public Service bilingualism, statistics, 290
- Quebec Bill 22 on use of French language, 55-58

Bills, general data

- Amendments, observations or recommendations regarding bills
 - Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 980-1, 999-1002
 - Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 326
 - Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, 1261
 - Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1573
 - British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 325, 338
 - Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, 666-71, 685, 712
 - Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1571, 1589-95
 - Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1367-9, ref back to com for further report, 1405-06, further rep of com. 1407-08
 - Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 848, 908-09, 1005
 - Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29, 1355, 1372
 - Farm Credit bill C-34, 847-8, 863-5, 880-8, 889-92, 899
 - Feeds bill S-10, 584-6, Commons amds, 1467, 1480, 1485-6, ref to com, 1635-7
 - Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 300, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456, 969-71, 983, 1007-11, 1014-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9, 1066, 1074-80
 - Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2252-5, 2269-75, ref back to com, further rep without amdt, 2389-2400, 2401-05
 - Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 348-9, 368
 - Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1369
 - Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 2058, 2066-8
 - National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, 1057, 1062-3
 - Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 840, 851, 1005
 - Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 981-2, 1013, 1034
 - Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 240, 245
 - Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 bill C-16, 1122-3, 1136
 - Territorial Lands bill C-20, 579
 - Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 1088-90
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, lack of regulations in format, 1529

Bills, general data - Concluded

- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, subject matter ref to Legal and Constitutional Committee, 940-1
- Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223, ref to com after m for 3r, 740
- Income Tax bill C-49, 645-7
- Legislation received in Senate without original explanatory notes, 622, 709
- Minister of Manpower and Immigration invited to take part in Senate debate on unemployment insurance, 1695-1705
- Minister of State for Urban Affairs invited to take part in Senate debate on national housing, 748-57, 1673-81
- Omnibus bills, difficulty in dealing with, 1742, 1775-6
- Printing and distribution of bills, 61
- Private bills
 - Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, suspension of rule 95, 1234-5
 - Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, suspension of rule 95, 1207-09
- Public and private bills dealt with during session, 1286-7
- Public bills, motion to suspend rules dropped, 1292
- Resume of Senate work Oct. 21-Dec. 20/75, 1717
- Right to Information bill C-225, subject matter ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467
- Schedules omitted from bill format, 263
- Superannuation bill C-52, rep of Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 1545-7

Bills, Numerically, Commons

- C-2 Combines Investigation
- C-3 British North America Acts 1867 to 1975
- C-4 Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances)
- C-5 Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission
- C-8 Petro-Canada
- C-9 Export Development
- C-10 Prairie Grain Advance Payments
- C-12 West Coast Grain Handling Operations
- C-13 Northern Canada Power Commission
- C-14 Federal Business Development Bank
- C-15 Indian Oil and Gas
- C-16 Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974
- C-17 Army Benevolent Fund
- C-18 Fire Losses Replacement Account
- C-19 Two-Price Wheat
- C-20 Citizenship
- C-21 Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing
- C-22 Canada Pension Plan
- C-23 Lieutenant Governors Superannuation
- C-24 Salaries
- C-25 Environmental Contaminants
- C-26 Civil Service Insurance
- C-27 Customs Tariff (No. 1)
- C-28 Animal Contagious Diseases
- C-29 Canada Business Corporations
- C-31 Appropriation No. 3, 1974
- C-32 Petroleum Administration
- C-33 Cultural Property Export and Import

Bills, Numerically, Commons - Continued

| | |
|------|---|
| C-34 | Farm Credit |
| C-36 | Representation 1974 |
| C-37 | Ocean Dumping Control |
| C-38 | Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation |
| C-39 | Customs Tariff (No. 2) |
| C-40 | Excise Tax and Excise |
| C-41 | Western Grain Stabilization |
| C-42 | Appropriation No. 4, 1974 |
| C-43 | Law Reform Commission |
| C-44 | Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries |
| C-45 | Appropriation No. 5, 1974 |
| C-46 | National Housing (No. 1) |
| C-47 | Judges Act and Certain Acts related to the Supreme Courts of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island |
| C-48 | Railway |
| C-49 | Income Tax (No. 1) |
| C-50 | Agricultural Stabilization |
| C-51 | Northwest Territories Representation |
| C-52 | Statute Law (Superannuation) |
| C-53 | Prairie Grain Advance Payments (No. 2) |
| C-54 | Appropriation No. 1, 1975 |
| C-55 | Appropriation No. 2, 1975 |
| C-56 | West Coast Ports Operations 1975 |
| C-57 | Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements |
| C-58 | Income Tax (No. 3) |
| C-59 | St. Lawrence Ports Operations |
| C-62 | Old Age Security |
| C-63 | Olympic |
| C-64 | Appropriation No. 3, 1975 |
| C-65 | Income Tax (No. 2) |
| C-66 | Excise Tax |
| C-67 | Customs Tariff (No. 3) |
| C-68 | Medical Care |
| C-69 | Unemployment Insurance |
| C-70 | Public Service Staff Relations |
| C-71 | Criminal Law Amendment (No. 1) 1975 |
| C-73 | Anti-Inflation (No. 1) |
| C-74 | Regional Development Incentives |
| C-75 | Government Annuities Improvement |
| C-76 | King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up |
| C-77 | National Housing (No. 2) |
| C-78 | Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation |
| C-79 | Appropriation No.4, 1975 |
| C-80 | Supplementary Borrowing Authority |
| C-81 | Senate and House of Commons |
| C-84 | Criminal Law Amendment (No. 2) 1976 |
| C-85 | Temporary Immigration Security |
| C-86 | Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) |
| C-88 | Wheat Board (No. 2) |
| C-89 | Anti-Inflation (No. 2) |
| C-90 | Appropriation No. 1, 1976 |
| C-91 | Appropriation No. 2, 1976 |
| C-92 | Compensation for Former Prisoners of War |
| C-93 | Appropriation No. 3, 1976 |

Bills, Numerically, Commons - Concluded

| | |
|--------|--|
| C-94 | Appropriation No. 4, 1976 |
| C-214 | Electoral Boundaries Readjustment |
| C-223 | Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) |
| C-228 | Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) |
| C-229 | Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Lafontaine) |
| C-365 | Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Berthier) |
| C-367 | Fort-Falls Bridge Authority |
| C-370 | Electoral Boundaries Readjustment |
| C-373 | Canadian Sovereignty Symbol |
| C-1001 | Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) |
| C-1002 | Northland Bank |

Bills, Numerically, Senate

| | |
|------|---|
| S-1 | Railways (pro forma) |
| S-2 | Supreme Court |
| S-3 | Statute Revision |
| S-4 | Customs |
| S-5 | Aircraft Registry |
| S-6 | Wheat Board |
| S-7 | Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies |
| S-8 | Motor Vehicle Tire Safety |
| S-9 | Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks (No. 1) |
| S-10 | Feeds |
| S-11 | British Columbia Telephone Company |
| S-12 | Immigration |
| S-13 | Alberta-British Columbia Boundary |
| S-14 | Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) |
| S-15 | Industry, Trade and Commerce Department |
| S-16 | Statutes of Canada (to revise references to Court of Queen's Bench) |
| S-17 | Explosives |
| S-18 | International Air Transport Association |
| S-19 | Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code |
| S-20 | Territorial Lands |
| S-21 | Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) |
| S-22 | Senate (Intersessional Authority) |
| S-23 | National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) |
| S-24 | National Commercial Bank of Canada (Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank) |
| S-25 | Privileges and Immunities (International Organizations) |
| S-26 | Alliance Security and Investigation, Ltd. |
| S-27 | Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation |
| S-28 | Royal Canadian Legion |
| S-29 | Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company |
| S-30 | Continental Bank of Canada |
| S-31 | Quarantine |
| S-32 | Income Tax Conventions |
| S-33 | United Grain Growers Limited |
| S-34 | Aeronautics |
| S-35 | Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks (No. 2) |

Bills, Private, Commons

| | |
|--|---|
| Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) C-1001. | 1r, 1233; 2r, 1233-4; ref to com, 1234; suspension of rule 95, 1234-5; rep without amdt, 1244; 3r, 1251-2, 1257-9; r.a., 1281 |
| Northland Bank C-1002. | 1r, 1524; 2r, 1598-1600; ref to com, 1600; suspension of rule 95, 1601; rep without amdt, 1602; 3r, 1619; r.a., 1712 |

Bills, Private, Senate

- Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. S-26. 1r, 1022; 2r, 1053-4; ref to com, 1054; rep without amdt, 1074; 3r, 1091; Commons amdt concurred in, 1261; r.a., 1281
- British Columbia Telephone Company S-11. 1r, 99; 2r, 132-4; ref to com, 134; rep without amdt, 178; 3r, 194; Commons amdt, 325; concurred in, 338; r.a., 397
- Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank, see National Commercial Bank of Canada S-24
- Continental Bank of Canada S-30. 1r, 1306; 2r, 1340-5; ref to com, 1345; rep with amds, 1367-9, 1405-06; m to ref rep back to com, 1406; further rep of com, 1407-08, adopted, 1408; 3r, 1408
- Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company S-29. 1r, 1293; 2r, 1307-08; ref to com, 1308; rep with amds, (French text only), 1355, 1372; 3r, 1373; r.a., 1712
- Honey Bear Brewing Corporation Limited, refund of fees on proposed bill, 1782
- International Air Transport Association S-18. 1r, 265; 2r, 301-03; ref to com, 303; rep without amdt, 373; 3r, 382; r.a., 581
- National Commercial Bank of Canada S-24. 1r, 923; 2r, 935-6, 958-62, 973-4; ref to com, 974; rep with amds, 1057, 1062-3; 3r, 1063; r.a., 1281
- Royal Canadian Legion S-28. 1r, 1180; 2r, 1194-6, 1205-07; ref to com, 1207; suspension of rule 95, 1207-09; rep without amdt, 1211-12; 3r, 1212; r.a., 1281
- United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33. 1r, 1914; 2r, 1924-5, 1930, 1946-7; ref to com, 1947; rep without amdt, 2003; 3r, 2009; r.a., 2207

Bills, Public, Commons

- Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing C-21. 1r, 1617-18; 2r, 1630-2; 3r, 1640; r.a., 1712
- Agricultural Stabilization C-50. 1r, 1164; 2r, 1190-4; ref to com, 1194; rep without amdt, 1212; 3r, 1212; r.a., 1281
- Animal Contagious Diseases C-28. 1r, 1618; 2r, 1632-5; ref to com, 1635; rep without amdt, 1653; 3r, 1666; r.a., 1712
- Anti-Inflation (No. 1) C-73. 1r, 1500-01; 2r, 1503-13, 1524-37, 1538-45, 1550-64; ref to com, 1564; rep without amdt but with observations, 1573; m for 3r, 1573, m in amdt, 1573-81, neg, 1581; m for 3r cont, 1581-3; further m in amdt, 1583-7, neg, 1587; 3r, 1587; r.a., 1617
- Anti-Inflation (No. 2) C-89. 1r, 2076; 2r, 2098, 2104-06, 2111-15, 2133-9; ref to com, 2139; rep without amdt, 2141; m for 3r, 2150, m in amdt, 2150-1, neg, 2151; 3r, 2151; r.a., 2152
- Appropriation No. 3, 1974 C-31. 1r, 192; 2r, 192-3, 198-205; 3r, 213; r.a., 220
- Appropriation No. 4, 1974 C-42. 1r, 373; 2r, 379-80, 385-95, 406-10, m to ref bill to com, 410-17, neg, 417; m for 2r agreed to, on division, 417; m for 3r, 426-30, m that bill be ref to com, 430-4, neg, 434; 3r agreed to, on division, 435; r.a., 467
- Appropriation No. 5, 1974 C-45. 1r, 402; 2r, 424-5, 440-1, 444-6; 3r, 446; r.a., 467
- Appropriation No. 1, 1975 C-54. 1r, 703; 2r, 703-07, 715-23; 3r, 733-6; r.a., 740
- Appropriation No. 2, 1975 C-55. 1r, 707; 2r, 707-08, 736-9; 3r, 739; r.a., 740
- Appropriation No. 3, 1975 C-64. 1r, 1097; 2r, 1129-32; 3r, 1133; r.a., 1134
- Appropriation No. 4, 1975 C-79. 1r, 1571; 2r, 1602-15; 3r, 1615; r.a., 1617
- Appropriation No. 1, 1976 C-90. 1r, 1954; 2r, 1972-3, 1976-82; 3r, 1982-4; r.a., 2002
- Appropriation No. 2, 1976 C-91. 1r, 1965-6; 2r, 1972-3, 1984-91; 3r, 1991-2; r.a., 2002
- Appropriation No. 3, 1976 C-93. 1r, 2252; 2r, 2259, 2286-8; 3r, 2288; r.a., 2301
- Appropriation No. 4, 1976 C-94. 1r, 2252; 2r, 2259; 3r, 2267-9; r.a., 2301
- Army Benevolent Fund C-17. 1r, 280; 2r, 303-04; 3r, 307; r.a., 314
- British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 C-3. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1054, 1060-2; 3r, 1081; r.a., 1095
- Canada Business Corporations C-29. 1r, 472; 2r, 489-98; ref to com, 498; rep with amds, 666-71, 685; 3r, 685; Commons concurrence in Senate amds, 712; r.a., 731
- Canada Pension Plan C-22. 1r, 242; 2r, 249-52, 277-9; ref to com, 279; rep without amdt, 300; 3r, 307; r.a., 314
- Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission C-5. 1r, 803; 2r, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51; ref to com, 851; rep without amdt, 998; 3r, 1007; r.a., 1095
- Canadian Sovereignty Symbol C-373. 1r, 663; 2r, 685-8, 709; 3r, 714; r.a., 731
- Canadian Wheat Board, see Wheat Board

Bills, Public, Commons - Continued

- Citizenship C-20. 1r, 2058; 2r, 2071-5, 2077-9, 2087-96; ref to com, 2096; rep without amdt, 2242; m for 3r, 2264-5, m in amdt, 2265-7, 2279-86, 2289, m in amdt neg, 2289-90, debate on 3r cont, 2290-3, 2309-13, 2323-4, 2336-7, 2348-50; m in amdt that bill be ref back to com, neg, 2350; 3r, 2350; r.a., 2450
- Civil Service Insurance C-26. 1r, 712; 2r, 766-7, 770; 3r, 775; r.a., 832
- Combines Investigation C-2. 1r, 1283; 2r, 1293-6, 1308-12; ref to com, 1312; rep without amdt but with observations, 1571, 1589-95; 3r, 1598; r.a., 1617
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War C-92. 1r, 2014; 2r, 2038-43; 3r, 2043; r.a., 2096
- Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) C-223. 1r, 663; 2r, 710-11; m for 3r, 714-15, 740; m in amdt that bill be ref to com, agreed, 740
- Criminal Law Amendment (No. 1) 1975 C-71. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1730-3, 1742-7, 1766-70, 1772-6; ref to com, 1776; rep with amdts, 1867-8, 1884-6; m for 3r, 1893, m in amdt, 1893-9, m in amdt to amdt, 1899-1900, neg, m for 3r as amended, 1900, 1903-06, further amdt, 1906-08 neg, 1908; 3r, 1908; Commons agreement in Senate amdts, 1974; r.a., 2002
- Criminal Law Amendment (No. 2) 1976 C-84. 1r, 2386; 2r, 2386-9; m re disposition of 3r and passage of bill, 2407; 2r cont, 2407-42; question re voting procedure, 2444; 2r cont, 2444-50; 3r, 2450; r.a., 2450
- Cultural Property Export and Import C-33. 1r, 712; 2r, 761-6, 768-70, 797-800, 810-13; ref to com, 813; rep with amdts, 848, 908-09; m in amdt adopted, 909-11; 3r, 912; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 1005; r.a., 1095
- Customs Tariff (No. 1) C-27. 1r, 242; 2r, 262-3, 270-1; ref to com, 271; rep without amdt, 282; 3r, 291; r.a., 314
- Customs Tariff (No. 2) C-39. 1r, 472; 2r, 484-5, 486-9; ref to com, 489; rep without amdt, 499; 3r, 508, 514-16; r.a., 581
- Customs Tariff (No. 3) C-67. 1r, 1197; 2r, 1209-10, 1214-15; 3r, 1215; r.a., 1281
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment No. 1 C-214. 1r, 325; 2r, 377-8; 3r, 382; r.a., 397
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment No. 2 C-370. 1r, 514; 2r, 526-8, 536-7; ref to com, 537; rep without amdt, 555; 3r, 564; r.a., 581
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Berthier) C-365. 1r, 564; 2r, 602-03; 3r, 606; r.a., 656
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) C-228. 1r, 583; 2r, 601; 3r, 606; r.a., 656
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Lafontaine) C-229. 1r, 583; 2r, 601-02; 3r, 606; r.a., 656
- Environmental Contaminants C-25. 1r, 1348; 2r, 1371-2, 1403-04; ref to com, 1404; rep without amdt, 1437; 3r, 1446; r.a., 1476
- Excise Tax C-66. 1r, 1265; 2r, 1267-78; ref to com, 1278; rep without amdt, 1278; 3r, 1278-80; r.a., 1281
- Excise Tax and Excise C-40. 1r, 279; 2r, 499-501, 519-20; ref to com, 521; rep without amdt, 570; com observations re unlicensed wholesalers, 570; 3r, 570-3; r.a., 581
- Export Development C-9. 1r, 459; 2r, 459-64; 3r, 464; r.a., 467
- Farm Credit C-34. 1r, 781; 2r, 788-91, 796-7, 803-07; ref to com, 807; rep with amdt and recommendations, 847-8, 863-5, 880, m in amdt, 880-2, point of order re amdt, Speaker's ruling reserved, 882-8, Speaker's ruling on point of order, 889-90, m for adoption of rep continued, 890-2, m in amdt adopted, 892, main m as amended agreed and rep adopted, 892; 3r, 893; r.a., 899
- Federal Business Development Bank C-14. 1r, 348; 2r, 366-71, 417-18; ref to com, 418; rep without amdt, 426; 3r, 444; r.a., 467
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements C-57. 1r, 1136; 2r, 1175-8, 1180-8; ref to com, 1188; rep without amdt, 1197; 3r, 1214; r.a., 1281
- Fire Losses Replacement Account C-18. 1r, 325; 2r, 338, 353; 3r, 366; r.a., 397
- Fort-Falls Bridge Authority C-367. 1r, 781; 2r, 855-6; 3r, 867; r.a., 899
- Government Annuities Improvement C-75. 1r, 1618; 2r, 1628-30, 1640-1; ref to com, 1641; rep without amdt, 1649; 3r, 1706; r.a., 1712
- Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation C-78. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1717-18, 1721-3; 3r, 1730; r.a., 1792
- Income Tax (No. 1) C-49. 1r, 583; 2r, 606-14, 616-21, 627-40; ref to com, 640; rep without amdt, 645; m for 3r, 645-9; m in amdt, neg, 649-56; 3r, 656; r.a., 656

Bills, Public, Commons - Continued

- Income Tax (No. 2) C-65. 1r, 1403; 2r, 1417-22, 1439-42; ref to com, 1442; rep without amdt, 1454; 3r, 1459; r.a., 1476
- Income Tax (No. 3) C-58. 1r, 1792; 2r, 1836-45, 1848, 1862-6, 1869-73, 1881-3, 1908-10, 1925-9, 1931-3, 1938-46, 1955-8, 1992-2002, 2004-06, 2014-15, 2024-33; ref to com, 2033; rep with amdt, 2252-5, 2269-75, 2293-2301, 2313-15, 2325-30, 2337, m to ref rep back to com, 2337, agreed, 2338; further rep of com without amdt, 2389-98, 2401-05; 3r, 2398-2400; r.a., 2450
- Indian Oil and Gas C-15. 1r, 325; 2r, 337-8, 351-3; ref to com, 353; rep without amdt, 402; 3r, 426; r.a., 467
- Judges Act and Certain Acts related to the Supreme Courts of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island C-47. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1040-3, 1051-3; ref to com, 1053; rep without amdt, 1066; 3r, 1080; r.a., 1095
- King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up C-76. 1r, 1467; 2r, 1480-3; 3r, 1486; r.a., 1617
- Law Reform Commission C-43. 1r, 583; 2r, 624-5, 643-4, 660-1; ref to com, 661; rep without amdt, 759; 3r, 768; r.a., 832
- Lieutenant Governors Superannuation C-23. 1r, 1304; 2r, 1337-40; ref to com, 1340; rep without amdt but with observations, 1369; 3r, 1370; r.a., 1476
- Medical Care C-68. 1r, 2307; 2r, 2317-18, 2338-44, 2357-9, 2364-6; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Hon. Alan A. Macnaughton in the Chair, Hon. Marc Lalonde, Minister of Health and Welfare, taking part in debate, 2366-75; rep without amdt, 2375; 3r, 2378; r.a., 2450
- National Housing (No. 1) C-46. 1r, 742; 2r, 743-8; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Bourget in the Chair, Minister of State for Urban Affairs Hon. B. Danson taking part in debate, 748-57; rep without amdt, 757; 3r, 757; r.a., 758
- National Housing (No. 2) C-77. 1r, 1667; 2r, 1667-73; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Macnaughton in the Chair, Minister of State for Urban Affairs Hon. B. Danson taking part in debate, 1673-81; rep without amdt, 1681; 3r, 1681; r.a., 1712
- Northern Canada Power Commission C-13. 1r, 795; 2r, 807-08, 813-15; ref to com, 815; rep with amdt, 840, 851; 3r, 855; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1005; r.a., 1095
- Northwest Territories Representation C-51. 1r, 583; 2r, 594-5, 622-3; 3r, 642; r.a., 656
- Ocean Dumping Control C-37. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1038-40, 1049-51; ref to com, 1051; rep without amdt, 1088; 3r, 1088; r.a., 1096
- Old Age Security, Old Age Assistance C-62. 1r, 1087; 2r, 1101-03, 1123-6; 3r, 1126; r.a., 1134
- Olympic C-63. 1r, 1174; 2r, 1188-90, 1198-1205; ref to com, 1205; rep without amdt, 1211; 3r, 1211; r.a., 1281
- Petro-Canada C-8. 1r, 1174; 2r, 1178-9, 1215-18; ref to com, 1218; rep without amdt, 1244; 3r, 1251; r.a., 1281
- Petroleum Administration C-32. 1r, 847; 2r, 861-3, 902-07, 012-16, 925-7, 935-6; ref to com, 936; rep with amdt, 981-2, 1002; m to amend French version, 1013; 3r, 1013; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1034; r.a., 1095
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments (No. 1) C-10. 1r, 583; 2r, 595-601, 614-15, 621-2; ref to com, 622; rep without amdt, 684; 3r, 709; r.a., 731
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments (No. 2) C-53. 1r, 1136; 2r, 1156-7, 1166-8; ref to com, 1168; rep without amdt, 1180; 3r, 1198; r.a., 1281
- Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation C-38. 1r, 464; 2r, 464-6; 3r, 466-7; r.a., 467
- Public Service Staff Relations C-70. 1r, 1235; 2r, 1235-7, 1244-6; 3r, 1251; r.a., 1281
- Railway C-48. 1r, 712; 2r, 760-1; ref to com, 761; rep without amdt, 795; 3r, 803; r.a., 832
- Regional Development Incentives C-74. 1r, 1524; 2r, 1601-02, 1619-22; ref to com, 1622; rep without amdt, 1639; 3r, 1658-9; r.a., 1712
- Representation 1974 C-36. 1r, 402; 2r, 420-4, 435-40; ref to com, 440; rep without amdt, 443; 3r, 443; r.a., 467
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations C-59. 1r, 817; 2r, 817-27; 3r, 827; r.a., 832
- Salaries C-24. 1r, 1065; 2r, 1081, 1091-5; 3r, 1095; r.a., 1096
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries C-44. 1r, 847; 2r, 856-61, 868-80; 3r, 889; r.a., 899

Bills, Public, Commons - Concluded

- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirements Benefits C-81. 1r, 2177; 2r, 2186-7, 2193-6; ref to Committee of the Whole, 2196; considered in Committee of the Whole, Senator Macnaughton in the Chair, 2203-07; rep without amdt, 2207; 3r, 2207; r.a., 2207
- Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 C-16. 1r, 1065; 2r, 1103-07; m to amend French version, 1122-3; 3r, 1123; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1136; r.a., 1281
- Statute Law (Superannuation) C-52. 1r, 1706; 2r, 1706-11; 3r, 1711; r.a., 1712
- Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) C-4. 1r, 242; 2r, 267-70; ref to com, 270; rep without amdt, 272; 3r, 281; r.a., 314
- Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) C-86. 1r, 1856; 2r, 1883-4, 1910-11; 3r, 1917; r.a., 2002
- Supplementary Borrowing Authority C-80. 1r, 1638; 2r, 1641-4; ref to com, 1644; rep without amdt, 1649; 3r, 1649-50; r.a., 1712
- Temporary Immigration Security C-85. 1r, 1813; 2r, 1820, 1827-36; ref to com, 1836; rep without amdt, 1874; 3r, 1893; r.a., 2002
- Two-Price Wheat C-19. 1r, 900; 2r, 928-30, 942-4; ref to com, 944; rep without amdt but with recommendations, 1088-90; 3r, 1090; r.a., 1095
- Unemployment Insurance C-69. 1r, 1686; 2r, 1686-95; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Macnaughton in the Chair, Minister of Manpower and Immigration Hon. Robert K. Andras taking part in debate, 1695-1700; m to amend clause 6 not carried, 1700, debate cont, 1700-06; 3r, 1706; r.a., 1712
- West Coast Grain Handling Operations C-12. 1r, 76; 2r, 77-93; 3r, 93-94; r.a., 95
- West Coast Ports Operations 1975 C-56. 1r, 723; 2r, 724-30; 3r, 730; r.a., 731
- Western Grain Stabilization C-41. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1723-6, 1735-8; ref to com, 1738; rep without amdt, 1756; 3r, 1766; r.a., 1792
- Wheat Board (No. 2) C-88. 1r, 2260; 2r, 2315-17, 2330-3; ref to com, 2333; rep without amdt, 2356; 3r, 2356-7; r.a., 2450

Bills, Public, Senate

- Aeronautics S-34. 1r, 2103; 2r, 2124-5, 2130-2; ref to com, 2132; rep without amdt, 2141; 3r, 2141; r.a., 2207
- Aircraft Registry S-5. 1r, 12; 2r, 172-4; ref to com, 174; rep with recommendation that bill be not proceeded with, 980-1, 999-1002; bill removed from Order Paper, 1002
- Alberta-British Columbia Boundary S-13. 1r, 136; 2r, 219, 223-5; 3r, 225; Commons amdt, 326, concurred in, 336-7; r.a., 397
- Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation S-27. 1r, 1034; 2r, 1062, 1067; 3r, 1080; r.a., 1617
- Canadian Wheat Board, see Wheat Board
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) S-21. 1r, 443; 2r, 528-31, 557-62, 574-5, 587-91, 658-60, 688-92, 937-40; m in amdt that subject matter be ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 940-1, 974-5, 982-3, Order stands, 1157-8, 1168-9, 1459-60, Order discharged and bill withdrawn, 1733
- Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) S-14. 1r, 193; 2r, 293-5; ref to com, 295
- Customs S-4. 1r, 12; 2r, 131, 167-9; ref to com, 169; rep without amdt, 213; 3r, 222; r.a., 314
- Explosives S-17. 1r, 243; 2r, 263-4, 271-2; ref to com, 272; rep without amdt, 280; 3r, 291; r.a., 1134
- Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies S-7. 1r, 47; 2r, 100-03; ref to com, 107; rep without amdt, 160; 3r, 180; r.a., 314
- Feeds S-10. 1r, 47; 2r, 129-31, 157-9, 161-2; ref to com, 162; rep with amdts, 584-6, 592; 3r, 594; Commons amdts, 1467, 1480, 1485-6, ref to com, 1635-7; rep that Commons amdt be concurred in with substitution of one amdt, 1650-3, 1660-1; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1974; r.a., 2002
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code S-19. 1r, 300; 2r, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456; ref to com, 456; rep with amdts, 969-71, 983, 1007-10; m to amend com rep, 1010-11, 1014-21, 1023-30, neg, 1030-1, debate on rep cont, 1031-3, 1036-8, 1046-9, rep adopted, 1049, m for 3r, 1066; m to amend sec. 1 of bill, 1066, 1074-5, agreed, 1075; m for 3r cont, 1075-6; m that bill be not proceeded with, 1076-7, neg, 1078; m for 3r cont, 1078-80; 3r, 1080

Bills, Public, Senate - Concluded

- Immigration S-12. 1r, 136; 2r, 164-7, 194-8, 213-19, 222-3, 230-3; ref to com, 233; rep without amdt, 239; 3r, 244-5; r.a., 397
- Income Tax Conventions S-32. 1r, 1777; 2r, 1789-90, 1793-8; ref to com, 1798; rep without amdt, 1867; 3r, 1881; Commons amdts, 2236-7, 2244; r.a., 2301
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department S-15. 1r, 243; 2r, 272-4, 281, 304-6; ref to com, 306; rep with amdts, 348-9, 368; 3r, 373, 398-400; r.a., 1134
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety S-8. 1r, 47; 2r, 125-6, 149-52; 3r, 161; Commons amdts, 2058, 2066-8; r.a., 2096
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) S-23. 1r, 643; 2r, 800-02, 833-6, 840-1, 893-6, Order stands, 1168, 1297-8, 1459, 1816-17, 1848-9
- Privileges and Immunities (International Organizations) S-25. 1r, 934; 2r, 957-8; 3r, 973; r.a., 1281
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks (No.1) S-9. 1r, 47; 2r, 126-8, 155-7; ref to com, 157; rep with amdt, 240, 245; 3r, 245; r.a., 832
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks (No.2) S-35. 1r, 2103; 2r, 2125-6, 2132; 3r, 2144; r.a., 2207
- Quarantine S-31. 1r, 1763; 2r, 1778-80, 1785-7, 1788; ref to com, 1788; rep without amdt, 1874; 3r, 1893; r.a., 2096
- Railways S-1 (pro forma). 1r, 7
- Senate (Intersessional Authority) S-22. 1r, 505; 2r, 576-7, 770-3, 815-16; ref to com, 816
- Statute Revision S-3. 1r, 12; 2r, 128-9, 159; ref to com, 159; rep without amdt, 243; 3r, 253; r.a., 467
- Statutes of Canada (to revise references to Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec) S-16. 1r, 243; 2r, 274-7, 291-3; 3r, 301; r.a., 467
- Supreme Court S-2. 1r, 12; 2r, 103-06, 153-5, 162-4; ref to com, 164; rep without amdt, 243; 3r, 253; r.a., 467
- Telelobe Canada, see Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation S-27
- Territorial Lands S-20. 1r, 326; 2r, 371-2, 375-7; ref to com, 377; rep with amdt, 579; 3r, 579; r.a., 1095
- Wheat Board S-6. 1r, 12; 2r, 106-07, 169-72; ref to com, 172; rep without amdt, 255; 3r, 265-7; r.a., 656

Blois, Hon. Fred M.

Identity cards for senators, 179-80

Bonnell, Hon. M. Lorne

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 71-75
- Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland rink and to Charlottetown rink, 1889
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2313
- Real Property Act, PEI, 2313
- Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, New Delhi conference, 1495-1500
- Authority and prestige of Parliament, external and internal threats, 1499
- Building of a new international economic order, 1497-8
- Canadian delegation, 1495
- Commonwealth as instrument of social, political and economic transformation, 1499-1500
- Development of Southeast Asia, 1496
- Energy crisis, 1497
- Canadian requirements, imports and exports, 1497
- Environment, control of pollution and protection of wildlife, 1498-9
- Indian Ocean as zone of peace, 1496
- International security in Africa south of the Sahara, 1496-7
- Ministers, Members and Conflicts of Interest, 1499
- Multinational corporations, 1498
- Nuclear energy, 1497, 1499
- Parliament of India, 1495-6
- Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, 1495-6
- Social problems of unemployment, violence, youth unrest and drugs, 1498
- World population growth and food resources, 1497-8

Bonnell, Hon. M. Lorne - Concluded

- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 72
- Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, possible increase in fares, 1815, 1860, 1861
- Fisheries, tuna research, 73-74; 200 mile limit, 74
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 446-8, 1019, 1020, 1046, 1078-9
 - CMA resolution re non-medical use of cannabis, 447
 - Educating of public and youth as to drug danger, 448
 - 'Give', definition of, 1020
 - Long-standing effects from use of marihuana, 448
 - Misleading newspaper reporting of proceedings on bill, 1046
 - National Organization for Reform of Marihuana Laws (US), 447
 - Penalties for drug convictions, 447
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1162-3
 - Prince Edward Island, 1162
 - Wildlife affected by forest conditions, 1162
- Inflation, 72-74
 - Commodity prices, 72
 - Petroleum costs, 72
 - Population control, 72
- Matheson, Hon. Alexander W., the late, former Premier of Prince Edward Island, 1861-2
- National Anthem, 74
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill (No. 1) S-9, 126-7, 128
 - Authority for making regulations, 128
 - Certificates of registration, 127
 - False advertising, 128
 - Proprietary division of food and drug regulations, 127
 - Quality, manufacture, safety and effectiveness of proprietary medicines, regulations re, 127
- Regional economic expansion, 74
- Senate reform
 - Committee work, 74-75
 - Term of appointment, 75
- Trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island, 1903, 1922
- Transportation
 - Air service, PEI, 73
 - British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2049-54, 2070
 - Prince Edward Island
 - Background of ferry services to PEI, NB and NS, 2050-1
 - CNR and Canadian Brotherhood of Transport and General Workers, labour disputes, 2053-4
 - Charlottetown Guardian* article re statements of Highways Minister, 2053
 - Excerpt from BNA Act re provisions relating to PEI services to be assumed by federal government, 2049-50
 - Ferry services of Albert, Northern Light and Stanley, 2150
 - Marine East Coast Co-ordinating Committee, 2050, 2054
 - National transportation policy, 2053
 - Potatoes, transportation by truck and resulting highway and marketing costs, 2052
 - Railway traffic provisions, 2051-2
 - CNR discontinuance of passenger service, 2052
 - Transportation rates for passengers, vehicles and freight, 2051
 - Federal government responsibility for increases, 2051
- Unemployment insurance, 74

Boucher, Hon. William A. (Deceased June 23/76)

Tributes, 2251-2

Bourget, Hon. Maurice, P.C.

Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 980-1, 990-7, 1002

Transport and Communications Committee report, 980-1

Correspondence between Committee and provincial attorneys general and certain federal depts., 990-7

Federal-provincial conferences, lack of, 1002

Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1986

Canada Year Book, 1822

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', 1099, 1118-20

Council of Europe, Parliamentary Assembly, Strasbourg conference, 1431-4

Economic and cultural development (OECD), 1431

Economic disruptions and difficulties, 1432

Energy resources, 1432-3

European shipping policy, 1433

International investment, 1432

International relations, 1433

Policies for non-inflationary recovery, 1432

Relations with underdeveloped countries, 1432, 1433

Trade pledge, 1432

World economic interdependence, 1432

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2417-18

Deterrent aspect, 2417

Gallup poll, 2418

Hoover, J. Edgar, excerpt from letter sent to officers of FBI, 2417

Law and order, respect for, 2417

Estimates

Olympic Games deficit, 1986

European Parliament, 331-3

Energy resources, 332

Excerpts from Foreign Affairs Committee report, 332-3

Trade and investment relationships, 332

Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1337-8, 1339-40

Contribution rate, 1338

Lieutenant governors not included, 1338

Pension at 65 years of age or upon becoming disabled, 1338

National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 748-67 (Chairman, Committee of the Whole)

National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1678

Appraisal of housing costs in various areas, 1678

Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 807-09, 814-15

Commission members, functions and jurisdiction, 808, 814

Construction of transmission network, 808

Employment of native people, 808

Expenditures over $50,000, approval of Governor in Council for, 815

Financial records and procedures, maintenance of, 809

Operating budget, 808, 809

Ownership of northern generating power, 808

Power rates and terms of crown loans, 808, 809

Rules and Orders Committee

Powers and duties of committees, 1425

Sub-committee to coordinate scheduling of meetings of committees, 828-9, 1091

Members, 924

Bourget, Hon. Maurice, P.C. - Concluded

Senate business, 924, 1880, 1916, 2044, 2121

Speaker pro tem, 382, 396, 1395, 2176, 2361Bourque, Hon. Romuald (Deceased August 14, 1974)

Tributes, 11-12

British Columbia

Alaska Boundary Treaty of 1825, 100th anniversary of establishment of Canada's western boundaries, 578

Alberta-British Columbia boundary, 136, 219, 223-5

Food retailing industry salaries, 879

Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, 1959-64, 2199-2200, 2278-9

Immigration problems in Vancouver and other Canadian cities, deportees returning illegally, 166-7

Marine safety, B.C. fisheries, 1814-15, 1860

Parliamentarians visit to Senate, 1087

Strike legislation, 1326-7

Labour movement reaction, 1327-8

Supermarkets, 1327; Canada Safeway, 1327

Victoria Legislative Assembly representative Mr. William Templeton, visitor to Senate, 854

British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11. 1r, 99; 2r, 132-4; ref to com, 134; rep without amdt, 178; 3r, 194; Commons amdt, 325, concurred in, 338; r.a., 397British North America Act

Transportation, BNA Act as it pertains to, 2049-54, 2063-6, 2070, 2115-18, 2196-8, 2211-12, 2217-21, 2333-4

See TransportationBritish North America Acts 1867 to 1975 (appointment of senators for NWT and Yukon)

Commons representation in Territories, 1060

Jurisdiction of Parliament in Senate appointments, 1061

Manitoba and other provinces, Senate representation (1886), 1061

Native representation, 1061

Ombudsman for territories, 1060

Property qualification, 1060

Residence requirement, 1054

Senate reform, 1061

Speakers: Senators

Forsey, Eugene A., 1061-2

Grosart, Allister, 1060-1

McIlraith, George, 1054

British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 bill C-3. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1054, 1060-2; 3r, 1081; r.a., 1095British Trade Mission

Montreal office and other offices in Canada, inquiry, Senator Forsey, 206, 252

Broadcasting

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Estimates for, 201

Gerda Munsinger, appearance on television program, 1007, 1013, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7, 1618-19

Broadcasting - Concluded

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation - Concluded

- Remembrance Day program, 257
- TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', 225-6, 1099, 1118-20, 1127-9
- Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission, 803, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51, 998, 1007, 1095
- Canadian Television news report on death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as member of Conservative Party, 1241
- Commercial advertising by Guaranty Trust, use of picture of Parliament Buildings, 556
- References to Newfoundland by CTV, question of privilege, 2215-16
- Televising of proceedings of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54
- Television and radio coverage of Senate and committee proceedings, 1365-6
- See Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58

Buckwold, Hon. Sidney L.

- Aeronautics bill S-34, 2125
- Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing bill C-21, 1630-1
 - Bank loans for initial payments, processing, selling costs, 1631
 - Food production for foreign aid, 1630
 - Marketing, 1630-1
 - Ontario wheat producers problems, 1631
 - Stabilization of agricultural industry, 1630
 - Tobacco industry, government payment re, 1631
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1974 C-31, 202-03
- Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland rink, 1889
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2075
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 559-60
 - Conviction of innocent person, 559-60
 - Resolution of the Senate re present law, suggestion, 560
- Criminal Law Amendment bill C-71, 1898
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 1799-1812
 - Casual employees, 1811-12
 - Classification, 1806
 - Collective bargaining in the Public Service, facts and figures, 1801
 - Designated employees, 1802-04
 - Incompetence and incapacity, disciplinary action, 1810-11
 - Interim report, 1799
 - Managerial and confidential exclusions, 1810
 - Maximum penalties for unlawful activity, 1805-06
 - Pay research in collective bargaining, 1808-10
 - Prosecution of offences under the act, 1804-05
 - Public interest in Public Service bargaining, 1801-02
 - Public Service Employment Act, 1800-01
 - Scope and limitations of committee's investigations, 1799-1800
 - Technological change and long-term layoff, 1807-08
 - Union voting procedures, 1811
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
 - Availability of draft report to press, 1755-6
 - Reports
 - First report, terms of reference, 255
 - Second report, tabled in Commons Nov. 26/74
 - Third report, 998-9; recommendation to establish permanent Staff Relations Board, 998; workload of present Board, 999
 - Fourth report re Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, rep without amdt, 1211

Buckwold, Hon. Sidney L. - ContinuedEmployer-Employee Relations in the Public Service - *Concluded*Reports - Concluded

Fifth report, Superannuation bill C-52, rep with amds, 1545-7

Sixth report tabled and printed as appendix, 1793, 1799-1812

Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, ref to com, 1442

Estimates

Energy, Mines and Resources, 203

Wheat, two-price system, 203

Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 572, 573

Unlicensed wholesalers, 572, 573

Farm Credit bill C-34, 806, 865

Age limit, 865

Comments of Chairman of Farm Credit Corp., 865

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1079

Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1169, 1170

Provincial efforts to alleviate problem, question of, 1169, 1170

Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee,

1959-64, 2200

Immigration bill S-12, 165-6

Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 613

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2328-30

Broadcasting, 2329; CRTC, 2329

Canada-US relations, 2328-9

Principle of bill, definition of, 2328

'Substantially the same', 2329

Time magazine, 2328-9

Insulin, production of, 100, 110-11

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Colombo, Sri Lanka conference, 988

Aid to developing countries, 988; Sri Lanka and Pakistan, 988

Birth control, 988

Education and training in resource development, 988

King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up bill C-76, 1483

National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 747-8, 749, 754, 755

Building materials tax, 747-8

Forgiveness provision for municipalities, 747

Housing starts, 747

Interest charges, 747

Registered Home Ownership Program, 747

Rental housing projects, 754

Sewage treatment plants and trunk storm sewer systems, 747

US program for income tax deductions of interest and municipal taxes, 748

Olympic bill C-63, 1190

Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1429

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill C-10, 599, 600

Labour problems and effect on wheat and farm industries, 600

Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 127, 128

Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, 1235-7, 1245-6

Apolitical aspect of board appointments, 1236

Authority of chairman to appoint outside arbitrator, 1237

Backlog of work of board, 1236-7

Board composition and responsibilities, 1236-7, 1246-7

Term of office, 1246-7

Finkleman report, 1235-6

Topics involving committee recommendations, 1235

Buckwold, Hon. Sydney L. - Concluded

- Representation bill C-36, 438
- Russia-Canada hockey series, 59
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 823-4
 - Labour unrest, 823-4
 - Wage settlements and controls, 824
- Secrecy in government, discussion of TV program re committee involved in, 1349
- Senate business, 1090, 1879-80
- Televising of committee proceedings, 550-1
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1831, 1832
- Territorial Lands bill S-20, 371-2
 - Conflict of interest, 372
- Transportation
 - BNA Act provisions relating to transportation, 2219, 2220
 - Saskatchewan, inquiry re rail abandonment, 2220
- United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants, 1238, see also 1242-4, 1248-9
- Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1725, 1726
- Wheat Board bill S-6, 106-07, 172
 - Distribution of balance in wheat account, 107
 - Grain prices, 107
 - Initial prices, 107
 - Operations of Board, 172

Budget speech

- Accommodation for senators in Commons gallery, 255, 1087, 2150
- Date of presentation, question, 161

Bulgaria

- President of the General Assembly and His Excellency the Ambassador, visitors to Senate, 124

Burchill, Hon. G. Percival

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 122
- Air Canada service Fredericton-Ottawa, 854-5, 867
- Canadian economy
 - Attack on Inflation – a program of national action, 1330
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2075
- Criminal Law Amendment bill C-71, 1746
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1158-9, 1816
 - Cost-sharing of insecticide spraying, 1158-9
 - Damaging side effects of chemicals, 1159
 - Excerpt from paper prepared by director of Maritime Forest Research Centre, 1158
 - Federal-provincial plans for assistance, 1816
 - New Brunswick dependence on forest industry, 1158
 - Newspaper headlines re lack of federal assistance, 1158
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, 1796
- Lumber industry, New Brunswick, effect of inflation on, 122
- Medical Care bill C-68, 2358-9
 - Nursing homes, 2358-9; NB, 2358-9
- Transportation
 - BNA Act as it pertains to transportation, 2221
 - Intercolonial railway, 2221

Business corporations

Canada Business Corporations, 472, 489-98, 666-71, 685, 712, 731

Cameron, Hon. Donald

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 37-45

Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) bill S-14, 293-5, 480

Costs of registration system, 294

Question as to progress of bill in committee, 480

Resolution of Medicine Hat church re programs of radio, TV, theatre and movies, 294

Statistics on crime and gun accidents in Canada and US, 294, 295

Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 37

Industry, Canadian textile problems, value of suits or suiting materials imported, 901, 934

Labour defiance of court orders, 2237

Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians, 930-3

Agriculture, 931, 932

Banff School of Advanced Management, visit to Mexico and other countries, 930-1

Exchange visits of parliamentarians and businessmen, 932-3

Housing, 931

Industrial development, 931, 932

Tourism, 931-2

Northland Bank bill C-1002, 1598-9

Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1409, 1410

Resource development, 38

Televising of committee proceedings, 554

Transportation, 38-45

Canadian Pacific Railway, 38-45

Canadian Pacific: A Brief History, by J. L. McDougall, 40-41

Canadian Transportation and Distribution, excerpt from magazine re freight policy, 43

Construction costs of railway, 38

Crowsnest Pass, 41-42

Globe and Mail articles re CPR, 43, 44

Hudson's Bay Company, 39

Income from oil, gas, minerals, real estate and related operations, 40-41

Integration of CNR and CPR, 43-44

Land grants and sales, 39-42

Marathon Realty, CPR subsidiary, 39

Tax and land concessions, 38-39

The CPR: A Century of Corporate Welfare, by Robert Chodos, 38-39, 40

Canada business corporations

Administrative discretion, 494

Amalgamations, 492-3; Black & Decker case, 492-3

Amending of bylaws and submitting of proposals by shareholders, 491

Business corporations incorporated for objects other than provincial, 669

Complaints re mishandling of business, 492

Directors, 492, 493-4, 668-9, 670-1

Energy Board, 685

Failure to file documents, penalty for, 669

Inspection of records and shareholders' lists, 669

Liability of directors, 669

Ontario Corporations Act, 493, 495, 496

Pipeline construction application, amdt re definition of 'company', 670

Proposals for New Business Corporations Law for Canada, report of task force, 490

Registration of corporations, 490

Canada business corporations - Concluded

- Reorganization of companies, 669-70
- Senate committee recommendations (1970), 490, 685
- Shares and dividends, 491, 492, 496
- Voting trust agreements, 492
- Witnesses from government and private industry, 670
- Speakers: Senators
 - Flynn, Jacques, 685
 - Hayden, Salter A., 489-93, 498, 666-71
 - Walker, David J., 494-7

Canada Business Corporations bill C-29. 1r, 472; 2r, 489-98; ref to com, 498; rep with amdts, 666-71, 685; 3r, 685; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 712; r.a., 731

Canada pension plan

- Applications and payments, retroactive clause, 277-8
- Assignment or attachment of benefits, 278
- Drop-out provision, 249
- Employment by country other than Canada, 250-1
- Income Security for Canadians, White Paper on, 250
- Male and female contributors, equalization of benefits, 250
- Pensionable earnings and exemption, 251
- Religious sects exempt from contributions, 250, 278
- Self-employed persons, 251
- Social Security in Canada, Working Paper on, 250
- Speakers: Senators
 - Carter, Chesley W., 249-52, 278-9
 - Macdonald, John M., 277-8

Canada Pension Plan bill C-22. 1r, 242; 2r, 249-52, 277-9; ref to com, 279; rep without amdt, 300; 3r, 307; r.a., 314

Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Florida meeting, 2221-2, 2224-33

- Agenda, 2224
- Canada-US relations, 2222
- Canadian Centennial coins, presentation to US delegates, 2222
- Committee I, 2224, 2225
 - Canadian cultural legislation and regulations, 2227
 - Eastport, 2226
 - Flathead River, 2225-6
 - Garrison Diversion project, 2225
 - Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, 2225
 - Law of the Sea, 2226-7
 - Richelieu-Lake Champlain, 2225
 - Skagit, 2226
 - Water boundaries, 2226
 - West Coast pollution, 2226
- Committee II, 2224, 2227-30
 - Anti-inflation program, 2228
 - Canada-US automotive agreement, 2227-8
 - Canadian cultural legislation and regulations, 2229-30
 - Controls on trade with Cuba, 2229
 - Extension to Canada of US restrictions on political contributions, 2230

Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Florida meeting - *Concluded*Committee II - Concluded

Foreign Investment Review Act, 2229

Multi-lateral trade negotiations, 2230

Saskatchewan takeover of potash companies, 2228-9

Trans-Border economic issues, 2227

US dumping charges and countervailing duties, 2228

Committee III, 2230-2

Agriculture, 2232

Energy, 2222, 2230-2

Plenary meeting, 2232

Speaker: Senator

Macnaughton, Alan A., 2221-2, 2224-33

Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Quebec meeting, 1137-43, 1144-55

Committees and members of, 1138

Delegates, 1138

Designation of meeting places and timetables, 1138

Energy resources, 1141-2

Athabaska tar sands and Colorado oil shale, 1141

Coal reserves, 1141

Nuclear energy, 1142

Prices, 1141; controversy re, 1141

Shortfall in deliveries to US, 1141

Solar and geothermal energy, harnessing of tides, heat pumps, 1142

Excerpt from speech by Prime Minister Trudeau, 1140

Excerpt from speech by US Deputy Secretary of State, 1140

Reform of Canadian section of Group, 1137-40

Trans-border problems, 1139

US Congress contacts, importance of, 1139-40

Speakers: Senators

Macnaughton, Alan A., 1137-40

van Roggen, George C., 1140-3

Canada-United States relations, 66-68, 71, 227-9

Communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re, 2192-3, 2377-8

Foreign Affairs Committee authorized to report on, 227-9; committee authorized to publish and distribute

Vol. I of report, 1653; report tabled, 1716

Questions re, 1625-7

Report of Foreign Affairs Committee, 1747-50

Changing concepts of the relationship, 1748

Current problems, 1748

Information program, 1749

Inter-Parliamentary Group meetings, 1749

Legislative channels and contacts, 1748-9

Statistical comparisons on trade, 1749

The Institutional Framework for the Relationship, Vol. I of report, 1747-8

Trade relations, 1748

Tributes to committee members, witnesses and staff, 1750

Unofficial meeting of US Ambassador with media representatives in Ottawa, 1626

Canada Year Book, 1821-3

Delays in publishing of, 1822

Translation of, 1822

Updating of charts, data, statistics, etc., 1821

Canadian Armed Forces

Casualties in defence of France in World War I and World War II, 1417

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Estimates for, 201

Operating expenditures, capital expenditures, Summer Olympics, 201

Munsinger, Gerda, appearance on television program, 1007, 1013, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7, 1618-19

Profane language used on TV programs, 1128

Report of La Presse article re alleged statement by Senator Lamontagne, question of privilege, 1165-6

Role of CBC and CRTC administration, 1128

Saint-Jean-Baptiste Day program, 1128

TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', 225-6, 1099, 1118-20, 1127-9

Dubious nature of film, with separatist tendencies, 1127

National unity, depreciating of, 1128

See Broadcasting

Canadian coins, reported change in design, 1937, 1955

Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank

See National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, 923, 935-6, 958-62, 973-4, 1057, 1062-3, 1281

Canadian Council of Christians and Jews

Brotherhood Week, 542

Indian and non-Indian children, wilderness camping, 542

Labour-management conferences, 542

Religious dialogues, 542

Student exchange, 542

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation – a program of national action, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1312-14, 1319-30, 1349-53, 1411-15, 1443-5, 1446-9, 1454-8, 1516

Anti-Inflation Board, functions and powers, 1301-02, 1314

BC strike legislation, 1326-7

Labour movement reaction, 1327-8

Supermarkets, 1327; Canada Safeway, 1327

Business groups to be affected, 1300

CBC News Magazine commentary re financial operations of business groups, 1314

Consultations with provincial finance and labour ministers, 1303, 1312

Corporate profits, lack of ceiling on, 1444

Cost-of-living index (1970-75), 1312-13

Credibility of government program, question of, 1350-1

Demands vs productivity, 1350

Deputy ministers' salaries, 1314

Dollar value (1946-75), 1298

Economic Summit Conference, Canada's absence from, 1447

Energy, raising of costs by OPEC nations and effect on Canada's economy, 1299

Excerpts from Prime Minister's speeches re government policies on controls, 1443, 1454-5

Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 1444

Federal-provincial leadership, 1374-5

Financial and monetary policies, 1456

Government expenditures in federal and provincial areas, 1313-14, 1324-5, 1351-2, 1411, 1412-13, 1443-4, 1447-8, 1456-7

Aircraft purchases, 1444

Bank of Canada building, 1324

Canadian economy - Continued*Attack on Inflation - ContinuedGovernment expenditures - Concluded*

- Bilingualism program, 1352
- Consultants' fees, 1444
- Federal budget deficit, 1447
- Members' indemnities, 1448
- Microsystems, 1444
- Mirabel Airport, 1314, 1325, 1444
- Olympic entertainment, 1352
- Ontario, 1447
- Pickering Airport, 1325
- Prime Minister's statement re, 1448
- Public Service, salary increases, 1444
- Salaries of top-level officials, 1352
- Sculptures, 1324-5
- Studies of toilet facilities, offices, industrial plants, etc., 1352
- Translation services, 1352
- UK government budget costs, 1448
- Work force, 1352
- Government role in inflationary trend, 1350
- Gross National Product, 1413, 1443
- Guidelines of White Paper on Attack on Inflation, 1300
- Housing needs, 1301
 - Excerpt from statement by minister, 1457
- Industrial profit margin, decrease in, 1413
- Inflation, effects on economy, 1298-9
- Inflation, types of, 1321
- Interest rates, 1313, 1314, 1327-8
- Labour and industry, wage settlements affecting international trade, 1300, 1447
- Labour and management demands, 1293, 1374, 1412, 1414, 1448-9, 1457-8
- Limit of increase for low-income workers, 1327
- Loopholes alleged in program, 1329-30
- Low-income groups, 1313, 1314
- Maximum increase allowable to wage earners and other income groups, 1301
- Members of Parliament salary increases, 1352
- Money supply, increase in, 1323
- No-interest loans to foreign countries, 1314
- Parliamentary and other governmental restraints, 1302, 1312
- Pensioners, 1323
- Prices control vs wages control, 1322, 1457
- Problems of equity in temporary freeze of wages and controls, 1322
- Professional groups, 1301
- Propane and butane industry employee-employer dispute and withdrawal of essential services, 1328
- Psychological reactions to controls, 1350, 1352-3
- Public interpretation of proposals, 1351
- Rectification of disparities between men and women, 1320
- Regional disparities, 1313
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, powers of, 1320
- Responsibility of individuals in assessment and carrying out of proposals, 1350
- Restriction, effect on free enterprise, 1457
- Salaries of members of Parliament and executives, objections to, 1325, 1326
- Senate role in attack on inflation, 1322
- Social services, 1324

Canadian economy - *ConcludedAttack on Inflation - *ConcludedSolving of inflation by

Lessening of external pressures involving trading partners, 1353

Productivity, 1353

Self-discipline, 1353

Statement by Prime Minister re right to strike and wages above guidelines, 1293

Temporary aspect of controls, 1350

Trade strategies, 1374

Trades Union Congress of Britain, statement of policy, 1328-9

US controls, 1329

Voluntary restraints, 1313

Wage and price controls, unsatisfactory results of, 1351-2

US publication re, 1351

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 1443-5

Desruisseaux, Paul, 1411-15

Flynn, Jacques, 1454-8

Forsey, Eugene A., 1319-26

Lang, Daniel, 1446-9

Lawson, Edward M., 1326-30

Manning, Ernest C., 1349-53

Perrault, Raymond J., 1293, 1298-1303

Phillips, Orville H., 1312-14

Stanbury, Richard J., 1373-5

See Anti-inflation, 1500-01, 1503-13, 1524-37, 1538-45, 1550-64, 1573-87, 1617, 2076, 2098, 2104-06, 2111-15, 2133-9, 2141, 2150-1, 2152

Canadian Film Industry

Academy award to Crawley Films Ltd., of Ottawa, 2003

Canadian Labour Congress

Political affiliation, question re announced objective of CLC to take part in decision-making process relating to government policy development, 2153-4

Possibility of general strike, newspaper report re meeting and proposals for liberal corporatism, 2130

Salary increases for officers, 2159, 2209-10

Canadian National Railways

Cost of construction of tower in Toronto, 2185-6, 2263-4

Services in Atlantic provinces, 1923-4, 1976

See Railways

Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation

Background of Corporation, 1062

Change of name to 'Telegobe Canada', 1062

President and chief executive officer, 1062

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 1067

Langlois, Leopold, 1062

Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation bill S-27. 1r, 1034; 2r, 1062, 1067; 3r, 1080; r.a., 1617

Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission

- Association of Communications Regulatory Bodies, 842
- Bell Canada applications, 831-2
- Cable television, jurisdiction of, 842, 850
- CTC members and employees, protection re employment, 850
- Communications: Some Federal Proposals, 842-3, 850
- Executive committee, 830
- Head office location, 830
- Matters pending before CTC, 830
- Powers of commission, 830-1
- Provincial and consumer representation on commission, question of, 831
- Provincial consultations and jurisdiction, 841, 849-50
- Renaming of commission, 829
- Responsibility to report to Minister of Communications, 830
- Terms of appt. and qualification of commission members, 830, 831
- Speakers: Senators
 - Bélisle, Rhéal, 849-51
 - Forsey, Eugene A., 829-32
 - Grosart, Allister, 841-3

Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5. 1r, 803; 2r, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51; ref to com, 851; rep without amdt, 998; 3r, 1007; r.a., 1095

Canadian sovereignty symbol

- Importation of beavers from US for Grey Owl film, 687-8, 709
- Lord Beaverbrook of New Brunswick, 686
- Non-restriction on commercial use of beaver symbol, 687
- Petitions and communications received to support adoption of beaver symbol, 686-7
- Significance of beaver to Indians, armed forces and areas of national interest, 686
- Speakers: Senators
 - Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 685-8
 - Grosart, Allister, 687
 - Quart, Josie D., 687

Canadian Sovereignty Symbol (Beaver, Castor canadensis) bill C-373. 1r, 663; 2r, 685-8, 709; 3r, 714; r.a., 731

Canadian Wheat Board, 12, 106-07, 169-72, 255, 265-7, 656, 2260, 2315-17, 2330-3, 2356-7, 2450

- Adjustment payment to grain producers, 1297
- See* Wheat Board bills C-88 and S-6

Candu reactors

- Sale of Candu reactors to Argentina and Republic of Korea, state of negotiations, 1307, 1319

Capital punishment

- Commutation of death sentence, 400, 443, 528-31, 557-62, 574-5, 587-91, 658-60, 688-92, 937-41, 974-5, 982-3, 1157-8, 1168-9
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment), 643, 800-02, 893-6, 1168, 1297-8, 1459, 1816-18, 1836, 1848-9, 2243-4
- Partial abolition and expiration of trial period, 1656
- See* Criminal Code and Criminal Law bills

Carter, Hon. Chesley W.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 116-20
- Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report, 320-3
 - Employment of older people, 322
 - Research on social welfare and the aged, 321-2
- Air Canada, service between St. John's and Ottawa, 508
- Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 326, 336-7
- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1575
 - Termination clause, 1575
- Canada Pension Plan bill C-22, 249-52, 278-9
 - Appeals, 251
 - Drop-out provision, 249
 - Earnings and retirement test, 251
 - Employment by country other than Canada, 250-1
 - Income Security for Canadians, White Paper on, 250
 - Pensionable earnings and exemption, 251
 - Religious sects exempt from contributions, 250
 - Self-employed persons, 251
 - Social Security in Canada, Working Paper on, 250
- Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland rink, 1889
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2038-9, 2042-3
 - Compensation as distinct from disability pension, 2038
 - Evaders, 2039
 - Prisoners of war held by European powers and in Korea, 2039
 - Prisoners of war held by Japanese, 2038, 2039, 2043
 - Statistics on duration of imprisonments, 2042
 - War veterans' allowance, 2043
 - Widows' allowances, 2038-9, 2042-3
- Crime and violence, 1288-91
 - Anatomy of Human Aggression*, by Dr. Eric Fromm, 1289
 - Causes and Prevention of Violence and Crime, US National Commission on, 1289
 - Decline in spiritual values, 1291
 - Permissive society, 1290-1
 - Wall Street Journal* article by Claire Boothe Luce, 1290-1
 - Statistics on rape, robberies, murders, male and female offenders, 1289
 - Whatever Became of Sin?*, by Carl Menninger, 1291
- Crime increase, 117, 118
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 848, 908
- Estimates
 - Economic development, 190
 - Governor General's warrants, 190
 - Gross national product vs government expenditures, 189-90
 - Health and welfare, 190
 - Increase in estimates (1974-77), 2212
 - Loan items in supplementary estimates, precedents, 2258
 - Loto Canada, 2238, 2259
 - Old age security and guaranteed income supplement payments (1969-77), 2213
 - Provincial government expenditures, 2189, 2190, 2213
 - Public debt, 190
 - Transfer payments, 2213-14
- Estimates and Supplementary Estimates (A), fiscal year ending Mar. 31/75, 136-7, 189-90
- Estimates, fiscal year ending Mar. 31/77, 2182-3, 2189, 2190, 2212-14
 - Supplementary (A), 2237-8, 2258
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 116

Carter, Hon. Chesley W. - Continued

Fisheries

Law of the Sea Conference, 117

Newfoundland, 117; ice conditions, 117; foreign fishermen inside limit, 117

Health, Welfare and Science Committee

Reports

Crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society, 2242-3

Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, rep with amdts, 848, 908

Environmental Contaminants bill C-25, rep without amdt, 1437

Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, rep without amdt, 1649

Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, rep without amdt but with observations, 1369

Quarantine bill S-31, rep without amdt, 1874

Royal Canadian Legion bill C-28, rep without amdt 1211-12

Helsinki Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe, 1814

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1872

Inflation, 116-20

Cost-push inflation, 119

Demand-pull inflation, 119

Food shortage and destitution in eastern countries, 117

Individual responsibilities, 119-20

Oil prices, 116

Structural inflation, 119

Supply of goods and services, government policies re, 116-17

World political and economic outlook, 117-18

Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1339

National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 893

National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 750, 751, 752, 755

Non-profit and cooperative housing, 750

Veterans, 750

News media, disservice to Canada in derogatory remarks re Throne Speech, 118

North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1494

Armed forces in Europe, 1494

Leopard tanks, 1494

Reserve equipment, 1494

Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37, 1088

Old Age Security bill C-62, 1101-03, 1125-6

Absence from Canada, 1103

Calculation of income, 1102

Guaranteed income supplement, 1101-02

Income Security for Canadians, White Paper on, 1101

Joint application, 1125

Married or common-law status, 1025

Means test, 1102

Overpayments, 1103

Social Security in Canada, Working Paper on, 1101

Suspension of allowance, 1102

Termination of allowance upon husband's death, 1125

Universality vs selectivity, 1025

Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 966

Newfoundland, request for use of RCMP during labour strike, 966

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1194-6, 1206, 1207, 1209, 1211-12

Branch agreements to amdts, 1206, 1207

British Commonwealth and Empire, deletion of words, 1195

Carter, Hon. Chesley W. - *Concluded*Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28 - Concluded

Department to assist or advise ex-servicemen's clubs, 1196

Filing date of petition, 1212

Legion background, 1194

Property, branch holdings, 1195, 1206

Sports training plan, 1195, 1206

War veterans allowances, 1194

Woods Committee study of pensions, 1195

Science Policy, Special Senate Committee

Institute for Research on Public Policy, 1225

'Need for an Overall Science Policy', excerpt from committee report (1970-73), 1225

Research and development programs in government laboratories and industry, 1225-6

Lack of coordination, 1225-6

Other countries, 1226

Senate

Committee meetings during adjournments of Parliament, 952-3

Committee meetings, scheduling of, 828

Committee proceedings, televising of, 522-3

Research staff, 320

Senate and House of Commons Act

Regulations re senators' attendance and deductions for absence, 952-3

Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 874

Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2196

Freeze on salaries of members of Parliament, 2186

Sessional expenses and allowances, 2186

Supplementary retirement benefits, 2186-7, 2196

Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) bill C-4, 267-8

Children attending school, 267-8

Discrimination affecting those under 65 yrs., 268

Escalation of allowances to consumer price index, 268

Means test, 268

Qualification of 365 days overseas, 268

Residence requirement, 268

Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) bill C-86, 1883-4

Common-law spouse, 1884

Death benefit limitation, 1884

Transportation

BNA Act as it pertains to transportation, 2220

Intercolonial railway, 2220

Work Ethic in Canada, 474-8

Changes due to economic environment, 475

Definition of work ethic, 474-5, 477

Evaluation of services performed for society, 476

Market orientation concept of work, 477

Right to work, unions and employers denial of, 476

Social security programs, 477

Social status vs job status, 475

Teachers and public servants under contract, 477

Unemployment insurance, 477

Unequal distribution of wealth, 477

Volunteer workers, 477

Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company, 1293, 1307-08

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, see National Housing bills C-46 and C-77

Chile

Aid from Canada by grants, loans, re-scheduling of debts, technical assistance, etc., 1438-9, 1597-8

Choquette, Hon. Lionel

British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 bill C-3, 1067

Crime and violence, 1453

Directives of proposed committee, question of, 1453

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 589, 590-1

Recommendation for clemency, 589

Responsibility of judge and jury, 590-1

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2420-1

Alternative to death by hanging, 2420

Deterrent aspect, 2420, 2421

Excerpt from Commons Justice and Legal Affairs Committee report, 2423

Excerpt from speech (1967) re book by Nathan F. Leopold, convicted killer, 2420-1

Parole, 2423

Prison guards' reaction to legislation, 2420

Prison term, 2423

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1018

Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, 351-2

Consultation with Indian Bands, 352

Excerpt from Commons committee proceedings, 352

Judges bill C-47, 1080

Law Reform Commission bill C-43, 643-4

Composition of commission, 643, 644

Part-time commissioners, 644

Quebec representation, 644

Sharing of assets and family property in event of marriage breakup, 643

Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1340

Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 813-14

Commission members, functions and jurisdiction, 808

Expenditures over $50,000, approval of Governor in Council for, 814

Lack of authority of Yukon and NWT councils, 814

Power rates, 814

Old Age Security bill C-62, 1126

Olympic bill C-63, 1189

Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1410, 1428-9

Science Policy, Special Senate Committee, expenditures of, 1223

Senate

Amplification and simultaneous interpretation system, 13

Business, 2356

Tailoring service for members of Parliament, 2209

Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1709-10

Widows of senators, 1709-10

Statute Revision bill S-3, 159

Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada

Action of Revenue Department re, 2183-4, 2354-6

Citizenship

- AIB* case, 2282-3
- Alien ownership of land, 2074, 2091, 2095, 2096, 2264-7, 2279-85, 2311-13, 2323, 2349-50
 - Authority to provinces for making of regulations re, 2285-6
 - Certification of title, 2282
 - Federal-provincial conferences re, 2284-5
 - Morgan et al*, 2074, 2284, 2311
 - Ontario, 2284
 - Prince Edward Island, 2284
- Appeals, 2089-90, 2096
- Armed forces personnel, 2093
- Background of citizenship, naturalization and legislation re, 2071
- British subject and subject of the Queen, 2088, 2095
- Children born abroad, 2072
- Citizen of Ireland, 2075
- Citizen of the Commonwealth, 2072-3
- Citizenship certificates, 2071, 2074-5; 2077, 2094
- Discretions on humanitarian grounds, 2073-4
- Eligibility age, 2078
- Equality for men and women, 2072
- Ethnic element of Canadian citizenship, 2290-2
- Excerpt from speech of Senator Croll (1946), 2290-2
- Federal-provincial conferences, 2284-5
- General regulations, 2090
- Good character qualification, 2073
- Illegal residents, 2094
- Immigration from US to Canada, statistics, 2094
- International law, question of, 2281-2, 2286, 2350
- Judges of citizenship courts, 2074, 2078
- Jurisdiction over aliens, 2282-3, 2350
- Landed immigrants, residency requirements and qualifications of, 2073, 2074, 2078, 2087-8, 2093, 2094-5
- Land Holding Disclosure Act, NS and Cape Breton Island, 2323
- Language requirement, 2091, 2093, 2095
- Laurier, Sir Wilfrid, statement at Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria, 2290, 2293
- McGill Law Journal* article, 'The Central Fallacy of Canadian Constitutional Law', 2324, 2348
- Ministerial authority, 2096
- Non-Canadian triable at law as Canadian citizen, 2092
- Oath of allegiance and oath of citizenship, 2091-2, 2094
 - Regulations respecting the taking of, 2090-1
- Pledge appended to Bill of Rights, 2078-9
- Powers and authorizations of Minister and Governor in Council, 2088-9, 2090, 2279, 2282-5, 2289, 2310, 2312-13, 2324
- Precedents in transfer of federal jurisdiction, 2312
- Prince Edward Island Potato Marketing Board vs H.B. Willis Inc.*, 2323-4
- Property and civil rights, 2279
- Qualification for municipal office, 2279-80
- Qualification to own ship, or acquire, hold or dispose of property, 2279-80
- Real Property Act, 2280-1, 2313
 - Evidence of Canadian Bar Association, 2280-1
- Referral of Clause 33 of Bill C-20 to Supreme Court, question of, 2348-50, 2362, 2444
- Resumption of citizenship, 2073, 2093
- Security of public order risks, 2073, 2090
- Status of British subjects, 2072
- Students, 2093

Citizenship - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Bell, Ann E. H., 2075
 Bonnell, M Lorne, 2313
 Burchill, G. Percival, 2075
 Connolly, John J., 2071-5, 2094-6, 2264-5, 2284-6, 2310-11, 2313, 2323-4
 Croll, David A., 2290-3
 Flynn, Jacques, 2266, 2267, 2279-80, 2284, 2285, 2289, 2301-10, 2324, 2349, 2350
 Forsey, Eugene A., 2087-92, 2282-3, 2310, 2311, 2350
 Goldenberg, H. Carl, 2092, 2349, 2350
 Greene, John J., 2092, 2093, 2311
 Grosart, Allister, 2311-12, 2313, 2324, 2349
 Laird, Keith, 2265-6, 2280, 2289
 Lang, Daniel, 2283
 Macdonald, John M., 2092-4, 2323
 Macnaughton, Alan A., 2280-1
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2283-4
 Perrault, Raymond J., 2311, 2312, 2324, 2336-7, 2348-9, 2362, 2444
 Smith, George I., 2281-2, 2286, 2350
 Yuzyk, Paul, 2077-9

Citizenship bill C-20. 1r, 2058; 2r, 2071-5, 2077-9, 2087-96; ref to com, 2096; rep without amdt, 2242; m for 3r, 2264-5, m in amdt, 2265-7, 2279-86, 2289, m in amdt neg, 2289-90, debate on 3r cont, 2290-3, 2309-13, 2323-4, 2336-7, 2348-50; m in amdt that bill be ref back to com, neg, 2350; 3r, 2350; r.a., 2450

Civilian war allowances

Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances), 242, 267-70, 272, 281, 314

Civil Service insurance

Adopted children, 766
 Amendment to annuity tables, 766
 Equal rights to man and wife, 766
 Sharing of insurance proceeds, 766
 Statistics on policies issued, 766

Speakers: Senators

Denis, Azellus, 766
 Flynn, Jacques, 770

Civil Service Insurance bill C-26. 1r, 712; 2r, 766-7, 770; 3r, 775; r.a., 832

Clerestory of the Senate Chamber, Special Senate Committee

Installation of stained glass windows, 481
 Theme for project, 481

Speaker: Senator

Connolly, John J., 480-2

Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet

See Federal-Provincial relations, 465, 466,
 Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, 464-7.

Clerk of the Senate

Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1683-5

Property qualification of senators, return presented, 242; supplementary return authorized, 242; supplementary return tabled, 472

Receipts and disbursements (1973-74), ref to com, 192

Receipts and disbursements (1974-75), ref to com, 1005

Receipts and disbursements (1975-76), ref to com, 2167

Combines

Takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd. of Argus Corporation Ltd., reference of matter to Senate committee, inquiry dropped, 1063-4

Combines investigation

Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act, committee to examine and report on, 109-10

Reports, 663-6, 675-83, 1121-2, 1135, 1589-95

Combines investigation (Bill C-2)

Air transport, control and direction of, 1572, 1591-2

Amendments, effect of, 1589

Appeals from decisions of Commission, 1296

Bid-rigging, 1295

Chartered accountants and other professions, 1591

Civil damages, 1594

Committee meetings held on consideration of subject matter of bill, 1294

Conflict of interest, statement by Senator Godfrey, 1308-09, 1315-16

Constitutional problems in provisions of bill, 1310-11, 1593-4

Due diligence re certain offences, 1590

Exemption for affiliates, 1590

Export combines, 1296

Farm Products Marketing case and Breweries case, 1592

Foreign judgements, laws or directives, 1296

Franchises, 1593

Inability to obtain supplies of brand name product, 1594

Institution of proceedings on summary conviction, 1593

Interim injunction, 1594

Mergers and monopolies, 1589

Misleading advertising and unfair or dishonest selling practices, 1294, 1295, 1309-10

Penalty provisions, 1572

Professional sports, 1296, 1590

Proof that agreement prevents or lessens competition unduly, 1295

Recommendations of com incorporated in amdts to bill, 1588-90

Refusal to deal, 1594

Regulated trades, industries and professions, 1590-1

Resale price maintenance, 1295

Restrictive Trade Practices Commission powers, 1294, 1295-6

Right of action in civil or federal courts for damages and provincial jurisdiction re, 1296, 1310-11

Right of appeal from orders of Commission, 1594

Service industries, coverage extended to, 1294-5

Trade union activities, 1295

Winnipeg Commodity Exchange, 1592-3

Combines investigation (Bill C-2) - Concluded

Speakers: Senators

Cook, Eric, 1294-6
 Flynn, Jacques, 1308-12, 1598
 Godfrey, John M., 1308-09, 1315-16
 Hayden, Salter A., 1571-3, 1589-95

Combines Investigation bill C-2. 1r, 1283; 2r, 1293-6, 1308-12; ref to com, 1312; rep without amdt but with observations, 1571, 1589-95; 3r, 1598; r.a., 1617

Commission on the Future

Authority to hold conference re, 295-8
 Termination of mandate of Science Policy Committee to hold conference, 1171-3, 1220-6, 1246-7, 1259-60
See Science Policy, Special Senate Committee, first report

Committee of Selection

Appointment, 7
 Members, 7
 Report
 Standing Committees, members, 96-97; rep adopted, 107

Committee of the Whole

Medical Care bill C-68, Hon. Marc Lalonde, Minister of Health and Welfare, taking part in debate, 2366-75
 National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, Hon. Barnett Danson, Minister of State for Urban Affairs, taking part in debate, 748-57
 National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, Hon. Barnett Danson, Minister of State for Urban Affairs, taking part in debate, 1673-81
 Senate and House of Commons (Supplementary Retirement Benefits) bill C-81, Mr. H. D. Clark, Director of Pensions and Insurance Division of Treasury Board, present, 2196-2207
 Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, Hon. Robert K. Andras, Minister of Manpower and Immigration, taking part in debate, 1695-1706

Committee on Orders and Customs

Appointment, 7

Committees, general data

Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report, 146-9, 320-3, 516-18
 Agriculture
 Expenses, special, 348
 Authorization to meet during adjournments of the Senate, 2171-2
 Banking, Trade and Commerce
 Expenses re study of bankruptcy and insolvency, 1781
 Expenses re study of budget resolutions relating to income tax, 524-5
 Expenses, special, 160, 348
 Meetings during adjournments, 2047-8
 Clerestory of the Senate Chamber, Special Senate Committee, 480-2
 Committee meetings during Senate sittings, 1856-7
 Co-ordinating Committee to arrange scheduling of committee meetings, 828-9

Committees, general data - Concluded

- Crime and violence, special Senate committee proposed, 916-22
- Delay in printing and distribution of committee proceedings, 703-04
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service
 - Draft report released to press, 1755-6
 - Expenses re study of Parts, I, II and III of paper, 525, 1624
- Foreign Affairs
 - Expenses re study of Canada-United States relations, 1781
 - Expenses, special, 348
- Implementation of new schedule of meetings, 1937-8
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration
 - Budgets and special expenses of committees, reports tabled, 160, 213, 348, 524-5, 795, 956, 1088, 1244, 1781-2
 - Printing of proceedings, question of, 953
 - Regulations respecting attendance of senators, report presented, 1781-2
- Inter-Parliamentary Advisory Committee, 1490, 1494
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs
 - Expenses, special, 348, 525-6, 795
 - Meeting held in camera, question of privilege, 1770-1
 - Televising of proceedings, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54
- Meetings during Senate sittings, objection to, 827-8
- Meetings, scheduling of, 828-9, 924
- National Capital Region, special joint committee proposed, 1097; appointment, 1126
- National Finance
 - Counsel and staff, engagement of, 351
 - Expenses re study of legislation and other matters, 525, 795, 1781
 - Meetings during adjournments, 2048
- Notices of meetings of subcommittees and steering committees, 2192
- Privileges and immunities of senators, motion for appointment of special committee, 1434-6
- Question of referral of Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13 to Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 815
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments
 - Expenses, 525, 795
- Rules and Orders
 - Sub-committee to study coordination of meetings of committees, 858-9, 924, 1091
- Science Policy
 - Expenses, 160, 648, 795, 1088, 1244, 1261
- Standing Committees members, 96-97
- Sub-committee meeting, 1931
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509-14, 521-3
- Work Ethic in Canada, special Senate committee proposed, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518
- Work of committees during present session, 1286-8
- See* Rules of the Senate, report of Standing Committee on Rules and Orders

Committees, Joint, Special

- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service
- Immigration Policy
- National Capital Region

Committees, Joint, Standing

- Library of Parliament
- Printing of Parliament
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments
- Restaurant of Parliament

Committees, Senate, Special

- Aging (see Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report)
- Clerestory of the Senate Chamber
- Crime and Violence (proposed)
- Privileges and Immunities of Senators (proposed), motion withdrawn
- Poverty in Canada
- Science Policy
- Work Ethic in Canada (proposed)

Committees, Senate, Standing

- Agriculture
- Banking, Trade and Commerce
- Foreign Affairs
- Health, Welfare and Science
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs
- National Finance
- Rules and Orders
- Transport and Communications

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association

- Secretary General Sir Robin Vanderfelt, visitor to Senate, 1966
- South African region delegation, visitors to Senate, 1087

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, New Delhi conference, 1495-1500, 1644-6

- Authority and prestige of Parliament, external and internal threats, 1499
- Building of a new international economic order, 1497-8
- Canadian delegation, 1495
- Commonwealth as instrument of social, political and economic transformation, 1499-1500
- Development of Southeast Asia, 1496
- Energy crisis, 1497
 - Canadian requirements, imports and exports, 1497
- Environment, control of pollution and protection of wildlife, 1498-9
- India, 1495-6, 1645-6
 - Canada's aid to, 1645-6
 - Communications problems, 1645
 - Government, 1495-6, 1645
 - Jaipur City twinned with Calgary, 1645-6
 - Nuclear explosion in Rajasthan from reactor supplied by Canada, 1645
 - Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, 1495-6
- Indian Ocean as zone of peace, 1496
- International security in Africa south of the Sahara, 1496-7
- Ministers, members and conflicts of interest, 1499
- Multinational corporations, 1498

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, New Delhi conference - Concluded

Nuclear energy, 1497, 1499

Social problems of unemployment, violence, youth unrest and drugs, 1498

Vice-President, Hon. James Jerome, 1646

World population growth and food resources, 1497-8

Speakers: Senators

Bonnell, Lorne, 1495-1500

Grosart, Allister, 1644-6

Compensation for former prisoners of war

Carleton University award of Rip Van Winkle award to Veterans Affairs Minister, 2039-40

Compensation as distinct from disability pension, 2038

Compensation to be not more than 100% disability pension, 2041

Evaders and escapees, 2039, 2040, 2042

Prisoners of war held at Dieppe, 2040

Prisoners of war held by European powers and Korea, 2039

Prisoners of war held by Japan, 2038, 2039, 2040, 2043

Statistics on duration of imprisonments, 2042

Three months limitations, 2041, 2042

War veterans' allowance, 2043

Widows' allowances, 2038-9, 2040, 2042-3

Speakers: Senators

Carter, Chesley W., 2038-9, 2042-3

Croll, David A., 2041

Macdonald, John M., 2040-1

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2041-2

Norrie, Margaret, 2039

Phillips, Orville H., 2039-40

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92. 1r, 2014; 2r, 2038-43; 3r, 2043; r.a., 2096

Competition policy in Canada

Canadian Breweries case, 664

Civil damages, 665

Energy Board, 670

Inability to obtain supplies to carry on business, 665

In Re The Farm Products Marketing Act, 664

Interim injunction, 665-6

International Air Transport Association, 1122, 1135

Jurisdiction of Federal Court in criminal matters, 666

Lawyers fees, Ontario, 664

Per se liability in matter of defence, 664

Reviewable transactions, 665, 666

Services included in combines legislation, 663-4

Sports, professional and amateur, 664-5

Summary convictions, 666

Toronto Daily Star article re proposed amdts, 664

Speaker: Senator

Hayden, Salter A., 663-6, 675-83, 1121-2, 1135

Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act

- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee to examine and report on, 109-10
- First report, 663-6, 675-83
- Second report, 1121-2, 1135

Condolences to Hon. Renaude Lapointe on death of brother, 382

Conferences

- Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, 542
- Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, New Delhi conference, 1495-1500, 1644-6
- European Parliament, 307-13, 331-3
- Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1959-64, 2199-2200, 2278-9
- Helsinki conference on security and cooperation in Europe, 1293, 1466, 1471-5, 1757-61
- Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Florida meeting, 2221-2, 2224-33
- Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Quebec meeting, 1137-43, 1145-55
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Sri Lanka meeting, 984-8
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo meeting, 234-8, 245-9
- Mexico, Canadian parliamentarians visit to, 775-7, 852-3, 930-3
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1489-94, 1513-16, 1726-8
- North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 342-7, 362-5
- Oil-producing and oil-consuming countries, 605-06, 774-5
- Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe, 1431-4
- United Nations Conference on World Population, 236
- United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants, 1238, 1242-4, 1248-8

Conflict of interest

- Combines Investigation bill C-2, withdrawal from debate (Senator Godfrey) because of conflict of interest, 1294
- Question of privilege re, 1315-16
- Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, 373, 573-4, 580
- Question of privilege re, 779-81
- Ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 774
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 847, 856-61, 868-80
- Sky Shops Ltd. (allegations re Senator Giguere), 1348, 1395-7
- Supreme Court bill S-2, 153, 163

Conflict of interest

- Green Paper entitled 'Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest', report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 2278, 2303-06
- Code of conduct, 2306
- Financial interests, 2305
- Government contracts, 2304-05
 - Broadcasting licences, 2305
 - Knowledge of participation in government contracts, 2304-05
 - Permitted participation, 2304
 - Prohibited contracts, 2304
- Incompatible offices, 2303-04
 - Elected public office, 2304
 - Prohibited federal offices, 2303
 - Prohibited provincial offices, 2303-04
- Sanctions and administration, 2305-06
 - Committee on Privileges, 2305-06
 - Public resources, 2305

Connaught Laboratories Ltd.

Residential development in vicinity of testing laboratories, 586, 616, 732, 902

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C.

Aircraft Registry bill C-5, 1000-02

Central registry for property, federal-provincial conferences re, 1000

Constitutional problems in bill, 1000

Property and civil rights of provinces, 1000

Rolling stock of railways, 1001

Treaty-making authority of government, 1001

Citizenship bill C-20, 2071-5, 2094-6, 2264-5, 2284-6, 2310-11, 2313, 2323-4

Alien ownership of land, 2074, 2095, 2096, 2265, 2285

Authority to provinces for making of regulations re, 2285-6

Federal-provincial conferences, 2284-5

Morgan et al, 2074, 2284, 2311

Provincial laws, PEI, Sask., Ont., 2284

Appeals, 2096

Background of citizenship, naturalization and legislation re, 2071

British subject and subject of the Queen, 2095

Certificates of citizenship, 2071, 2074-5, 2094

Children born abroad, 2072

Citizen of Ireland, 2075

Citizen of the Commonwealth, 2072-3

Discretions on humanitarian grounds, 2073-4

Equality for men and women, 2072

Good character qualification, 2073

Illegal residents, 2094

Immigration from US to Canada, statistics, 2094

Judges of citizenship courts, 2074

Language requirement, 2095

Ministerial authority, 2096

Powers of Lieutenant Governor in Council, 2285, 2310

PEI Potato Marketing Board vs H.B. Willis Inc., 2323-4

Residence requirement, 2073, 2074, 2094-5

Resumption of citizenship, 2073

Security of public order risks, 2073

Status of British subjects, 2072

Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1340-5

Aspects of amalgamation with IAC Limited, 1342-3

Borrowing cost of finance subsidiaries, 1345

IAC Limited, 1340-5

Assets and liabilities, 1341, 1343-4

Background and officers of company, 1340-1

Debts and debentures, 1341, 1343, 1344

Financing areas, 1341-2

Shares to be issued to Continental Bank, 1342, 1343, 1344, 1345

Leasing arrangements, 1345

Mortgage portfolio, 1343

Transition period, 1342-5

Bank Act provisions applicable during transition, 1343, 1344

Penalties and sanctions, 1344

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 559

Royal prerogative, 559

Connolly, Hon. John J., P.C. - Concluded

- Criminal Law Amendment bill C-71, 1733
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27, 262-3
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
 - Availability to press of draft report, 1756
- Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1852
 - GATT, 1852
 - Textile and other manufacturing, problems of, 1852
- Gelinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, the late, 1713-14
- Hugessen, Hon. A. K., the late, 2007
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 533
- Legislation, schedules omitted from format of bills, 263
- Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C., the late, 2176
- Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 840, 851
- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37, 1040
 - Courts of criminal jurisdiction, 1040
 - Dumping by aircraft over land, 1040
- O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2035
- Quarantine bill S-31, 1786-7
 - Black death of Europe and the London plague, 1786
 - Immigration (1847) causing ship-fever, typhus and cholera, 1786
 - Grosse Isle monument to victims, 1786
 - Research scientists, tribute to, 1786-7
 - Pasteur, Fleming and Snow, 1787
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 824, 826
 - Penalty clause, 824, 826
- Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1081, 1094, 1095
 - Former provincial levels of salaries, 1081
 - Non-accountable allowances and other benefits, 1081
 - Pensions, 1094
 - Special expense fund, 1095
 - Status of Lieutenant Governors, 1094
 - Tax benefits, 1095
- Senate
 - Clerestory of the Senate Chamber, Special Senate Committee, 480-2
 - Installation of stained glass windows, 481
 - Terms of reference of committee, 480-1
 - Theme for project, 481
- Senate (Intersessional Authority) bill S-22, 771-2
 - Informal arrangements previously used, 771-2
 - Sittings of Senate committees during election periods, question of feasibility of, 722
- Supreme Court bill S-2, 103-06, 162-4
 - Appeals, restriction to Supreme Court, 103-04, 163
 - Case overload and delays in Supreme Court hearings, committee on, 104-05
 - Conflict of interest, 163
 - Interest on money awards, 103, 163
 - Jurisprudence, 163
 - Quorum, 163-4
 - Residence requirement for judges, registrars and deputy registrars, 103, 162-3
- Televising of committee proceedings, 513
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1830

Constitution of Canada

- Patriation, correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the First Ministers of the Provinces on the subject of, 2079-86
 - Amdts by unanimous consent of Parliament and legislature, 2082
 - Draft proclamation, 2083-4
 - Excerpt from previous speech, 2080
 - Federal-provincial agreements, 2085, 2086
 - House of Commons, redistribution of seats, 2085-6
 - Language rights, 2084
 - Letters received in opposition to patriation, 2079-80
 - Protection of French Language and Culture, 2084-5
 - Provincial consultation in amendments, 2080-2
 - Senators, Western provincial appointments, 2085
 - Unanimous consent of provinces, question of, 2081-2
 - Victoria formula, 2082-3

Speaker: Senator

Forsey, Eugene A., 2079-86

Consumer Credit and Cost of Living, Special Joint Committee (1967)

- Recommendations of Fifth Report, action taken for implementation of, 2238-41
 - Bankruptcy, orderly payment of debts, 2239, 2240; recommendations of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 2240
 - Relief from unconscionable transactions, 2239, 2240
 - Borrowers' and Depositors' Protection Act, 2239
 - Combines investigation, 2240
 - Cooling-off period re purchases, 2240
 - Faulty or defective goods, 2239, 2240
 - Financing of used motor vehicles, 2239, 2241
 - Form of agreement for credit transactions, 2239, 2240
 - Government guaranteed loans to low-income consumers, 2240
 - Information and education, 2239, 2240
 - Money management education and credit and debt counselling, 2240-1
 - Prepayment of contracts, 2239, 2240
 - Technical sub-committees of Consumer Affairs, 2239, 2241

Continental Bank of Canada

- Aspects of amalgamation with IAC Limited, 1342-3
- Borrowing cost of finance subsidiaries, 1345
- IAC Limited, 1340-5
 - Assets and liabilities, 1341, 1343-4
 - Background and officers of company, 1340-1
 - Debts and debentures, 1341, 1343, 1344
 - Financing areas, 1341-2
 - Shares to be issued to Continental Bank, 1342, 1343, 1344, 1345
 - Subsidiaries and ownership of realty and insurance companies, 1341, 1343
- Leasing arrangements, 1345
- Mortgage portfolio, 1343
- Transition period, 1342-5
 - Bank Act provisions applicable during transition, 1343, 1344
 - Penalties and sanctions, 1344

Speakers: Senators

- Benidickson, W. M., 1406
- Connolly, John J., 1340-5, 1406, 1408

Continental Bank of Canada - Concluded

Speakers: Senators - Concluded

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 1345
 Everett, Douglas, D., 1345
 Hayden, Salter A., 1367-9, 1405-06, 1407-08
 Lang, Daniel, 1406
 Macdonald, John M., 1345
 Sparrow, Herbert O., 1345

Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30. 1r, 1306; 2r, 1340-5; ref to com, 1346; rep with amdts, 1367-9, 1405-06; m to ref rep back to com, 1406; further rep of com, 1407-08, adopted, 1408; 3r, 1408

Conventions

Aircraft Convention, International Recognition of Rights in, 173
 Export or import of cultural articles, UNESCO convention re illegal operations, 764, 813
 Tax treaties or conventions, countries with which Canada has concluded agreements, 855, 867, 925
See Agreements, treaties, conventions

Cook, Hon. Eric

Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1294-6
 Appeals from decisions of Commission, 1296
 Bid-rigging, 1295
 Committee meetings held on consideration of subject matter of bill, 1294
 Damages and costs for injury, 1296
 Export combines, 1296
 Foreign judgments, laws or directives, 1296
 Misleading advertising and unfair selling practices, 1294, 1295
 Professional sports, 1296
 Proof that agreement prevents or lessens competition unduly, 1295
 Resale price maintenance, 1295
 Restrictive Trade Practices Commission powers, 1294, 1295-6
 Service industries, coverage extended to, 1294-5
 Trade union activities, 1295

Customs bill S-4, 131

Importation by sea within Canadian waters, 131
 Proclamation of bill, 131
 Restriction to 12-mile limit, 131

Customs Tariff bill (No.2) C-39, 484-5

Food products, 485
 Housing materials and appliances, 485
 Preferential rates for developing countries, 485
 Temporary tariff reductions (1974), 485
 Tourist exemptions, 485

Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 571-2

Unlicensed wholesalers, 571-2

Income Tax bill (No.3) C-58, 1848, 2293-4

Excerpt from committee hearings re Manning Timber Products Ltd. v Minister of National Revenue, 2293-4
 Rights of taxpayers to protection of court, 2294
 'Substantially the same', definition of, 2293
Time Canada, 2293, 2294

National Housing bill (No.1) C-46, 755-6

Newfoundland, deterioration of buildings after lease expiry, 755-6

Cook, Hon. Eric - Concluded

- Petro-Canada bill C-8, 1178-9, 1218
 - Authorized capital, 1178
 - Control by Governor in Council, 1218
 - Establishment of national petroleum company as crown corporation, 1178
 - Sale of government interest in Panarctic Oils, 1178
 - Scope of activities, 1178-9
- Railway bill C-48, 760
 - Compliance by companies to regulations, 760
 - Disclosure of financial operations, 760
 - Ministerial powers, 760
 - Western Economic Opportunities Conference, 760
- Senate and House of Commons Act
 - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, motion that subject matter be ref to com, 951; agreed, 954
- Senate business, 923-4

Copyright Act

- Economic Review*, 'Crown copyright reserved', replacement of words, 2200, 2322-3

Corporations and Labour Unions Returns Act

- Report of Ministry of Industry, Trade and Commerce, 2059-61, 2108-09

Cote, Hon. Jean-Pierre, P.C.

- Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223, 715
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee
 - Orders of the Day, notification of item standing in senator's name, 2123
- Regulations re attendance of senators, 1911-12
 - Attendance records, 1912
 - Committee review of reasons for absence, 1912
 - Official business, specifying of, 1912

Cottreau, Hon. Ernest G. (Introduced in the Senate Sept. 30/74)

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 18-20
- Inflation, 19
- King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up bill C-76, 1480-2, 1483
 - Assets value, 1482
 - Background of King George V fund, 1481
 - Payment of assets to National Cancer Institute of Canada, 1481
 - Trustees of fund, 1481
 - Trust fund provisions re transfer of funds, 1481-2
- Nova Scotia, 18-20
 - Acadians, 18-19
 - Education, Royal Commission, Public Services and Provincial-Municipal Relations, 19
 - Prominent Acadians in life of nation, 19
 - Bilingualism, 19
 - Fisheries, 19; offshore fishing, 19-20
 - Storm damage, 1765-6
 - Transportation, 20
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks bill S-35, 2125-6
 - Excerpt from speech by Hon. Marc Lalonde, 2126
 - Federal-provincial consultations re legislation, 2126
 - Self-medication, 2126

Cottreau, Hon. Ernest G. - Concluded

- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee
- Travel arrangements for committee outside of Canada, 1479

Council of Europe, Parliamentary Assembly, Strasbourg conference, France, 1431-4

- Economic and cultural development (OECD), 1431
- Economic disruptions and difficulties, 1432
- Energy resources, 1432-3
- European shipping policy, 1433
- International investment, 1432
- International relations, 1433
- Policies for non-inflationary, 1432
- Relations with underdeveloped countries, 1432, 1433
- Scientific research, 1431-2
- Trade pledge, 1432
- World economic interdependence, 1432
- Speaker: Senator
- Bourget, Maurice, 1431-4

Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C. (Deceased April 11, 1975)

- Tributes, 778-9

Crime

- Capital punishment, commutation of sentences of accused murderers and kidnappers, 400, 443, 528-31
- Drug convictions, 66
- Gun crimes and accidents in Canada and US, 294, 295
- Parole, consideration by government of changes in present system, 1371
- Rape, 66
- See following items*

Crime and violence, special Senate committee proposed, 916-22, 944-5, 1252-5, 1288-91, 1449-52, 1646-7; m that subject matter be ref to Health, Welfare and Science Committee, 1647; m in amdt to amdt re terms of reference, and referral of subject matter to Health, Welfare and Science Committee, 1659-60; rep of com, 2242-3; terms of reference, suggested, 2243

Abortion, 917

Anatomy of Human Aggression, by Eric Fromm, 917, 1289

Basic principles for prevention of crime, 1253

Statement of Henry Fielding, founder of crime prevention organization, 1253

Biblical history of crime and violence, 944

Capital punishment, 917

Causes and Prevention of Violence and Crime, US National Commission on, 1289

Child abuse, 918-19

Murderers who suffered parental cruelty, 918

UK investigations, 918

Crime and punishment as ritual of life, excerpt from article by Dr. Carl Menninger, 920

Crime increase and demands on protective resources, 1449-50

Decline in spiritual values, 1291

Directives of proposed committee, question of, 1453

Enuresis, Fire Setting and Cruelty to Animals: a Triad Predictive of Adult Crime, 919

Firearms, police use of, 1253

Good Housekeeping article by Art Linkletter re 'What I've learned about drugs since my daughter's death', 1451-2

Guns, freedom of purchase and possession, 920-1, 1452

Human Aggression, by Dr. Anthony Storr, 917

'Jungle made by humans for humans', 917

Crime and violence, special Senate committee proposed - Concluded

- Marihuana convictions of young people, 1451-2
- Netherlands crime reform, 1253-4
 - Communication between prisoners and personnel, 1254
 - 'Land Without Prisons', Newsweek article, 1253
 - Penal system, 1253
 - Permissive population, comparisons, 1253-4
 - Rehabilitation, 1253
- New Zealand, low crime rate, 920
- Parental attitudes towards punishment, 944, 945
- Penal system failure, 921
- Permissive society, 1290-1
 - Wall Street Journal* article by Claire Boothe Luce, 1290-1
- Physical punishment and loss of freedom, 917-18
- Prison population per capita, 1451
- Psychopathic Personality, Sociopathic Personality and Character Neurosis*, excerpt from address by Prof. James McHorter, 919-20
- Rehabilitation of convicted murderers, 921
- Religious sects in pacifist role, 917
- Royal Canadian Mounted Police duties, 1450
- Sex deviates, 1451
- Society's ignorance of causes of crime, 921
- Statistics on rape, robberies, murders, male and female offenders, 1289
- Television programs, 945, 1255
- Terms of reference of proposed committee, question of, 1647, 1660
- Training of police in psychology, pathological conduct and behaviour, 1450
- Unnecessary activities of police, 1450
- US Police: A New Image?*, excerpt from Christian Science Monitor, 1254-5
- Vice squads, 1450
- Violence depicted in life styles, 1255
- Vulnerability of democratic society, 1452-3
- Whatever Became of Sin?*, by Carl Menninger, 1291
- Youth training, 1253
- Speakers: Senators
 - Asselin, Martial, 1659-60
 - Carter, Chesley W., 1288-91
 - Choquette, Lionel, 1453
 - Desruisseaux, Paul, 944-5
 - Greene, John J., 922
 - Inman, F. Elsie, 1255
 - McElman, Charles, 1646-7
 - McGrand, Fred A., 916-22
 - Norrie, Margaret, 1252-5
 - Rowe, Frederick William, 1449-53

Criminal Code

- Abortions, acquittal of Dr. Morgentaler of charges re, 1036
- Abortions, study of procedure for obtaining therapeutic abortions, question re committee on, 1428, 1624-5, 1639
- Combines investigation, 1283
- Commutation of death sentence, 443, 528-31, 557-62, 574-5, 587-91, 658-60, 688-92, 936-41, 974-5, 982-3, 1157-8, 1168-9, 1459-60, 1733
- Control of weapons and firearms, 193, 293-5, 479-80

Criminal Code - Concluded

- Food and drugs, narcotic control, 300, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456, 969-71, 983, 1007-11, 1014-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9, 1066, 1074-80
- National Flag of Canada, 663, 710-11, 714-15, 740
- Total abolition of capital punishment (National Defence), 643, 800-02, 893-6, Order stands, 1168
- See following items under Criminal Code and Criminal Law

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence)

- Acquittals and convictions in cases of murders of police officers (1967-73), 529
- Administration of law, objections re, 688-9
- Atlantic Provinces Policemen's Assoc., meeting in Moncton, 530, 689-90
- Clemency recommendation, 688, 940
- Commutations since 1972 legislation, 659
- Compensation to victims of crime, 557
- Constitutionality of bill, question of, 688
- Credibility of witnesses, 588
- Crime increase and legislative permissiveness, 659
- Deterrent aspect, 558, 559, 562, 659
- Disclosure of other evidence after conviction, 558
- Excerpt from Code re responsibility for carrying out sentence, 560-1
- Fredericton meeting of students at University of NB, 690
- Jury and judge responsibility in sentence of death, 562, 588-9, 590-1, 690-1, 940
- Liberal Party convention decision on capital punishment, 689
- Louis Riel* case cited, 561
- Miscarriage of justice, 588, 589-90, 691
- Moral issue in question of capital punishment, 974
- Murder of Moncton policemen, 529, 561, 689
- Murders of policemen and prison guards, 529, 530, 561, 588, 689
- Nuremberg trials, 561, 562
- Petition of Right Act, 939
- Premeditated murders, 659, 660
- Pre-sentence report, 691
- Privy Council decision and provisions in criminal law re royal prerogative, 938
- Rehabilitation failure, 659
- Remission Service of Justice Dept., Fauteux Commission on, excerpt from report, 937
- Resolution re present law, suggestion, 560
- Royal prerogative on commutation of death sentence, 529-30, 558, 559, 562, 587-9, 660, 690, 937-40
- Statistics on death sentences, 940
- Treason and sea piracy, 688
- Treatise on the Laws, Privileges, Proceedings and Usages of Parliament*, excerpt from, 983-9
- US judicial system, 691, 692; Canadian Press report published in Saint John Telegraph Journal, 692
- Vengeance vs justice, 561-2
- Speakers: Senators
 - Asselin, Martial, 587-9
 - Belisle, Rheal, 562, 564-7
 - Buckwold, Sidney L., 559-60
 - Choquette, Lionel, 589, 590-1
 - Connolly, John J., 559
 - Croll, David A., 974-5
 - Denis, Azellus, 660
 - Desruisseaux, Paul, 658-60
 - Flynn, Jacques, 982-3, 1733
 - Fournier, Sarto, 589-90
 - Godfrey, John M., 575

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) - *ConcludedSpeakers: Senators - Concluded

Heath, A.E. Haddon, 574-5
 Hicks, Henry D., 557-8, 559
 Manning, Ernest C., 530-1
 McElman, Charles, 688-92
 Michaud, Herve J., 580-1
 Neiman, Joan, 937-41
 Prowse, J. Harper, 560-2
 Robichaud, Louis-J., 528-30, 1733
 Walker, David J., 558-9

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21. 1r, 443; 2r, 528-31, 557-62, 574-5, 587-91, 658-60, 688-92, 936-40; m in amdt that subject matter be ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 940-1, 974-5, 982-3, Order stands, 1157-8, 1168-9, 1459-60; Order discharged and bill withdrawn, 1733

Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms)

Costs of registration system, 294
 Question as to progress of bill in committee stage, 479-80
 Resolution of Medicine Hat church re programs of radio, TV, theatre and movies, 294
 Statistics on gun crimes and accidents in Canada and US, 294, 295

Speaker: Senator

Cameron, Donald, 293-5

Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) bill S-14. 1r, 193; 2r, 293-5; ref to com, 295

Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada)

Damage or insult to flag, 710
 Incidents of desecration to flag, question of, 710
 Penalties, 710, 740
 Speech by Governor General on first raising of National Flag, 710

Speakers: Senators

Côte, Jean-Pierre, 715
 Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 710-11
 Flynn, Jacques, 714, 715
 Forsey, Eugene A., 710
 Yuzyk, Paul, 740

Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223. 1r, 663; 2r, 710-11; m for 3r, 714-15, 740; m that bill be ref to com, agreed, 740

Criminal law

Subject matter of Bill C-83, an act for the better protection of Canadian society against perpetrators of violent and other crime, ref to com, 1852-3, rep of com, 2119-20, 2127-9, 2163-6, 2183

Criminal law amendment (Bill C-71)

Appeal from decision on summary conviction, 1732
 Bail provisions, 1767
 Conditional release, 1731-2
 Conspiracy in or outside Canada, 1731

Criminal law amendment (Bill C-71) - Concluded

Crimes against internationally protected persons: Prevention and Punishment, an Analysis of the UN Convention, 1769

Criminal offence resulting in serious harm, 1732

Impaired drivers, 1731, 1768-9, 1775

Rehabilitation of alcoholics, lack of facilities, 1769

Suspension of licence and sentence of imprisonment, 1768

Jury system and role of jurists, 1744-5, 1773, 1774

Kidnapping and extortion, organized crime, 1769, 1775

'Morgentaler' amendment, 1732, 1742-5, 1767-8, 1772-4, 1903-06, 1907-08

Admission of facts but denial of guilt, 1743, 1745

Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, survey results, 1767, 1774

Excerpts from notes of supreme court judges, 1773

Statement of Past President of Bar Association, 1743, 1773-4

Murder, conspiracy to commit murder, trafficking in narcotics, 1733

Offence against internationally protected person, 1730

Placing bets on behalf of others, 1731

Quebec inquiry into organized crime, 1769

Rape and other sexual offences, 1731

Complainant's testimony, 1731

Right of judge to infer from peace officer's evidence that disturbance has occurred, 1894-6, 1897-9, 1907-08

Summary of judgment of minority, 1746

Telecommunications, use of 'blackbox', 1731

UK law, 1746

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 1767-70

Burchill, G. Percival, 1746

Connolly, John J., 1733

Croll, David A., 1746

Flynn, Jacques, 1742-7, 1774, 1775, 1776, 1885, 1897-8, 1903-06

Forsey, Eugene A., 1897

Godfrey, John M., 1897

Goldenberg, Carl, 1867-8, 1884-6

Grosart, Allister, 1898, 1899

Langlois, Leopold, 1730-3, 1772-6, 1884-6, 1897-8, 1899

Neiman, Joan, 1898, 1907

Rowe, Frederick William, 1746, 1776, 1899

Smith, George I., 1893-6, 1898, 1899, 1907-08

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.1) 1975 C-71. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1730-3, 1742-7, 1766-70, 1772-6; ref to com, 1776; rep with amdts, 1867-8, 1884-6; m for 3r, 1893, m in amdt, 1893-9, m in amdt to amdt, 1899-1900, neg, m for 3r as amended, 1900, 1903-06, further amdt, 1906-08, neg, 1908; 3r, 1908; Commons agreement in Senate amdt, 1974; r.a., 2002

Criminal law amendment (Bill C-84)

Abortion vs murder, 2441-2

Alternatives to death by hanging, 2410, 2411, 2414, 2420, 2430

Appeals, 2389

Background of convicted killers, effects of, 2429-30

British Columbia bank robbery, 'comedy of errors' re, 2424-5

Capital Punishment, by Professor of Jurisprudence of Yale University, 2448

Challenge to identify violent and anti-social behaviour, 2421

Criminal law amendment (Bill C-84) - Continued

- Deterrent aspect, 2409, 2410-11, 2412, 2413, 2417, 2418, 2419, 2420, 2421, 2425, 2428, 2434-5, 2436, 2441, 2446, 2448-9
- Discrimination in treatment of accused persons, 2415, 2422
- Excerpt from Commons Justice and Legal Affairs Committee proceedings, 2423
- Excerpt from speech of Ontario Ombudsman, 2448-9
- Excerpt from speech of Opposition leader, 2434
- Excerpt from speech of Prime Minister, 2426
- Excerpt from speech of Senator Choquette (1967) re book by Nathan F. Leopold, convicted killer, 2420-1
- Expenses for maintenance of jail inmates, 2408
- First and second degree murder, 2388-9, 2408, 2435
- Gallup poll, 2407, 2408, 2409, 2417, 2418, 2419, 2445, 2446
- Hoover, J. Edgar, letter sent to officers of FBI, 2417
- Incorrigibles, 2412
- Injustices in implementing penalty, 2418, 2432
- 'Justice in the street' and self-preservation by policemen and prison guards, 2408, 2420, 2437-8, 2446
- Law enforcement, lack of respect for, 2413, 2417, 2418, 2419
- Media coverage of subject and effects of, 2409
- Montreal and Quebec City, statistics on murders, 2408, 2411
- Montreal Gazette* article re capital punishment, 2418
- Murder of Moncton policemen, 2448
- Organized crime, 2407, 2436-7, 2448
- Parole, 2423, 2424, 2430, 2440, 2444
 - Escapees from Manitoba institution and aftermath of crime, 2428
- Parole Board, 2408
- Permissive society, 2414
- Premeditated and unpremeditated murder, 2414, 2419, 2435
- Prison reform, 2410, 2437
- Prison term, ten years or life, 2389, 2414, 2419, 2423, 2440
- Professional criminals, resources of, 2422
- Recidivist percentage, 2429
- Recommendation by jury, 2389
- Rehabilitation, 2408, 2446-7
 - Guelph Correctional Centre study by Dr. Carlson, 2447
- Responsibility of members of Parliament, 2407, 2409, 2414, 2435, 2439, 2446-7, 2448
- Sanctity of human life, 2414, 2418, 2440
- 'Santa Claus' murders, 2428
- Sex offender, Toronto Sun article re, 2421-2
- Terrorists, 2413
- Transitional provisions re pending matters, 2389
- Treason, 2388-9
- UK law, 2410
- UK Royal Commission on Capital Punishment, 2448
- Victims of murder and other crime, compensation for, 2411, 2413, 2440
- Wilson, Prof. James Q., study on criminal behaviour, 2431, 2432

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 2415-17
- Asselin, Martial, 2407-08
- Austin, Jack, 2444-5
- Beaubien, L. P., 2411
- Bell, A. E. Haddon, 2441-2
- Bourget, Maurice, 2417-18
- Choquette, Lionel, 2420-1
- Denis, Azellus, 2427

Criminal law amendment (Bill C-84) - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators - Concluded

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 2419-20
 Flynn, Jacques, 2387, 2388, 2425-7
 Fournier, Edgar, 2409-10
 Goldenberg, H. Carl, 2448-9
 Grosart, Allister, 2445-7
 Hicks, Henry D., 2413, 2436
 Lang, Daniel A., 2387-9
 Lawson, Edward M., 2423-5
 Macdonald, John M., 2410-11
 Macnaughton, Alan A., 2418-19
 Manning, Ernest C., 2413-15
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2427-8
 McIlraith, George J., 2430, 2433-6, 2439
 Molson, Hartland de M., 2436-8, 2444
 Neiman, Joan, 2421-3
 Paterson, Norman McL., 2448
 Perrault, Raymond J., 2387, 2428-33, 2440
 Robichaud, Louis J., 2411-13
 Smith, George I., 2438, 2439-42
 Stanbury, Richard J., 2408-09
 Williams, Guy, 2417

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) 1976 C-84 (punishment for murder and certain other offences). 1r, 2386;
 2r, 2386-9; m re disposition of 3r and passage of bill, 2407; 2r cont, 2407-42; question re voting procedure, 2444; 2r cont, 2444-50; 3r, 2450; r.a., 2450

Croll, Hon. David A.

Aging, the anatomy of report of Special Senate Committee, recommendations of committee and report on action taken, 146-9 (see Appendix to Debates of Oct. 22/74)
 Old age security, reduction in age limit, 146
 Research by staff of Parliamentary Library, 146
 Suggestion that Hansard of Oct. 22/74 be sent to municipal and social agencies, 147
Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1553-8
 Government expenditures, 1555
 Labour collective bargaining, 1555-6
 Low-income or unorganized groups, 1556-8
 Minimum wage, 1557; statistics on employees, 1557
 Poverty line updated (1975), 1556
 Toronto Star Article 'Making Work Pay More Than Welfare', 1557
 Professionals, 1553
 Progressive Conservative Party suggestion for wage and price freeze, 1554
 Public reaction, 1554
 Regulations, 1554
 War Measures Act, 1554, 1555
 Decontrolling, 1554
Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 379-80
Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
 Engagement of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427, 1428
Citizenship bill C-20, 2290-3
 Ethnic element of Canadian citizenship, 2290-2
 Excerpt from speech (1946), 2290-2
 Laurier, Sir Wilfrid, statement at Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria, 2290, 2293

Croll, Hon. David A. - Continued

- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2041
- Consumer Credit and Cost of Living, Special Joint Committee (1967), inquiry re action on implementation of recommendations, 2238-41
 - Bankruptcy, orderly payment of debts, 2239, 2240
 - Recommendations of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 2240
 - Relief from unconscionable transactions, 2239, 2240
 - Borrowers' and Depositors' Protection Act, 2239
 - Combines investigation, 2240
 - 'Cooling-off' period re purchases, 2240
 - Faulty or defective goods, 2239, 2240
 - Financing of used motor vehicles, 2239, 2241
 - Form of agreement for credit transactions, 2239, 2240
 - Government guaranteed loans to low-income consumers, 2240
 - Information and education, 2239, 2240
 - Money management education and credit and debt counselling, 2240-1
 - Prepayment of contracts, 2239, 2240
 - Technical subcommittees of Consumer Affairs, 2239, 2241
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 974-5
 - Disregard of established law, 974
 - Moral issue in question of capital punishment, 974
 - Suggestion for vote on bill, 975
- Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) bill S-14, question as to progress of bill in committee stage, 479
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1746
- Estimates
 - Suggestion that items remain on Order Paper for discussion at any appropriate time, 1782-3, 1784
 - UNESCO, 379-80
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, 1184-6
 - Social welfare programs, 1184-6
 - Medicare, phasing out of federal assistance, 1184-5; deterrent fees, 1185
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute upon resignation from the Senate, 967
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1014, 1016, 1018, 1074
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1629-30
- Immigration bill S-12, 165, 166, 195-7, 244-5
 - Employment of immigrants for manual and menial work, 196, 244
 - Statistics on deportations, 196
- Immigration policy, unauthorized press publication of confidential draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1286
- Labour, the working poor in Canada, 2019-23
 - Employment, provincial statistics, 2019
 - Minimum wage, 2019-22
 - Provincially, 2019, 2022
 - Rates for experienced adult workers (legislated as of Dec. 31, 1974), 2031
 - Vs welfare, 2021-2
 - Poverty line, 2022
 - Specified areas of working poor, 2019
 - Supplementary income as work incentive, 2022
 - Union workers, 2022
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 533-4
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, meeting in camera, question of privilege, 1770-1
- Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C., the late, 2177
- Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, 373, 573-4, 580, 780
- Parliament Buildings, use of East Block rooms by senators, proposal, 110

Croll, Hon. David A. - Concluded

Penitentiaries, action taken to implement principal recommendations of Special Joint Committee, 2200, 2249

Poverty

Children in Poverty, report by National Council of Welfare, 625-6

Senate report on poverty - poverty line updated (1974), 626

Privilege, question of, re remark by government leader, 198

Privileges and immunities of senators, proposed special Senate committee, 1434, 1721, 1726

Role of Senator Croll during instigation of government annuities legislation, 1630

Rules of the Senate, 1364, 1422-3, 1425-6

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 1364, 1423, 1425, 1426

Powers and duties of committees, 1423, 1425, 1426

Senate

Pensions for widows of senators, 282

Role in committee work, 148-9

Simultaneous interpretation system, 504

Senate and House of Commons Act

Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 951-2, 953, 954

Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 874

Social welfare, distribution of income, 2144-9

Distribution of income by quintiles, 2145

Forms required of welfare recipients, 2144, see also appendix to Debates of May 19, 1976

Income redistribution through government intervention (1970), 2145-6

Myths concerning welfare, 2144

Report of study of government expenditures on welfare, 2147-8

Role of government in ensuring full employment and redistribution of wealth, 2146

Subsidies to businesses, 2147, 2149; CNR and CPR, 2149

Universality of welfare programs, 2146-7

Television and radio coverage of proceedings of Senate and committees, 1483, 1484

Controls, 1483, 1484

Other countries decisions re broadcasting of parliamentary proceedings, 1483

Resolution adopted by Commons re broadcasting of Commons proceedings, 1483

United Nations resolution naming Israel as racist nation, condemnation of, motion re, 1397-8

Work Ethic in Canada, special Senate committee proposed, 281-8, 518

Community employment, 283

Guaranteed minimum income, 281

Immigrants employed for farm work, 284, 286

Loss of working days because of strikes, 286

Management-labour relations, 284

Poverty in Canada - A Report of Special Senate Committee, 281-2

Report updated, 282

Provincial needs for workers, 284

Welfare vs unemployment insurance, 283, 284, 287

Working poor, 283

Crop insurance

Report of Agriculture Committee, 1212, 1227-9, 1468-71, 1622-3

See Agriculture

Crown liability

Criminal Law Amendment (Crown liability, immigration, parole) bill C-71, 1714, 1730-3

Crowsnest Pass, 41-42, 598, 889, 924

Cultural property export and import

- Appeal against board ruling, 798, 811-12
- Articles for exhibition purposes, 766
- Articles made by person now deceased or which have been in Canada 35 yrs. or more, 764, 765
- Articles under control list, 797-8
- Book of Kells, Ireland, 770
- Bureaucracy in discretionary powers of minister, 768
- Cultural properties of heritage of other countries, importing of, 798, 810-11
- Determination of values, 765, 798, 812
- Excerpts from statements of Secretary of State, 798-9
- Freedoms of thought and action, elimination of in over-protection by government, 768, 770, 799-800, 812
- Institution, definition of, 765-6
- Preservation of muniments, excerpt from statement of Hon. Joseph Howe, 770
- Prohibition of illegal imports, 764
- Review Board, 763-4, 908-11
- System of export control, 762-5
 - Determination of fair cash price, 762, 764, 765
 - Financial assistance for custodial institutions, 762
 - Ministerial permits or bulk licences, 763
 - Objects of national heritage, 762
 - Permits, 762, 908, 909
- Tax incentives for sale or donation of cultural property to custodial institutions, 763
 - Exemptions, 763
- UK legislation, 761, 763, 765, 799
- UNESCO convention, 764, 813
- Speakers: Senators
 - Carter, Chesley W., 848, 908
 - Everett, Douglas D., 765, 797-800
 - Grosart, Allister, 810-13, 909-11
 - Hicks, Henry, 765-6
 - Lamontagne, Maurice, 761-5, 766, 908-09, 910, 911
 - O'Leary, M. Grattan, 768-70

Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33. 1r, 712; 2r, 761-6, 768-70, 797-800, 810-13; ref to com, 813; rep with amdts, 848, 908-09, m in amdt adopted, 909-11; 3r, 912; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 1005; r.a., 1095

Curling

Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland Rink, 1889

Customs (Bill S-4)

- Importation by sea within Canadian waters, 131
- Jurisdiction to outer limits of territorial sea of Canada, 131, 168
- Preferential tax exemptions to Canadian companies in resource explorations, 168-9

Speakers: Senators

- Belisle, Rheel, 167-9
- Cook, Eric, 131

Customs bill S-4. 1r, 12; 2r, 131, 167-9; ref to com, 169; rep without amdt, 213; 3r, 222; r.a., 314

Customs tariff (Bill C-27)

Articles exempted, 262

Effects of tariff protection on consumer, 270-1

Petroleum products, 262

Speakers: Senators

Belisle, Rheal, 270-1

Benidickson, W.M., 262, 263

Connolly, John J., 262-3

Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27. 1r, 242; 2r, 262-3, 270-1; ref to com, 271; rep without amdt, 280; 3r, 291; r.a., 314

Customs tariff (Bill C-39)

Food products, 485

Handicrafts from developing countries, 488, 515

Housing materials and appliances, 485, 489, 515

Ministerial powers, 488

Preferential rates for developing countries, 485, 515

Temporary tariff reductions (1974), 485

Tourist exemptions, 485, 488

UNESCO, 487-8, 515

Agreement for Facilitating International Circulation of Visual and Auditory Materials of Educational, Scientific and Cultural Character, 487

Excerpt from Montreal Star re, 487-8

Exclusion of Israel from European group, 488

Speakers: Senators

Cook, Eric, 484-5

Grosart, Allister, 486-9, 514-16

Customs Tariff bill (No. 2) C-39. 1r, 472; 2r, 484-5, 486-9; ref to com, 489; rep without amdt, 499; 3r, 508, 514-16; r.a., 581

Customs tariff (Bill C-67)

Aircraft and aircraft engines, 1210, 1214

Gifts, 1210, 1214

Petroleum products, 1210, 1214

Polymer plates for letterpress printing, 1214

Religious publications, 1214

Tariff and excise revenues, 1214

Speakers: Senators

Benidickson, W.M., 1209-10, 1215

Grosart, Allister, 1214-15

Customs Tariff bill (No. 3) C-67. 1r, 1197; 2r, 1209-10, 1214-15; 3r, 1215; r.a., 1281

Danson, Hon. Barnett, P.C., Minister of State for Urban Affairs

National Housing bill (No.1) C-46, 748-57

Advisory council, 756

Handicapped persons, 753

Housing starts, decrease in, 749

Danson, Hon. Barnett, P.C., Minister of State for Urban Affairs - *Concluded*National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46 - Concluded

- Indians, 751
- Inspection of projects, 751
- Interest rate, 752
- Land purchase for lease to non-profit or cooperative organization, 755, 756
- Limited dividend program, 754-5, 757
- Mortgage insurance fund, 753, 754, 755
- Non-profit and cooperative housing, 749, 750
- Rental housing projects, 750, 754
- Senior citizens housing, 749, 750
- Sewage treatment loans, 756
- Statutory limits for making or insuring loans, 756
- Veterans, 749, 750-1

National Housing bill (No.2) C-77, 1673-81

- Abuses, 1678
- AHOP, 1673-4, 1676, 1678
- Appraisal of housing costs in various areas, 1678
- Continuity of program and target, 1675
- Cooperatives, 1679
- Costs of program, 1677
- Critical areas of housing, 1674
- Density, 1674
- Design, 1674
- Expenditures on interest reduction grants (1976), 1679
- House price limits, 1676
- Housing standards and construction quality, 1673, 1675, 1676-7
- Inflationary effect of new regulations, question of, 1673
- Land assembly programs of municipalities, 1675
- Loans and grants, 1674
- Low cost medium density housing, $1000 grants to municipalities, 1680
- Private funding, 1675
- Refinancing of mortgage, 1676
- Rental accommodation, 1677
- Repayment conditions, five-year clause, 1678
- Servicing of land, 1675
- Single parent family, 1676
- Two-person families, 1674
- Warranty from builder to owner, 1681

Davey, Hon. Keith

Income Tax bill (No.3) C-58, 1836-42, 1843, 1845, 1846, 1865, 2027-32, 2294-2301, 2327, 2328

- Advertising revenue, 1837

- Background of legislation on foreign periodicals, 1837

Broadcasting

- Advertising of prime time, survey report of Bureau of Broadcast Measurements, 2031-2
- Buffalo stations, presentation to committee, 2298-9
- Canadian Association of Broadcasters' document, 1842
- CITY-TV, Toronto, 2297
- CRTC, letter from Chairman, 2298
- Global Television, letter from president, 2296-7
- Wire from Canadian Association of Broadcasters and others urging support of bill, 2297

Davey, Hon. Keith - ConcludedIncome Tax bill (No.3) C-58 - Concluded

- Canada WestWord*, the magazine for British Columbians, excerpt from, 2028
- Canadian Forum*, excerpt from article by Peter Newman, 2029
- Canadian Journal of Political Science*, excerpt from, 1839
- Christian Science Monitor* article re Time's editorial policy, 1840
- Content*, excerpt from Editor's speech on CBC Capital report, 2032
- Criteria for deduction for tax purposes, 1837
- Fredericton Gleaner* article, 1841
- Globe and Mail*, 1838; article re Senate committee and chairman, 2300
- Interest Group Tactics and the Politics of Foreign Investment: The Time-Reader's Digest Case Study*, 1839
- Letter from Stephen S. LaRue, president of Time Canada, 1839
- Letter sent to Prime Minister by writers, photographers, etc., 1838
- Maclean's* magazine, 2028; presentation to committee, 2295-6
- Mass Media Committee's report, excerpts from, 1839, 1840, 1841-2
- MD of Canada*, 2030, 2300
- Montreal Gazette* editorial, 2299
- Newsweek*, lack of Canadian advertising, 2027-8
- Opposition to bill through lobbying, 2298-9
- Revitalizing of Canadian magazines, 1838
- Rights of Canadian broadcasters and publishers, 2295
- Saturday Night*, 2296
- Speech of Richard Roehmer, P.C., Toronto, 1841
- 'Substantially the same', definition of, 2301
- Time* and Reader's Digest, 1837-8, 2028, 2299, 2301
- Time* editorial re advertising and subscription rates, 2028
- Toronto Sun* article by John Slinger, 1838
- Publishing industry, 62, 556, 564, 582-3, 956-7; 2140
 - Globe and Mail* article by J. Carruthers re Time magazine, 582-3
 - Letter from Senator Davey to Globe and Mail re editorial entitled 'Whittling Down a Freedom', 582
 - Ottawa Journal* article re comments of President of Time Canada Limited before Senate committee, 2140
 - Television commercial advertising of Guaranty Trust, use of picture of Parliament Buildings, 556, 564, 956-7
 - Time* and Readers Digest magazines, tax concessions in advertising, 582
 - Time* magazine, brief presented to members of Commons, 62

Death penalty

See Criminal Code and Criminal Law Amendment bills

Deaths

- Boucher, Hon. William A., 2251-2
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, 11-12
- Childers, Erskine, President of Republic of Ireland, 265
- Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C., 778-9
- Gelinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, 1713-14
- Hugessen, Hon. A.K., 2007
- Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., 324
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., 532-3
- Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C., 2176-7
- MacKay, Hon. John, Lieutenant Governor of Prince Edward Island, 135
- O'Leary, Hon. Michael Grattan, 2034-6
- Prowse, Hon. J. Harper (Sept. 28/76)

de Grandpre, Hon. Louis-Philippe, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court

Royal assent, 2152

Denis, Hon. Azellus, P.C.

Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1580

Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 11

Canadian National Railways, cost of construction of tower in Toronto, 2185-6, 2263-4

Civil Service Insurance bill C-26, 766

Adopted children, 766

Amendment to annuity tables, 766

Equal rights to man and wife, 766

Sharing of insurance proceeds, 766

Statistics on policies issued, 766

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 660

Royal prerogative, 660

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2427

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Lafontaine) bill C-229, 601-02

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1037

Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, 1233-4, 1235, 1251, 1252, 1258-9

Medical Care bill C-68, 2317-18

Ceiling on federal contributions, 2317-18, 2365

Expenditures, anti-inflation program effect on, 2365

New services, 2318

Nursing homes, 2366

Provincial responsibilities, 2365

Statistics on accidents and medical care, 2368

Senate and House of Commons (Supplementary Retirement Benefits) bill C-81, 2195

Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 bill C-16, 1103-04, 1107, 1122-3

Acts amended, 1104, 1107

Civilian war pensions and allowances, 1104

Criminal Code, 1104

Elections, 1104

Immigration, 1104

National Defence, 1104

Pensions, 1104

Public Service employment, 1104

Unemployment insurance, 1107

Excerpt from Le Devoir editorial, 1103

Female staff of Senate, 1103-04

Recommendations of Royal Commission on Status of Women, 1104

Speakers of the Senate, 1107

Televising of committee proceedings, 510, 511

Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce, 243, 272-4, 281, 304-06, 348-9, 368, 373, 298-400, 1134

Deschatelets, Hon. Jean-Paul, P.C.

Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1345

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-85, 2419-20

Alternatives to death by hanging, 2420

Deterioration of law enforcement, 2419

Deterrent aspect, 2419, 2420

Gallup poll, 2419

Premeditated or unpremeditated murder, 2419

Deschatelets, Hon. Jean-Paul, P.C. - Concluded

- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-85 - Concluded
 - Prison term, 2419
 - Responsibility of juries, 2420
- Forestry, devastation by Spruce budworm, 1218-19
 - Bacillus thuringiensis, experiments conducted in combatting tobacco and cabbage bugs and Spruce budworm, 1218-19
 - CBC announcement re spraying for budworm, 1219
 - Quebec areas affected, 1218
- Industry, textile imports affecting Canadian industry, 791-3
 - Excerpt from speech of Hon. Mr. Pepin re negotiations with other countries, 792
 - Government efforts to instigate restraints on imports, 792
 - Unemployment in textile industry, 791
 - USSR trading policy, 791
- National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee
 - First report, committee quorum, 1237
- Olympic bill C-63, 1188-90, 1198, 1204-05
 - Coin-selling program to include gold coins, 1188-9
 - Cost according to market price of gold, 1189
 - Design and size of coins, 1190, 1205
 - Expenditures forecast, 1188
 - Gold content, 1204-05
 - Statement of Postmaster General, 1204-05
 - Gold requirements for program, 1198
 - Limit on coins issued, 1189
 - Lottery receipts, 1188
 - Profit potential for COJO, 1188
 - Programs of government assistance for Games, 1189-90
 - Trade marks and copyrights, 1189
- Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation for maintenance, 501-04
 - Contracts between Solicitor General and provinces re RCMP, 501
 - Costs of police administration, 503-04
 - Financial implications of RCMP provincial operations, 501, 502
 - Quebec and Ontario, 500, 501, 503
 - Correspondence between Quebec Justice Minister and Solicitor General, 503
- Representation bill C-36, 436, 437
- Speaker pro tem, 1781

Desruisseaux, Hon. Paul

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 32-37
- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1542-5
 - Constitutional and controversial aspects of bill, 1544-5
 - Decree of Emperor Diocletian to fight inflation, 1542-3
 - Food prices control, 1544
 - Freezing of dividends, 1544
 - Personal responsibility for controls, 1543
 - Productive capacity, requirement of investment, 1544
 - UK prices and wages freeze, 1543-4
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 33
- Canada Year Book, 1788, 1821-3
- Canadian economy
 - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1411-15
 - Government expenditures, 1411, 1412-13

Desruisseaux, Hon. Paul - Continued

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation - Concluded

Gross national product, 1413

Industrial profit margin, decrease in, 1413

Labour demands, 1412, 1414

Report of Economic Council of Canada, 1411-12

Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1316

Question of privilege re interpretation of conflict of interest, 1316

Crime and violence, 944-5

Biblical history of crime and violence, 944

Parental attitudes towards punishment, 944, 945

Television programs, 945

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 658-60

Commutations since 1972 legislation, 659

Crime increase and legislative permissiveness, 659

Deterrent aspect, 659

Premeditated murders, 659, 660

Rehabilitation failure, 659

Economic conditions and prospects

Capital investment from domestic and foreign sources, 34-35

Construction empires, 36

Economic growth, 34

Government spending and national debt, 35

Gross national product, 33

Inflation, 33-36

Labour unrest, 36

Mineral resources and projected output, 35-36

Unemployment, 33

Economy of Canada, 1072, 1073, 1113-17

Excerpt from Fortune article by Prof. Meltzer, 1116

Floating exchange rates, 1116

Foreign investment in Canada, 1116-17

Free enterprise, 1116

Government expenditures, 1115

Government policies and economic planning, 1115-16, 1117

Gross national product, 1114

Inflation, 1113-14

Excerpt from Les Affaires re international consumer prices, 1113-14

International trade balance, 1117

Labour unions, administrative policies, 1116

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, availability to press of draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1756

Energy, international conference of oil-producing and oil-consuming countries, exclusion of Canada, 605-06, 775

Felicitations to Hon. Renaude Lapointe and others, 32

Florida land deals, involvement of Canadians in alleged swindle, 1012, 1198

Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1738-41, 1851

Economic Council of Canada recommendations, 1738, 1740, 1741

Expansion of trade in Atlantic economic community, 1740

GATT, 1739, 1740

International credit and money convertibility, 1740

Keynes' theories, 1738

Desruisseaux, Hon. Paul - ConcludedFree trade - Concluded

Secondary industries, 1738-41

Employment, 1740

Import controls, relaxation of, 1739

Role in economic survival of provinces, 1738-9

Textiles and other industries, 1739-41; Quebec, 1739

Trade with United States, 1740

Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 636-7

Energy resources, 637

Oil prices, 637

Withdrawal of companies from Canada, 637

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1865-6

Broadcasting, 1865-6

Difficulties of small publications, 1865

Mass media reaction, 1865

Time and Newsweek, 1865

Industry, textile and other imports affecting Canadian industry, 781-8, 901, 947-8, 974-8

Anti-dumping procedures, 978

Canadian Textile Commission briefs presented to government (1974), 782

Competition from textile imports, 782, 785, 975-8

Dominion Textile Co. closing, 783

Dumping of foreign textiles at depressed prices, 782-3

GATT provisions for protection of signatories, 781-2, 785, 786, 787

Gazette article on The Case for Textile Protection, 781

Imports per capita, 782

Negotiations, lack of textile industry representatives, 976

Policy introduced by Hon. Mr. Pepin, 782

Polyester and cotton-mixed fibres, 783, 977

Representations and recommendations of union leaders, workers and producers, 783-4

Separatist leader's comments on CBC re government attitude toward secondary industry trade policies, 978

Sheet glass, 781-9

Sheets and pillowcases, relaxing of restraints re, 783

Shirts, import quota and prices, 785, 977

Recommendations, lack of enforcement of, 976-7

Textile and Clothing Board, role of, 976-7

Unemployment in Wellington District and other areas, 782, 784, 786-7, 977, 978

Unsatisfactory textile trade policies, 976

Investigations in Parliament, question of privilege, 1476-7, 1478

Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate, 212

O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2036

Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation for maintenance, 567-8

Federal-provincial agreements re RCMP, 568

Quebec and Ontario policing costs, 568

RCMP background, 567-8

Senate

Business, 1108

Committees, 945

Vacancies, 945

Tributes to Senator Hayden, Chairman of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 1316-17

Dickson, Hon. R.G.B., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

Royal assent, 731, 899

Documents tabled

See Journals of the Senate

Drugs

Alcoholism and drug addiction among Indians, 142-3
 Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code, 300, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456, 969-71, 983, 1007-11, 1014-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9

Drury, Hon. Charles Mills, Minister of State for Science and Technology and Minister of Public Works

Resignation offer and rejection by Prime Minister, 1890-3, 1920-2

Duggan, Hon. James

Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., the late, 324
 Newfoundland, CNR services, 1868, 1903
 Transportation, BNA Act as it pertains to transportation, 2115-18
 Newfoundland, 2115-18
 CNR operations, 2115-18
 Abandonment of passenger service, 2115-16
 Elimination of freight trains, 2116
 Limited 'train consist', 2115-16
 Overcharges on freight, 2117
 Shipment delays, 2116
 Road cruiser service, 2116
 Bus fares, 2117
 Bus purchases, questions re, 2116
 Terms of Union re transportation services, 2117, 2118

Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29. 1r, 1293; 2r, 1307-08; ref to com, 1308; rep with amds (French text only), 1355, 1372; 3r, 1373; r.a., 1712

Economic conditions and prospects

Arab nations monopoly of oil industry, 69-70
 Athabasca tar sands and Mackenzie River pipeline, 70-71
 Canada-US relations, 70
 Capital investment from domestic and foreign sources, 34-35
 Commodity price determination, 69; transportation costs, 70
 Construction empires, 36
 Economic growth, 34
 Energy resources and establishment of Petro-Canada, 69
 Financial Times of Canada editorial, 69
 Government spending and national debt, 35, 628
 Gross national product, 33, 189-90, 199-200, 350, 628, 629
 Inflation, 15-16, 19, 33-36, 628
 Labour unrest, 36
 Lumber industry, New Brunswick, 122
 Mineral resources and projected output, 35-36
 New Brunswick, 1750-4, 1817-20, 1821, 2009-13
 Nova Scotia storm damage, 1765-6
 Oil prices, 69-70, 71
 Unemployment, 33, 628
See Anti-inflation,
 Economy of Canada,
 Inflation.

Economy of Canada, 1012, 1067-73, 1081-2, 1113-17

- Cost-push inflation, 1072
- Countercyclical policies, 1068, 1072
- Crude oil exports, ceiling on, 1072
- Current account deficit, 1071
- Employment and unemployment statistics, 1070
- Excerpt from Fortune article by Prof. Meltzer, 1116
- Excerpts from speeches of Senator Lamontagne (1966, 1970), relating to economic conditions, 1068-9
- Exports decline due to work stoppages, 1070
- Finance Minister's statements re fiscal policies, 1068-9, 1071
- Floating exchange rates, 1116
- Free enterprise, 1116-17
- Government expenditures, 1082, 1115-16, 1117
- Gross national product, 1070, 1114
- Housing market, 1069
- Index of real domestic product and of industrial production, 1070
- Inflation, 1113-14
 - Excerpt from Les Affaires re international consumer prices, 1113-14
- Interest rates, 1069
- International trade balance, 1117
- Labour unions, administrative policies, 1116
- Provincial deficits, 1071
- Recessions (1953-74), 1067-8
- Tax cuts, 1082
- Trade deficits re parts and accessories of motor vehicles, 1071
- US economic conditions, 1069, 1070
- US production of small cars affecting auto pact, 1071-2

Speakers: Senators

- Desruisseaux, Paul, 1072, 1073, 1113-7
- Flynn, Jacques, 1072-3, 1081-2
- Forsey, Eugene A., 1082
- Lamontagne, Maurice, 1067-72

Electoral boundaries readjustment (Bill C-214)

- Electoral Boundaries Commissions, functions of, 378
 - Discrepancies in decisions of provincial commissions, 378
 - Recommendations, specifying of reasons for, 378

Speaker: Senator

- Asselin, Martial, 378

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill (No. 1) C-214. 1r, 325; 2r, 377-8; 3r, 382; r.a., 397

Electoral boundaries readjustment (Bill C-370)

- Commissions, members and powers of, 526-7, 536-7
- Geographic considerations in establishing quota of constituencies, 527, 536
- Rural and northern constituencies, 527

Speakers: Senators

- Belisle, Rheal, 527, 528
- Flynn, Jacques, 527, 536, 537
- Lafond, Paul C., 527
- Molgat, Gildas L., 526-8, 536-7

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill (No. 2) C-370. 1r, 514; 2r, 526-8, 536-7; ref to com, 537; rep without amdt, 555; 3r, 564; r.a., 581

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Berthier) bill C-365. 1r, 564; 2r, 602-03; 3r, 606; r.a., 656

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) bill C-228. 1r, 583; 2r, 601; 3r, 606; r.a., 656

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Lafontaine) bill C-229. 1r, 583; 2r, 601-02; 3r, 606; r.a., 656

Emergency legislation

St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 817-27, 832
West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 76-93, 95
West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 723-30, 731

Emergency sittings

Authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 328

Employer-employee relations in the Public Service

Casual employees, 1811-12
Classification, 1806
Collective bargaining, facts and figures, 1801
Designated employees, 1802-04
Incompetence and incapacity, disciplinary action, 1810-11
Interim report, 1799
Managerial and confidential exclusions, 1810
Maximum penalties for unlawful activity, 1805-06
Pay research, 1808-10
Prosecution of offences under act, 1804-05
Public Service Employment Act, 1800-01
Technological change and long-term layoff, 1807-08

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee

Availability to press of draft report, 1755-6
Budget, 525, 1088, 1624
Communication from Commons, 160; reply from Senate, 188-9
Expenses re study of Parts I, II and III of paper, 525, 1088
Members
 Commons, 242
 Senate, 242
Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, ref to com, 1211
Recommendation to establish permanent Staff Relations Board, 998
Reports
 First report, committee quorum and engagement of staff, 255
 Second report tabled in Commons Nov. 26/74
 Third report pertaining to public meetings and recommendations re Board, 998-9, 1003-04
 Fourth report re Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, rep without amdt, 1211
 Fifth report re Superannuation bill C-52, rep with amdts, 1545-7
Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, ref to com, 1437, 1442
Terms of reference, 160, 188-9, 255
Workload of present board, 999

Employment

- Work ethic in Canada, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518
- Working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8

Energy resources

- Alaska reserves, 1141
- Arab nations monopoly of oil industry, 69-70
- Arctic gas pipeline, supply of Arctic gas to southern Canada, 2037-8
- Athabasca Tar Sands and Mackenzie River pipeline, 70-71, 1141
- Atlantic provinces
 - Development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2070, 2142, 2210
 - Offshore oil and gas resources, 2070, 2141-2, 2202-03
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, discussions re energy resources, 1141-2, 1145-7
- Colorado oil shale, 1141
- Conservation of fuel of car awaiting Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, 2209, 2443
- Construction of Arctic gas pipeline, supply of Arctic gas to southern Canada, 2037-8, 2069-70
- Domestic oil prices, 610
- Energy, Mines and Resources Dept., estimates for, 193, 201-2, 203
- Excise tax, 1265, 1267-80, 1281
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements, 1136, 1175-8, 1197, 1214
- Gasoline excise tax, 1100-01, 1112-13
- Government policy re Canadian ownership of companies developing oil and gas on crown lands, 1259-60, 2210
- Income tax, 583, 606-14, 616-21, 627-40, 645-56
- Indian oil and gas claims, 325, 337-8, 351-3, 402, 426, 427
- International conference of oil-producing and oil-consuming countries, exclusion of Canada, 605-06, 774-5
- International Energy Agency (IEA), 605
- Lighting of government buildings, 606, 1238-9
- Mineral resources and projected output, 35-36
- Nuclear energy, 1142
- Oil and gas reserves, negotiations between federal government and governments of producing provinces, 2070
- Oil and mining industries, 609-11, 613-14, 616-20, 629-30, 635, 637, 639-40
 - Alberta, 617, 618, 632
 - BNA Act provisions re provincial natural resources, 630, 632
 - Coal mining, 619-20
 - Leduc well, 620
 - South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corp., annual report, 619
 - Earned depletion, 610
 - Great Canadian Oil Sands, 619
 - Prices and production costs, 617-18, 620, 621
 - Pricing of Crude Oil: Economic and Strategic Guidelines for International Energy Policy*, by Taki Rifai, 618
 - Royalties, 609-10, 617, 629, 632, 636-40
 - Withdrawal of companies from Canada, 630, 637
 - Write-off of exploration expenses, 610-11
- Oil refiners, compensation to, 445-6
- Passamaquoddy-Cobscook Bay, US Corps of Engineers report on, 2210-11
- Petro-Canada, 69, 1174, 1178-9, 1215-18, 1244, 1251, 1281
- Petroleum administration, 847, 861-3, 902-07, 912-16, 925-7, 934-6, 981-2, 1002, 1013, 1034
- Pipeline from Prince Rupert to Edmonton, proposed construction of, 2037
- Pipeline treaty between Canada and United States, proposed, 2037

Energy resources - Concluded

- Provincial royalties, 609-10
- Shortfall in oil deliveries to US, 1142
- Solar and geothermal energy, harnessing of tides, heat pumps, 1142
- Syncrude project, 71

Energy, Statement of Policy, Proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations, 2169-72, 2179-82

- Background of Statement of Policy, 2171
- Berger inquiry, 2180
- Canada-US relations, 2179
- Crude oil and natural gas prices, 2169, 2170, 2181
- Dependency on imported oil, 2170
- Discretionary powers under new regulations, 2171
- Domestic energy, increase in prices, 2170
- Exploration and development in frontier regions of Canada, 2170, 2171, 2181
- Export prices of natural gas, 2170
- Freeze period on petroleum products prices, 2170
- Government decisions re crude oil and natural gas prices, 2170
- Hydroelectric power generation, statement of Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, 2180
- National energy strategy for Canada, 2169-70
- Nuclear energy, 2180
- Petro-Canada, 2181-2
- Provincial exports of energy, 2180
- Reduction in average use of energy, 2170
- Self-reliance on natural gas, 2170
- Speakers: Senators
 - Perrault, Raymond J., 2169-71
 - Phillips, Orville H., 2179-82

Environmental affairs

- Ocean dumping control, 1005, 1038-40, 1049-51, 1088, 1096
- Protection of coastal waters from radio-active pollution, 889, 924

Environmental contaminants

- Chemical contamination from industry, 1372
- DDT and other chemicals, dangerous effects of, 1404
- Federal-provincial consultations, 1372, 1404
- Government authority to obtain information re environment and manufactured substances, 1404
- Major provisions of bill, 1371-2
- Speakers: Senators
 - Macnaughton, Alan A., 1371-3
 - Quart, Josie D., 1404-05

Environmental Contaminants bill C-25. 1r, 1348; 2r, 1371-2, 1403-04; ref to com, 1404; rep without amdt, 1437; 3r, 1446; r.a., 1476

Estimates

- Agriculture, 695, 699, 1569
- Assurance that discussion on estimates does not terminate with passage of bill, 193, 203, 204, 205, 708

Estimates - Continued

- Athabaska Tar Sands, 693
- Auditor General's statement re low standard of government control of finances, 1976, 1977
- Bilingualism, 1986
- Borrowing authority, 389, 391, 392-4, 708, 721, 735, 737-9, 1603, 1604-05, 1612-13, 1972-3, 1988-9
- Breakdown of interim supply, complexity of allocation of votes, 737
- Budgetary votes and budgetary statutory items, 200, 704, 707-08, 2173
- Canadair Ltd., interest-free loans, 693, 706, 719, 720, 733
- Canadian Broadcasting Corp., 201, 1056
- Canadian International Development Agency, 200
- Canadian National Railway deficit, 693, 704
- Cape Breton Development Corp., 201
- Cheque cashing before Mar. 31, 1989-90
- CIDA, authority to carry funds from year to year, 973, 1055, 2174
- Consumer and Corporate Affairs, 697
- Control procedures for expenditures, 350
- Corporate power in relation to expenditures, 1611-12
 - Canadian Establishment*, by Peter Newman, 1612
 - Conflict of interest, excerpts from letters re, 1612
 - Power Corp. of Canada Ltd., 1611-12
 - Royal Commission re, 1611-12
- Correction in figure relating to supplementary estimates (D), 703
- Crown corporations, 1056
- Date of enactment of appropriation bill, 1130
- Deferment of capital projects, 1980-1, 1982-3, 1984
- Departmental cutbacks, 1131
- Dollar items, 379, 693, 695, 697-9, 704-06, 719, 723, 1565-70, 1603, 1607, 1613-14, 1967-70, 1971, 1977, 1979, 1980, 1982-3, 1987-8
 - Lack of authority for transfers, 1607
 - Statistics (1967-70), 1967-70, 1980, 1982-3, 1987-8
 - Statistics (1973-76), 1979, 1980
- Economic development and supply, 190, 379
- Employees in the government, statistics, 972
- Energy, Mines and Resources, 193, 201-02, 203, 695-6, 699-700, 701, 1566, 1608, 1609
- Energy policy for Canada, 2189
- Estimates by type of payment, 2173-4
- External Affairs, 697, 701, 1568
- Family allowances, 1084
- Glassco Commission report on Financial Management and Control Study, 1967, 1982
- Globe and Mail* article re 'Workers get shock at bank: Government cheques NSF', 1977-8
- Government restraints, 1083, 1130-1
- Governor General's warrants, 190
- Gross National Product vs government expenditures, 189-90, 199-200, 350, 972-3, 1605, 1607, 2187-8, 2287
 - Financial Times* article re, 2287
- Growth of budgetary expenditures in various depts., 972, 983, 1054-5
- House of Commons, program expenditures, payment to Leader of Social Credit Party, 719, 722, 1605-06, 1613
 - Bill introduced in Commons re future payments to SC Party leaders, 1605-06
 - Political aspect of, 1605-06
- Housing grants, 1986
- Inclusion of Main and Supplementary Estimates in one bill, 190-1
- Income tax refunds, 716
- Increase in estimates (1974-77), 2212, 2213
 - Supplementaries, 693, 2187, 2190-1

Estimates - Continued

- Increase in non-budgetary items and in statutory items, 2174
- Indian and Northern Affairs, 200-01, 379, 700, 701
- Industry, Trade and Commerce, 1566
- Inflation, 2188, 2190-1
- Information Canada, 201, 350, 1610
- Inter-Provincial Pipe Line Ltd., 693, 706-07, 720
- Labour, 697-8
- Law Reform Commission poster, 349-50, 351
- 'Leading Cases in Constitutional Law'*, excerpt from decision in 'Edinburgh and Dalkeith Railway Company v. Wauchope', 391
- Loan item in supplementary estimates, question of precedent, 2255-6, 2258
- Lockheed long-range patrol aircraft, 1984-5, 1986
- Loto Canada, 2234-5, 2237-8, 2244-9, 2255-8
 - See Loto Canada
- Manpower and Immigration Dept., Manpower Division, 400-01
- Medicare and hospital insurance, 1608
- Milk subsidies, 704
- National Finance, 1569
- National Health and Welfare, 190, 696, 702, 1055, 1566, 1568
- Nova Scotia heating costs, 1985
- Oil equalization payments, 2188
- Oil refiners, compensation to, 445-6, 1055, 1084, 1609
- Oil subsidies to Ottawa Valley Line, 1985
- Old age security fund, 693, 704, 705, 1055-6, 1971-2, 2213, 2173
 - Globe and Mail* report on, 705
- Olympic Games deficit, 1985, 1986, 2256
 - Government policy and statement re, 2256
- Payments to provinces, 379
- Percentage increase of supplementary estimates in relation to main estimates, 1948, 1967, 1971, 1976-7, 1983-4
- Point of privilege raised in Commons, 394
- Privy Council, 696
- Provincial government expenditures, 2189, 2190, 2213, 2287
- Public debt, 190, 1607-08
- Public Service employees, increase in, 2174
- Public Works, 696-7, 698, 1566-7
- Purchases of goods and services, 1084, 1085
- Railways, compensation to, 379
- Recommendation of Canadian Economic Policy Committee, 1084
- Referral of supply bills to National Finance Committee, 716, 717-18, 733-4, 736, 1129-31, 1604-05, 1613
- Regional economic expansion, 697, 701-02, 1570
- Science and Technology, 1567
- Secretary of State, 698, 1567, 1568-9, 1570
- Solicitor General, 1569
- Special employment measures, 1602
- Spouses' allowances, 1602
- Statutory expenditures required by law, 349, 1130
 - Non-statutory expenditures, 1130
- Student summer employment, 1603
- Suggestion that items remain on Order Paper for discussion at any appropriate time, 1782-5
- Supplementary estimates appropriation bill, question of retroactive power to government, 1976

Estimates - Concluded

- Supply and Services, 693
- Transfer payments to provinces, 1084, 2213-14, 2287, 2288
- Transport Dept., 693, 697, 702, 1567, 1568, 1569, 1609-11, 1985-6
 - Aircraft manufacturing, 1610-11
 - Canadair-Government of Canada option, 1610-11, 1614-15
 - Mirabel and Toronto Airports, 1610
 - Reductions, 1985-6
 - STOL aircraft, 1609-10
- Treasury Board, 704, 720
- Two-price wheat system, 1985
- Unemployment insurance, 1055, 1083, 2188, 2190; unemployment in potential productivity 2187-8
- UNESCO, 379-80
- Urban affairs, 1568
- Veterans Affairs, 693, 699, 704, 1567-8, 1569
- Votes for grants in fiscal year, 1972
- Votes for which additional sums are required, 1972
- Votes payments on calendar year basis, 1972
- Wheat, two-price system, 193, 202, 203
- Yearly estimates totals (1969-76), 1565

Estimates referred to National Finance Committee

- Fiscal year ending Mar. 31/75, 108; rep of com, 136-7, 189-91
 - Supplementary (A), 108, rep of com, 136-7, 189-91
 - Supplementary (B), 300, rep of com, 349-51, 372
 - Supplementary (C), 441-2, rep of com, 444
 - Supplementary (D), 586, rep of com, 693-4, 695-702
- Fiscal year ending Mar. 31/76, 555; rep of com, 971-3, 983-4, 1054-7, 1082-6
 - Supplementary (A), 1409; rep of com, 1549, 1565-70
 - Supplementary (B), 1824; rep of com, 1937, 1948-53, 1966-70
- Fiscal year ending Mar. 31/77, 1777; rep of com, 2167, 2173-5
 - Removal of item from Order Paper, question, 1782-5
 - Supplementary (A), 2178; rep of com, 2237-8, 2244-9, 2255-8

Estonia, 58th anniversary of Proclamation of Independence

- Tribute to Estonians, 1785
- US Resolution re foreign policy of non-recognition of annexation of Baltic States by USSR, 1785

European Community

- Canada's claim for compensation re loss of preferential access of Canadian commodities to British market, 579-80, 661-2, 671
 - Cheddar cheese, 671
 - Concessions of interest to Canada, 671
 - Negotiations leading to agreements between various countries, 671
 - Wheat and barley, 671

European Parliament, Strasbourg and Brussels meetings, 307-13, 316-20, 329-33

- Canada-European Community relations, excerpt from Senate committee report on, 310, 332-3
- Canada-United States relations, 317-20, 329-33
- Canadian delegation, 308-09

European Parliament, Strasbourg and Brussels meetings - Concluded

Economic situation, 311
 Energy resources, 312-13, 332
 Exchange meetings in Ottawa, 308
 Finished goods, export of, 317, 319, 320, 330
 GATT, 319, 320
 Multinational corporations, 330
 Ottawa office, establishment of, 308
 Prime Minister's visit to the Community, 308
 Trade and investment relationships, 332
 United Kingdom, 312

Speakers: Senators

Bourget, Maurice, 331-3
 Grosart, Allister, 319-20, 329-31
 O'Leary, M. Grattan, 316-19
 van Roggen, George C., 307-13

Everett, Hon. Douglas D.

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 413-14, 415
 Cabinet ministers, resignation offers and rejection by Prime Minister, 1892
 Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank bill S-24, 961-2
 Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 765, 797-800
 Appeal against board ruling, 798
 Articles under control list, 797-8
 Cultural properties of heritage of other countries, importing of, 798
 Excerpts from statements of Secretary of State, 798-9
 Fair cash offer, determination of, 798
 Rights of individuals, 799-800
 UK legislation, 799
 Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/75, Supplementary (B), 349-51
 Control procedures, 350
 Information Canada, 350
 Law Reform Commission poster, 349-50, 351
 Manpower requirements of federal government, 350
 Statutory expenditures required by law, 349
 Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/75, Supplementary (D), 683-4, 695-702
 Agriculture, 695, 699
 Athabaska Tar Sands, 693
 Canadair Ltd., loans to, 693
 CNR deficit, 693
 Consumer and Corporate Affairs, 697
 Discussion on subject matter of appropriation bills remaining on Order Paper, 1783-4, 1785
 Dollar items, 693, 695, 697-9
 Energy, Mines and Resources Dept., 695-6, 699-700, 701
 Inter-Provincial Pipe Line Ltd., and Syncrude project, 693, 694
 External Affairs, 697, 701
 Increase in main estimates through supplementaries, 693
 Indian and Northern Affairs, 700, 701
 Labour, 697-8
 National Health and Welfare, 696, 702

Everett, Hon. Douglas D. - Concluded

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/75, Supplementary (D) - Concluded

Old age security fund, 693
 Privy Council, 696
 Public Works, 696-7, 698
 Regional economic expansion, 697, 701-02
 Secretary of State, 698
 Supply and Services, 693
 Transport Dept., 693, 697, 702
 Veterans Affairs, 693, 699

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, rep of National Finance Committee, 971-3
 (Presented by Senator Sparrow)

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/77

Supplementary (A), rep of National Finance Committee, 2234-5

Fort-Falls Bridge Authority bill C-367, 897

Income tax, com authorized to study legislation prior to receipt of bills, 298-9

Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 272-4, 348-9, 399-400

Authority provided under Statistics Act, 273-4
 Disclosure of information to Customs officer, 273, 274
 GATT, 400

Import analysis and examination of invoices, 273-4

Imports, question of non-tariff barriers re, 400

Support services for industrial and trade development, 272-3

Information Canada, 400

Manpower Division of Department of Manpower and Immigration, motion to authorize com to examine and report on, 400-1

Responsibilities and functions of Manpower Division, 400-01

National Finance Committee

Reports

Estimates

Year ending Mar. 31/75, 136-7, 189-90

Supplementary (A), 136-7, 189-90

Supplementary (B), 349-51, 372

Supplementary (C), 444

Supplementary (D), 693-4, 695-702

Year ending Mar. 31/76, 971-3, 983-4, 1054-7, 1082-6

Supplementary (A), 1549, 1565-70, 1602

Supplementary (B), 1937, 1948-53, 1966-70

Year ending Mar. 31/77

Supplementary (A), 2234-5

Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80, rep without amdt, 1649-50

Senate business, 1881, 1915

Excise tax (Bill C-40)

Air transportation, 500

Articles for handicapped persons, 500, 501

Building materials and water distribution equipment, 500, 501, 519, 520

Clothing and footwear, 499, 501

Day care centers, 501

Government revenue from tax, 519

Liquor, wine, tobacco, 500

Transportation equipment, 500, 501, 520

Unlicensed wholesalers, 520, 570-3

Vehicles of high energy-consuming category, 500, 519-20

Excise tax (Bill C-40) - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 572, 573
 Cook, Eric, 571-2
 Flynn, Jacques, 519-20, 570-1
 Hayden, Salter A., 570, 572-3
 Macnaughton, Alan A., 499-501
 Manning, Ernest C., 573

Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40. 1r, 479; 2r, 499-501, 519-20; ref to com, 521; rep without amdt but with observations re unlicensed wholesalers, 570; 3r, 570-3; r.a., 581

Excise tax (Bill C-66)

Air transportation, 1268, 1271
 Building insulation materials, 1268, 1274, 1277
 Businesses and persons eligible for refund, 1267-8, 1272, 1274, 1279
 Deficit resulting from single oil price policy, 1269, 1271, 1273
 Gasoline for personal use and for travel to and from place of business, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1272-3, 1276-7
 Gasoline tax in other countries, 1280
 Income tax refunds, 1270-1, 1279
 Increase to all consumers in lieu of tax, suggestion, 1279
 Method for filing of claims and administration of refunds, 1270
 Nova Scotia home heating costs, 1275
 Prices of gas and oil, 1273, 1277
 Records of gasoline purchases, maintaining of, 1268
 Refunds, 1279
 Subsidy paid by low-income persons, 1272, 1274, 1276
 Tax administration costs, 1272
 Worldwide oil crisis, 1275

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 1273-5, 1276, 1277, 1279-80
 Grosart, Allister, 1271-3
 Macnaughton, Alan A., 1267-71, 1278
 Perrault, Raymond J., 1275-6, 1280
 Prowse, J. Harper, 1271, 1277-8

Excise Tax bill C-66. 1r, 1265; 2r, 1267-78; ref to com, 1278; rep without amdt, 1278; 3r, 1278-80; r.a., 1281

Explosives

Authority to regulate purchase and possession of fireworks and explosives, 263-4, 271
 Factories licensed to manufacture explosives, 271
 Inspections by provincial officials, 271
 National standards for gun magazines, 264
 Offences, 272

Speakers: Senators

Barrow, Irvine, 263-4
 Macdonald, John M., 271-2

Explosives bill S-17. 1r, 243; 2r, 263-4, 271-2; ref to com, 272; rep without amdt, 280; 3r, 291; r.a., 1134

Export development

- Authorized capital, 459-60, 462
- Board of directors, 464
- Foreign investment insurance program, 460
- Interest rate, 462, 463, 464
- Short-term and medium-term credit for small businesses, 461
- Speakers: Senators
 - Grosart, Allister, 462-4
 - Langlois, Leopold, 459-62, 464

Export Development bill C-9. 1r, 459; 2r, 459-64; 3r, 464; r.a., 467

Exports and imports

- Cultural property export and import, 712, 761-6, 768-70, 797-800, 810-13, 848, 908-11, 912, 1005
- Export development, 459-64, 467

External affairs

- External Affairs Department, Passport Office
 - Refusal to accept Canadian currency of $50 and $100 denominations, 2037, 2077
- Passports, diplomatic and special, for travel to Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4
- See* Foreign affairs

Farm credit

- Age limit, 788, 789, 797, 806, 807, 863-5
- Agricultural investments, 790
- Agricultural production, worldwide need, 803-04
- Availability of farm land, 797, 806-07
- Capital fund of corporation, 789, 790, 807
- Eligibility criteria, 805
- French Canadians enrolled in agricultural courses, 806
- French language literature in regard to legislation, 805
- Full-time and part-time farmers, 789, 803
- Interest rate, 789, 791
- Letter from Canadian Federation of Agriculture, 891
- Loan statistics, 795
- Maritime farmers, problems of, 863-4
- Mortgage or productive capacity of real estate, 789, 790-1
- Repayment record, 788
- Security requirements, 791, 804
- Small farm development, 804-05
- Statistics on persons involved in farming, 864
- Statistics on provincial loans, 807
- Western farming, 864
- Speakers: Senators
 - Argue, Hazen, 791, 805-06, 863, 886-8, 890-1
 - Belisle, Rheal, 891
 - Buckwold, Sidney L., 806, 865
 - Grosart, Allister, 886, 887, 891-2
 - Macdonald, John M., 796-7, 864, 880
 - McIlraith, George, 880-4, 885
 - Michaud, Herve J., 803-05
 - Norrie, Margaret, 863-4
 - Perrault, Raymond J., 886, 887, 890

Farm Credit bill C-34. 1r, 781; 2r, 788-91, 796-7, 803-07; ref to com, 807; rep with amdt and recommendations, 847-8, 863-5, 880, m in amdt, 880-2, point of order re amdt, Speaker's ruling reserved, 882-8, Speaker's ruling on point of order, 889-90, m for adoption of rep continued, 890-2, m in amdt adopted, 892, main m as amended agreed and rep adopted, 892; 3r, 893; r.a., 899

Farming

See Agriculture

Federal Business Development Bank

Counselling assistance to small enterprises, 370
 Federated Council of Sales Finance Companies, 369
 French version of bank name, 417
 Industrial Development Bank, 369-70
 Authorized capital, 370
 Background, 369
 Lending policies, 369-70
 Loans, 369
 Loss ratio, 369
 Information service, 370-1
 RoyNat, 369
 Scope of bank operators, 418
Speakers: Senators
 Flynn, Jacques, 417-18
 Godfrey, John M., 366-71

Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14. 1r, 348; 2r, 368-71, 417-18; ref to com, 418; rep of com, 426; 3r, 444; r.a., 467

Federal Court bill

See Supreme Court bill S-2, 12, 103-06, 153-5, 162-4, 243, 253, 467

Federal government buildings

Langevin Block and Justice Building, renovation particulars and costs, 76-77, 137
 Lighting of government buildings and costs of energy, 606, 1238-9

Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements

Basic and additional revenues, 1175-6, 1183-4
 Conditional and unconditional payments, 1182
 Costs of program, 1175
 Freehold oil and gas revenue, 1176
 Government commitment re oil and gas revenues for development and exploration, 1181
 Income tax revenue guarantee, 1176, 1177
 Medicare and hospital insurance, 1182-7
 Deterrent fees, 1185
 Home care and clinical supervision, 1186
 Phasing-out of federal assistance, 1183, 1184-7
 Remote areas, problems of, 1187
 Shortage of persons in medical profession, 1187
 UK health services, unsatisfactory operation of, 1186
 Personal and corporation tax rates, 1177
 Provincial equalization payments per capita, 1176-7, 1182
 Social welfare programs, 1184-6
 Tax rebates on oil and gas revenues, Western provinces, 1177

Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements - *ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Croll, David A., 1184-6

Grosart, Allister, 1180-4

Lang, Daniel A., 1175-8

Perrault, Raymond J., 1186-7

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57. 1r, 1136; 2r, 1175-8, 1180-8; ref to com, 1188; rep without amdt, 1197; 3r, 1214; r.a., 1281

Federal-provincial relations office

Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet, 465-6

Responsibilities, 466

Meetings (1964-73), 465

Privy Council functions, 465

Public Service employment, 464-6, 467

Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies

Assets of federally incorporated companies in Canada, 101

Borrowing limit, 100, 101-02

Subordinated debentures, 100, 102

Speakers: Senators

Hayden, Salter A., 100-03

Walker, David J., 103

Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7. 1r, 47; 2r, 100-03; ref to com, 107; rep without amdt, 160; 3r, 180; r.a., 314

Feeds

Bureaucratic control in enforcement of regulations, 158

Definition of 'feed', 130

Inspections, 585

Manufactured feeds, authority to regulate, 130

Medicaments, 585

Modifications proposed, 130

Pet foods, 585

Responsibilities of Agriculture Canada, 585

Whole seeds or grains free of deleterious substance, 138

Speakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 129-31, 585-6, 1635, 1636-7, 1650-3

Flynn, Jacques, 1652-3

Greene, John J., 1635

Langlois, Leopold, 1480, 1635-6

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 158-9

Norrie, Margaret, 161-2

Yuzyk, Paul, 157-8

Feeds bill S-10. 1r, 47; 2r, 129-31, 157-9, 161-2; ref to com, 162; rep with amds, 584-6, 592; 3r, 594; Commons amds, 1467, 1480, 1485-6, ref to com, 1635-7; rep that Commons amds be concurred in with substitution of one amdt, 1650-3, 1660-1; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1974; r.a., 2002

Felicitations

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, P.C., speeches at unveiling of portrait in Senate foyer, 469-71
 Lapointe, Hon. Renaude, appointment to office of Speaker of the Senate, 22, 26, 32, 37, 51, 58, 62, 72, 81, 82-83, 111, 116, 120, 138-9, 144, 167-8, 174-5, 184-5
 Martin, Hon. Paul P.C., former Leader of the Government in the Senate, 14, 18, 22, 26, 32, 37-38, 48, 51, 62, 72, 111, 116, 120, 122, 132, 142, 174, 181, 185, 208-12
 (Farewell speech to Parliament, 207-08)

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, P.C. (Resigned May 23, 1975)

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 184-8
 Aging, 186-7
 Compulsory retirement and lack of consideration for talent potential, 186-7
 'Salute to Senior Citizens Day', Toronto, excerpt from speech by Rt. Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, 186
 Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report, 516-18
 Conferences on aging, provincial, 516-17
 Dilemmas of Modern Man, excerpt from speech of Dr. Nathan Shock, 516
 Geriatrics studies in faculties of medicine, 517
 Ontario Select Committee on Aging, 517, 518
 Population increase in respect of elderly persons, 516
 Senior Citizens' Week (US), 517; Ontario committee recommendations, 518
 Sociological aspects of aging, 516-17
 Canadian Sovereignty Symbol bill C-373, 685-8
 Importation of beavers from US for Grey Owl film, 687-8, 709
 Lord Beaverbrook of New Brunswick, 686
 Non-restriction on commercial use of beaver symbol, 687
 Petitions and communications received to support adoption of beaver symbol, 686-7
 Significance of beaver to Indians, armed forces and areas of national interest, 686
 Committees, Special, Senate, study and analysis of reports for information of Parliament and public, 516
 Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223, 710-11
 Damage or insult to flag, 710
 Incidents of desecration to flag, question of, 710
 Penalties, 710
 Speech by Governor General on first raising of National Flag, 710
 Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 184-5
 Former Speaker of the Senate, felicitations, 14, 18, 22, 26, 32, 37, 51, 58, 62, 68, 72, 111, 116, 120, 132, 138, 139, 142, 167, 173, 181, 184-5
 Indian and Eskimo recruitment development program, 569
 International Women's Year, 896-9
 Abortion, deletion from Criminal Code, 898
 Anti-discrimination legislation, 897
 Excerpt from UN publication re inequality between men and women, 897
 Indian women, loss of status on marriage to non-Indian, 898
 Inequalities for university graduates, 898
 Pay discrepancies noted by Statistics Canada, 898
 Professionals, 898
 Property rights on marriage breakup, 898
 Royal Commission on the Status of Women, 897

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, P.C. - Concluded

- International Women's Year - Concluded
 - Social revolution by women, 896
 - UN Assist. Sect. General for Humanitarian and Social Affairs, Mrs. Helvi Sipilä, 896
 - United Nations designation of year, 896
 - 'Why Not' campaign, 897
 - Women's Program, Department of State, 897-8
 - Working women, heads of families, 898
- Legislation received without explanatory notes, 709
- Mexico, Canadian parliamentarians visit to, 775-7
 - Canadians retired in Mexico, 777
 - Exchange of cultural exhibitions, 776-7
 - Influence in international policies, 775
 - Joint ministerial meetings, Canada-Mexico, 775
 - Political system, 776
 - Chamber of Deputies, 776
 - Institutional Revolutionary Party and other parties, 776
 - President, 776
 - Seasonal agricultural workers in Canada, 777
 - Standard of living, Canada-Mexico, 775
 - Trade, Canada-Mexico, 776-7
 - Women, status of
 - Chamber of Deputies, 776
 - Equality before law and in all aspects of life, legislation for, 777
 - National programs for family planning, etc., 777
 - Social improvement, work in, 777
- Research staff, Parliamentary Library and Senate, 516
- Senior Citizens from March Township and Kanata, visitors to Senate, 555
- Speaker pro tem, 582, 803
- Speeches at unveiling of portrait in Senate foyer, 469-70; reply 470-1
- Status of women, 186-8
 - Advisory Council on the Status of Women, priorities cited, 187-8
 - Abortion, removal of item from Criminal Code, 188
 - Canada Labour Code amdt, 187
 - Canada Pension Plan, inclusion of homemakers, 187
 - Divorce or dissolution of marriage, 187
 - Equitable employment of women to federal government positions and to boards, commissions and crown corporations, 187
 - Superannuation Act amdts, 187
 - International Women's Year, 188
- Tributes upon resignation, 967-8
- Visit to the Senate after resignation, 1970

Ferry service

- North Sydney and Port aux Basques, possible increase in fares, 1861
- Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, possible increase in fares, 1815, 1860, 1861

Finance Committee

- See* National Finance, Standing Senate Committee

Firearms

- Control of weapons and firearms, 193, 293-5

Fire losses replacement account

Conditions covering replacement of or repair to buildings, 353
 Yukon and Northwest Territories, insurable properties and premiums, 338

Speakers: Senators

Belisle, Rheal, 353
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 338

Fire Losses Replacement Account bill C-18. 1r, 325; 2r, 338, 353; 3r, 366; r.a., 397

Fisheries

Extension of 200 miles coastal jurisdiction, 74, 2208, 2377
 Law of the Sea Conference, 117
 Marine safety, British Columbia fisheries, 1814-15, 1860
 Newfoundland, 117; ice conditions, 117; foreign fishermen inside limit, 117
 Nova Scotia, 18-20; offshore fishing, 19-20
 Rights of MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to fish Atlantic Salmon, 2208, 2264
 Tuna research, 73-74

Flag, National, 663, 710-11, 714-15, 740

Florida land deals, involvement of Canadians in alleged swindle, 1012, 1198

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 180-4
 Adjournment, point of order re, 1110
 Air conditioning system on Governor General's car, tax on, 2209
 Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 173-4, 981, 999-1000
 Conflict between creditors, 173-4
 Constitutionality of bill, question of, 173, 1000
 Federal-provincial conferences, lack of, 1000
 Registration of mortgage or claim for provision of fuel or other material, 173
 Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 334
 Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, 1053-4, 1261
 Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, 1633-4
 Penalty for non-reporting of disease, 1634
 Regulatory powers of authorities, 1634
 Transportation and care of animals, 1634
 Zoos and game farms, 1634
 Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1578, 1579-80, 1586, 1587
 Post Office workers, 1587
 Termination clause, constitutionality of, 1578, 1586
 Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2138
 Anti-inflation program
 Judges' salaries, 1662, 1681
 Meeting of Minister of Finance and provincial representatives re implementation of guidelines, 1549
 Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 392-5, 407, 408, 410, 411-12, 413, 414, 416
 Appropriation bill No. 1, 1975 C-54, 715-16, 733-6
 Appropriation bill No. 2, 1975 C-55, 736-8, 739
 Appropriation bill No. 3, 1975 C-64, 1097-8, 1129-31
 Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79, 1604-06
 Appropriation bill No. 1, 1976 C-90, 1976-7
 Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1986-7, 1988-9, 1991-2
 Auditor General of Canada, report of Independent Review Committee, question of referral to com, 796
 Austin, Hon. Jacob, introduced in the Senate, 1354

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
 - Engagement of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427, 1428
 - Meetings during adjournments, 2047-8
- Bankruptcy and insolvency, com authorization to examine and report on subject matter of Bill C-60, 911
- Boucher, Hon. William A., the late, 2251
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 132-3
- Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, 685
 - Energy Board, 685
 - Senate committee work on bill, 685
- Canada-United States relations
 - Communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re remarks by Senator Davey, 2193
- Canada Year Book, 1788
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
 - TV program 'Les beaux dimanches', 226
- Canadian economy
 - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1293, 1454-8
 - Excerpt from Prime Minister's speeches, 1454-5
 - Financial and monetary policies, 1456
 - Government expenditures, 1456-7
 - Government guidelines, 1455-6
 - Housing, excerpt from statement by Minister, 1457
 - Labour reactions, 1457-8
 - Prices and incomes policy, 1457
 - Restrictions, effect on free enterprise, 1457
 - Statement by Prime Minister re right to strike and wages above guidelines, 1293
- Canadian Labour Congress, political affiliation, 2153
- Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland rink, 1889
- Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation bill S-27, 1067
- Canadian Press report of statements made by Leader of the Government re matter concerning Senator Giguere, 1395-6, 1397
- Canadian Television News report on death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as member of Conservative Party, 1241
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2266, 2267, 2279-80, 2284, 2285, 2289, 2309-10, 2324, 2336, 2349, 2350, 2362, 2444
 - Delegation of powers to Lieutenant Governor in Council, 2279, 2289, 2324
 - McGill Law Journal* article, 'The Central Fallacy of Canadian Constitutional Law', 2324
 - Property and civil rights, 2279
 - Qualification for municipal office, 2279-80
 - Qualification to own ship, or acquire, hold or dispose of property, 2279-80
 - Suggested referral of Clause 33 of bill to Supreme Court, 2362, 2444
- Civil Service Insurance bill C-26, 770
- Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1308-12, 1598
 - Conflict of interest, interpretation of, 1308-09
 - Constitutional problems in provisions of bill, 1310-11
 - Misleading advertising and unfair or dishonest selling practices, 1309-10
 - Right of action in civil or federal courts for damages, and provincial jurisdiction re, 1410-11
- Combines investigation, New Brunswick court of appeal decision re K.C. Irving, Ltd., 1023, 1045-6
- Combines, planned takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., of Argus Corporation, 1063, 1064
- Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C., the late, 775
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 982-3, 1157-8, 1168-9, 1733
- Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223, 714, 715

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.1) C-71, 1742-7, 1774, 1775, 1776, 1885, 1897-8, 1903-06
 - Criminal Code provisions applicable to abortion, 1746
 - Admission of facts but denial of guilt, 1745
 - Comments of Past President of Bar Association, 1743
 - Morgentaler case*, 1742-5, 1903-06
 - Jury decision, reversal by court of appeal, 1742-6
 - Jury system and role of jurists, 1744-5
 - Right of judge to infer from peace officer's evidence that disturbance has occurred, 1897
 - Summary of judgment of minority, 1746
 - UK law, 1746
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2387, 2388, 2425-7
 - Excerpt from speech of Prime Minister, 2426
 - Extension of legislation re commutation of death penalty (1967-76), 2426
 - Problems deriving from murder, solution of, 2427
- Economy of Canada, 1072-3, 1081-2
 - Government expenditures, 1082
 - Tax cuts, 1082
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Berthier) bill C-365, 602
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, 527
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) bill C-228, 601
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Lafontaine) bill C-229, 602
- Emergency sittings of the Senate, 328
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
 - Availability to press of draft report, 1755
- Energy, prices for crude oil and natural gas, announcement re, 2142-3
- Estimates
 - Auditor General's statement re low standard of government control of finances, 1976
 - Borrowing authority, 392-4, 735, 737-8, 1603, 1604-05, 1988-9
 - Breakdown of interim supply, complexity of allocation of votes, 737
 - Canadair, interest free loan, 733
 - Date of enactment of appropriation bill, 1130
 - Departmental and crown corporations cutbacks, 1131
 - Dollar items and transfer payments, 1977
 - Form and title of appropriation bills, 717
 - Government expenditures and restraints, 1130-1, 1605
 - Government spending, increase in, 715-16, 1605
 - House of Commons, program expenditures, payment to the Leader of Social Credit Party, 718, 1605-06
 - Political aspect of, 1605-06
 - Income tax refunds, 716
 - Percentage increase of supplementary estimates in relation to main estimates, 1976-7
 - Question of privilege raised in Commons, 394
 - Referral of supply bills to National Finance Committee, 716, 717-18, 733-4, 1129-31, 1604-05
 - Statutory and non-statutory expenditures, 1130
 - Supplementary estimates appropriation bill, question of retroactive power to government, 1976
- Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 519-20, 570-1
 - Building materials and construction equipment, 519, 520
 - Government revenue, 519
 - Transportation equipment, 520
 - Unlicensed wholesalers, 520, 570-1
 - Vehicles of high-energy-consuming category, 519-20
- Excise Tax bill C-66, 1273-5, 1276, 1277, 1279-80
 - Building insulating materials, 1274
 - Conservation of gas and oil, question of, 1274

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Excise Tax bill C-66 - Concluded
 - Exemptions, 1274, 1279
 - Gasoline tax in other countries, 1280
 - Increase to all consumers in lieu of tax, suggestion, 1279
 - Refunds, 1279
 - Subsidy paid by low-income persons, 1274
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 884
- Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14, 417-18
 - French version of bank name, 417
 - Scope of bank operations, 418
- Feeds bill S-10, 1652-3
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 181-2
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen
 - Speech at unveiling of portrait of, 469-70
 - Tribute upon occasion of resignation, 968
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1014, 1015, 1016, 1019, 1020, 1025-6, 1027-8, 1029, 1030, 1075-6
 - 'Give', 'trafficking', 'distribute', definition of, 1025-8, 1075
 - Point of order re amdt under discussion, 1015
- Foreign affairs, Canada-United States relations, 234
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1163
- Gasoline excise tax, 1100, 1101
- Gélinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, the late, 1713
- Gouin, Hon. L. M., retirement from the Senate, 2057
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1641
- Habitat, UN Conference on Human Settlements, 2199-2200
- Immigration policy, unauthorized press publication of confidential draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1286
- Income Tax bill (No.1) C-49, 627-30, 647-9
 - Committee consideration of bill, press and public ignorance of, 647
 - Economic conditions, 627-8
 - Government expenditures, 628; forecast (1975-76), 628
 - Gross National Product, 628, 629
 - Inflation, 628
 - Unemployment, 628
 - Energy resources, 629-30, 648-9
 - BNA Act provisions re provincial natural resources, 630
 - Exodus of capital, personnel and technology, possibility of, 630
 - Royalties, 629, 648
 - Taxpayers, statistics on, 628-9
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2024-7, 2337-8
 - Bill C-118 (1965) providing exemption for advertising costs, 2024
 - Excerpt from speech re, 2024, 2025
 - Broadcasting, 2025, 2026
 - Bellingham station, 2026
 - GATT provisions re exemption of tax from imported products defined as services, 2027
 - MD of Canada*, 2027
 - Ministerial powers, 2025
 - Time and Reader's Digest*, 2024-7
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, 1798
- Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, 426
- Indians, Manitoba Brotherhood, request to appear before Senate committee, 315
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 368

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Inflation, 182-3, 519
 - Government 'restraints', 183
 - Gross National Product vs government expenditures, 182-3, 519
 - Supply of goods and services, 183
- Investigations in Parliament, point of order re discussion of subject, 1477, 1478, 1479
- Judges bill C-47, 1053, 1080
- Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1848, 1857-8, 1859, 1890-3, 1920-2, 1930-1
 - Drury, Hon. Charles Mills, resignation offer and rejection by Prime Minister, 1890-3, 1920-2
 - Ouellet, Hon. André, resignation because of impending contempt of court appeal, 1890-3, 1920-2
- Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., the late, 324
- Labour conditions, strike of longshoremen in Quebec, back-to-work legislation, 833, 838-9, 840, 846, 849, 855, 867, 888, 900-01, 912
 - Withdrawal of services by longshoremen at Montreal, 1006
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, the late, 532-3
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Expenses, special, 525, 526
 - Meeting held in camera, 1770
 - Televising of committee proceedings, 510, 513-14, 551
- Legislation, difficulty in dealing with omnibus bills, 1742
- Liberal Caucus, invitation to members of Opposition, 1868
- Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, 1338-9
 - Appointments after royal assent of bill, 1339
 - Inadequacy of remuneration, 1338
 - Members of Parliament retired to office of lieutenant governor, 1339
- Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, 1251-2, 1257-8
- Medical Care bill C-68, 2359
 - Seat belts, 2367, 2368
- Mexico, communique of Parliamentary delegation to Canada, 1874, 1887-8
- Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians, 852-3
 - Political stability, 853
 - Tariff preferences for developing countries, 852
 - Tourism, 853
 - Trade missions, 852-3
- Money bills, Senate authority to amend, 1656, 1657-8
- Montreal police force, threatened strike, 849
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 2068
- Narcotics, study of legislation by Senate committee, 316
- National Finance Committee, meetings during adjournment, 2048
- National Housing bill C-48, 742, 753, 755, 756
- National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2161, 2191
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1727
 - Canada's role in NATO, 1727
 - Warsaw Pact, 1727
- Official languages, report to Parliament, 289-90
- Official languages, right of air pilots in Quebec, 2344, 2345, 2348, 2378-81
- O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2034
- Olympic bill C-63, 1203-04
 - Expenditures, inflationary trend, 1204
 - National aspect of Olympics, 1204
 - Unjust criticisms by government alleged by Opposition members, 1204-05

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 603, 954-5
 - Motion that subject be referred to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 603, 954-5; agreed, 966
 - Cost-sharing formula, 955
 - RCMP operations in other provinces, 954
 - Subsidizing by Ontario and Quebec and other provinces, 955
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 982, 1002
- Political Parties, possible RCMP investigation, 2063
- Post Office, opinion of Anti-Inflation Board re settlement with Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1597
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1370, 1403, 1410, 1416-17
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill C-10, 599, 600
- Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1763, 1764
- Privileges and immunities of senators, proposed special committee, 1434, 1734
 - Search warrants, procedure in dealing with, 1434
- Progressive Conservative Party of Canada, leadership convention, 1778, 1813-14
- Public Service, bank's refusal to cash government cheques, 1974-5, 2003-04, 2008
- Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, 1245, 1246
 - Board composition and term of office, 1245
- Railway bill C-48, 760-1
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1639-40, 1662, 1663, 1664
 - Effects of anti-inflation program on regional areas, 1662, 1663, 1664
 - Passage of bill, question of, 1639-40
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee
 - Newspaper article re Chairman Senator Forsey, 794
- Representation bill C-36, 438-9
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1207, 1209
- Rules of the Senate
 - Adherence to subject of debate, 599, 600
 - Minister's statement of policy, senator's comment or criticism re, 1203
 - Point of order re comment on speech of Commons member, 2416
 - Point of order re question of privilege on Air Canada service, 507
 - Point of order re remarks by government leader, 1826
 - Point of order under advisement by Speaker, 884
 - Reference of items to National Finance Committee, 1109, 1110
 - Suggestion that matter of appropriation bills being ref to com be considered by Standing Rules and Orders Committee, 736-7
 - Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1207, 1209
- Rules of the Senate, report of Committee on Standing Rules and Orders, 1358, 1361, 1362, 1364
- Science Policy Committee, 1246-7
- Senate
 - Adjournments, 712-13, 1107-08, 1110
 - Business, 124, 153, 222, 324-5, 713, 723, 1107, 1110, 1122, 1250, 1262-4, 1265, 1287-8, 1409, 1438, 1547, 1878, 1879, 1880, 1915, 1916, 1954, 2046, 2336
 - Criticisms by public and in press re Senate consideration of bill C-49, 647
 - Monday evening sittings, question of, 1878, 1879, 1880
 - Reform
 - Official Opposition, reinforcement of, 184
 - Suspensive veto, 184
 - Term of appointment, 184
 - Simultaneous interpretation system, 504
 - Vacancies, 1772

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 868-70
 - Adequacy of increase, question of, 868
 - Appointment of commissioners to inquire periodically into remuneration of members of Parliament, 869-70
 - Comparison to salaries of top public servants and professionals, 868
 - Cost of living index, 869
 - Expense and travel allowances, 869, 870
 - Method of awarding increase by legislation, 868
 - Parliamentarians' remuneration scale (1953-70), 869
 - Press and public reaction to salary increase, 870
 - Prime Minister, ministers and deputies, 869
 - Principles governing salary increase, 868
 - Speaker of Senate and of Commons, 869
 - Stevedores' wage demands, 868
- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2187, 2193-5, 2196, 2203, 2204, 2205, 2207
 - Liberal Caucus support re cancellation of 7% increase, statement of Prime Minister re, 2193
 - Provincial legislatures, salary increases, 2194
 - Senior public servants, 2193-4
 - Supplementary retirement benefits, 2194
- Senate (Intersessional Authority) bill S-22, 576-7, 815-16
 - Committee work, delays due to dissolution of Parliament, 577
 - Dissolution periods 1963-74 (number of days), 576
 - Resolution re intersessional authority, 576
 - Sittings of committees between sessions, 577
 - Limitation, 577
 - Reports of committees, 577
- Sessions of Parliament, legislative program, 1902-03
- Smith, Hon. George Isaac, introduced in the Senate, 1282
- Sports, message of congratulations to Montreal Canadiens on winning of the Stanley Cup, 2129
- Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1437, 1442
- Statutes of Canada (to revise references to Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec) bill S-16, 291-3
- Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80, 1642, 1643, 1649
 - Inclusion of borrowing authority in appropriation bills, 1642, 1643
 - Period covered by borrowing authority, 1649
 - Referral of bill to committee, question of, 1643
 - Requirement of recommendation of Governor General, 1643
- Supreme Court bill S-2, 106, 153-5
 - Applications for leave to appeal, 153-4
 - Conflict of interest, question of, 153
 - Interest on money awards, 153
 - Residence requirement for judges, registrars and deputy registrars, 153
- Tailoring service for Senate and Commons, 2167-8
- Televising of committee proceedings, 510, 513-14, 551
- Territorial Lands bill S-20, 375-7
 - Conflict of interest, 376-7
 - 'Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest', 377
 - Offshore rights and the seabed, 376, 377
- Transportation, bilingual air traffic services, Commission of Inquiry, 2322, 2335
 - Disruption of services in Canada, 2237, 2243, 2249-50, 2258-9
- Transport Minister Hon. Jean Marchand, rumour of resignation, 573
- Uranium of Canada, Limited, proposed referral of report to National Finance Committee, 1639

Flynn, Hon. Jacques, P.C., Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Concluded

- West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 76, 78-80, 93-94
 - Conciliation commissioner, 79
 - Delay in negotiations, 78
 - Proposals for collective bargaining, prohibition against strikes, compulsory arbitration, 79-80
- West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 725-7, 730
 - Disruptions in economy due to strikes, 725-6
 - Loss of man-days in recent strikes, 725-6
- West Coast ports operations, resumption of work by longshoremen and related operations, question, 742

Food and drugs, narcotic control

- Advertising of drugs by give-away, 1018-19
- Application for withdrawal of criminal record, 1038, 1048
- CMA resolution re non-medical use of cannabis, 447
- Cannabis, 354-6, 357-8, 359-60
 - Convictions for possession of, 355-6
 - Hazards of use, 357, 359-60
 - Metabolic interactions with other drugs, 359-60
 - Persistence of THC in the body, 359
 - Tar content, 359
 - Research, 357
- Certificate of analysis, 1033
- Drug and gun control, 1015
- Drugs and alcohol, teenagers' and young children's use of, 355-6, 383-4, 453, 1048
- Drugs, Society and Personal Choice*, 361
- Drug trials cited, 1024, 1029
- Educational drawbacks as result of criminal record, 1008-09
- 'Give', 'traffic', and 'sell', definition of, 1009-11, 1015-31, 1047, 1075
- Goods for export purposes, 1066
- Healthways* magazine, excerpt from, 374
- Indian reservations, drug and alcohol problem and suicide rate, 453-4
- LeDain Commission, 354, 383
- Misunderstandings by public re purpose of legislation, 374-5, 449, 970, 1046
- National Organization for Reform of Marihuana Laws (US), 447, 449
- Onus of proof for possession or trafficking, 1008, 1010-11
- Parole or unconditional release, 969, 970, 1008, 1037, 1038
- Penalty for importing, exporting, trafficking or possession, 367, 375, 447, 1009, 1037-8, 1047-8
- Permissive society, 361-2
- Preventive detention and compulsory treatment, 1032
- Search by police, authority for, 356

Speakers: Senators

- Asselin, Martial, 402-04, 1007-11, 1074-5
- Bonnell, Lorne, 446-8, 1019, 1020, 1046, 1078-9
- Buckwold, Sidney L., 1079
- Choquette, Lionel, 1018
- Croll, David A., 1014, 1016, 1018, 1074-5
- Denis, Azellus, 1037
- Flynn, Jacques, 1014, 1015, 1016, 1019, 1020, 1025-6, 1027-8, 1029, 1030, 1075-6
- Goldenberg, Carl, 969-71, 1025, 1066, 1079
- Greene, John J., 454, 1027
- Heath, A. E. Haddon, 1018-19, 1031-3, 1076

Food and drugs, narcotic control - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators - Concluded

Hicks, Henry D., 366-8, 1017
 Laird, Keith, 1014, 1016-7
 Lawson, Edward M., 374-5
 Manning, Ernest C., 405-06, 1014-15, 1016, 1037-8
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 1019, 1026
 McElman, Charles, 1077
 McGrand, Fred A., 404-05
 McIlraith, George, 1015-16, 1019, 1020, 1021, 1023-5, 1026, 1027
 Neiman, Joan, 354-8, 456, 1014, 1017-18, 1076-7
 Perrault, Raymond J., 1028, 1029-30
 Phillips, Orville H., 1036-7
 Prowse, J. Harper, 382-5, 1046-8
 Rowe, Frederick William, 448-54, 1048-9
 Sullivan, Joseph A., 358-62, 1079-80
 van Roggen, George C., 1048
 Williams, Guy, 453-4

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19. 1r, 300; 2r, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456; ref to com, 456; rep with amdts, 969-71, 983, 1007-10; m to amend com rep, 1010-11, 1014-21, 1023-30, neg, 1030-1, debate on rep cont, 1031-3, 1036-8, 1046-9, rep adopted, 1049; m for 3r, 1066; m to amend sec. 1 of bill, 1066, 1074-5, agreed, 1075; m for 3r cont, 1075-6, m that bill be not proceeded with, 1076-7, neg, 1078; m for 3r cont, 1078-80; 3r, 1080

Foreign affairs

Aid to Chile, 1438-9, 1597-8
 Canada-United States relations, 66-68, 71, 227-9, 234, 1653, 1716, 1747-50; questions re, 1625-7
 Canada-United States boundary, government policy re demarcation line on Dixon Entrance on Strait of Juan de Fuca, George's Bank and northwards, 2308
 Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3, 2192-3, 2201
 Communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re remarks attributed to Senator Davey, 2192-3, 2377-8
 Club of Rome, President Peccei, visit to Senate committee, 473
 Estonia, 58th anniversary of Proclamation of Independence, 1785
 European Parliament, 307-13, 316-20, 329-33
 Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Cooperation, 1293, 1466, 1471-5, 1791
 Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Florida conference, 2221-2, 2224-33
 Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Quebec conference, 1137-43, 1145-55
 Inter-Parliamentary Union, Colombo, Sri Lanka conference, 984-8
 Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 234-8
 Italy, earthquake victims, Canadian government assistance to, 2111
 Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians, 775-7, 852-3, 930-3
 North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1489-94, 1513-16, 1726-8
 North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 342-7, 362-5
 Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to Argentina, 1975, 2142
 Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India, 1859-60, 1869
 Palestinian Liberation Organization
 Position taken by Canadian delegation at United Nations, 110, 137-8
 Status as participants in United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, 1238, 1242-4, 1248-9
 Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe, Strasbourg conference, 1431-4

Foreign affairs - Concluded

Passports

Restrictions on special passports of MPs, article in Globe and Mail, 2262-3, 2362-4, 2443

Use of diplomatic and special passports for travel to Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4

South Africa-Zambia relations, 229

United Kingdom, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, visit to Ottawa, 473

Foreign Affairs, Standing Senate Committee

Budget, 193, 348, 1781

Canada-United States relations, committee authorized to report on, 227-9, 234; committee authorized to publish and distribute Vol.I of report, 1653; report tabled, 1716

Meetings during Senate sittings, 713, 1059, 2216

Members, 96

Reports

Canada-United States relations, 1716, 1747-50

Citizenship bill C-20, rep without amdt, 2242

Immigration bill S-12, rep without amdt, 239

Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, rep without amdt, 1874

Terms of reference, 227

Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1158-63, 1169-70, 1218-20, 1230-2, 1816

Acreage affected in Ontario, Quebec, Maritimes and Newfoundland, 1219

Bacillus thuringiensis, experiments in combatting tobacco and cabbage bugs and Spruce budworm, 1218-19

CBC announcement re spraying for budworm, 1219

Christmas tree industry, 1169

Cost-sharing of insecticide spraying, 1158-60, 1163

Damaging side effects of insecticides, 1158-63

Economic results from destruction, 1158, 1219

Excerpt from paper prepared by director of Maritime Forest Research Centre, 1158

Federal cost-sharing in aerial control programs, 1219-20, 1816

Federal responsibility, 1160-1, 1162

Lumber companies' participation in control, 1220

Maple and Birch 'dieback', 1160

New Brunswick dependence on forest industry, 1158

Newfoundland, 1161

Birch and Mountain Ash, 1162

Newspaper headlines re lack of federal assistance, 1158

Position statement prepared by Environment Department, 1230-2

Effectiveness and efficiency of chemical control, 1230-1

Possible alternatives to widespread use of chemicals, 1231-2

Scope and effectiveness of environmental monitoring, 1231

Prince Edward Island, 1162

Quebec, 1218

Smallholdings and farmers' woodlots, 1169

Statistics on NB forestry ownership, 1169

Task force report, 1220

Wildlife affected by forest conditions, 1162

Speakers: Senators

Bonnell, Lorne, 1162-3

Buckwold, Sidney L., 1169, 1170

Burchill, G. Percival, 1158-9, 1816

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 1218-19

Flynn, Jacques, 1163

Forestry - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators - Concluded

- Hicks, Henry D., 1161
- McElman, Charles, 1159-61, 1169-70
- Michaud, Herve J., 1169
- Perrault, Raymond J., 1162, 1163, 1219-20, 1230-2
- Robichaud, Louis-J., 1163
- Rowe, Frederick William, 1160, 1161-2

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 51-58
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1508, 1532-7
 - Anticipated contravention of guidelines, 1537
 - Controls by voluntary means, 1533
 - Federal-provincial cooperation in enforcement of guidelines, 1508, 1536-7
 - Labour unions, 1535-7
 - Ontario secondary school teachers, 1536
 - Public Service Alliance, 1536-7
 - Over-ruling of courts of Parliament, 1534-5
 - Wee Frees* and Taff Vale cases cited, 1535
 - Power of regulation given to Administrator of Board, 1533-4
 - Progressive Conservative Party proposals, 1533
 - Safeguard operations of Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 1534, 1535
 - UK controls, 1533
- Anti-inflation program
 - Family allowances, 1683, 1716-17, 1721
 - Postal workers' contract, government rejection of Anti-Inflation Board's opinion re, 1628, 1655
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1976 C-94, 2267-9
- British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 bill C-3, 1061-2
 - Jurisdiction of Parliament in Senate appointments, 1061
 - Manitoba and other provinces, Senate representation (1886), 1061
 - Native representation from NWT and Yukon, 1061
- British Trade Mission offices in Canada, 206, 252
- Business of the Senate, committee meetings, 1090, 1091
- Canada Year Book, 1822
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
 - Gerda Munsinger, presence in Canada and appearance on television program, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7
 - Question of privilege re reply to question, 1256-7; further question of privilege, 1618-19, 1625
- Les Beaux Dimanches* program, 1127-8
 - Dubious nature of film with separatist tendencies, 1127
 - National unity, deprecating of, 1127
 - Report of Transport and Communications Committee re, 1127-8
- Canadian coins, reported change in design, 1937, 1955
- Canadian economy
 - Attack on Inflation – a program of national action, 1319-26
 - BC Premier's statement re temporary price freeze, 1323
 - Canadian Labour Congress proposals, 1323-4
 - CLC appearance before Senate committee, question of, 1326
 - Constitutional validity of legislation, question of, 1320
 - Canada Temperance Federation* case, 1320-1
 - Globe and Mail* article by Prof. J. D. Morton re, 1320
 - Cost-push inflation, 1321

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A. - Continued

Canadian economy - Concluded

Attack on Inflation - Concluded

Demand-pull inflation, 1321

Emergency or temporary legislation, 1320-1

Globe and Mail articles on price controls, 1323

Government expenditures, 1324-5

Bank of Canada building, 1324

Mirabel Airport, 1325

Pickering Airport, 1325

Sculptures, 1324-5

Inflation, types of, 1321

Money supply, increase in, 1323

Pensioners, 1323

Price control vs wage control, 1322

Problems of equity in temporary freeze wages and controls, 1322

Rectification of disparities between compensation for men and women, 1320

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, powers of, 1320

Salaries of members of Parliament and executives, objections to, 1325, 1326

Senate role in attack on inflation, 1322

Social services, 1324

CNR services in Atlantic provinces, 1924, 1976

Canadian Labour Congress, political affiliation, question of privilege, 2153, 2154

Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5, 829-32

Bell Canada applications, 831-2

Executive committee, 830

Head office location, 830

Matters pending before CTC, 830

Powers of commission, 830-1

Provincial and consumer representation on commission, question of, 831

Renaming of commission, 829

Responsibility to report to Minister of Communications, 830

Terms of appointment and qualifications of commission members, 830, 831

Candu reactors, proposed sale to Argentina and Korea, 1307, 1319

Childers, Erskine, President of Republic of Ireland, death of, 265

Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada, action of National Revenue Department re, 2183-4, 2346

Citizenship bill C-20, 2087-92, 2282-3, 2310, 2311, 2350

AIB case, 2282-3

Alien ownership of land, 2091

Appeals, 2089-90

British subject and subject of the Queen, 2088

General regulations, 2090

Landed immigrants, residence requirement, 2087-8

Language requirement, 2091

Powers and authorizations of Minister and Governor in Council, 2088-9, 2090

Security or public order risks, 2090

Constitution of Canada, correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the First Ministers of the Provinces on the subject of Patriation, 2079-86

Amdts by unanimous consent of Parliament and legislatures, 2082

Draft proclamation, 2083-4

Excerpt from previous speech, 2080

Federal-provincial agreements, 2085, 2086

House of Commons, redistribution of seats, 2085-6

Letters received in opposition to patriation, 2079-80

Protection of French language and culture, 2084-5

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A. - ContinuedConstitution of Canada - Concluded

Provincial consultation in amendments, 2080-2

Senators, western provincial appointments, 2085

Unanimous consent of provinces, question of, 2081-2

Victoria formula, 2082-3

Copyright Act, Economic Review, 'Crown copyright reserved', replacement of words, 2200, 2322, 2362

Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-223, 710

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1897

Right of judge to infer from peace officer's evidence that disturbance has occurred, 1897

Energy resources, lighting of government buildings, 606, 1238-9

Federal government buildings, Langevin Block and Justice Building, 76-77, 137

Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 51

Foreign affairs

Aid to Chile, 1438-9, 1597-8

Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3, 2201

Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1641

Government Expenditures Restraint bill, date of introduction in Senate, question, 2130; further question, 2159, 2264

Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Cooperation, 1293, 1466, 1471-5

Cooperation in field of economics, science, technology and environment, 1473

Cooperation in humanitarian and other fields, 1473

Equal rights and self-determination of peoples, 1472

Exchange of observers, 1473

Improvement of working conditions for journalists, 1473

Inviolability of frontiers, 1472

London Economist article re deficiencies in Declaration, 1474-5

Matters related to giving effect to certain principles, 1473

Prior notification of major military movements, 1473

Reunification of families, 1473-4

Protest on Parliament Hill against Rumanian government, 1473

Sovereign equality, respect for rights inherent in sovereignty, 1472

Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, 1472-3

Travel for personal or professional reasons, 1474

Immigration bill S-12, 197-8

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2015

Broadcasting, 2015

Canada-US relations, 2015

Canadian advertising content, escalating percentage of requirement for, 2015

MD of Canada, 2015

Information Canada, inaccuracies in publications regarding Governors General of Canada and Prime Ministers of Canada, 1757, 2003

Meighen, Rt. Hon. Arthur, removal of portrait from Commons corridor, 53, 563

National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto Canada, 2103, 2110-11, 2160-2, 2163; inquiry dropped, 2191; see also 2267-9

Excerpts from speeches or statements re, 2160

Fiscal policy of government, departure from, 2162

Gullibility of the poor in relation to lotteries, 2162

Method of authorization for lottery, 2160-2

Regressive taxation in relation to lotteries, 2162

Nobel Peace Prize winner, refusal of USSR to permit acceptance of award, letter from Senator Forsey re, 1761

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A. – Continued

- Northwest Territories, Senate appointment, 1772
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India, 1869
- Parliament Buildings, East Block renovations, 241; inquiry dropped, 279
- Parole, consideration of changes in present system, 1371
- Political affiliations, 1536
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1430, 1431
- Prerogatives of Prime Minister, orders in council re, 1349, 1355
- Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1764
- Privileges and immunities of senators, 1734
- Privileges of Parliament, commercial use of picture of Parliamentary Library, 1729, 1764-5
- Public Service Commission, new offices, interior wall decoration, 1930, 1975-6
- Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation bill C-38, 466
- Secretary to the Cabinet for Federal-Provincial Relations, 466
- Public Service, Treasury Board action in reclassification of economists, sociologists and statisticians, 2318-21
- Quebec Official Language Bill 22, 56-57, 829, 912, 924-5
 - Administrative discretion, 57
 - Constitutionality of, 56-57
 - Question re government decision on petition, 829, 912, 924-5
 - Universities, stipulations re, 57-58
- Queen Elizabeth, Her Majesty, celebration of Silver Jubilee in Canada, 1318-19, 1403
- Regulations and other statutory instruments, agreement between federal government and provincial governments, question, 2103, 2110
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, Standing Senate Committee
 - Duties and functions of committee, 1534, 1535
 - Expenses, 178
 - Reports
 - First report, 178, 205-6
 - Second report tabled in Commons Oct.29/74
 - Third report, 239-40, 264
 - Fourth report, 327-8, 338
 - Fifth report, 1100, 1133-4
 - Sixth report, 1479, 1487
 - Seventh report, 1638
 - Eighth report, 2045
 - Ninth report, 2307-08, 2333
 - Translation of criteria of committee, 264
 - Travel arrangements for committee outside of Canada, authority for, 1479, 1497
- Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fare, 1816
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 825-6
 - Penalty clause, 825-6
- Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1093, 1094
 - Jurisdiction and status of lieutenant governors, 1093
 - Queen of Canada, 1093
- Secrecy in government, discussion on TV program re committee involved in, 1349
- Senate and House of Commons (Supplementary Retirement Benefits) bill C-81, 2195-6
- Senate business, 2122
- Senate reform, 52-54
 - Initiation of bills, 52
 - Orders in Council and other legislation, 52-53
 - Representation from Yukon and Northwest Territories, 53
 - Suspensive veto, 54
 - Term of appointment, 54

Forsey, Hon. Eugene A. - Concluded

- South Africa-Zambia relations, 229
- Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1710
- Televising of committee proceedings, 511
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1830-2
- Translation of criteria of Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 264
- Transportation
 - British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2217-21
 - British Columbia terms re transportation service, 2218
 - Chignecto Ship Canal, 2219
 - Ferry employees, right to strike, 2218-19
 - Government policy, lack of statement re, 2218
 - Intercolonial railway, 2217-18
 - British Columbia, 2218
 - Defence aspects, 2218, 2220-1
 - New Brunswick, 2217-18
- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1690-1, 1698, 1699, 1700, 1702, 1705, 1706
 - Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1690-1, 1698
 - Reduction in payments, regressive aspect of, 1691
 - Regional breakdown of savings due to legislation, 1700
- Victoria Memorial Museum, rumoured change of name, 1035, 1165
- West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 728

Fort-Falls Bridge Authority

- Agreement between US and Canada for reconstruction of bridge, 851-2
- Date of construction commencement, 851
- Financing and approach landings, 856
- Ownership of bridge, 856, 857
- Tourist statistics, 855-6
- Speakers: Senators
 - Everett, Douglas D., 897
 - Haig, J. Campbell, 855-6
 - Molgat, Gildas L., 851-2, 867

Fort-Falls Bridge Authority bill C-367. 1r, 781; 2r, 855-6; 3r, 867; r.a., 899

Fournier, Hon. Edgar E.

- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2409-10
 - Alternative to death by hanging, 2410
 - Prison reform, 2410

Fournier, Hon. Michel

- New Brunswick, economic conditions, 1817-20
 - Agriculture, 1818
 - Fisheries, 1818
 - Two hundred mile limit, 1818
 - Forestry, 1818-19
 - Infrastructural works, government expenditures on, 1818
 - Mining, 1819
 - Nuclear power plant, change of site, 1817
 - Primary industry and natural resources, utilization needed, 1818

Fournier, Hon. Michel - Concluded

New Brunswick - Concluded

Shipping, 1820

Tourism, 1819

Transportation, 1819

Unemployment, 1820

Fournier, Hon. Sarto

Canadian Armed Forces casualties in defence of France in World War I and World War II, 1417

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 589-90

Miscarriage of justice, 589-90

Responsibility of judge and jury, 589

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Berthier) bill C-365, 602-03

Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1741

Gouin, Hon. L. M., resignation from the Senate, 2057

Sports, message of congratulations to Montreal Canadiens on winning the Stanley Cup, 2129

Televising of committee proceedings, 509-10

United Nations resolution naming Israel as racist nation, condemnation of, 1398

France

Canada-France income tax convention, 1792, 1793-8

Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1738-41, 1849-52, 2059

Auto pact, 1849

Communist world contacts, 1850

Economic blocs, development throughout world, 1850

Economic Council of Canada, report and recommendations, 1738, 1740, 1741, 1850, 1851

GATT, 1739, 1740, 1852

Imports, competition to Canadian products, 1850

International credit and money convertibility, 1740

Keynes' theories, 1738

Multi-national corporations, 1850

Secondary industries, 1738-41, 1851-2

Employment, 1740

Import controls, 1739, 1850

Quebec, 1739

Role in economic survival of provinces, 1738-9

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 1852

Desruisseaux, Paul, 1738-41, 1851

Fournier, Sarto, 1741

Molgat, Gildas L., 1849-52

van Roggen, George C., 1741

Gélinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe (Resigned Dec. 10/75)

Tributes, 1713-14

Giguère, Hon. Louis de G.

Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 172-3

Aircraft Convention, International Recognition of Rights in, 173

Notice of interest, 173

Seizure of aircraft, 173

Signatories to convention, 173

Giguere, Hon. Louis de G. - Concluded

- Canadian Press report of statements made by Leader of the Government re matter concerning Senator Giguere, 1395-7
- Conflict of interest, allegations re Sky Shops Export Ltd., 1348

Godfrey, Hon. John M.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 58-59
- Canada-Russia hockey series, 58-59; question of privilege re press report of speech, 98
- Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1293-4
 - Withdrawal from debate because of conflict of interest, 1294
 - Question of privilege re, 1315-16
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 575
- Criminal Law Amendment bill C-71, 1897
 - Right of judge to infer from peace officer's evidence that disturbance has occurred, 1897
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
 - Availability to press of draft report, 1755
- Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14, 366-71
 - Counselling assistance to small enterprises, 370
 - Federated Council of Sales Finance Companies, 369
 - Industrial Development Bank, 369-70
 - Authorized capital, 370
 - Background, 369
 - Lending Policies, 369-70
 - Loans statistics, 369
 - Loss ratio, 369
 - Information service, 370-1
 - RoyNat, 369
- Immigration bill S-12, 167
- Immigration Policy Committee, third and final report, 1375, 1376-94
- Money bills, Senate authority to amend, 1656
- Public servants in $60,000 bracket, 889
- Regulations re attendance of senators, 1918-19
 - Attendance records, 1918-19
 - Official business, specifying of, 1918
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1208
- Rules of the Senate
 - Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1208
- Senate and House of Commons Act, 948-54
 - Regulations re attendance of senators, motion that Senate make regulations re attendance and deductions for absence, 948-51; m in amdt (Senator Cook) that subject matter be ref to Internal Economy, Budgets, and Administration Committee, 951-4; agreed, 954
 - Committee work of Senate, 950
 - Deductions for absence and permissible days of absence, 949-50
 - Remuneration, 949
 - Senate reform, 950-1
 - Senatorship, public and press reaction to, 949
 - Sittings of Senate and Commons, 948-9
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 870-5
 - Attendance in Parliament, Senate recording of and Commons statements re, 874
 - Comments of Senator Lapointe (1973), 871
 - Comments of Senator O'Leary (1942), 870-1
 - Committee work of Senate, 874-5
 - Conflict of interest aspect of bill, 870
 - Hours of work on Senate sitting days, 872-3

Godfrey, Hon. John M. - Concluded

- Senate and House of Commons bill C-44 - Concluded
- Leave of absence and deductions for absence, 872, 874, 875
- Senatorship, public and press reaction to, 870-1
- Sittings of Senate and Commons and attendance statistics, 871-2
- Televising of committee proceedings, 547

Goldenberg, Hon. H. Carl

- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1564
- Canadian economy
 - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1330
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2092, 2349, 2350
- Conflict of interest, 2278, 2303-06
 - Code of conduct, 2306
 - Financial interests, 2305
 - Government contracts, 2304-05
 - Broadcasting licences, 2305
 - Participation in government contracts, 2304-05
 - Prohibited contracts, 2304
 - Incompatible offices, 2303-04
 - Elected public office, 2304
 - Prohibited provincial and federal offices, 2303-04
 - Sanctions and administration, 2305-06
 - Committee on Privileges, 2305-06
 - Public resource, 2305
- Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) bill S-14, question as to progress in committee stage, 480
- Criminal law
 - Interim report of committee, 2163-6
 - Dangerous offenders, 2165
 - Firearms and other offensive weapons, 2164
 - Intercepted communication, 2164-5
 - Law Reform Commission report, excerpt from, 2164
 - National Parole Board's powers, 2166
 - Parole, 2165-6
 - Provincial parole boards, 2165
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.2) C-84, 2448-9
 - Capital Punishment*, by Professor of Jurisprudence of Yale University, 2448
 - Deterrent aspect, 2448-9
 - Excerpt from speech of Ontario Ombudsman, 2448-9
 - Government responsibility, 2448
 - Organized crime, Montreal, 2448
 - UK Royal Commission on Capital punishment, 2448
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
 - Sixth report tabled and printed as appendix, 1793, 1799-1812
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 969-71, 1025, 1066, 1079
 - Committee report with amdts, 969-70
 - Drugs for export purposes, 1066
 - Give, trafficking, definition of, 1025
 - Misleading press reporting of aim of bill, 970
 - Onus of proof of offence, 969
 - Parole or unconditional release, 969, 970
- Judges bill C-47, 1066

Goldenberg, Hon. H. Carl - Concluded

Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1858
 Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee

Expenses, 213

Meeting held in camera, 1770

Reports

Conflict of interest, 2278, 2303-06

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, rep with amdts, 1867-8, 1884-6, 1893-1900

Criminal law, interim report on bill C-83, 2119-20, 2127-9

Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, rep without amdt, 555

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, rep with amdts, 969-71, 983,
 1007-11, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9

Judges bill C-47, rep without amdt, 1066

Law Reform Commission bill C-43, rep without amdt, 759

Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, rep without amdt, 1244

Parole System in Canada, report tabled, 10

Representation bill C-36, rep without amdt, 443

Statute Revision bill S-3, rep without amdt, 243

Supreme Court bill S-2, rep without amdt, 243

Territorial Lands bill S-20, rep with amdt, 579

Televising of committee proceedings, 509, 510, 513

Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1431

Rules of the Senate, 1359

West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 80

Termination date of agreement, 80

Gouin, Hon. Leon Mercier (Resignation Mar. 18/76)

Tributes, 2057

Government annuities improvement

Auditor General's appt. as auditor, 1629

Background and statistics of annuities, 1628, 1629-30

Retroactive date, 1641

Return rate increase, 1628-30, 1640, 1641

Status of sales contracts, 1640

Speakers: Senators

Barrow, A. Irvine, 1628-9, 1630

Croll, David A., 1629-30

Flynn, Jacques, 1641

Forsey, Eugene A., 1641

Greene, John J., 1630

Grosart, Allister, 1630, 1640-1

Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75. 1r, 1618; 2r, 1628-30, 1640-1; ref to com, 1641; rep without
 amdt, 1649; 3r, 1706; r.a., 1712

Government expenditures, 16, 23-24, 26, 27-28, 182-3, 199-200, 349-51, 519

Bank of Canada building, 1324

Bilingualism program, 1352

Control procedures, 350

Fiscal and monetary policies of government, 23-24

Manpower requirements, 350, 1352

Mirabel Airport, 1325

Government expenditures - Concluded

- Olympic entertainment, 1352
- Pickering Airport, 1325
- St. Lawrence Islands National Park, 1549-50, 1588
- Salaries of top-level officials, 1352
- Sculptures, 1324-5
- Studies of toilet facilities, offices, industrial plants, etc., 1352
- Translation services, 1352
- See* Estimates

Government Expenditures Restraint bill, questions re date of introduction in Senate, 2130, 2159, 2264

Governor General

Deputy

- Beetz, Hon. Jean, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal assent, 1791-2, 2002, 2207
- de Grandpre, Hon. Louis-Philippe, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal assent, 2152
- Dickson, Hon. R. G. B., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal assent, 731, 899
- Judson, Hon. Wilfred, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada
 - Royal assent, 1281
- Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, P.C., His Excellency the Administrator of the Government of Canada
 - Opening of Parliament, Speech from the Throne, 2-7
 - Prorogation of Parliament, Speech from the Throne, 2453
 - Royal assent, 95, 220, 467, 581, 1095-6, 1476, 2096
- Martland, Hon. Ronald, Deputy Administrator of the Government of Canada
 - Opening of Parliament, 1-2
- Spence, Hon. Wishart F., Deputy Administrator of the Government of Canada
 - Royal assent, 313-14, 656, 740, 758, 832, 1617, 1712, 2301
- Inaccuracies in pamphlet issued by Information Canada regarding Governors General in Canada, 1757, 2003
- Royal assent by His Excellency the Governor General Rt. Hon. Jules Leger, 397, 2450

Graham, Hon. B. Alasdair

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 174-7
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 174-5
- Housing, 176
- Inflation, 175-6
 - Milk subsidy, 175-6
- Nova Scotia
 - Cape Breton coal mines, operating losses, 176; DEVCO, 176
 - Destruction of forests and residential property by fire, 2178
 - Springhill fire disaster, possibility of federal aid, 1241-2
 - Steel industry, Cansteel study of Atlantic rim, 176
 - Storm damage (1974), 135

Grain

- Grain prices, 170-1, 266
- Malting barley, 266
- Prairie grain advance payments, 583, 595-601, 614-15, 621-2, 684, 709, 731
- Subsidies on grain shipped to Eastern Canadian ports for export, 2159, 2201-02, 2211, 2376-7
- Two-price wheat, 900, 928-30, 942-4, 1088, 1090, 1095
- West Coast grain handling operations, 76-93, 95
- West Coast ports operations, 723-30, 731

Green Papers

Immigration Policy, 584

Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, 373, 573-4, 580, 774, 779-81

Greene, Hon. John J., P.C.

Agricultural Stabilization bill C-50, 1190-2, 1212

Commodities covered by act, 1191

Cost of production formula, 1191

Flexibility as to type of support program required, 1191

Grain subsidies, 1191

Instability of farm prices, 1190

Provincial and/or producer participation in program, 1191

Regional stabilization plans, 1191

Support price of 90% over 5 years, 1191

Anti-Inflation bill (No.1) C-73, 1507, 1508, 1532, 1535

Federal-provincial cooperation in application of guidelines, 1507, 1508

Toronto high school teachers' wage settlement, 1507

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, powers of, 1535

Wage and price controls vs wage and price freeze, 1532

Anti-Inflation bill (No.2) C-89, 2137

Labour representation in Parliament, 2137

Austin, Hon. Jacob, introduced in the Senate, 1354

British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 133

Broadcasting, references to Newfoundland by CTV, question of privilege, 2215-16

Canada-US relations

Television broadcasts, 'electronic theft' of commercial advertising, 1626

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1326

CTV news report on death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as member of Conservative Party, 1241

Capital punishment, partial abolition and expiration of trial period, 1656, 1716

Citizenship bill C-20, 2092, 2093, 2311

Morgan et al vs Attorney General for PEI, 2311

Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1296

Crime and violence, proposed special Senate committee, 922

Energy

Offshore oil and gas resources in Atlantic provinces, 2070, 2141-2

Statement of Policy re oil and gas, 2182

Feeds bill S-10, 1635

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control, and Criminal Code bill S-19, 454, 1027

Alcoholism, 454

Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1630

Immigration bill S-12, 165

Income Tax bill (No.3) C-58, 2325-6

Excerpts from Milton's Aeropagitica and Mill's Liberty, 2325

Freedom of speech and of publication, 2325

O'Leary Commission, 2326

'Substantially the same', definition of, 2314

Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from Senate, 212

National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 893-6

Communication between public and members of Parliament, question of, 895-6

Doctrine of atonement, 894

Excerpt from autobiography of Nathan Leopold, 895

Greene, Hon. John J., P.C. - Concluded

- National Defence and Criminal Code bill S-23 - Concluded
 - Murder of Chicago boy, 894-5, 896
 - Opinions of prominent lawyers, 894
 - Quality of mercy, 894
 - Rehabilitation, 895
 - Royal prerogative of mercy, 894
- National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2162
- Pan American Games, congratulations to Canadian team members, 1318
- Political Parties, possible RCMP investigation, 2063
- Privileges and Immunities of senators, proposed special committee, 1435
 - Hiring of counsel and staff, 1435
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 822-3
 - Penalty clause, 823
- Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1095
- Saskatchewan, safety of Gardiner Dam, 2179, 2377
- Senate
 - Television and radio coverage of Senate committee proceedings, 1365-6, 2099
 - Appointive nature of senators' term of office, 1366
 - Committees, 1366
 - Press reporting of Senate proceedings, 1365
 - Public reaction to appearance of senators on television, 1365
 - Relevance of Senate to constitutional procedure, 1365
 - Right of public to view proceedings, 1365
- Senate and House of Commons Act
 - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, point of order on motion re, 952, 954
 - Motion of privilege re omission of statement and Speaker's ruling from Minutes of Proceedings, 961
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 874
- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2204
- Senate role, 894
- Sports, message of congratulations to Montreal Canadiens on winning of the Stanley Cup, 2129
- Transportation
 - BNA Act provisions relating to transportation, 2219
- United Nations Assembly resolution on Zionism, 1411, 1417

Grey Cup Game, Vancouver, 300-01Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate

- Abortions, operation of Committee on Abortion Law, 1624-5, 1639
- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 21-26
- Adjournment from afternoon sitting to evening sitting, 1108-09, 1111-12
- Aeronautics bill S-34, 2130-1
 - Conventions, international, 2130-1
 - Costs of security measures, apportioning of, 2131
 - Enforcement of regulations by Canada, 2130
 - Inadequacy of security checks, 2131
 - Jurisdiction over aircraft landing in Canada, 2130
- Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 174
- Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 335-6
- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1508, 1538-42, 1578
 - Anticipated contravention of guidelines, 1540
 - Audit and examination of businesses, 1540

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued*Anti-Inflation bill C-73 - Concluded*

- Bill of Rights vs powers of Administrator, 1540-2
- Constitutionality of legislation, question of, 1508
- Controls vs guidelines, 1539-40, 1542
- Enforcement of guidelines, 1539-40, 1542
 - Federal-provincial cooperation, 1542
- Judicial review of appeal, 1541-2, 1563-4
- Objections to bill from business, labour groups and teachers, 1538-9
- Penalties and appeals, 1540
- Prescription of and publication of guidelines, 1539
- Termination clause, constitutionality of, 1578
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1974 C-31, 199-202, 204, 205
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 385-90, 391, 392, 412, 413, 414-15
- Appropriation bill No. 5, 1974 C-45, 444-5
- Appropriation bill No. 1, 1975 C-54, 705-07
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1975 C-64, 1098
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79, 1606-09
- Appropriation bill No. 1, 1976 C-90, 1980, 1981, 1982-4
- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1987-8, 1989, 1990, 1991
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1976 C-93, 2286-8
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1976 C-94, 2268, 2269
- Army Benevolent Fund bill C-17, 304
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
 - Engagement of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427
- Bills, printing and distribution of, 61
- Bills received in Senate without original explanatory notes, 622
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 11
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 133-4
 - Advertising of bill, 133
- British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 bill C-3, 1060-1
 - Appt. of senators for NWT and Yukon, 1061
 - Commons representation, 1060
 - Ombudsman for territories, 1060
 - Property qualification, 1060
 - Senate reform, 1061
- Broadcasting, appearance of Gerda Munsinger on CBC television program, 1619
- Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank bill S-24, 958-61
 - Assets, statistics for Canadian domestic banks, 958-60
 - Authorized capital and shares, 960
 - Branch offices, 959
 - Comparative United States and Canadian statistics relating to banking offices, 960
 - Name of bank, possible conflict re, 960
 - Risk financing, 960
 - Specialty operations, 960
- Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5, 841-3
 - Association of Communications Regulatory Bodies, 843
 - Cable television, jurisdiction of, 842
 - Communications: Some Federal Proposals*, 842-3
 - Provincial consultations, 841
- Canadian Sovereignty Symbol bill C-373, 687
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2311-12, 2313, 2324, 2349
 - Powers of Lieutenant Governor in Council, 2313
 - Precedents in transfer of federal jurisdiction, 2312
 - Prince Edward Island Potato Marketing Board vs H. B. Willis Inc.*, 2324

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1683, 1684, 1685
- Committee meetings
 - During Senate sittings, 827-8, 1856-7
 - Notices of meetings of subcommittees and steering committees, 2192
 - Scheduling of, 828, 829, 1091
- Committee report on regulations re attendance of senators, rule re consideration of, 1782
- Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, New Delhi conference, 1644-6
 - India, 1645-6
 - Canada's aid to, 1645
 - Communications problem, 1645
 - Government, 1645
 - Jaipur City twinned with Calgary, 1645-6
 - Nuclear explosion in Rajasthan from reactor supplied by Canada, 1645
 - Vice-President, Hon. James Jerome, 1646
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1898, 1899
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2406, 2445-7
 - Deterrent aspect, 2446
 - Gallup poll, 2446
 - Government responsibility, 2446-7
 - Parolees, potential for further crime, 2444
 - Permissive society, 2447
 - Policemen's reaction to legislation, 2446
 - Question of privilege (Hon. Mr. Molson), 2406
 - Rehabilitation, 2446-7
 - Guelph Correctional Centre, study by Dr. Carlson, 2447
 - Vengeance vs justice, 2447
- Criminal law, subject matter of Bill C-83 ref to com, question re, 1853
- Croll, Hon. David A., role in government annuities legislation, 1630
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 810-13, 909-11
 - Appeal against board ruling, 811-12
 - Controls system, 811
 - Cultural heritage vs national identity, 810-11
 - Determination of values, 812
 - Fair cash offer, 812
 - Permits, 811, 812
 - Review Board, 813, 910
 - Rights of individuals, 812
 - UNESCO convention, 813
- Customs Tariff bill (No. 2) C-39, 486-9, 514-16
 - Anti-inflationary effects of tariff decreases, 514
 - Building supplies, 489
 - Handicrafts from developing countries, 488, 515
 - Housing materials, 515
 - Ministerial powers, 488
 - Preferential rates for developing countries, 515
 - Tourist exemptions, 488
 - UNESCO, 487-8, 515
 - Agreement for Facilitating the International Circulation of Visual and Auditory Materials of an Educational Scientific and Cultural Character, 487
 - Exclusion of Israel from European group, 488

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

Customs Tariff bill (No. 3) C-67, 1214-15

Aircraft and aircraft engines, 1214

Gifts, 1214

Petroleum products, 1214

Polymer plates for letterpress printing, 1214

Religious publications, 1214

Tariff and excise revenues, 1214

Distribution of document in Senate chamber, 644

Estimates

Assurance that discussion on estimates does not terminate with passage of bill, question of, 193, 203, 204, 205

Budgetary votes and budgetary statutory items, 200

Canadair, government loan to, 706

Canadian Broadcasting Corp., 201, 1056

Canadian International Development Agency, 200, 1055

Cape Breton Development Corp., 201

Cheque cashing before Mar. 31, 1989, 1990

Crown corporations, operating deficits, 1056

Deferment of capital projects, 1982-3

Discussion on subject matter of appropriation bills remaining on Order Paper, 1783, 1784-5

Dollar items, 706, 1607, 1967-70, 1980, 1982-3, 1987-8

Lack of authority for transfers, 1607

Statistics (1967-70), 1967-70, 1980, 1982-3, 1987-8

Energy, Mines and Resources, 201-02, 1608

Energy policy for Canada, 2189

Form of supplementary estimates, lack of explanatory breakdown of expenditures, 706

Glasco Commission report on Financial Management and Control Study, 1967, 1982

Government expenditures vs GNP, 199-200, 705-06, 1054, 1085, 1607, 2187-8, 2287

Financial Times article re, 2287

Government restraints, question of, 1054

Health and Welfare and other depts., 1055

Inclusion of main and supplementary estimates in one bill, 190-1

Indian and Northern Affairs, 200-01

Industry, Trade and Commerce, 202

Inflation, 2188

Excerpt from publication of Canadian Economic Policy Committee, 1056

Information Canada, 201

Inter-Provincial Pipe Line Ltd., 706-07

Loan item in supplementary estimates, question of precedent, 2255-6

Loto Canada, 2256-8; President, 2257

Medicare and hospital insurance, 1608

Oil equalization payments, 2188

Oil refiners, compensation to, 445, 1055, 1608-09

Old age security fund, 705, 1055-6

Globe and Mail report, 705

Olympic Games, government policy and statement re, 2256

Percentage increase of supplementary estimates in relation to main estimates, 1967, 1983-4

Provincial government expenditures, 2189, 2190, 2288

Public debt, 1607-08

Regulations by order in council, 2257

Transfer items, 2190; Treasury Board statement re, 2287

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Estimates - Concluded
 - Unemployment insurance fund, 2188, 2190; unemployment, 2187-8
 - UNESCO, 380
 - Wheat, two-price system, 202
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, 1054-7, 1085
 - Supplementary (B), 1966-70
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/77, 2187-90
- European Community, Canada's claim for compensation re loss of preferential access of Canadian commodities to British market, 579-80, 661-2, 671
- European Parliament, 319-20, 329-30
 - Canada-US relations, 319-20, 329
 - Finished products, export of, 319, 320, 330
 - GATT, 319, 320, 329
 - Multinational corporations, 330
- Excise Tax bill C-66, 1271-3
 - Conservation, question of, 1273
 - Deficit resulting from single oil price policy, 1271, 1273
 - Exemptions, 1272
 - Federal-provincial agreement, 1272
 - Gasoline for personal use, 1272-3
 - Prices of gas and oil, 1273
 - Subsidy paid by low-income persons, 1272
 - Tax administration costs, 1272
- Export Development bill C-9, 462-4
 - Authorized capital, 462
 - Board of directors, 464
 - Interest rate, Canadian firms vs foreign firms, 463
 - Loans to countries outside OPEC, 463
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 882-4, 886, 887, 891-2
 - Point of order re proposed amendment to committee report, 882-3
 - Rejection by Commons of amdt similar to Senate proposed amdt, 892
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, 1180-4
 - Basic and additional revenues, 1183-4
 - Conditional and unconditional payments, 1182
 - Government commitment re oil and gas revenues for development and exploration, 1181
 - Medicare and hospital insurance, 1182-3
 - Protests re government phasing-out of assistance, 1183
 - Provincial equalization payments per capita, 1182
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 22
- Fiscal and monetary policies of government, 23-24
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, 1630, 1640-1
 - Retroactive date, 1641
 - Return rate increase, 1640, 1641
 - Status of sales contracts, 1640
- Government expenditures, 26
- Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1962-3
- Immigration bill S-12, 197, 232, 233
 - Deportation statistics, 232, 233

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Immigration policy, unauthorized press publication of confidential draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1286
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 613, 634-7, 653-4, 655
 - Economic conditions, 634-5
 - Foreign accrual property income, 635
 - Petroleum and mineral resources, 635
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1956, 1958, 2395, 2396, 2398-2400
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, 1793-6
 - Countries with which Canada has concluded conventions, 1794
 - Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 1795-6
 - Inconsistencies between convention and any other law, 1795
 - Prohibition against discrimination, 1794
 - Taxpayer position in countries without conventions, 1794
 - Withholding tax on dividends, interest payments, royalties, 1794
 - Artistic works, 1794
- Industrial unrest, 24
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 304-06, 398-9
 - Interdepartmental arrangement re access to information, 398-9
- Inflation, 23-24
- International Air Transport Association bill S-18, 302, 303
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Expenses, special, 525-6
 - Meetings during Senate sittings, 543
 - Televising of committee proceedings, 512, 552-3
- Loto Canada, 2111, 2163, 2256-8, 2268, 2269
- Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, 1234-5
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate, 209-10
- Medical Care bill C-68, 2359
- Minister invited to explain bill in Senate chamber, question of, 198
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 151
 - Regulations, lack of information on, 151
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 744-7, 748, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757
 - Building materials tax, 745-6
 - Government costs, 746
 - Home ownership of older homes, 745
 - Housing starts, decrease in, 744-5
 - Limited dividend program, 746
 - Mortgage insurance fund, 753, 755
 - Non-profit and cooperative housing, 745
 - Registered home owner savings plan, 746
 - Rental housing, 746
- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1667, 1671-2, 1677, 1678, 1679-80, 1681
 - Costs of program, 1677
 - Density restrictions, 1672
 - Expenditures on interest reduction grants (1976), 1679
 - Federal funding of public housing, statistics (1970-74), 1672
 - Housing target, 1671
 - Inflationary effects of regulations, question of, 1672
 - Loan ceilings, 1671-2
 - Local limits, 1678
 - Low cost medium density housing, $1000 grants to municipalities, 1680
 - Rental accommodation, 1677

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

National Housing bill C-77 - Concluded

- Repayment conditions, 5-yr. clause, 1678
- Resales, 1672
- Servicing of land, 1679-80
- Special cases, 1671
- Standards, 1672
- Warranty from builder to owner, 1681

North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1493-4

- Interparliamentary Advisory Council and sub-committee, 1493
- Resolution of Internal Economy Committee to study expenses and sharing of costs of interparliamentary associations, 1494

Northland Bank bill C-1002, 1599

Northwest Territories Representation bill C-51, 622-3

- BNA Act, amdt re NWT representation, 622
- Chairman of commission for NWT, terms of appointment, 623
- Indians and Eskimos, voting franchise, 622
- Neo-colonialism in respect of Territories, 623

Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India, 1869

Oil export tax, 1264, 1265-6

O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2035-6

Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 963, 964

Passports

- Restrictions on special passports of MPs, article in Globe and Mail, 2262-3, 2362-3, 2443
- Use of diplomatic and special passports for travel in Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4

Petro-Canada bill C-8, 1215-18

- Control by Governor in Council, 1218
- Crown corporations' assets, 1216
- 'Energy Policy for Canada - Phase I, Vol. I Analysis', 1216
- Equity and debt investment for Petro-Canada, 1216
- Excerpt from minister's statements re petroleum industry, 1215
- Foreign control, 1217
- Government policies detrimental to small companies, 1215, 1216
- Private sector achievements, 1215-16
- Revenues for exploration, 1217

Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 912-16

- Alberta and Saskatchewan oil production for national consumption, 914
- Consumer protection, 916
- Control of revenues to insure reinvestment for exploration and development, 914
- Federal-provincial relations and national unity in solving of problems, 915-16
- Federal-provincial temporary arrangements, controversy re, 913
- Frontier oil, 913
- Natural gas, price restraints and controls, 914
- Nuclear and other energy components, 914-15
- Political price fixing, 915
- Prices, 914
- Provincial royalties, 913
- Sarnia-Montreal pipeline, 915
- Use of petroleum products in various sectors, extent of, 913

Point of order re passage of appropriation bill, 387-8, 390

Privilege, question of, right to invoke a rule of the Senate, 198

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Continued

- Privileges and Immunities (International Organizations) bill S-25, 958
 - European Community, 958
 - Ottawa office, establishment of, 958
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 128
- Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation bill C-38, 465-6
 - Federal-provincial relations, Secretary to the Cabinet for, 466
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1664, 1665
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, functions and authority of, 515
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1206-09
- Rules of the Senate
 - Committee reports, reference back to com or Committee of the Whole for reconsideration, 882-3, 884
 - Debate on interrogation restricted to brief explanatory remarks, 1213
 - Forms and Proceedings, question re authority of rules, 882-3
 - Presentation of Committee report before review by senators, 1606
 - Quotations from speeches made in Commons, 1606-07
 - Reference of estimates to National Finance Com, 440-1
 - Senator speaking twice on same subject, 1513
 - Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1207, 1208-09, 1234-5
 - Two days' notice between 1r and 2r of bills, 1109
- Rules of the Senate, report of Standing Committee on Rules and Orders, 1425, 1462-4
 - Adjournment of debates for prolonged periods, 1464
 - Oral questions, 1462-3
 - Powers and duties of committees, 1424
 - Quotations from speeches made in Commons, 1463
 - Terms of reference of committees, 1463, 1464
 - Procedure or practice inconsistent with practices and usages of Senate, 1463
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 821-2
 - Government policy in future conciliation matters, 822
 - Inability of society to keep law and order, 822
 - Precedents of emergency legislation, 821
- St. Patrick's Day, 1902
- Science policy, 1222-4
 - Committee work in creating awareness of science futures, 1223, 1224
 - Tribute to chairman, 1224
 - Expenditures of committee, 1223-4
 - Futures branch of US Congressional Library, 1225
 - Managing the Future - A Conference on Anticipatory Institutions*, 1223
 - Predictive and normative approach in futures, 1224
 - US state commissions on futures, 1225
- Senate
 - Business, 125, 152, 153, 380-1, 482, 484, 1090, 1091, 1108-09, 1111-12, 1524, 1547, 1548, 1682, 1685-6, 1711, 1712, 1877, 1878-9, 1915, 2044, 2120-1, 2336
 - Monday evening sittings, question of, 1877, 1878-9
 - Reform, article in Globe and Mail quoting statements of Prime Minister, questions re, 32, 47
 - Role, 1578
 - Referral of bill to committee, Senate rule re, 1644
- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2205-06
- Tax treaties or conventions with other countries, 855, 867, 925, 942
- Transportation, 25-26
- Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 1088-9, 1090

Grosart, Hon. Allister, Deputy Leader of the Opposition in the Senate - Concluded

- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1691-3, 1697, 1698, 1699, 1700, 1701, 1702, 1703, 1704, 1705
 - Appeal procedure, 1704
 - Burden of amds on underprivileged and older persons, 1692
 - Claimants outside Canada, 1703
 - Deficit of UI fund, 1691
 - Disentitlement, 1699
 - Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1697, 1698, 1701
 - Question of subject matter of UI problems being ref to royal commission, 1693
 - Recovery of advance payments, 1703
 - Regressive aspect of legislation, 1692
 - Sick benefits, 1700, 1702
 - Training or instruction for new employment, 1702
- United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33, 1925
- United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants, 1238, 1243
 - Canada's contribution to UNESCO, 1243
 - UNESCO, withdrawal of grants and exclusion of Israel from European Zone, 1243
 - Objectors to decision, 1243
- West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 85-89
 - Conciliation commissioners, Globe and Mail item re, 88
 - Costs of strike action, 87
 - Government intervention and inadequacies in dispute, 86-87
- Work Ethic in Canada, 518

Guidelines for Motions for the Production of Papers, tabled in Commons Dec. 19/74, ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467

Gun control

- Control of weapons and firearms, 193, 293-5

Habitat

- United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1959-64, 2278-9

Haig, Hon. J. Campbell

- Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5, 988
- Committee meetings, conflict in scheduling of, 828
- Fort-Falls Bridge Authority bill C-367, 855-6
 - Boise Cascade, ownership of bridge, 855
 - Financing and approach landings, 856
 - Tourist statistics, 855-6
- Honey Bear Brewing Corporation Limited, refund of fees on proposed bill, 1782
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 149-51
 - National safety trade marks, 150
 - Regulations, lack of information on, 151
- Transport and Communications, Standing Senate Committee
 - Report
 - Aeronautics bill S-34, rep without amdt, 2141

Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation

- Background of Commission formed after Halifax explosion (1917), 1717-18, 1721-2
- Blind persons, rehabilitation, 1722

Halifax Relief Commission Pension - Concluded

Pensions and allowances paid to widows and disabled persons, 1718, 1722

Inequalities of, 1722

Transfer of responsibilities and assets to Canadian Pension Commission and other organizations, 1718, 1722

Speakers: Senators

Norrie, Margaret, 1717-18

Smith, George I., 1721-3

Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation bill C-78. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1717-18, 1721-3; 3r, 1730; r.a., 1792

Hayden, Hon. Salter A.

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1573

Banking, Trade and Commerce, Standing Senate Committee

Bankruptcy and insolvency, com authorized to examine and report on subject matter of bill C-60, 911

Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act, com authorized to examine and report on matters relating to, 109-10

Engagement of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427

Expenses, 160

Meetings during Senate sittings, 1006, 1034

Reports

Alliance Security and Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, rep without amdt, 1074

Anti-Inflation bill (No.1) C-73, rep without amdt but with observation re termination clause, 1573

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, rep without amdt, 2141

Bankruptcy and insolvency, rep on subject matter of Bill C-60, 1596-7, see appendix to Debates of Dec. 11/75

Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, rep with amdts, 666-71, 685

Canadian textile problems, 2055-6

Combines Investigation bill C-2, rep without amdt but with observations, 1571, 1589-95

Continental Bank of Canada, bill S-30, rep with amdts, 1367-9, 1405-06; rep referred back to com, 1406; further rep of com, 1407-08

Customs bill S-4, rep without amdt, 213

Customs Tariff bill (No. 1) C-27, rep without amdt, 280

Customs Tariff bill (No. 2) C-39, rep without amdt, 499

Eastern Canada Savings and Loan Company and Central & Nova Scotia Trust Company bill S-29, rep with amdts (French text only), 1355, 1373

Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, rep without amdt but with observations re unlicensed wholesalers, 570

Excise Tax bill C-66, rep without amdt, 1278

Explosives bill S-17, rep without amdt, 280

Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14, rep without amdt, 426

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, rep without amdt, 1197

Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7, rep without amdt, 160

Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, rep without amdt, 645

Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, rep without amdt, 1454

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, rep with amdts, 2252-5, 2269-75, 2293-2301, 2313-15, 2325-30, 2337; ref back to com, 2337-8; further rep without amdt, 2389-98, 2401-05

Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, rep without amdt, 1867

Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, rep without amdt, 402

Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, rep with amdts, 348-9, 368

National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, rep with amdts, 1057, 1062-3

Hayden, Hon. Salter A. - ContinuedBanking, Trade and Commerce Committee - *Concluded*Reports - Concluded

Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, rep with amdt, 840, 851

Olympic bill C-63, rep without amdt, 1211

Petro-Canada bill C-8, rep without amdt, 1244

Petroleum Administration bill C-32, rep with amdt, 981-2, 1002

United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33, rep without amdt, 2003

Bankruptcy and insolvency, 1596-7, see also appendix to Debates of Dec. 11/75

Bankruptcy judge, 1597

Registrar's position, reinstatement of, 1596

Rights and priorities of secured creditors, 1596

Canadian Business Corporations bill C-29, 489-93, 498, 666-71

Administrative discretion, 494

Amalgamations, 492-3; Black & Decker case, 492-3

Amending of bylaws and submitting of proposals by shareholders, 491

Business corporations incorporated for objects other than provincial, 669

Complaints re mishandling of business, 492

Failure to file documents, penalty for, 669

Form of application for corporations, 491

Inspection of records and shareholders' lists, 669

Liability of directors, 669

Pipeline construction applications, amdt re definition of 'company', 670

Proposals for a New Business Corporations Law for Canada, report of task force, 490

Registration of corporations, 490

Reorganization of corporations, 669-70

Senate committee recommendations (1970), 490

Shares and dividends, 491, 492

Voting trust agreements, 492

Witnesses from government and private industry, 670

Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1571-3, 1589-95

Air transport, control and direction of, 1572, 1591-2

Amendments, effect of, 1589

Chartered accountants and other professions, 1591

Civil damages, 1594

Constitutionality of provisions of bill, 1593-4

Due diligence re certain offences, 1590

Exemption for affiliates, 1590

Farm Products Marketing cases and Breweries case, 1592

Franchises, 1593

Inability to obtain supplies of brand name product, 1594

Institution of proceedings on summary conviction, 1593

Interim injunction, 1594

Mergers and monopolies, 1589

Penalty provisions, 1572

Recommendations of com incorporated to amdt, to bill, 1588-90

Refusal to deal, 1594

Regulated trades, industries and professions, 1590-1

Right of appeal from orders of Commission, 1594

Sports, 1590

Winnipeg Commodity Exchange, 1592-3

Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act, 663-6, 675-83, 1121-2, 1135

Canadian Breweries case, 664

Civil damages, 665

Constitutional aspects, 666

'Due diligence' clause, 664

Hayden, Hon. Salter A. - Continued

- Competition policy in Canada - Concluded
 - Energy Board, 670
 - Inability to obtain supplies to carry on business, 665
 - In Re The Farm Products Marketing Act*, 664
 - Interim injunction, 665-6
 - International Air Transport Association, 1122, 1135
 - Jurisdiction of Federal Court in criminal matters, 666
 - Lawyers fees, Ontario, 664
 - Reviewable transactions, 665, 666
 - Services included in combines legislation, 663-4
 - Sports, professional and amateur, 664-5
 - Summary convictions, 666
 - Toronto Daily Star* article re committee amtds, 664
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee, unauthorized release to press of draft report, 1756
- Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 570, 572-3
 - Unlicensed wholesalers, 570, 572-3
- Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7, 100-03
 - Assets of federally incorporated companies in Canada, 101
 - Borrowing limit, 100, 101-02
 - Subordinated debentures, 100, 102
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 606-14, 635, 638-40, 645-7, 654-5
 - Canada Savings Bonds bonus, 608
 - Committee consideration of bill, items discussed and witnesses interviewed, press and public ignorance of, 645-6, 654-5
 - Construction industry, 612-13
 - Corporate tax rate on manufacturing or processing income, 612
 - Foreign accrual property income, 611-12
 - Interest and dividends, 607-08
 - Pension deductions, 608
 - Personal exemption, 607
 - Petroleum and mining industries, 609-11, 613-14, 639-40
 - Domestic oil, 610
 - Earned depletion, 610
 - Provincial royalties, 609-10, 639-40
 - Royalties payable to freeholders, 609
 - Tax rate, 610
 - Write-off of exploration expenses, 610-11
 - Registered home ownership plan, 608-09
 - Registered retirement savings plan, 612
 - Roll-over provisions re amalgamated corporations, 612
 - Transfer of age exemption to spouse, 608
- Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, 1417-22
 - Contributions to registered parties and candidates, 1421
 - Cooperatives, 1420
 - Interest and dividends credit for man and wife, 1419, 1422
 - Investment tax credit, 1421
 - Registered retirement savings plans, 1420
 - Resource allowance in respect of oil and gas wells or mineral resources, 1417-18
 - Sharing of $1.50 price increase in barrel of oil under modified system and including Alberta's royalty reduction, 1418-19, 1422
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1862-5, 1945-6, 2252-5, 2269-75, 2389-2400, 2401-05
 - Advertisements directed to Canadian broadcasts by a foreign broadcasting undertaking, 2252
 - Advertising space in non-Canadian periodicals, exception for tax purposes, 2252, 2270

Hayden, Hon. Salter A. - *Concluded*Income Tax bill C-58 - Concluded

- Broadcasting provisions re advertising in border stations, 2252, 2270, 2272
- Canada-US relations, 2254
- Canadian Radio and Television Commission, 1863
- Competitive options, 1862
- Discussions with Leader of the Government re amdts, 2274-5
- Effective date of provisions affecting periodicals, 2253, 2272
- Limitation re advertising expense on broadcasting undertaking, 1863-4
- Mass Media Committee report, excerpts from, 1862
- MD of Canada*, 2253, 2272
- Recommendations of committee, 2254
- Retroactivity of date of bill becoming law, 2272
- 'Substantially the same', interpretation of, 2252-3, 2271
- Time and Reader's Digest*, 1862-3, 1865, 2270-1
- Toronto broadcasting stations, prime time availabilities, 1864
- Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15, 348-9
- Tributes to Senator Hayden, Chairman of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 1316-17

Hays, Hon. Harry, P.C.

- Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank bill S-24, 935-6, 973-4
 - Authorized capital and shares, 935
 - Branch banks, 936
 - Head office, 935
 - Name of bank, 974
 - Pension funds of crown corporations, investment of, 973-4
 - Provisional directors, background of, 936
 - Specialties operations, 936
 - Sponsor (Boyd, Stott & McDonald Limited), 936
 - 'Wholesale bank', 936, 973
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 864-5, 884-5
 - Age limit, 864-5, 884-5
 - Full-time and part-time farmers, 884
 - Responsibility of consumers to encourage food production, 864
 - Transfer of farm from father to son, 884-5
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 620-1
 - Coal mining, 620, 621
 - Oil industry, 620-1
 - Leduc well, 620
 - Prices, breakdown of production costs, 620, 621
 - Turner Valley Field well, 621
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 861-3, 934-5
 - Cost compensation, 861
 - Crude oil, overseas prices, 862
 - Domestic oil, 862
 - Administration of interprovincial trade, 862
 - Exercise of federal power, 862
 - Federal-provincial agreements, 862
 - Licences for interprovincial transactions, 862
 - Penalties for default of provisions, 862
 - Price restraints, 862
 - Natural gas, equitable pricing regime in producing and consuming provinces, 861, 862
 - Petroleum export voluntary charge payable to National Energy Board, 861-2

Health and welfare

- Abortions, 120-1, 188, 837, 838
- ‘Priorities for government action’, 121
- Canada Pension Plan, 242, 249-52, 277-9, 300, 307, 314
- Children in poverty, report by National Council of Welfare, 625-6
- Connaught Laboratories testing adjacent to proposed housing development, 586, 616, 732, 902
- Environmental contaminants, 1348
- Estimates for, 190
- Insulin, production of, 100, 110-11
- Labour, the working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8
- Proprietary or patent medicine, trade marks, 47, 126-8, 155-7, 240, 245
- Senate report on poverty—poverty line updated (1974), 626
- Social welfare, distribution of income, 2144-9
- Statute Law (veterans and civilian war pensions), 242, 267-70, 272, 282, 314

Health, Welfare and Science, Standing Senate Committee

- Crime and violence, subject matter ref to com, 1659-60
- Members, 96

Reports

- Canada Pension Plan bill C-22, rep without amdt, 300
- Crime and violence in contemporary Canadian society, 2242-3
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, rep with amdts, 848, 908-11
- Environmental Contaminants bill C-25, rep without amdt, 1437
- Government Annuities Improvement bill C-75, rep without amdt, 1649
- Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23, rep without amdt but with observations, 1369
- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37, rep without amdt, 1088
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, rep with amdt, 240, 245
- Quarantine bill S-31, rep without amdt, 1874
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, rep without amdt, 1211-12
- Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Pensions) bill C-4, rep without amdt, 272

Heath, Hon. A. E. Haddon

See Bell, Hon. A. E. Haddon

Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Co-operation, 1293, 1466, 1471-5, 1757-61; motion that Senate support Canadian government’s position re territorial status quo in Europe, 1814; agreed to, 1814

- Cooperation in field of economics, science, technology and environment, 1473
- Disputes, peace solutions for, 1757
- Equal rights and self-determination of peoples, 1472
- Exchange of observers, 1473
- Families, uniting of, 1758
- Humanitarian and other fields, 1473
- Human rights, 1757
- Improvement of working conditions for journalists, 1474
- Inviolability of frontiers, 1472
- Journalists, visa and travel difficulties, 1758
- London Economist* article re deficiencies in Declaration, 1474-5
- Matters related to giving effect to certain principles, 1473
- Mediterranean, 1757
- Military manoeuvres, 1757
- Newspapers featuring articles on Conference, 1757-60
- New York Times* article, 1757

Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Co-operation - Concluded

- Nobel Peace Prize winner, refusal of USSR to permit acceptance of award, 1760-1
 - Letter from Senator Forsey re, 1761
- Obligation to obey international law, 1757
- Peking Review* article on USSR disregard of agreements, 1760
- Prior notification of major military movements, 1473
- Process of detente, 1757
- Reunification of families, 1473-4
 - Protest on Parliament Hill against Rumanian government, 1473
- Security, 1757
- Sovereign equality, respect for right inherent in sovereignty, 1472
- Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, 1472-3
- Statements by leaders of various nations, 1758
- Threat or use of force, 1757
- Toronto Globe and Mail* article - The Brutal Reality of Brezhnev's Policy, 1759
- Tourism, youth meetings, education and culture exchanges, 1758
- Trade, 1757
- Travel for personal or professional reasons, 1474
- USSR, 1758-61
 - Invasion of other countries, 1759
 - Military power, 1761
 - Violation of treaties and agreements, 1758-61
- Warsaw Pact, phases of strategic plan, 1759-60
 - Disunity of the West, 1759-60
 - Global democratic peace, 1760
 - Period of peace co-existence, Khrushchev's policies of de-Stalinization, 1759
 - Social change, 1759-60
- Speakers: Senators
 - Forsey, Eugene A., 1293, 1466, 1471-5
 - Yuzyk, Paul, 1757-61

Hicks, Hon. Henry D.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 111-16
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 557-8, 559
 - Compensation to victims of crime, 557
 - Disclosure of further evidence after conviction, 558
 - Respect for law, 557, 558
 - Royal prerogative, 558, 559
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.2) C-84, 2413, 2436
 - Deterrent aspect, 2413
 - Law and order, respect for, 2413
 - Terrorists, 2413
 - Victims of murder, 2413
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 765-6
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 885
 - Age limit, 885
 - Scrutiny of applications, 885
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 111
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 366-8, 1017
 - Penalties for possession or trafficking of drugs, 367
 - Summary conviction, 367
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1161
 - Damaging side effects of chemical spraying, 1161
 - Federal responsibility, 1161

Hicks, Hon. Henry D. - Concluded

Greetings from Hon. Paul Martin, High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, 658

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2337

Inflation, 112-13

Bay of Fundy power potential, 112

Energy costs, 112-13

High cost of money, 112

National petroleum corporation to control prices and distribution, 112

Trans-Canada pipeline, 112

Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 151-2

National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 744, 754

National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2168-9

Gullibility of the poor in relation to lotteries, 2169

Merits of lotteries, question of, 2169

Method of authorization of, 2168

Regressive taxation in relation to, 2169

Representation bill C-36, 438

Rules of the Senate, 1425

Science policy, 113-15

Defence Research Board, 114-15

Granting agencies, 113-15

Inter-Council Coordinating Committee, 115

National Research Council, 113-14

Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2205

Hockey

Russia-Canada series, 58-59; Press report of speech by Senator Godfrey, 98-99

Honey Bear Brewing Corporation Limited, refund of fees on proposed bill, 1782House of Commons

Parliamentary representatives, executive and assistants, increase in appts., 435-6

Salaries of members of Parliament, opposition to increase in, 436

Senate and House of Commons, salaries and parliamentary secretaries, 847, 856-61, 868-80, 899

Senate and House of Commons, supplementary retirement benefits, 2177, 2186-7, 2193-6, 2203-07

Housing

Interest rates, 1313, 1314, 1327-8

National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 742, 743-57, 758

National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1667-81, 1712

See National housing

Hugessen, Hon. A. K., the late (Deceased Mar. 30/76)

Tributes, 2007

Iceland

Parliamentarians from Iceland, visitors to Senate, 2184

Immigration

Criminal law amendment (Crown liability, immigration, parole), 1714, 1730-3

Gulf Islands, British Columbia, ministerial discretion permits, 2322

Munsinger, Gerda, presence in Canada and appearance on CBC television program, 1007, 1013, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7

Security, 1813, 1820, 1829-30

Immigration (Bill S-12)

- Appeal against deportation order, 166
- Deportee returning without minister's consent, 164-5, 166-7, 216-17, 230-1
- Employment of immigrants for manual or menial work, 196, 284, 286
- Haitians, 215
- Illegal activities of immigrants, 217, 232
- Ministerial power of discretion re indictment or summary conviction, 214
- Statistics on immigration and deportations, 196, 230-1, 232-3

Speakers: Senators

- Asselin, Martial, 194-5, 214, 215
- Buckwold, Sidney L., 165-6
- Croll, David A., 165, 166, 195-7, 244-5
- Forsey, Eugene A., 197-8
- Godfrey, John M., 167
- Greene, John J., 165
- Grosart, Allister, 197, 232, 244
- Laird, Keith, 164-5, 166, 230-2, 233
- Langlois, Leopold, 166, 213-19
- Perrault, Raymond J., 166-7, 197, 198
- Thompson, Andrew E., 166
- Yuzyk, Paul, 230

Immigration bill S-12. 1r, 136; 2r, 164-7, 194-8, 213-19, 222-3, 230-3; ref to com, 233; rep without amdt, 239; 3r, 244-5; Commons concurrence, 366; r.a., 397

Immigration policy

- Alcoholics, chronic, 1386
- Canada's need for immigrants, 1377
- Contagious diseases, 1386
- Crimes of moral turpitude, 1386
- Demographic factors, 1377
- Departmental organization, 1393
- Development assistance and the 'brain drain', 1379
- Drug addicts, 1386
- Economic factors, 1377
- Entry and exit controls, 1386-7
- Federal-provincial cooperation, 1393-4
- Foreign students, 1391-2
- Homosexuals, 1386
- Independent immigrants, 1382-3
- Managing immigration flows, 1380-1
- Mental illness and epilepsy, 1386
- Non-bona fide immigrants or non-immigrants, 1386-7
- Non-discrimination, 1379-80
- Prejudices regarding immigrants, 1378
- Prohibited classes, 1385
- Prostitutes, 1386
- Public charges, 1386
- Refugees, 1385
- Retardation, 1385
- Selection criteria, sponsored relatives, 1381-2
- Services for immigrants, 1392-3
- Special inquiry, appeal and deportation procedures, 1388-9
- Temporary workers, 1389-91

Immigration Policy, Special Senate Committee

Members, Senate, 643

Message from Commons, 584

Message to Commons, 592

Reports

Recommendation to extend date of submission of committee report to Oct. 31/75, 1006, 1021

Recommendation to extend date of submission of committee report to Nov. 14/75, 1306

Third report, 1375, 1376-94

Terms of reference, 584, 592

Unauthorized press release of confidential draft report of committee, 1285-6

Income tax

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee authorized to study legislation prior to receipt of bills, 280, 298-9

Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada, action of National Revenue Department re, 2183-4, 2354-6

Income tax (Bill C-49)

Canada Savings Bonds bonus, 608

Construction industry, 612-13

Corporate tax, 612, 638

Economic conditions, 627-8, 634-5

GNP, 628, 629

Government expenditures, 628; forecast (1975-76), 628

Inflation, 628

Unemployment, 628

Foreign accrual property income, 611-12, 635

Interest and dividends, 607-08

Oil and mining industries, 609-11, 613-14, 616-20, 629-30, 635, 637, 639-40

Alberta, 617, 618, 632

BNA Act provisions re provincial natural resources, 630, 632

Coal mining, 619-20

Leduc well, 620

South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corporation, annual report, 619

Earned depletion, 610

Great Canadian Oil Sands, 619

Prices and production costs, 617-18, 620, 621

Pricing of Crude Oil: Economic and Strategic Guidelines for International Energy Policy, by Taki Rifai, 618

Royalties, 609-10, 617, 629, 632, 636-40

Tax rate, 610, 617

Withdrawal of companies from Canada, 630, 637

Write-off of exploration expenses, 610-11

Pension deductions, 608

Personal exemption, 607, 638

Reduction, effect on federal treasury, 638

Registered home ownership plan, 608-09

Registered retirement savings plan, 612

Roll-over provisions re amalgamated corporations, 612

Statistics on taxpayers, 628-9

Transfer of age exemption to spouse, 608

Income tax (Bill C-49) - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Benidickson, W.M., 613, 614
 Buckwold, Sidney L., 613
 Flynn, Jacques, 627-30, 647-9
 Grosart, Allister, 613, 634-7
 Hayden, Salter A., 606-14, 635, 638-40, 645-7, 654-5
 Hays, Harry, 620-1
 Lamontagne, Maurice, 648, 649
 Langlois, Leopold, 637-8
 Manning, Ernest C., 630-4
 Perrault, Raymond J., 649-52
 Prowse, J. Harper, 616-20, 652-3

Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49. 1r, 583; 2r, 606-14, 616-21, 627-40; ref to com, 640; rep without amdt, 645; m for 3r, 645-9, m in amdt neg, 649-56; 3r, 656; r.a., 656

Income tax (Bill C-65)

Alberta royalties, 1418-19, 1422, 1441
 Contributions to registered parties and candidates, 1421
 Cooperatives, 1420
 Interest and dividends credit for man and wife, 1419, 1422, 1440
 Investment tax credit, 1421, 1440
 Joint return for man and wife, 1422
 Registered retirement savings plans, 1420, 1440-1
 Resource allowance in respect of oil and gas wells or mineral resources, 1417-18, 1441-2
 Sharing of $1.50 price increase in barrel of oil under modified system and including Alberta's royalty reduction, 1418-19, 1422

Speakers: Senators

Hayden, Salter A., 1417-22
 Lang, Daniel, 1421, 1422
 Manning, Ernest C., 1422
 Smith, George I., 1439-42
 Walker, David J., 1418, 1420

Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65. 1r, 1403; 2r, 1417-22, 1439-42; ref to com, 1442; rep without amdt, 1454; 3r, 1459; r.a., 1467

Income tax (Bill C-58)

Advertisements directed to Canadian broadcasts by a foreign broadcasting undertaking, 2252
 Advertising revenue, 1837
 Advertising space in non-Canadian periodicals, exemption for tax purposes, 2252, 2270
 Background of legislation on foreign periodicals, 1837
 Bill C-118 (1965) providing exemption for advertising costs, 2024
 Excerpt from speech of Senator Flynn re, 2024, 2025
 Broadcasting, 1842, 1865-6, 1870, 1882, 1909, 1928, 1932, 1944, 1998-2002, 2015, 2025, 2026, 2253, 2270, 2272, 2296-7, 2298-9, 2315, 2326-9
 Advertising of prime time, survey report of Bureau of Broadcast Measurements, 2031-2
 Bellingham Station, 1872, 1882, 1928, 1944-5, 1998-2002, 2026
 Buffalo stations, presentation to committee, 2298-9
 Canadian advertising expenditures, 1870, 1928
 Canadian Association of Broadcasters' document, 1842
 CITY-TV, Toronto, 2297

Income tax (Bill C-58) - ContinuedBroadcasting. - Concluded

- CRTC, 1870, 2031-2, 2298, 2329
- GATT provisions re exemption of tax from imported products defined as services, 2027
- Global television, letter from President, 2296-7
- KVOS-TV, 2315
- Mexican border station, 2000
- Reciprocal agreements between governments, 1928
- UHF-TV, Vancouver, 2000
- Warmetco station, 1999
- Canada-US relations, 1844, 1870-1, 1872, 1883, 1909, 1929, 1932, 1944-5, 1955-6, 1958, 1994, 2000, 2005-06, 2015, 2029-30, 2254, 2327, 2328-9
- Canadian advertising in Time, 1993, 2015
- Canadian companies controlled in US, 1929
- Canadian Forum*, excerpt from article by Peter Newman, 2029
- Canadian Journal of Political Science*, excerpt from, 1839
- Canadian ownership of and advertising in periodicals, percentage stipulations, 1926, 1927, 1932, 1939
- Canadian Periodical Publishers' Association, letter from, 1944
- Chatelaine*, 1957
- Christian Science Monitor* article re Time's editorial policy, 1840
- Competitive options, 1862
- Content*, excerpt from Editor's speech on CBC Capital report, 2032
- Criteria for deduction for tax purposes, 1837
- Destruction of competition, 1844
- Detroit Free Press* article re 'magazine dispute', 1909-10
- Difficulties of small publications, 1865
- Discussions between Leader of the Government and Committee Chairman re amdts, 2274-5
- Dumping of textiles in Sherbrooke, Quebec, by American-owned subsidiary, 1942
- Economic aspects of legislation, 1844
- Effective date of provisions re periodicals, 2253, 2272
- Excerpt from committee hearings re Manning Timber Products Ltd. v Minister of National Revenue, 2293-4
- Excerpts from Milton's Aeropagitica and Mill's Liberty, 2325
- Foreign Investment Review Agency, 1909
- Foreign investments contributing to Canadian revenue, 2005
- Fredericton Gleaner* article, 1841
- Freedom of the press, interference with, 1927, 1933, 2325
- Global Television, letter from President, 2296-7
- Globe and Mail*, 1838
 - Article re Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee and Chairman, 2300
- Interest Group Tactics and the Politics of Foreign Investment: The Time-Reader's Digest Case Study, 1839
- Letter from Stephen S. LaRue, president of Time Canada, 1839
- Letter sent to Prime Minister by writers, photographers, etc., 1838
- Maclean's* magazine, 1909, 2028
 - Presentation to committee, 2295-6, letter from President, 2296
- Magazines Canada*, 2295
- Mass Media Committee report, excerpts from, 1839, 1840, 1841-3, 1862, 1865
- Mass media reaction, 1865
- MD of Canada*, 1881-2, 1926, 1957, 2004-05, 2015, 2027, 2253, 2272, 2300
- Mexican President's statement re relations with US, 1995-6
- Ministerial rulings, 1871, 1872, 1882-3, 2025
- Montreal Gazette* editorial, 2299
- Newsweek*, lack of Canadian advertising, 2027-8
- O'Leary Commission, 2326
- Potash industry, Globe and Mail article re, 1909

Income tax (Bill C-58) - Concluded

- Recommendations of committee, 2254
- Revitalizing of Canadian magazines, 1838
- Rights of Canadian broadcasters and publishers, 2295
- Rights of taxpayers to protection of court, 2294
- Saturday Night*, 2296
- Speech of Richard Roehmer, P.C., Toronto, 1841
- 'Substantially the same', definition of, 2252-3, 2271, 2293, 2301, 2314, 2329
- Telegraph-Journal*, St. John, NB, article re Canada-US border TV war, 1945
- Time* and Reader's Digest, 1837-8, 1842-5, 1862-3, 1865, 1869-70, 1871-2, 1882-3, 1909, 1927, 1932, 1938-9, 1942, 1943, 1956-7, 1993-8, 2004, 2005, 2024-7, 2270-1, 2293, 2294, 2299, 2301, 2314-15, 2328-9
 - Advertising rates to Canadian advertisers, 1943, 2038
 - Dumping of cost-free content, 1943
 - Subscription rate, Canada-US, 1995-6, 2038
- Toronto Broadcasting stations, prime time availabilities, 1864
- Toronto Sun* article by John Slinger, 1838
- Women's magazines published in US and circulated in Canada, 1957
- Speakers: Senators
 - Austin, Jack, 2314-15, 2337
 - Beaubien, L.P., 1939
 - Buckwold, Sidney L., 2328-30
 - Carter, Chesley W., 1872
 - Cook, Eric, 1848, 2293-4
 - Davey, Keith, 1836-42, 1843, 1845, 1864, 1865, 2027-32, 2294-2301, 2327, 2328
 - Desruisseaux, Paul, 1865-6
 - Flynn, Jacques, 2024-7, 2337-8
 - Forsey, Eugene A., 2015
 - Greene, John J., 2325-6
 - Grosart, Allister, 1956, 1958, 2395, 2396, 2398-2400
 - Hayden, Salter A., 1862-5, 1945-6, 2252-5, 2269-75, 2389-2400, 2401-05
 - Hicks, Henry D., 2337
 - Laird, Keith, 1908-10
 - Manning, Ernest C., 1931-3, 2326-7, 2328
 - McElman, Charles, 1938-46
 - McIlraith, George, 1925-9
 - Paterson, Norman McL., 2301
 - Perrault, Raymond J., 1992-2002, 2274, 2337, 2396-7
 - Rowe, Frederick William, 1955-8
 - Smith, George I., 1881-3, 2395, 2397-8
 - van Roggen, George C., 1869-73
 - Walker, David J., 1842-5, 1848, 2393-5

Income Tax Bill (No. 3) C-58. 1r, 1792; 2r, 1836-45, 1848, 1862-6, 1869-73, 1881-3, 1908-10, 1925-9, 1931-3, 1938-46, 1955-8, 1992-2002, 2004-06, 2014-15, 2024-33; ref to com, 2033; rep with amdts, 2252-5, 2269-75, 2293-2301, 2313-15, 2325-30, 2337; m to ref rep back to com, 2337, agreed, 2338; further rep of com without amdt, 2389-98, 2401-05; 3r, 2398-2400; r.a., 2450

Income tax conventions

- Accruing property income, 1790
- Capital gains, 1790
- Countries with which Canada has concluded conventions, 1794
- Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 1796-7
- Prohibition against discrimination, 1790, 1797

Income tax conventions - Concluded

- Supplementary agreements, 1789
- Taxpayer position in country without convention, 1794, 1798
- Teachers' tax exemption, 1790
- Withholding tax on dividends, interest payments and royalties, 1789, 1790
 - Artistic works, 1794
- Speakers: Senators
 - Burchill, G. Percival, 1796
 - Flynn, Jacques, 1798
 - Grosart, Allister, 1793-6
 - Lang, Daniel A., 1789-90, 1796-8

Income Tax Conventions bill S-32. 1r, 1777; 2r, 1789-90, 1793-8; ref to com, 1798; rep without amdt, 1867; 3r, 1881; Commons amds, 2236-7, 2244; r.a., 1301

Indian oil and gas

- Alberta oil royalties to Indian Bands, 337
- Consultation with Indian Bands, 352, 426
- Excerpt from Commons committee proceedings, 352
- Oil prices and increased revenue from, 337-8
- Speakers: Senators
 - Choquette, Lionel, 351-2
 - Flynn, Jacques, 426
 - Laird, Keith, 426
 - McDonald, A. Hamilton, 337-8, 352-3

Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15. 1r, 325; 2r, 337-8, 351-3; ref to com, 353; rep without amdt, 402; 3r, 426; r.a., 467

Indians and Eskimos

- Alcoholism and drug addiction, 142-3
- Buffalo kill, 142
- Demonstration on Parliament Hill, 143
- Estimates for Indian economic development, 379
- Fishermen's assistance program, 142
- Great Lakes pollution, 142
- Housing rights under NHA, 751
- Indian women, loss of status on marriage to non-Indian, 898
- Land claims, 17
- Legal restrictions on former freedoms of livelihood, 142
- Manitoba Indian Brotherhood
 - Meetings with senators, 290-1
 - Request to appear before Senate committee, 315-16
- Money-poor and land-rich aspects of Indian life, 144
- Oil and gas, 325, 337-8, 351-3, 402, 426, 467
- Recruitment development program, 569
- Rights of MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to fish Atlantic salmon, 2208, 2264
- Talent potential for sports, arts and Indian culture, 143
- Treaties, 142
- Voting franchise, 622

Industrial Development Bank, See Federal Business Development Bank bill C-14, 348, 368-71, 417-18, 426, 444, 467

Industry

- Construction empires, 36
- Forestry, devastation by Spruce budworm, 1158-68, 1169-70, 1218-20, 1230-2
- Labour unrest, 24, 36
- Sheet glass, 785-6
- Textile imports and effect on Canadian industry, 781-7, 791-3, 843-6, 901-02, 945-8, 975-9
- See* following items

Industry, textile and other imports affecting Canadian industry, 781-7, 791-3, 843-6, 901-02, 945-8, 975-9, 2045, 2055-6

- Anti-dumping procedures, 978
- Canadian textile problems, 2045, 2055-6
- Sheet glass
 - Roumanian imports, 786
 - Ville St. Laurent Co., 785, 786
 - World surplus of flat glass, 786

Textiles

- Canadian Textile Commission briefs presented to government by various textile organizations (1974), 782
- Competition from textile imports, 782, 785
- Disregard of agreements by textile importing countries, 844
- Dollar value of imported suits or suiting, 901
- Dominion Textile Co. closing, 783
- Dumping of foreign textiles at depressed prices, 782-3
- Excerpt from speech of Hon. Mr. Pepin re government negotiations with other countries, 792
- GATT, provisions for protection of signatories, 781-2, 785, 786, 787
- Gazette* article on The Case for Textile Protection, 781
- Government concern and study of problem, 792, 901-02, 945
- Import control list and prices, 783-5, 901, 946
- Imports per capita, 782
- International trade deficit, 782, 975-6
- International Trade in Textiles, agreement re, 947
- Polyester and cotton-mixed imports, 783, 946, 977
- Quebec textile workers, 844
 - Le Devoir* article re unemployment in Victoriaville, 844
- Representations and recommendations of union leaders, workers and producers, rejection of, 783-4
- Separatist leader's comments on CBC re government attitude towards secondary industry trade policies, 978
- Subsidies to other areas of industry, 785
- Textile and Clothing Board, role of, 946, 976-7
 - Inquiry into imports of certain fabrics and clothing, 946-7
 - Recommendations, lack of enforcement of, 845, 976-7
- Textile companies converting to import companies, 844
- Unemployment in Wellington District and other areas, 782, 786-7, 791, ~~844~~, 977-8
- USSR trading policy, 791
- Wages, Canada vs other countries, 844

Industry, textile and other imports affecting Canadian industry - *ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 843-6, 901, 971, 978-9
 Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 791-3
 Desruisseaux, Paul, 781-7, 901, 947-8, 974-8
 Perrault, Raymond J., 901-02, 945-8

Industry, Trade and Commerce Department

Authority provided under Statistics Act, 273-4
 Import analysis and examination of invoices, 273-4
 Imports, question of non-tariff barriers re, 399, 400
 Interdepartmental arrangement for access to information, 398-9
 Support services for industrial and trade development, 272-3

Speakers: Senators

Beaubien, L. P., 281
 Everett, Douglas D., 272-4, 349, 399-400
 Grosart, Allister, 304-06, 398-9
 Hayden, Salter A., 348-9

Industry, Trade and Commerce Department bill S-15. 1r, 243; 2r, 272-4, 281, 304-06; ref to com, 306; rep with amdts, 348-9, 368; 3r, 373, 398-400; r.a., 1134

Inflation, 15-16, 19, 72-74

Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, White Paper on, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1319-30,
 1349-53, 1411-15
 Beef industry and prices, 122
 Cost-push inflation, 119
 Demand-pull inflation, 119
 Energy costs, 112-13
 Excerpts from paper prepared by George C. Baker, 112-13
 Food retailing industry, salaries, 879
 Food shortage and destitution in eastern countries, 117
 Government expenditures and control of, 16, 26, 27-28, 144-5, 182-3, 189-90, 199-200, 349-51, 1056
 Excerpt from publication of Canadian Economic Policy Committee, 1056
 Legislation, multiplicity and complexity of, 145
 Literature surplus, 145
 Provincial and municipal expenditures, 144-5
 Restraints, 141, 183
Windsor Star article on, 144
 High cost of money, 112
 Japan, 246, 248
 Lumber industry, New Brunswick, 122
 Milk subsidy, 175-6
 National petroleum corporation to control prices and distribution, 112
 Oil prices, 72, 116
 Population control, 72
 Public debt, 190
 Responsibility of individuals, 119-20
 Restraints and controls, 876-7
 Structural inflation, 119
 Supply of goods and services, 116-17, 121, 183
 Tariff decreases, question of anti-inflationary effects of, 514-15
 Trade balance of payments, deficit, 877
 Trends affecting export markets, 877

Inflation, - Concluded

- Wage and price controls, 145
- World economic and political outlook, 117-18
- See* Anti-inflation,
 - Canadian economy,
 - Economic conditions and prospects.

Information bill (Right to Information) C-225, ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467

Information Canada

- Inaccuracies in publication regarding Governors General and Prime Ministers, 1757, 2003

Inman, Hon. F, Elsie

- Birthday felicitations, 348
- Crime and violence, 1255
 - Crime increase, 1255
 - Firearms, police use of, 1255
 - Violence depicted in life styles, 1255
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute on occasion of resignation from the Senate, 967
- International Women's Year, 1346-7
 - Background of women's role during past centuries, 1346
 - Leadership in industry, professions, arts and sciences, 1346
 - Provincial jurisdiction in matters of property laws, civil rights and education, 1346
- Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., the late, 324
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1410

Inquiries, calling the attention of the Senate to matters of national and international interest

- Aging, the anatomy of Special Senate Committee report, 146-9, 320-3, 516-18
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', 225-6, 1099, 1118-20, 1127-9
- Canadian economy, Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1312-14, 1319-30, 1349-53
- Combines, planned takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., of Argus Corporation Ltd., inquiry dropped, 1063-4
- Competition policy in Canada and the Combines Investigation Act, 109-10, 663-6, 675-84, 1121-2, 1135
- Constitution of Canada
 - Patriation, correspondence between the Prime Minister of Canada and the First Ministers of the Provinces on the subject of, 2079-86
- Consumer Credit and Cost of Living, Special Joint Committee (1967), implementation of recommendations contained in report, 238-41
- Corporations and Labour Unions Returns Act, report of Ministry of Industry, Trade and Commerce, 2059-61, 2108-09
- Economy of Canada, 1012, 1067-72, 1081-2, 1113-17
- European Community, Canada's claim for compensation re loss of preferential access of Canadian commodities to British market, 579-80, 661-2, 671
- European Parliament, Strasbourg and Brussels meetings, 307-13, 316-20, 329-33
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1158-63, 1169-70, 1218-20, 1230-2, 1816
- Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1738-41
- Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1959-64
- Industry, textile imports affecting Canadian industry, 781-7, 791-3, 843-6, 901-02, 974-9; subject matter ref to Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 979
- International Women's Year, 671-4, 836-8, 896-9

Inquiries, calling the attention of the Senate to matters of national and international interest - Concluded

- Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Florida conference, 2221-2, 2224-33
- Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Quebec City conference, 1137-43, 1145-55
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Columbo conference, 984-8
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 234-8, 245-9
- Labour, working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8
- Mexico, communique of Parliamentary delegation to Canada, 1874, 1877-8
- Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians to, 775-7, 852-3, 930-3
- National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2160-3, 2168-9
- New Brunswick, economic conditions, 1750-4, 1817-20, 1821, 2009-13, 2015-18, 2033
- North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 342-7, 362-5, 456-9
- Public Service, action of Treasury Board in reclassification of economists, sociologists and statisticians, 2318-21
- Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation for maintenance, 501-04, 537-40, 567-9, 603, 954-5, Order withdrawn, 966
- Social welfare, distribution of income, 2144-9, see also appendix of May 19/75
- Television and radio coverage of Senate and committee proceedings, 1365-6, 1483-4, 1487-8
 - Order discharged and inquiry withdrawn, 2099
- Transportation
 - British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2049-54, 2063-6, 2070, 2106-08, 2115-18, 2196-8, 2217-21, 2333-4
- Work Ethic in Canada, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518

Inquiries, general

- British Trade Mission offices in Canada, 206, 252
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, appearance of Gerda Munsinger on television program, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7
- Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada, action of National Revenue Department re, 2183-4, 2354-6
- Federal-provincial relations, dispute re resource revenue taxation, inquiry withdrawn, 660
- Indian and Eskimo recruitment development program, 569
- Parliament Buildings, East Block renovations, 241; inquiry dropped, 279
- See Questions*

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate CommitteeBudgets of Committees

- Agriculture, 348
- Banking, Trade and Commerce, 348, 524-5, 956, 1502, 1781, 2119
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 525, 1088, 1624
- Foreign Affairs, 348, 1781
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs, 525-6, 795
- National Finance, 525, 795, 1088, 1337, 1781, 2119
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, 525, 795, 956, 1502
- Science Policy, 160, 348, 795, 1088, 1244, 1261, 2119
- Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1973-74), ref to com, 192
- Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1974-75), ref to com, 1005
- Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1975-76), ref to com, 2167
- Consideration of matters without reference by the Senate, 109
- Inter-Parliamentary associations, resolution re sharing of expenses of, 1493-4
- Intersessional authority, 505, 576-7, 770-3, 815-16
- Members, 96
- Orders of the Day, notification to senator of item standing in his name, 2123
- Regulations re attendance of senators, ref to com, 951-4

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee - Concluded

Reports

- Committee budgets, 160, 348, 524-5, 795, 956, 1088, 1244, 1261, 1337, 1502, 1624, 1781
- Regulations re attendance of senators, 1781-2, 1790-1, 1911-13; m that rep be ref back to com, 1913, 1917-19, 1933-6, m neg, 2118, rep adopted, 2118
- Salary revisions, report tabled, 2261

International Air Transport Association bill S-18. 1r, 265; 2r, 301-03; ref to com, 303; rep without amdt, 373; 3r, 382; r.a., 581

International organizations

- Privileges and immunities, 934, 957-8, 973

International Women's Year, 671-4, 836-8, 896-9, 1346-7

- Abortion law, 837, 838, 898
- Agricultural activities, need for training of women in time of food crisis, 837-8
- Anti-discrimination legislation, 897
- Asia and Africa, male domination, 837
- Background of women's role during past centuries, 1346
- Honorary aide-de-camp to Governor General, Colonel Mary Vallance, 672
- Indian women, loss of status on marriage to non-Indian, 898
- Inequalities between men and women, 838, 897
 - University graduates, 898
- Leadership of women in industry, professions, arts and sciences, 1346
- Protest speech of student at public meeting contest, 673-4
- Provincial jurisdiction in matters of property laws, civil rights and education, 1346
- Royal Commission on the Status of Women, 672, 897
- Scandinavian countries, Belgium, France and Germany, role of women, 836
- Social revolution by women, 896
- Song of Equality, by Jacqueline Lemay, 673
- Speaker of the Senate, Hon. Renaude Lapointe, 671-2
- Statement of Helvi Sipilä, UN Assist. Sect. General for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, 836, 896
- UN Charter (1945), 896
- UN conference on ways and means to end discrimination against women, 672
- UN disregard of women's rights and failure to implement ideals of founders, 672, 896
- UN resolution re International Women's Year, 672, 836, 896
- 'Why Not' campaign, 896
 - Comments of Hon. Marc Lalonde, women MPs and others, 672-3
- Women's Program, Dept. of State, 897-8
- Women's responsibility in economics, social and cultural development, worldwide friendly relations and cooperation, 836
- Women's wages in Italy, 837
- Working women, heads of families, 898
- Speakers: Senators
 - Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 896-9
 - Inman, F. Elsie, 1346-7
 - Norrie, Margaret, 836-8
 - Quart, Josie D., 671-4

Interparliamentary Advisory Committee

- Canadian delegations to conferences, committee to study and rule on, 1490, 1494

Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Florida conference, 2221-2, 2224-33

- Agenda, 2224
- Canada-US relations, 2222
- Canadian Centennial coins, presentation to US delegates, 2222
- Committee I, 2224, 2225
 - Canadian cultural legislation and regulations, 2227
 - Eastport, 2226
 - Flathead River, 2225-6
 - Garrison Diversion project, 2225
 - Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, 2225
 - Law of the Sea, 2226-7
 - Richelieu-Lake Champlain, 2225
 - Skagit, 2226
 - Water boundaries 2226
 - West Coast pollution, 2226
- Committee II, 2224, 2227-30
 - Ant-inflation program, 2228
 - Canada-US automotive agreement, 2227-8
 - Canadian cultural legislation and regulation, 2229-30
 - Controls on trade with Cuba, 2229
 - Extension to Canada of US restrictions on political contributions, 2230
 - Foreign Investment Review Act, 2229
 - Multi-lateral trade negotiations, 2230
 - Saskatchewan takeover of potash companies, 2228-9
 - Trans-Border economic issues, 2227
 - US dumping charges and countervailing duties, 2228
- Committee III, 2222, 2230-2
 - Agriculture, 2232
 - Energy, 2222, 2230-2
- Plenary meeting, 2232
- Speaker: Senator
 - Macnaughton, Alan A., 2221-3, 2224-33

Inter-Parliamentary Group, Canada-United States, Quebec City conference, 1137-43, 1145-55

- Committees and members of, 1138
- Delegates, 1138
- Designation of meeting places and timetables, 1138
- Energy resources, 1141-2
 - Alaska reserves, 1141
 - Coal reserves, 1141
 - Nuclear energy, 1142
 - Prices, 1141; controversy re, 1141
 - Shortfall in deliveries to US, 1141
 - Solar and geothermal energy, harnessing of tides, heat pumps, 1142
- Excerpt from speech by Prime Minister Trudeau, 1140
- Excerpt from speech by US Deputy Secretary of State, 1140
- Reform of Canadian section of Group, 1137-40
- Trans-border problems, 1139
- US Congress contacts, importance of, 1139-40
- Speakers: Senators
 - Macnaughton, Alan A., 1137-40
 - van Roggen, George C., 1140-3

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Colombo, Sri Lanka conference, 984-8

- Aid to developing countries, 985-8
 - Sri Lanka and Pakistan, 985, 986-8
 - Tarbela Dam, 987-8
- Birth control, 987, 988
- Canada's esteem in foreign countries, 985
- Disarmament, 984
- Drugs, 984-5
- Economic conditions in Canada, 985-6
- Economic cooperation, 984
- Education and training in resource development, 984, 988
- Human rights, 984
- Living standards, 985
- Population statistics, 986
- Poverty problems, 987
- Speakers: Senators
 - Buckwold, Sidney L., 988
 - Rowe, Frederick William, 984-8

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 234-8, 245-9

- Arab-Israeli conflict, 236
- Briefing of delegates, 237
- Japan, economic expansion, 245-7; employment standards, 246-7; inflation, 246, 248
- Labour unions and strikes in Canada, effect on foreign investments, 245-6
- Middle East, 247-8; Canadian peacekeeping force, 247
- Organizational meetings on energy, iron and steel, education, environment and pollution, 235
- Population trends and economic and social development, 235-6, 237
- Resolutions presented, 235-6
- UN Conference on World Population, 236
- Speakers: Senators
 - Asselin, Martial, 245-8
 - Molgat, Gildas L., 234-8
 - Robichaud, Louis-J., 248-9

Intersessional authority of Senate, 505, 576-7, 770-3, 815-16

Investigations in Parliament, 1398-1403, 1409, 1476-9

Iraq

- Mr. Elkadi Kw Kussai, visitor to Senate, 1742

Ireland, Republic of

- President Erskine Childers, death of, 265

Israel

- Canada-Israel income tax convention, 1792, 1793-8

Italy

- Earthquake victims, Canadian government assistance to, 2111

Japan, 234-8, 245-9

- Delegation from House of Councillors, visitors to Senate, 2364
- Economic expansion, 245-7
- Employment standards, 246-7

Japan - Concluded

- Inflation, 246, 248
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 234-8, 245-9
- Ohara, Mr. Yasunaga, National Diet Library, visitor to Senate, 299

Jerome, Hon. James

- Appointment to office of Speaker of House of Commons, 2

Joint Committees, see CommitteesJudges

- Alberta, consolidation of district court divisions, 1040-1
- Annuities for judges and deceased judges' spouses, 1052
- Appts. according to provincial volume of litigation, 1042
- Canadian Judicial Council, 1052
- Fringe benefits, 1041-2
- Income tax, 1041
- Newfoundland court of appeal, 1041
- Ontario, workload of county court judges, 1041
- Pensions, 1052
- Prince Edward Island, consolidation of county and supreme courts, 1041
- Restriction on earnings from extra-judicial functions, 1041
- Salary increases, 1041, 1043, 1051-2
- Selection of judges, 1041, 1042-3, 1051
- Superior Court workload, 1052

Speakers: Senators

- Asselin, Martial, 1051-2
- Choquette, Lionel, 1080
- Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 1042
- Flynn, Jacques, 1053, 1080
- Laird, Keith, 1040-2, 1053
- Molson, Hartland de M., 1042
- Walker, David J., 1042-3

Judges bill C-47. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1040-3, 1051-3; ref to com, 1053; rep without amdt, 1066; 3r, 1080; r.a., 1095

Judson, Hon. Wilfred, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada

- Royal assent, 1281

Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1825-6, 1846-8, 1857-9, 1890-3, 1920-2, 1930-1

Kickham, Hon. Thomas J. (Deceased Dec. 1/74)

- Tributes, 324

King George V Cancer Fund

- Assets value, 1482
- Background of fund, 1481, 1482
- Payment of assets to National Cancer Institute of Canada, 1481
- Trustees of fund, 1481
- Trust fund provisions re transfer of funds, 1481-2

Speakers: Senators

- Buckwold, Sidney L., 1483
- Cottreau, Ernest G., 1481-2, 1483
- Yuzyk, Paul, 1482-3

King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up bill C-76. 1r, 1467; 2r, 1480-3; 3r, 1486; r.a., 1617

Labour

- Air transport, flight delays due to labour dispute, 2062-3
- Basic hourly rate for grain handlers, 82; disparity in labour rates, 82
- BC strike legislation, 1326-8
 - Labour movement reaction, 1327-8
 - Supermarkets, 1327; Canada Safeway, 1327
- Canadian Labour Congress, possibility of general strike, 2130
- Canadian Labour Congress proposals re 'Attack on Inflation - a program of national action', 1323-4
- Construction empires, 36
- Construction industry in Quebec, pardon granted to Dede Desjardins, 1053, 1066
- Corporation and Labour Unions Returns Act, report of Ministry of Industry, Trade and Commerce, 2059-61
- Defiance by unions of court orders, 2237
- Essential services, proposals re collective bargaining, prohibition against strikes, and compulsory arbitration, 79-80
- Government intervention in dispute and effects of, 82
- Grain inspectors' dispute, settlement of, 336
- Industrial Inquiry Commission, 93
- Japan, employment standards, 246-7
- Labour unrest, 24, 36
- Loss of working days through conciliation delays, 81-82
- Montreal Police Force, threatened strike, 849
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1285, 1319, 1355, 1370-1, 1409-10, 1416-17, 1428-31
- Price controls vs wage controls, 1322
- Problems of equity in temporary freeze of wages and controls, 1322
- Public service, strike of general labour and trades group, 642
- St. Lawrence Ports operations, 817-27, 832
- Strike of longshoremen in Quebec, back-to-work legislation, question, 833, 838-9, 840, 846, 849, 855, 867, 888, 900-01, 912
- Trades Union Congress of Britain, statement of policy, 1328-9
- Unions and strikes, effect on foreign investment in Canada, 245-6, 600
- West Coast grain handling operations, 76, 77-94, 95
- West Coast ports operations, 723, 724-30, 731
- Withdrawal of services by longshoremen at Montreal, 1006-07
- Working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8
- See* St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-58, 817-27, 832
 - West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 76, 77-93, 95,
 - West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 723, 724-30, 731,
 - Working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8.

Lafond, Hon. Paul C.

- Canada Year Book, 1822-3
- Distribution of document in Senate chamber, question of privilege, 644
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, 527
- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) bill C-228, 601
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1727-8
 - NATO defence, 1726, 1727
 - Canada's contribution, 1727
- Scientific Committee, Subcommittee on Major Concerns of Modern Society, 1727

Lafond, Hon. Paul C. - Concluded

- North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 456-9
 - Economic Committee discussions, 457-8
 - Defence budgets, 457
 - Energy supplies, 457, 458
 - Germany, inflationary problems and labour unions, 458
 - Inflation, 457
 - Multinational corporations and Atlantic Alliance, 457-8
 - Recommendations, 457
 - USSR, currency resources from exports of oil, wood, coal and weapons, 458
- Regulations respecting attendance of senators, 1791, 1933-4
 - Committee review of reasons for absence, 1791
 - Senate vacancies and workload, 1791
- Representation bill 1974 C-36, 424
- Senate business, 924

Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C. (deceased Feb. 13/75)

- Tributes, 532-4

Laird, Hon. Keith

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 144-6
- Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank bill S-24, 1062-3
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2265-6, 2280, 2289
 - Land ownership, 2265-6
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 144
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1014, 1016-17
 - 'Give', definition of, 1016-17
- Immigration bill S-12, 164-5, 166, 230-2, 233
 - Appeal against deportation order, 166, 231
 - Deportation statistics, 230-1, 233
 - Ignoring of deportation order, 164-5, 166-7, 231
 - Illegal activities, 232
 - Indictment or summary conviction, 231
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1908-10
 - Broadcasting, 1909
 - Canada-US relations, 1909
 - Detroit Free Press* article re 'magazine dispute', 1909-10
 - Foreign Investment Review Agency, 1909
 - Maclean's* magazine, 1909
 - Potash industry, Globe and Mail article re, 1909
 - Time and Reader's Digest*, 1909
- Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, 426
- Inflation, 144-5
 - Government expenditures and control of, 144; provincial and municipal, 144-5
 - Legislation, multiplicity and complexity of, 145
 - Literature surplus, 145
 - Windsor Star* article on, 144
 - Wage and price controls, 144
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee
 - Budgets of committees
 - Agriculture, 348
 - Banking, Trade and Commerce, 348, 524-5, 956, 1502, 1781, 2119
 - Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 525, 1088, 1624
 - Foreign Affairs, 384, 1781
 - Legal and Constitutional Affairs, 525, 795
 - National Finance, 525, 795, 1088, 1337, 1781, 2119

Laird, Hon. Keith - *Concluded*Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee - *Concluded*Budgets of committees - Concluded

Regulations and other Statutory instruments, 525, 795, 956, 1502

Science Policy, 160, 348, 795, 1088, 1244, 1261, 2119

Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1973-74) ref to com, 192

Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1974-75) ref to com, 1005

Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1975-76) ref to com, 2167

Consideration of matters without reference by the Senate, 109

Reports

Regulations respecting attendance of senators, 1781-2, 1790-1, 1911-13, m that rep be ref back to com, 1911-13, 1917-18, 1933-6, 2118

Salary revisions, report tabled, 2261

Inter-Parliamentary associations, resolution re sharing of expenses of, 1493-4

Judges bill C-47, 1040-2, 1053

Alberta, consolidation of district court divisions, 1040-1

Appointments according to provincial volume of litigation, 1042

Fringe benefits, 1041-2

Income tax, 1041

Newfoundland court of appeal, 1041

Ontario, workload of county court judges, 1041

Prince Edward Island, consolidation of county and supreme courts, 1041

Restriction on earnings from extra-judicial functions, 1041

Salary increases, 1041

Selection of judges, 1041

Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel of the Senate

Appointment of Raymond du Plessis, Esq., Q.C., 2048-9

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee

Reports

Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, rep without amdt, 1244

National Finance Committee

Reports

Estimates, Supplementary (B) year ending Mar. 31/76, 1937, 1948-53

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments

Newspaper article re Chairman Senator Forsey, question of privilege, 794-5

Regulations respecting attendance of senators, 1781-2, 1790-1, 2118

Absence beyond 21 days, 1790

Committee review of reasons for absence, 1791

Official business, specifying of, 1790-1

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1208

Rules of the Senate

Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, 1426

Senate speech quoted verbatim in Commons, 1359-60

Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1208

Senate and House of Commons Act

Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 953

Unemployment insurance, 145

Pensioners, 145

Lalonde, Hon. Marc, Minister of Health and Welfare

Medical Care bill C-68, 2366-75

Ceiling on federal contributions, 2367, 2369-70, 2372-3

Costs (1975), 2369; provincial per capita costs, 2370-1

Federal-provincial conferences, 2367, 2373

Immigration of physicians, 2367

Lalonde, Hon. Marc, Minister of Health and Welfare - *ConcludedMedical Care bill C-68 - *Concluded

- Nursing homes, 2374
- Physicians' fees, 2372
- Provincial percentage increases (1975-76), 2368
- Psychiatrists and physiotherapists, 2368-9
- Quebec, 2358-9, 2370
- Seat belts vs accidents and medical care, 2367-8

Lamontagne, Hon. Maurice, P.C.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2112-13, 2114
 - Backlog of appeals to board, 2112
 - Export levy, 2113, 2114
 - Increase in workers affected by guidelines, 2112
 - Labour leaders' influence on inflationary trends, 2112
 - Price increases vs cost-of-living adjustments, 2112
 - Small industries, 2113
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, La Presse report of alleged statement by Senator Lamontagne, question of privilege, 1165-6
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 761-5, 766, 908-09, 910, 911
 - Institution, definition of, 765-6
 - Prohibition of illegal exports into Canada, 764
 - Articles made by person now deceased or which have been in Canada 35 yrs. or more, 764, 765
 - UNESCO convention, 764
 - Review Board, 763-4, 908-09, 910
 - System of export control, 762-4
 - Determination of fair cash price, 762, 764
 - Financial assistance for custodial institutions, 763
 - Ministerial permits of bulk licences, 763
 - Objects of national heritage, 762
 - Permits, 762, 908, 909
 - Tax incentives for sale or donation of cultural property to custodial institutions, 763
 - Exemptions, 763
 - UK legislation, 761, 763, 765
 - Value of articles such as manuscripts, etc., determination of, 765
- Economy of Canada, 1012, 1067-72
 - Cost-push inflation, 1072
 - Countercyclical policies, 1068, 1072
 - Crude oil exports, ceiling on, 1072
 - Current account deficit, 1071
 - Employment and unemployment, 1070
 - Excerpts from speeches relating to economic conditions (1966, 1970), 1068-9
 - Exports, decline due to work stoppages, 1070
 - Finance Minister's statements re fiscal policies, 1068-9, 1071
 - Gross national product, 1070
 - Housing market, 1069
 - Interest rates, 1069
 - Provincial deficits, 1071
 - Recessions (1953-74), 1067-8
 - Trade deficits re parts and accessories of motor vehicles, 1071
 - US economic conditions, 1069, 1070
 - US production of small cars affecting auto pact, 1071-2
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 648, 649
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 749, 751
 - Construction industry, stabilizing of, 751

Lamontagne, Hon. Maurice, P.C. - Concluded

- Official Languages Act, rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2344-6
 - Motion re, 2344
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 964
- Rules of the Senate
 - Amendment to committee report after presentation to Senate, 908, 909
- Science policy
 - Commission on the Future, termination of mandate for, 1173, 1220
 - Data bank, 295
 - Excerpts from letters from Prime Minister and Deputy Secretary of the Cabinet re Institute for Research on Public Policy, 1171-2, 1221
 - Future research areas of Science Policy Committee, 1173
 - Impact of committee report on other countries, 1222
 - Information center, Futures Canada, 295
 - "Managing the Future: Conference on Anticipatory Institutions", 1171, 1221
 - Prime Minister Trudeau's speech at Duke University, 296-7
 - Recommendations to government by committee, 1222
 - Study undertaken by government into futures research and futures information, 1172-3
 - Training program in cooperation with management and schools, 295-6
- Science Policy, Special Senate Committee
 - Annual meetings, regional and national, 296
 - Appointment, 295-8
 - Club of Rome President, visit to committee, 473
 - Expenses, 160, 348, 1088, 1223-4, 1244, 1260, 1261
 - Members, 295
 - Reports
 - Quorum, 1355
 - Termination of mandate re Commission on the Future, 1164, 1171-3, 1220-6, 1246-7, 1259-60
 - Terms of reference, 295, 1171
- Senate business, 1880, 1881
- Senate and House of Commons Act
 - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 952
 - Senators' work in public interest outside of Senate, 952
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 878

Lang, Hon. Daniel A.

- Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing bill C-21, 1631
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974, C-42, 415
- Canadian economy
 - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1446-9
 - Economic Summit Conference, Canada's absence from, 1447
 - Government expenditures, 1447-8
 - Federal budget deficit, 1447
 - Members' indemnities, 1448
 - Ontario, 1447
 - Prime Minister's statement, 1448
 - UK government budget cuts, 1448
 - Labour and management demands, 1448-9
 - Labour strike actions affecting economy, 1447
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2283
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2387-9
 - Appeals, 2389
 - Background of capital punishment legislation, 2387

Lang, Hon. Daniel A. - ConcludedCriminal Law Amendment bill C-84 - Concluded

- First and second degree murder, 2388-9
- Prison term, ten years or life, 2389
- Recommendation by jury, 2389
- Transitional provisions re pending matters, 2389
- Treason, 2388-9

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, 1175-8

- Basic and additional revenues, 1175-6
- Equalization formula as result of revenues to oil and gas producing provinces, 1175
- Freehold oil and gas revenues, 1175
- Income tax revenue guarantee, 1175, 1177
- Personal and corporation tax, 1177
- Tax changes affecting fiscal arrangements, 1176-7
- Tax rebates on oil and gas revenue, western provinces, 1177

Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, 1421, 1422

Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, 1789-90, 1796-8; Commons amds, 2244

- Accruing property income, 1790
- Capital gains, 1790
- Conventions with France, Belgium and Israel, 1789
- Countries with which Canada has concluded conventions, 1797
- Federal-provincial jurisdiction, 1796-7
- Prohibition against discrimination, 1790, 1797
- Supplementary agreements, 1789
- Taxation by countries not under convention, 1798
- Teachers' tax exemption, 1790
- Withholding tax on dividends and interest payments and royalties, 1789, 1797

Passports, special, for MPs, restrictions on, 2262-3

Remembrance Day, 257

Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) bill C-4, 256-8

- Dependent children, 257-8
- Equality for male and female veterans, 258
- Escalation of allowances to consumer price index, 257
- Orphans, 257-8

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate

Agriculture Committee

- Meetings during Senate sittings, 1045, 1196, 1639
- Membership, motion re, 591

Aircraft Registry bill S-5, 1001

- Federal-provincial conferences, lack of, 1001
- Property and civil rights of provinces, 1001
- Seizure and sale of aircraft, 1001

Alliance Security & Investigation, Ltd. bill S-26, 1053

Anti-inflation policy, m to authorize com to study subject matter of Bill C-73, 1408, agreed, 1426

Appropriation bill No. 3, 1974 C-31, 192-3, 203, 204-5

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 379, 389, 390-2, 407-11, 412, 413, 429, 431-2

Appropriation bill No. 5, 1974 C-45, 402, 424-5

Appropriation bill No. 1, 1975 C-54, 703-05, 718-19, 720-21, 722, 723, 735-6

Appropriation bill No. 2, 1975 C-55, 707-08, 738-9

Appropriation bill No. 3, 1975 C-64, 1097, 1098, 1129, 1131-2

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79, 1602-04, 6121-14

Appropriation bill No. 1, 1976 C-90, 1971-2, 1977-80, 1981-2, 1984

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1972-3, 1988-91
- Appropriation bill No. 3, 1976 C-93, 2288
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1976 C-94, 2268, 2269
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee
 - Engagement of services of counsel and technical, clerical and other personnel, 1427-8
 - Meetings during adjournments, 2047-8
 - Meetings during Senate sittings, 373, 505, 535, 563, 1034, 1403, 1416, 1438, 1485, 1502, 1856, 2069, 2098, 2120, 2178, 2192, 2216, 2338
- Beef producers, federal assistance for, 241, 253
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 134
- Canada-United States relations, communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re remarks by Senator Davey, 2192-3
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
 - Appearance of Gerda Munsinger on television program, 1619
 - Profane language used on TV programs, 1128
 - Role of CBC and CRTC administrative office, 1128
 - Saint-Jean-Baptiste Day program, 1128
 - TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', com authorized to examine and report on, 225-6; rep of com, 1127-9
 - National unity, deprecating of, 1128
- Canadian National Railways, cost of construction of tower in Toronto, 2185-6
- Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation bill S-27, 1062
 - Background of corporation, 1062
 - Change of name to 'Teleglobe Canada', 1062
 - President and chief executive officer, 1062
- Committees
 - Authorization to meet during adjournment of Senate, 2171-2
 - Meetings, co-ordinating committee to organize scheduling of, 1091
 - Notices of meetings of subcommittees and steering committees, 2192
 - Proceedings, delay in printing and distribution of, 703-04
- Consumer Credit and Cost of Living, Special Joint Committee (1967), implementation of recommendations contained in report, 2239-41
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1730-3, 1772-6, 1884-6, 1896-7, 1899
 - Appeal from decision on summary conviction, 1732
 - Cattle theft, 1885
 - Conditional release, 1731-2
 - Conspiracy in or outside Canada, 1731
 - Criminal offence resulting in serious harm, 1732
 - Evidence of police officer, 1885, 1896-7, 1899
 - Impaired drivers, 1731, 1775
 - Jury system, 1773, 1774
 - Kidnapping, extortion, organized crime, 1775
 - Morgentaler amendment, 1732, 1772-4, 1885-6
 - Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, survey results, 1774
 - Excerpts from notes of supreme court judges, 1773
 - Statement of Past President of Bar Association, 1773-4
 - Murder, conspiracy to commit murder, trafficking in narcotics, 1733
 - Offence against internationally protected person, 1730
 - Placing bets on behalf of others, 1731
 - Rape and other sexual offences, 1731
 - Complainants' testimony, 1731
 - Telecommunications, use of 'blackbox', 1731
 - Theft, forgery of credit cards, etc., 1884-5
 - Verdict of guilty where facts admitted and there is error in law, 1885

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

Deputy Leader, reappointment, 46

Emergency sittings, authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 328

Energy

Statement of policy re oil and gas, notice of inquiry, 2150

Estimates

Agriculture, 193

Assistance to provinces, individuals or other segment of economy, 1971

Assurance that passage of bill will not prejudice further debate, 708

Auditor General's statement re government financial management, 1977

Borrowing authority, 389, 391, 708, 738-9, 1132, 1603, 1612-13, 1972-3, 1988, 1989

Budgetary and non-budgetary items, 704, 1602-03

Canadair, 719, 720

CNR deficit, 704

Cheque cashing before March 31, 1989-90

Chief Electoral Officer, 193

Correction in figure relating to supplementary estimates (D), 703

Deferment of capital projects, 1980-1, 1984

Departmental estimates, suggested method for inquiry by Senate, 1972

Discussion on subject matter of appropriation bills remaining on Order Paper, 1783

Dollar items, 379, 704-05, 719, 723, 1603, 1613-14, 1971, 1979, 1980

Statistics (1973-76), 1979, 1980

Economic development and supply, 379

Environment, 193

Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements, 704, 18-19

Globe and Mail article re Workers get shock at bank: Government cheques NSF, 1977-8

Groundfish stabilization, 704

House of Commons, program expenditures, payment to Leader of Social Credit Party, 722, 1613

Indian economic development, 379

Industry Trade and Commerce, 193

Information Canada, 193

Insurance, 193

Inter-Provincial Pipe Line Ltd., 720

Leading Cases in Constitutional Law, excerpt from decision in Edinburgh and Dalkeith Railway Company v. Wauchope, 391

Loto Canada, 2246-7

Milk subsidies, 704

Oil refiners, compensation to, 445

Old age security fund, 704, 1971-2

Deficit, 1971-2

Payments to provinces, 379

Percentage increase over 1974-75, 1971

Railways, compensation to, 379

Referral of supply bills to National Finance Committee, 736, 1131-2, 1133, 1613

Special employment measures, 1602

Spouses' allowances, 1602

Student summer employment, 1603

Transfer payments, 2288

Treasury Board, 704, 720

Unpredicted expenditures, 719

Veterans allowances, 704

Votes for grants in fiscal year, 1972

Votes for which additional sums are required, 1972

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate - ContinuedEstimates - Concluded

- Votes payments on calendar year basis, 1972
- Wheat, two-price program, 193
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/75, ref to com, 108
 - Supplementary (A), 108
 - Supplementary (B), 300
 - Supplementary (C), 441-2
 - Supplementary (D), 586
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, ref to com, 555
 - Supplementary (A), 1409
 - Supplementary (B), 1824
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/77, ref to com, 1777
- Export Development bill C-9, 459-62, 464
 - Authorized capital, 459-60
 - Foreign investment insurance program, 460
 - Interest rate, 462, 464
 - Short-term and medium-term credit for small businesses, 461
- Feeds bill S-10, 1480, 1635-6
 - Commons amds, 1480, 1635-6
 - Penalty upon conviction for indictable offence, 1635
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute upon resignation from the Senate, 967-8
- Foreign Affairs
 - Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3
- Foreign Affairs Committee
 - Meetings during Senate sittings, 713, 2216
- Gasoline excise tax, 1100
- Immigration bill S-12, 166, 213-19
 - Haitians, 215
 - Illegal activities, 217
 - Ministerial power of discretion re indictment or summary conviction, 214
 - Persons remaining in Canada by force or stealth, 216-17
- Immigration Policy, Special Joint Committee
 - Terms of reference, 592
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 637-8
 - Press report on Senate committee action, 637-8
- Income Tax Conventions bill S-32, Commons amds, 2236
- Information Canada, inaccuracies in publications regarding Governors General and Prime Ministers, 1757
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration, Standing Senate Committee
 - Orders of the Day, notification of item standing in senator's name, 2123
- Italy, earthquake victims, Canadian government assistance to, 2111
- Labour, defiance by unions of court orders, 2237
- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Expenses (special) for fees and travelling of witnesses re examination of Bill S-19, 525, 526
 - Meetings during Senate sittings, 505, 542, 579, 713, 1438, 2216
- Legislation, difficulty in dealing with omnibus bills, 1775-6
- Loto Canada, 2103-04, 2110-11, 2246-7, 2268, 2269
- Manitoba Indian Brotherhood, meeting with senators, 291
- Medical Care bill C-68, 2359
- Money bills, Senate authority to amend, 1657
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, Commons amds, 2066-8
- National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee, 1126

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

National Finance Committee

Expenditures, supplementary budget, 1337

Meetings during adjournment, 2048

Meetings during Senate sittings, 684, 774, 795, 973

National lottery, method of proceeding with, 2103-04, 2110-11

Nova Scotia, destruction of forests and residential property by fire, 2179

Official languages, rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2381-6

O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2034-5

Olympic bill C-63, 1202-03

Deficit forecast, 1203

Identification of gold coins content, 1203

Minister's statement re possible withdrawal of bill, 1202

National context of Games, 1203

Permanent assets from capital investments, 1203

Regattas to be held at Kingston, 1203

Olympic Games, Flame Ceremony on Parliament Hill, 2419

Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 966

Newfoundland, request for use of RCMP during labour strike, 966

Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1459, 1468

Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 156-7

Advertising, 157

Regulations, authority for, 157

Royal patent, 156

Public bills, suspension of rules, motion withdrawn, 1292

Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1658-9

Regulations and other statutory instruments, agreements between federal government and provincial governments, 2103, 2110

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1208

Rules of the Senate

Delay in raising of point of order, 1111

Minister invited to Senate Chamber to explain bill, precedents, 217-19

Excerpt from The Modern Senate of Canada re, 218

Minister's statement of policy, senator's comment on or criticism of, 1202

Supply bills, 721-2, 735

Borrowing authority, 722

Excerpt from Bourinot, 4th edition, 722

Forms and Proceedings, 721-3, 735

Senate role in money bills, 723

Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1208, 1234

Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24, 1094

Saskatchewan, safety of Gardiner Dam, 2179

Senate

Adjournments, 712-13, 731

Motion rescinded, 731

Business, 31, 124-5, 152, 178-9, 221-2, 240, 289, 315, 325, 351, 380-1, 396, 482, 483-4, 505-06, 524, 540-1, 556, 579, 592-3, 594, 656-7, 740-1, 758, 796, 899, 923-4, 956, 988, 999, 1057, 1059, 1086, 1090, 1111, 1122, 1164-5, 1210, 1226, 1297, 1337, 1409, 1437-8, 1467-8, 1502-03, 1524, 1537-8, 1547-8, 1615, 1647-8, 1682, 1711, 1729, 1756-7, 1778, 1793, 1846, 1874-5, 1878-9, 2007-08, 2044, 2045-7, 2097-8, 2120-2, 2151-3, 2167, 2192, 2215, 2255, 2302, 2308, 2335, 2360

Emergency sittings, authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 328

Monday evening sittings, motion for, 1874-5, 1878-9, motion, as modified, agreed to, 1881

Wednesday sittings, hour of adjournment, 2097-8, motion rescinded, 2308, 2335

Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2203, 2204-05, 2206

Langlois, Hon. Leopold, Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate - Concluded

- Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, referral to Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service Committee, 1437, 1442
- Statutes of Canada (references to Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec) bill S-16, 274-7, 293
 - Ambiguous powers, citations re, 275-6
 - Appeal Court, 276
 - History of Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec, 274-5
- Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80, 1641-4, 1650
 - Borrowing through issue of treasury bills and raising of new funds through bonds, 1642
 - Capital markets, 1642, 1644
 - Draftmanship of legislation, 1650
 - Inclusion of borrowing authority in appropriation bills, 1642
 - Referral of bill to committee, question of, 1643, 1644
 - Requirement of recommendation of Governor General, 1643
- Supreme Court bill S-2, 155
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1820, 1832-6
 - Deportation of person other than Canadian citizen, landed immigrants or visitors, 1820
 - Expiry date of legislation, 1833
 - Ministerial powers, 1833
 - Reasonable grounds for minister's opinion, 1834
 - Source of information, disclosure of, 1835
 - Terrorism, 1832-3
- Transportation, disruption of airline services in Canada, 2237
- Western grain stabilization, Agriculture Committee authorized to study subject matter of Bill C-41, 1615

Lapointe, Hon. Renaude, Speaker of the Senate

- Alliance Security and Investigation, Ltd., bill S-26, Commons amdt, 1261
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1581, 1583, 1587
 - Motion (Hon. Mr. Molson) to amend bill, 1581, neg, 1581
 - Motion (Hon. Mr. Phillips) to amend bill, 1583, neg, 1587
- Appointment to office of Speaker of the Senate, 1
- Budget speech, accommodation for senators in Senate gallery of Commons, 1087
- Christmas decorations, Senate, 1476
- Condolences on death of brother, 382
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee, 160
- Feeds bill S-10, Commons amdts, 1467
- Felicitations on appointment to office of Speaker of the Senate, 22, 26, 32, 37, 51, 58, 62, 72, 81, 82-83, 111, 116, 120, 138-9, 144, 167-8, 174-5, 184-5
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, speech at unveiling of portrait of, 469
- Guidelines for Motions for Production of Papers, ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467
- Immigration Policy, Special Joint Committee, 564
 - Members, Commons, 627
- Immigration Policy, unauthorized press publication of confidential draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1285-6
- Investigations in Parliament, statement re question of privilege, 1478
- Library of Parliament, commemorative dollar for 100th anniversary, 1197
- MacKenzie, Hon. Norman, visitor to Senate, 1303
- National Arts Centre, reception for artists in Speaker's Chambers, 2003
- National Capital Region, Special Joint Committee, message from Commons, 1097
- Official Languages, report of Commissioner, 757, 2003
- Opening of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, communications from Governor General's Secretary, 1, 2
- Parliament Buildings, accommodation in East Block, 2185

Lapointe, Hon. Renaude, Speaker of the Senate - Concluded

Property qualification of members of Senate, Supplementary return tabled, 472

Prorogation of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, communication from Governor General's Secretary, 2452; statement re prorogation, 2454

Right to Information bill C-225, subject matter ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467

Rules of the Senate

Conflict of Interest, question of privilege re reference of Green Paper to Committee, Hon. Mr. Croll, 780

New edition, 1813

Participation in debate by senator not scheduled to speak, 560

Right of senator to adjourn debate, 560

Rulings and statements

Adjournment during pleasure or to reconvene at call of bell, 1111, 1112

Debate developing during Question Period, 1784

Debate on report without amdt and motion for third reading of bill, statement re, 2395, 2396

Legal statements, Speaker's authority to give decision on, 989

Motion (Senator Godfrey) re proposed regulations respecting attendance of senators, 988-9

Point of order re motion to amend committee report, 889-90

Point of order (Senator Greene) re omission from Minutes of Proceedings, 988-9

Point of order (Senator Greene) re resolution on regulations respecting attendance of senators, 952, 953

Point of order (Senator Molson) re motion presented and seconded by senator not present, 955

Ruling on senator being allowed to continue speech, 2365

Suspension of rule 95 re private bill, 1207, 1209

Senate

Chamber renovations, 1282-3

Painting of Royal Canadian Engineers, authority to photograph for Heritage Publishing Company, 46

Photographing of precincts and of senators for distribution to Canadian embassies, 253, 255

Senators, new, introduced in the Senate

Austin, Hon. Jacob, 1354

Barrow, Hon. Augustus Irvine, 1

Cottreau, Hon. Ernest George, 1

Lucier, Hon. Paul Henry, 1395

Smith, Hon. George Isaac, 1282

Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, ref to Joint Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 1437

Visitors

Alberta Parliamentarians, 1087

British Columbia, Mr. William Templeton, Victoria Legislative Assembly, 854

British Columbia Parliamentarians, 1087

Bulgaria, President of the General Assembly and His Excellency the Ambassador, 124

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Africa region delegates, 1087

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Secretary General Sir Robin Vanderfelt, 1966

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, former Speaker of the Senate, 1970

Icelandic Parliamentarians, 2184

Iraq, Mr. Elkadi Kw Kussai, 1742

Japan, delegation from House of Councillors, 2364

Japan, Mr. Yasunaga Ohara, 299

Polish Ambassador, His Excellency Jozef Czesak and Mrs. Czesak, 1442

Saskatchewan, Parliamentarians and wives, 262

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada

Administrator of the Government of Canada

Opening of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, Speech from the Throne, 2-7

Royal assent, 95, 220

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada - Concluded

Deputy Governor General

Prorogation of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, Speech from the Throne, 2543

Royal assent, 467, 581, 1095-6, 1476, 2096

Law Clerk and Parliamentary Counsel of the Senate

Appointment of Raymond du Plessis, Esq., Q.C., 2048-9

Law reform

Abortions, 17, 120-1, 188, 838

Drug convictions, 66

Family law, 16-17

Rape victims, 66

Law Reform Commission

Assets distributed through bankruptcy, 661

Benefits available to lower income groups, 660-1

Canadian Welfare article by Prof. Friedland on Law for the Laymen, 661

Composition of commission, 624, 625, 643, 644

Members of legal profession, 625

Part-time commissioners, 644

Quebec representation, 644

Family property and sharing of assets in event of marriage breakup, 624, 643

Judgment debtors, problems through ignorance of law, 661

Law educational system, 625

Legal profession statistics, Quebec and Ontario, 625

Objectives in field of criminal law, family law, code of sentencing and expropriation, etc., 624

Poor man's bankruptcy, 661

Studies of commission to date, 624

Speakers: Senators

Benidickson, W.M., 624-5, 660-1

Choquette, Lionel, 643-4

Law Reform Commission bill C-43. 1r, 583; 2r, 624-5, 643-4, 660-1; ref to com, 661; rep without amdt, 759; 3r, 768; r.a., 832

Lawson, Hon. Edward M.

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1582

Interest rates, 1582

Bank profits, 1582

Labour and industrial negotiations, 1582

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2139

Labour, failure of employers to file reports with AIB, 2139

Canadian economy

Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1326-30

BC strike legislation, 1326-7

Labour movement reaction, 1327-8

Supermarkets, 1327; Canada Safeway, 1327

Interest rates, 1327-8

Limit of increase for low-income workers, 1327

'Loopholes' alleged in program, 1329-30

Propane and butane industry employee-employer dispute and withdrawal of essential services, 1328

Trade Union Congress of Britain, statement of policy, 1328-9

US controls, 1329

Lawson, Hon. Edward M. - Concluded

- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2423-5
 - Bank robbery in BC, 'comedy of errors' re, 2424-5
 - Deterrent aspect, 2425
 - Parole violations, 2424
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 374-5
 - Healthways* magazine, excerpt from, 374
 - Misunderstandings by public re purpose of legislation, 374-5
 - Penalties for possession or trafficking of drugs, 375
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 824-5
 - Government policy in conciliation matters, 825
 - Losses to workers and producers from strike action, 825
 - Penalty provision, 824
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 859-61
 - British Columbia salary increases in governmental areas, 860
 - Expense and travel allowances, 860
 - Parliamentary restaurant charges vs tradesmen's free meals, 860
 - Press reaction to parliamentary increases, 859-60
 - Public servants in $60,000 bracket, 860, see 889
 - Retroactive clause, 860
 - Salary scale of judges, reporters, editors, teachers, tradesmen, 857-61
 - Working hours of senators, unjust criticisms of, 860

Leader of the Government in the Senate, Hon. Raymond J. Perrault, P.C.

Deputy, Hon. Léopold Langlois

Leader of the Opposition in the Senate, Hon. Jacques Flynn, P.C.

Deputy, Hon. Allister Grosart

Lefrançois, Hon. J. Eugène

- Boucher, Hon. William A., the late, 2251
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 11-12

Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Standing Senate Committee

- Criminal law, subject matter of Bill C-83, an act for the better protection of Canadian society against perpetrators of violent and other crime, ref to com, 1852-3
- Expenses, 213, 525-6, 795
- Meeting in camera, 1770-1
- Meetings during Senate sittings, 505, 542-3, 579, 713, 758, 2216
- Members, 96
- Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, ref to com, 774
 - Question of privilege re, 779-81
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, motion that financial compensation by federal government be considered by com, 954-5, 962-6; agreed, 966
- Reports
 - Conflict of interest (Members of Parliament), Green Paper on, 2278, 2303-06
 - Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, rep with amdt, 1867-8, 1884-6, 1893-1900
 - Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-83, 2119-20, 2127-8, 2163-6
 - Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, rep without amdt, 555
 - Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, rep with amdts, 969-71, 983, 1007-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9
 - Judges bill C-47, rep without amdt, 1066
 - Law Reform Commission bill C-43, rep without amdt, 759
 - Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001, rep without amdt, 1244

Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Standing Senate Committee - ConcludedReports - Concluded

- Parole system in Canada, report tabled, 10
- Representation bill C-36, rep without amdt, 443
- Statute Revision bill S-3, rep without amdt, 243
- Supreme Court bill S-2, rep without amdt, 243
- Territorial Lands bill S-20, rep with amdt, 579
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54
- Motion to approve decision of com, 512-14, 521-3, 543-54; m in amdt, 546-54; m as amended agreed, 554

Leger, Rt. Hon. Jules, His Excellency the Governor General of Canada

- Royal assent, 397, 2450

Liberal Caucus, invitation to members of Opposition, question, 1868Library of Parliament, Joint Committee

- Commemorative dollar for 100th anniversary, 1197
- Commercial use of picture of Parliamentary Library, question, 1729, 1764-5
- Members
 - Commons, 60
 - Senate, 109
- Report of Librarian, First Session of 30th Parliament, 12
- Report of Librarian (1974-75), 2062
- Research staff, 146, 516

Lieutenant governors superannuation

- Appointments after royal assent of bill, 1339
- Contribution rate, 1338
- Inadequacy of remuneration, 1338
- Lieutenant governors not included, 1338
- Members of Parliament retired to office of lieutenant governor, 1339
- Pension at 65 years of age or upon becoming disabled, 1338
- Speakers: Senators
 - Bourget, Maurice, 1337-8, 1339-40
 - Carter, Chesley W., 1339
 - Choquette, Lionel, 1340
 - Flynn, Jacques, 1338-9

Lieutenant Governors Superannuation bill C-23. 1r, 1304; 2r, 1337-40; ref to com, 1340; rep without amdt but with observations, 1369; 3r, 1370; r.a., 1476Loan companies

- Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies, 47, 100-03, 107, 160, 180, 314

Loto Canada, 2160-3, 2168-9, 2191, 2234-5, 2267-9

- Chairman of Board of Directors, 2234
- Crediting of revenues to National Lottery Account and distribution to:
 - Olympic Games deficit, 2234, 2235
 - Physical Fitness, Amateur Sports and Recreation programs, 2234
 - Provincial governments, 2234
- Establishment of Loto Canada by supplementary estimate, question of, 2234-5
 - Federal-provincial consultations, 2235
 - Restriction to 13 draws, 2234
 - Shares, government control, 2234
 - Tabling of annual report, 2234
 - Variations in payments requiring item in estimates, 2234

Lotteries

Loto Canada, 2160-3, 2168-9, 2191, 2234-5, 2267-9

See National lottery, 2163, 2168-9, 2191, 2234-5, 2267-9

Lucier, Hon. Paul Henry

Introduced in the Senate (Nov. 12/75), 1395

Macdonald, Hon. John M., Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 138-42

Agricultural Products Cooperative Marketing bill C-21, 1631

Deficiencies in drafting of legislation, 1631

Agricultural Stabilization bill C-50, 1192-4

Controlled production, 1193

Production costs, 1192-3

Production to alleviate world hunger, 1193

Stop loss level, 1193

Support price of 90% over 5 years, 1192

Top loading, 1193-4

Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 225

Anti-Inflation program, National Defence cutbacks in Nova Scotia, 1683, 1716

Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 406-07

Bond issue by government, depreciation in value, 140

Canada Pension Plan bill C-22, 277-8

Applications and payments, retroactive clause, 277-8

Assignment or attachment of benefits, 278

Religious sects, exemption for, 278

CNR services, Atlantic Provinces, 1924, 1976

Christian Evangelical Centre of Canada, action of National Revenue Department re, 2354-6

Citizenship bill C-20, 2092-4, 2323

Armed forces personnel, 2093

Land Holding Disclosure Act, NS and Cape Breton Island, 2323

Language requirement, 2093

Oath of allegiance and oath of citizenship, 2094

Reinstatement of citizenship, 2093

Residency requirement, 2093

Students, 2093

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2040-1

Compensation to be not more than 100% disability pension, 2041

Three months limitation, 2041

Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1345

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.2) C-84, 2410-11

British law, 2410

Deterrent aspect, 2410-11

Medical means as replacement for hanging, 2411

Montreal statistics on murders, 2411

Victims of murder, 2411

Explosives bill S-17, 271-2

Authorized explosives, 271

Factories licensed to manufacture explosives, 271

Offences, 272

Macdonald, Hon. John M., Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate - Continued

- Farm Credit bill C-34, 796-7, 864, 880
 - Age limit, 797, 880
 - Availability of farm land, 797
 - Financial obligation of borrowers, 797
 - Loan statistics, 795
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 138-9
- Inflation, 140-1
 - Government 'restraints', 141
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 833-5
 - Acts deemed traitorous or cowardly exacting death penalty, 834
 - Canadian Catholic Conference, statement issued by, 835
 - Deterrent aspect, 834-5
 - National security, 834
 - Policemen and prison guards, 835
 - Theology and the Death Penalty*, paper issued by Task Force for Abolition of Capital Punishment, 835
 - Violence in administration of justice, 835
- National Housing bill (No.2) C-77, 1676, 1678, 1679, 1680
 - Appraisal of housing costs in various areas, 1678
 - Cooperatives, 1679
 - House price limits, 1676
 - Servicing of land, 1679
- Newfoundland
 - Anniversary of entry into Confederation, 139
 - Transportation, 139-40
 - Inter-city passenger routes, Canadian Press article re, 139-40
 - North Sydney-Cape Breton-Port aux Basques, 139
 - Passenger trains, eastern Canada, 140
- Nova Scotia
 - Destruction of forests and residential property by fire, 2178-9
 - Springhill fire disaster, federal aid for community, 1242
 - Storm damage, 136
- Olympic bill C-63, 1198-1200
 - Deficit forecast, 1199
 - Federal government responsibility for Games, 1199-1200
 - Profit potential from sale of gold coins, 1199
 - Programs of government assistance for Games, 1199
 - Security costs, 1199
 - Trade marks and copyrights, 1199
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1429, 1430, 1431
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 157
- Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70, 1245
 - Authority of Chairman to appoint outside arbitrator, 1245
 - Backlog of work of board, 1245
 - Term of office of board members, 1245
- Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) bill C-4, 268-9
- Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) Amendment bill C-86, 1910-11
- Supreme Court bill S-2, 162
 - Residence requirement for judges, registrars and deputy registrars, 162

Macdonald, Hon. John M., Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate - Concluded

Transportation

BNA Act provisions relating to transportation, 2196-8

Newfoundland ferry service, 2197-8

Newfoundland and Ontario Steamship Ltd., 2198

Shipping, charter rates, 2198

Prince Edward Island, 2196-7

CNR facilities, deterioration of, 2197

Strikes and unemployment, 2197-8

Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 942-3

Canadian Wheat Board report, excerpt from, 943

Lack of escalator clause, 943

Subsidy for Spring and Durum wheat, 943

Unemployment, 141

Working poor, 141

Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1689-90, 1698, 1701-02, 1703, 1704

Application forms for UI, 1703

Failure of government in economic policies, 1689

Minimum benefit, 1702

Notice of interview, 1702

Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1689-90, 1698

Prison or institutional inmates, 1703

Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C. (Deceased May 28/76)

Tributes, 2176-7

Macnaughton, Hon. Alan A., P.C.

Army Benevolent Fund bill C-17, 303-04

Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Florida meeting, 2221-2, 2224-33

Agenda, 2224

Canada-US relations, 2222

Canadian Centennial coins, presentation to US delegates, 2222

Committee I, 2224-7

Canadian cultural legislation and regulations, 2227

Eastport, 2226

Flathead River, 2225-6

Garrison Diversion project, 2225

Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, 2225

Law of the Sea, 2226-7

Richelieu-Lake Champlain, 2225

Skagit, 2226

Water boundaries, 2226

West Coast pollution, 2226

Committee II, 2224, 2227-30

Anti-inflation program, 2228

Canada-US automotive agreement, 2227-8

Canadian cultural legislation and regulations, 2229-30

Controls on trade with Cuba, 2229

Extension to Canada of US restrictions on political contributions, 2230

Foreign Investment Review Act, 2229

Multilateral trade negotiations, 2230

Saskatchewan takeover of potash companies, 2228-9

Trans-Border economic issues, 2227

US dumping charges and countervailing duties, 2228

Committee III, 2222, 2224-5, 2230-2

Agriculture, 2232

Energy, 2222, 2230-2

Plenary meeting, 2232

Macnaughton, Hon. Alan A., P.C. - Continued

- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Quebec meeting, 1137-40, 1145-55
 - Committees and members, 1138
 - Delegates, 1138
 - Designation of meeting places and timetables, 1138
 - Excerpt from speech by Prime Minister Trudeau, 1140
 - Excerpt from speech by US Deputy Secretary of State, 1140
 - Reform of Canadian section of Group, 1137-40
 - Trans-border problems, 1139
 - US Congress contacts, importance of, 1139-40
- Canadian textile problems, 2045, 2055-6
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2280-1
 - Real Property, evidence of Canadian Bar Association, 2280-1
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2418-19
 - Deterrent aspect, 2418
 - Human error in judgment, 2418
 - Montreal Gazette* article re capital punishment, 2418
 - Taking of life, question of right re, 2418
- Environmental Contaminants bill C-25, 1371-2
 - Chemical contamination from industry, 1372
 - Federal-provincial consultations, 1372
 - Major provisions of bill, 1371-2
- Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 499-501
 - Air transportation, 500
 - Articles for handicapped persons, 500, 501
 - Building materials and water distribution equipment, 500, 501
 - Clothing and footwear, 499, 501
 - Day care centers, 501
 - Liquor, wine, tobacco, 500
 - Transportation equipment, 500, 501
 - Vehicles of high-energy-consuming category, 500
- Excise Tax bill C-66, 1267-71, 1278
 - Air transportation, 1268, 1271
 - Building insulation materials, 1268
 - Businesses and persons eligible for refund, 1267-8
 - Deficit resulting from single oil price policy, 1269
 - Gasoline for personal use and for travel to and from place of business, 1267, 1268, 1269
 - Income tax refunds, 1270-1
 - Method for filing of claims and administration of refunds, 1270
 - Records of gasoline purchases, 1268
 - Wines, 1268
- International Air Transport Association bill S-18, 301-03
- Japan, delegation from House of Councillors, visitors to Senate, 2364
- Martin, Hon. Paul, resignation from the Senate, 210
- National Commercial Bank of Canada bill S-24, 1057
- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77 (Chairman, Committee of the Whole), 1673-81
- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37, 1038-40
 - Courts of criminal jurisdiction, 1040
 - Detainment, seizure or forfeiture of ships and aircraft, 1039-40
 - Dumping by aircraft over land, 1040
 - Exceptional circumstances involving safety of human life, 1039
 - London Convention on ocean dumping control, 1038-9
 - Oslo Convention, 1039

Macnaughton, Hon. Alan A., P.C. - Concluded

- Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37 - Concluded
 - Penalties for contravention of act, 1039
 - Permits for dumping, 1039
 - Times, rates of disposal, etc., compatible with protection of marine environment, 1039
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 981-2
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1601
 - Commercial production deadline, 1601
 - Grants, repayable grants, loan guarantees, 1601
 - Program statistics, 1601
- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, (Chairman of Committee of the Whole), 2203-07
- Speaker pro tem, 239
- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69 (Chairman, Committee of the Whole), 1695-1706

Manitoba

- Indian Brotherhood, meeting with senators, 290-1
- Request to appear before Senate committee, 315-16

Manning, Hon. Ernest C., P.C.

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 68-71
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1579
- Canadian economy
 - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1303, 1349-53
 - Credibility of government program, question of, 1350-1
 - Demands vs productivity, 1350
 - Government expenditures, federal and provincial, 1351-2
 - Bilingualism program, 1352
 - Olympic entertainment, 1352
 - Salaries of top-level officials, 1352
 - Studies of toilet facilities, offices, industrial plants, etc., 1352
 - Translation services, 1352
 - Work force, 1352
 - Government role in inflationary trend, 1350
 - Psychological reactions to controls, 1350, 1352-3
 - Solving of inflation by
 - Lessening of external pressures involving trading partners, 1353
 - Productivity, 1353
 - Self-discipline, 1353
 - Temporary aspect of controls, 1350
 - Unsatisfactory results of wage and price controls, 1351; US publication re, 1351
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 530-1
 - Distinction between punishment for murders of policemen and others, 529
 - Royal prerogative, 529-30
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2413-15
 - Alternatives to death by hanging, 2414
 - Deterrent aspect, 2415
 - Permissive society, 2414
 - Premeditated murder, 2414
 - Principle of justice, abandonment of, 2414
 - Prison term, 2414
 - Responsibility of members of Parliament, 2414
 - Sanctity of human life, 2414
- Drury, Hon. Charles Mills, resignation offer and rejection by Prime Minister, 1891

Manning, Hon, Ernest C., P.C. - Continued

- Economic conditions and prospects, 69-71
 - Arab nations monopoly in oil industry, 69-70
 - Athabasca Tar Sands and Mackenzie River pipeline, 70-71
 - Canada-US trade relations, 70
 - Commodity price determination, 69; transportation costs, 70
 - Energy resources and establishment of Petro-Canada, 69
 - Financial Times* of Canada editorial, 69
 - Oil prices, 69-70, 71
- Energy
 - Government policy re Canadian ownership of companies developing oil and gas on crown lands, 2159-60, 2210
- Excise Tax and Excise bill C-40, 573
 - Unlicensed wholesalers, 573
- Federal-provincial relations, dispute re resource revenue taxation, inquiry withdrawn, 660
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 405-06, 1014-15, 1016, 1037-8
 - Application for withdrawal of criminal record, 1038
 - Drug control vs gun control, 1015
 - Drug subculture, dangers to youth, 1016
 - 'Give', definition of, 1015, 1016
 - Parole or pardon, 1038
 - Penalty for trafficking, 1015
- Gasoline excise tax, 1112
- Immigration, presence in Canada of Xaviera Hollander and Gerda Munsinger, 1013
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 630-4
 - Oil industry, 631-2
 - Alberta oil royalties, 632
 - Natural Resources Transfer Agreements, 632, 633
 - Political price determination, 631-2
 - Syncrude project, 633-4
- Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, 1422
 - Alberta royalties on resources, 1422
 - Interest and dividends credit for man and wife, 1422
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1931-3, 2326-7, 2328
 - Broadcasting, 1932, 2326, 2327, 2328
 - Canada-US relations, 1932
 - Canada-US treaty negotiations, question of, 1933
 - Canadian ownership of and advertising in periodicals, percentage stipulations, 1932
 - Canadian publication, definition of, 2326
 - MD of Canada*, 1933
 - Time*, 1932
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 744
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to Argentina, 1975, 2142
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India, 1859-60, 1869, 1975
- Olympic bill C-63, 1201, 1202
 - Regional aspect of Games location, 1201
 - Western attitude towards potential deficit, 1201
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 568-9, 965-6
 - Alberta, 965, 966
 - British Columbia, 965
 - Federal-provincial negotiations re RCMP, 569, 965
 - Newfoundland, request for use of RCMP during labour strike, 965-6
 - Option of provinces, 965
 - Police forces in metropolitan centers, 966

Manning, Hon, Ernest C., P.C. - Concluded

Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 902-06, 907

Consumer protection, 903

Control of profits to insure reinvestment in exploration and development, 905-06

Crude oil prices, 903, 904

Dwindling of irreplaceable resources, 903

Elements creating instability and uncertainty in oil exploration, 904-05

Exchange of energy between US and Canada in certain regions, 905

Federal-provincial relations and national unity in solving of problems, 903-04

Political price fixing, 902-06

Tax on exports to US, 903

Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1410

Senate

Monday evening sittings, question of, 1877-8

Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 875-8

Commons members, suggestion for graduated increase on re-election, 875

Comparison with news editors, entertainers, athletes, etc., 877

Cost of living index and industrial composite index, 877-8

Inflationary trends and restraints, 876-7

Leadership of members of Parliament in crisis of wage demands and of prices, 877

Press reaction and unjustified reports to proposed salary increases, 876

Public servants in $60,000 bracket, 876, see 889

Senators, members of Commons, provincial premiers, comparison of workload and remuneration, 878

Service to the public, primary importance of, 876

Suggestion for automatic fixed-dollar salary increase, 875, 876, 878

Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2205

Televising of committee proceedings, 548

Trade

Balance of payments, deficit, 877

Inflationary trends affecting export markets, 877

Transportation, 70

United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants, 1166

West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 80-81

Termination date of agreement, 80-81

Manpower and Immigration Department

Manpower Division, motion to authorize com to examine and report on estimates for, 400-01, 419-20; agreed, 420

Questions of National Finance Committee, 401

Responsibilities and functions of Manpower Division, 400-01

West Germany economic development, report on, 419-20; unemployment and inflation plans re, 419

Marine safety

Air and sea rescue, request for location of unit in Newfoundland, 1860

British Columbia fisheries, 1814-15, 1860

Maritimes

See Atlantic provinces and names of individual provinces

- Marriage Law Exemption (Richard Fritz and Marianne Strass) bill C-1001. 1r, 1233; 2r, 1233-4; ref to com, 1234; suspension of rule 95, 1234-5; rep without amdt, 1244; 3r, 1251-2, 1257-9; r.a., 1281
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., former Leader of the Government in the Senate (Resigned Oct. 30/74)
Farewell speech to Parliament on appointment to office of High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, 207-08
Tributes, 208-12
- Martland, Hon. Ronald, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court
Deputy Administrator of the Government of Canada, 1-2
- Matheson, Hon. Alexander W., the late, former Premier of Prince Edward Island, 1861-3
- McDonald, Hon. A. Hamilton
Aeronautics bill S-34, 2125
Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1580-1
Food prices, 1587
Termination clause, constitutionality of, 1580-1
Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1986
Boucher, Hon. William A., the late, 2251
Canadian economy
Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1326
Citizenship bill C-20, 2283-4
Alien ownership of land, Saskatchewan, 2283, 2284
Powers of Lieutenant Governor in Council, 2283
Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2041-2
Evaders and escapees, 2042
Three months' limitation, 2042
Widows' allowances, 2042
Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2427-8
Defensive attitude of society, 2428
Deterrent aspect, 2428
Escapees from Manitoba institution and aftermath of crime, 2428
"Santa Claus" murders, 2428
Electoral Boundaries Readjustment (Bruce) bill C-228, 601
Estimates
Lockheed long-range patrol aircraft, 1986
Farm Credit bill C-34, 788-91, 806-07, 863, 864
Age limit, 788, 789, 807, 863
Agriculture investments, 790
Availability of farm land, 806-07
Capital fund of corporation, 789, 790, 807
Full-time and part-time farming, 789
Interest rate, 789, 791
Loans in relation to mortgage capacity or productivity of real estate, 789, 790-1
Maximum loan, 788
Repayment record, 788
Security, 791
Statistics on persons involved in farming, 864
Western farming, 864
Feeds bill S-10, 158-9
Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 81

McDonald, Hon. A. Hamilton - Continued

- Fire Losses Replacement Account bill C-18, 338
 - Yukon and Northwest Territories, insurable properties and premiums, 338
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1019, 1026
 - Advertising of drugs by means of give-away, 1019
 - 'Give', definition of, 1019
- Indian Oil and Gas bill C-15, 337-8, 352-3
 - Alberta oil, royalties to Indian Bands, 337-8
 - Consultation with Indian Bands, 362
 - Oil prices and increased revenue from 337-8
- Interparliamentary conferences, delegations to, 1490
 - Interparliamentary Advisory Committee to study and rule on, 1490, 1494
- Marine safety, British Columbia fisheries, 1815, 1860
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1489-94
 - Armed forces in Europe, 1489-93
 - Canadian troops, 1491-2, 1493; newspaper article re, 1493
 - Central Europe and Warsaw Pact countries, 1491
 - Equipment statistics, various countries, 1490-2; aircraft, Lockheed P-3 Orion, 1492, tanks, Leopard and Centurion, 1492, 1494
 - Nuclear power, 1490-1
 - Reserves, 1494
 - US military bases in Spain, 1493
 - Canada's defence policy, 1493
 - Canadian delegation, 1490
 - Energy resources, protection of, 1492-3
- North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 342-7
 - Canadian delegation, 344
 - Canadian troops in Lahr and Baden, and equipment for, 345-6
 - Defence of the Western European Union, 348
 - Mutual and balanced force reductions, 344-5
 - NATO, 342-5
 - Oil crisis, 344
 - Problems in Cyprus, Greece, Turkey and Middle East, 345
 - Replacement of aircraft, 345
 - USSR maritime forces, 345
 - USSR territorial gains as result of World War II, 342-3
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, 595-7, 621-2
 - Corporate farms, partnerships, cooperatives or farming enterprise, 596
 - Elevator companies, question of commission for, 596
 - Increase in advance payment to $15,000, 595
 - Investment of cash advance payments, 622
 - Option to deliver on quota system or offboard sales, 596
- Rules of the Senate
 - Reference of items to National Finance Committee, 1109
 - Televising of committee proceedings, 553-4
- Transportation
 - BNA Act provisions re transportation, 2220, 2221, 2333-4
- Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 1089
- West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 81-82
 - Basic hourly rate for grain handlers, 82; disparity in labour rates, 82
 - Farmers' payments for grain, 82
 - Government intervention in dispute and effects of, 82
 - Loss of working days through conciliation delays, 81-82

McDonald, Hon. A. Hamilton - Concluded

- Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1723-6, 1737-8, 1766
 - Administration of act, 1725, 1737
 - Advisory committee, 1725
 - Branch offices, question of, 1737
 - Crop insurance, 1737
 - Depreciation costs, 1737
 - Eligibility to participate, 1724-5
 - Instability of agricultural income, 1723
 - Payments vs contributions, 1723-4
 - Production costs, 1724
 - Retirement of farmer or sale of operation, 1724, 1725
 - Tax reductions and payments, 1724, 1726
 - Voluntary participation in plan, 1724
- Wheat Board bill (No. 2) C-88, 2315-17, 2333
 - Advisory committee
 - Election of new committee, 2316
 - Members, 2315, 2316
 - Payments to members, 2316
 - Costs of pooling account, 2316
 - Malting barley, 2315-16, 2333
 - Provision for further pools by order in council, 2317

McElman, Hon. Charles

- Broadcasting, appearance of Gerda Munsinger on CBC television program, 1618, 1619
- Crime and violence, 1646-7
 - Motion that subject matter be ref to Health, Welfare and Science Committee, 1647
 - Terms of reference of proposed committee, question of, 1647
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 688-92
 - Administration of law, objections of sponsor of bill, 688-9
 - Clemency recommendation, 688
 - Constitutionality of bill, question of, 688
 - Federal government process of enacting law, 691-2
 - Fredericton meeting of students at University of NB, 690
 - Liberal Party convention decision on capital punishment, 689
 - Miscarriage of justice, 691
 - Moncton meeting of parliamentarians, law enforcement officers and others, 689-90
 - Murders of recent date of police officers, 689
 - Pre-sentence report, 691
 - Responsibility of jury, 690-1
 - Royal prerogative of mercy, 690
 - Treason and sea piracy, 688
 - US judicial system, 691, 692; Canadian Press report published in Saint John Telegraph Journal, 692
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute on occasion of resignation from the Senate, 968
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1077
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1159-61, 1169-70
 - Cost-sharing of insecticide spraying, 1159-60
 - Cropping of affected areas, 1161
 - Damaging side effects of DDT and other chemicals, 1160
 - Federal-responsibility, 1160-1
 - Maple and Birch 'dieback', 1160
 - New Brunswick dependence on forest industry, 1158
 - Provincial efforts to combat problem, 1169-70

McElman, Hon. Charles - Concluded

- Income tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1938-46
 - Bill C-118 (1965), excerpts from debate on, 1938-9, 1940, 1943
 - Broadcasting, 1944
 - Bellingham station, 1944-5
 - Canadian advertising on US stations, expenditures on, 1944
 - Canada-US relations, 1944-5
 - Canadian ownership of and advertising in periodicals, percentage stipulations, 1939
 - Canadian Periodical Publishers' Association*, letter from, 1944
 - 'Dumping' of textiles in Sherbrooke, Quebec, by American-owned subsidiary, 1942
 - O'Leary Royal Commission, excerpt from report, 1939-40
 - Statements by
 - Hon. Grattan O'Leary, 1939-41
 - Hon. Salter Hayden, 1941-2
 - Right Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, 1938-9
 - Telegraph-Journal*, St. John, NB, article re Canada-US border TV war, 1945
 - Time Canada and Reader's Digest*, 1938-9, 1942, 1943
 - Advertising rates to Canadian advertisers, 1943
 - Dumping of cost-free content, 1943
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 742, 743-4
- Senate business, 1916
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509, 510-11, 512, 513, 543-6

McGrand, Hon. Fred A.

- Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, 1632-3
 - Artificial insemination centres, 1632-3
 - Compensation for diseased animals, 1632
 - Export health certification, 1632, 1633
 - Foreign meats arriving in Canadian waters, 1633
 - Garbage feeding, 1633
 - Maintenance of deadyards and rendering plants, 1632
 - Quarantine, 1634
 - Transportation and care of animals, 1633
 - Tuberculosis, brucellosis, hog cholera, 1632
- Crime and violence, special Senate committee proposed, 916-22
 - Abortion, 917
 - Anatomy of Human Aggression*, by Eric Fromm, 917
 - Capital punishment, 917
 - Child abuse, 918-19
 - Murderers who have suffered parental cruelty, 918
 - UK investigations, 918
 - Crime and Punishment as ritual of life*, excerpt from article by Dr. Carl Menninger, 920
 - Enuresis, Fire Setting and Cruelty to Animals: a Triad Predictive of Adult Crime*, 919
 - Guns, freedom of purchase, 920-1
 - Human Aggression*, by Dr. Anthony Storr, 917
 - 'Jungle made by humans for humans', 917
 - New Zealand, low crime rate, 920
 - Penal system failure, 921
 - Physical punishment and loss of freedom, 917-18
 - Psychopathic Personality, Sociopathic Personality and Character Neurosis, excerpt from address by Prof. James McHorter, 919-20
 - Rehabilitation of convicted murderers, 921
 - Religious sects in pacifist role, 917
 - Society's ignorance of causes of crime, 921
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 404-05

McGrand, Hon. Fred A. - Concluded

- Quarantine bill S-31, 1778-80
 - Cleansing or removal of infested or contaminated conveyance, 1779
 - Detention by quarantine officer or permission to proceed, 1779
 - Referral of detention order to superior court judge, 1779
 - Extension of provisions to include other dangerous diseases, 1779
 - Medical examination, 1779-80

McIlraith, Hon. George J., P.C.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1577
 - Termination clause, 1577
- British North America Acts 1867 to 1975 bill C-3, 1054
 - Appointment of senators from NWT and Yukon, 1054
 - Residence requirement, 1054
- Canada-United States relations, 228-9
- Canadian Film Industry, academy award to Crawley Films Ltd., of Ottawa, 2003
- Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1685
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2430, 2433-6, 2439
 - Commutations, 2434
 - Deterrent aspect, 2434-5
 - Excerpt from speech of Opposition leader, 2434
 - First degree murder, 2435
 - Responsibility of members of Parliament to electors, 2435, 2439
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 880-4, 885
 - Motion to amend com rep, 880-2, 883
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1011, 1015-16, 1019, 1020, 1021, 1023-5, 1026, 1027
 - Conditional or unconditional pardon, 1023-4
 - Drug trials cited, 1024, 1026, 1027
 - 'Give', and 'traffic', definition of, 1015, 1020, 1024-5, 1027
 - Legal and illegal distribution of drugs, 1020
 - Onus of proof for possession or trafficking, 1011
 - Penalty, 1015, 1023
 - Possession of cannabis, trafficking, importing or exporting, 1023
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1925-9
 - Broadcasting, 1928
 - Bellingham station, 1928
 - Canadian advertising in US market, 1928
 - Reciprocal agreements between governments, 1928
 - Canadian ownership of and advertising in periodicals, percentage stipulations, 1926, 1927
 - Freedom of the press, interference with, 1927
 - MD of Canada*, 1926
 - 'Substantially the same as', question of interpretation of phrase, 1926-7
 - Excerpt from Commons Debates re, 1927
 - Time and Reader's Digest*, 1927
- National Capital Region, proposed study by joint committee, 229
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 742, 743-4
 - Forgiveness provision for municipalities, 744
 - Housing starts, decrease in, 742
 - New homes, mortgage provisions, 743
 - Non-profit and cooperative housing, 743
 - Rentals, 743
 - Sewage treatment grants, 743-4
 - Statutory limits for making and insuring loans, 744

McIlraith, Hon. George J., P.C. - Concluded

- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1667-9, 1671, 1672-3
 - Assisted home ownership restrictions, 1668
 - Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., 1669
 - Grants to municipalities, 1669
 - Housing target, 1673
 - Interest-free loans, 1668
 - Investment in public and private residential construction, annual, 1668
 - Servicing of land, 1668-9
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 963-5
 - Coordination and cooperation of various police forces, 964
 - Financial obligation of province to pay for provincial force, 964
 - Newfoundland, request of use of RCMP during labour problems, 965
 - RCMP work in matters under federal jurisdiction, 964-5
- Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation bill C-38, 464-5, 466
 - Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet, 465, 466; responsibilities, 466
 - Privy Council functions, 465
- Rules of the Senate
 - Committee reports, referral back to com or to Committee of the Whole for reconsideration 883-4
 - Precedents cited in excerpts from Senate Journals, 883
- Rules of the Senate, report of Committee on Standing Rules and Orders, 1360-3, 1423, 1424, 1425, 1426, 1464
 - Adoption of report, motion for, 1360
 - Forms and proceedings, 1360
 - Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 1423, 1424, 1426
 - Parliamentary reform, 1360
 - Powers and duties of committees, 1423-4
 - Principle of bill, debating of at second reading, 1361, 1363
 - Printing of rules as appendix to current debate, 1361
 - 'Question' or 'matter', definition of, 1361, 1363
 - Quotations of speeches made in Commons, 1360, 1464
 - Standing Rules and Orders Committee, 1424
 - Terms of reference of committees, 1361-2
 - Unanimous consent, 1362
- Senate business, 221, 222
- Speaker pro tem, 833
- West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 730

Medical care

- Ceiling on federal payments, 2317-18, 2338, 2340-1, 2365, 2367, 2369-70, 2372-3
- Costs (1975), 2369; provincial per capital costs, 2370-1
- Excerpt from speeches of Hon. Mr. MacEachen (1966), 2339-40
- Expenditures, anti-inflation program effect on, 2365
- Federal-provincial conferences, 2342-3, 2367, 2373
- Immigration of physicians, 2367
- New Brunswick refusal to participate in program, 2357
- Nursing homes, 2358-9, 2366, 2374; NB, 2358-9
- Physicians' fees, 2372
- Provincial percentage increases (1975-76), 2368
- Provincial reactions to legislation, 2341-2
- Provincial responsibilities, 2365
- Psychiatrists and physiotherapists, 2368-9
- Quebec, 2358-9, 2370
- Seat belts vs accidents and medical care, 2367-8
- Statement of Hon. Mr. Macnaughton, 2341

Medical care - Concluded

Statement of Hon. Mr. Robarts (1966), 2339
 Statistics on accidents and medical care, 2368
 Victoria conference of provincial health ministers, 2342

Speakers: Senators

Burchill, G. Percival, 2358-9
 Denis, Azellus, 2317-18
 Flynn, Jacques, 2359
 Grosart, Allister, 2359
 Langlois, Leopold, 2359
 Phillips, Orville H., 2357-8
 Smith, G. I., 2338-44
 Sullivan, Joseph A., 2339

also

Lalonde, Hon. Marc, Minister of Health and Welfare, 2236-75

Medical Care bill C-68. 1r, 2307; 2r, 2317-18, 2338-44, 2356-9, 2364-6; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Hon. Alan A. Macnaughton in the Chair, Hon. Marc Lalonde, Minister of Health and Welfare, taking part in debate, 2366-75; rep without amdt, 2375; 3r, 2378; r.a., 2450

Meighen, Rt. Hon. Arthur, the late, question re removal of portrait from Commons corridor, 53, 564

Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, 373, 573-4, 580, 774, 779-81

Ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 774

Question of privilege re, 779-81

Mexico, communique of Parliamentary delegation to Canada, 1874, 1887-8

Delegation members, Mexico and Canada, 1887-8

Economic Rights and Duties of States, Charter of, 1887

Tour agenda, 1887

Trade negotiations, 1887

Two hundred mile economic zone ('Patrimonial Sea'), 1887

Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians, 775-7, 852-3, 930-3

Agriculture, 931, 932

Banff School of Advanced Management, visits to other countries, 930-1

Canadians retired in Mexico, 776-7

Exchange of cultural exhibitions, 776-7

Exchange of visits of parliamentarians and businessmen, 932-3

Housing, 931

Industrial development, 931, 932

Influence in international policies, 775

Joint ministerial meetings, Canada-Mexico, 775

Political system, 776, 853

Chamber of Deputies, 776

Institutional Revolutionary Party and other parties, 776

President, 776

Seasonal agricultural workers in Canada, 777

Standard of living, Canada-Mexico, 775

Tariff preferences for developing countries, 852

Tourism, 853, 931-2

Trade, Canada-Mexico, 776-7, 852-3

Mexico, visit of Canadian Parliamentarians - Concluded

Women, status of

- Chamber of Deputies, 776
- Equality before law and in all aspects of life, legislation for, 777
- National programs for family planning, etc., 777
- Social improvement, 777

Speakers: Senators

- Cameron, Donald, 930-3
- Fergusson, Muriel McQueen, 775-7
- Flynn, Jacques, 852-3

Michaud, Hon. Herve J.

- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 580-1
 - Deterrent aspect, 581
 - Organized crime society, 581
 - Television portrayals of violence, 580-1
- Crop insurance programs, 1622-3
 - Maritimes crop insurance, 1622-3
 - Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, 1622
 - Spot loss insurance, 1622-3
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 803-05
 - Agricultural production, worldwide need, 803-04
 - French language literature in regard to legislation, 805
 - Full-time and part-time farmers, 803
 - Security requirements, 804
 - Small farms development, 804-05
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1160
 - Christmas tree industry, 1169
 - Smallholdings and farmers' woodlots, 1169
 - Statistics on NB forestry ownership, 1169
- New Brunswick economic conditions, 1750-4
 - Acadian heritage, 1753-4
 - Statement of Antonine Maillet, authoress, 1754
 - Agricultural problems, 1751
 - Agronomy students at Laval and Moncton Universities, 1753
 - Inquiry of Senate Agriculture Committee, 1751
 - Meeting of Senate Agriculture Committee and results of, 1753
 - Prospects for young people in farming profession, 1752
 - Statements of Prime Minister and of Agriculture Minister re, 1751
 - Bilingualism, lack of, 1752
 - Globe and Mail* article, 'NB Credit Unions show different approach of French and English', 1752
 - Improvement project in northeastern NB, Evangeline article re, 1753
 - Memramcook Institute as training centre, recommendation re, 1752
 - RC clergy declaration in support of northeast area, 1750-1
- Small Farms Development Program
 - Farm management consultants, 2079
 - Number of loans approved for provinces, 1197-8, 1213

Migratory bird sanctuaries

- Warden services for sanctuaries in the Maritime provinces, contracts for, 279

Ministers of House of Commons taking part in Senate proceedings

- Andras, Hon. Robert K., Minister of Manpower and Immigration
 - Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1695-1706
- Danson, Hon. Barnett, P.C., Minister of State for Urban Affairs
 - National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 748-57
 - National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1673-81
- Lalonde, Hon. Marc, Minister of Health and Welfare
 - Medical Care bill C-68, 2366-75

Molgat, Hon. Gildas L.

- Electoral Boundaries Readjustment bill C-370, 526-8, 536-7
 - Commissions, members and powers of, 526-7, 536-7
 - Geographic considerations in establishing constituencies, 527, 536
 - Rural and northern constituencies, 527
- Estimates, year ending Mar.31/77, 2190
- Fort-Falls Bridge Authority bill C-367, 851-2
 - Agreement between governments of US and Canada for reconstruction of bridge, 851-2
 - Date of commencement, 851
- Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1849-52
 - Auto pact, 1849
 - Communist world contracts, 1850
 - Economic blocs, development throughout world, 1850
 - Economic Council of Canada report, 1850, 1851
 - Imports, competition to Canadian products, 1850
 - Multi-national corporations, 1850
 - Textile and other manufacturing, problems of, 1851-2
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 234-8
 - Arab-Israeli conflict, 236
 - Briefing of delegates, 237
 - Organizational meetings on energy, iron and steel, education, environment and pollution, 235
 - Population trends and economic and social development, 235-6, 237
 - Resolutions presented, 235-6
 - UN Conference on World Population, 236
- New Brunswick economic conditions, 2033
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No.2) C-53, 1156-7, 1167-8
 - Damp or tough grain, 1156
 - Date of coming into force, 1157
 - Limitation to wheat, oats and barley, 1167
 - Offboard sales, 1156-7
 - Provisions re initial price, interest, deliveries, etc., 1156
 - Unharvested grain, 1156
- Regulations re attendance of senators, 1934-5
 - Travel distance, 1934
- Two-Price Wheat bill C-19, 928
 - Bread prices, 928
 - Price of wheat for consumption in Canada, 928
 - Production costs, 928
 - Subsidy to producers and consumers, 928
- Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1687-9, 1694-5
 - Advance payment, 1688
 - Background of unemployment insurance, 1687
 - Dependency reduction from 75% to 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ %, 1694
 - Extension of qualifying period, 1688
 - Leaving employment voluntarily, 1687
 - Overlap between unemployment insurance and other social security measures, 1687, 1694

Molgat, Hon. Gildas L. - *Concluded*Unemployment Insurance bill C-69 - Concluded

Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1688, 1694

Retirement benefit, 1688

Sharing of costs between employees, employers and government, 1688-9, 1695

Sick benefits, 1688

Social insurance number, 1688

Social security measures, increase in benefits (1971-74), 1694-5

Termination of claim, 1688

United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33, 1924-5, 1930

Molson, Hon. Hartland de M.

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1573-4

Government expenditures, 1574

Termination clause, constitutionality of, 1574

Motion for amdt re, 1574

Construction industry in Quebec, pardon granted to Dede Desjardins, 1035, 1066

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2406, 2436-8, 2444

Deterrent aspect, 2436

Organized crime, Montreal, 2436-7

Policemen, possible attitudes of self-preservation, 2437-8

Prison reform, 2437

Prison term, 2438

Question of privilege re press report, 2406

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee

Unauthorized release to press of draft report, 1755-6

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/77, 2190-1

Fisheries

Extension to 200-mile coastal jurisdiction, 2208, 2377

Rights of MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to fish Atlantic salmon, 2208, 2264

Gélinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, the late, 1714

Immigration, presence in Canada of Xaviera Hollander and Gerda Munsinger, 1007, 1013

Judges bill C-47, 1042

Manitoba Indian Brotherhood, meeting with senators, 291

Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate, 212

Palestinian Liberation Organization, position taken by Canadian delegation at United Nations meeting, 110, 137-8

Parliament Buildings, use of Senate rooms by members of House of Commons and others, 110

Parole, consideration of changes in present system, 1371

Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to Paris, news report re accompanying officials, 161, 180

Public Works, Langevin Building, costs of renovations under headings of structural, mechanical, decoration and communications, 2243

Rules and Orders Committee

Appointment of chairman, 577

Authority to reprint rules, 1537

Commencement date of amendments contained in report, 1537; order rescinded, new date authorized, 1720

Rules of the Senate

Point of order re motion presented and seconded by senators not present, 944

Rules of the Senate, report of Committee on Standing Rules and Orders, 1317-18, 1331-6, 1355-64, 1423, 1424, 1425, 1426, 1464-6

Absence of senators, 1359

Adjournment of debate for prolonged period, 1465-6

Adoption of report, one day's notice of motion, 1357

Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, terms of reference, 1357

Molson, Hon. Hartland de M. - Concluded

Rules of the Senate - Concluded

- Bilingual form of bills originating in Senate, 1357, 1360
- Committee of the Whole, procedure for discussion in, 1362
- Declaration of property qualification, 1359
- Ex officio* members of committees, 1358
- Forms and proceedings of the Parliament of Canada, 1356, 1362-3
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 1357, 1364, 1424, 1464-5
- Joint Committee on Library of Parliament and Other Shared Services, 1359
- Limitation of senator speaking only once in any debate, 1356
- Motion to refer matters to committee, 1357-8, 1363-4
- Motions during debate, 1356
- Motions for which no notice is required (matters of urgent public importance), 1357, 1363
- Oral questions, 1356, 1465
- Organization of committees, 1358
- Powers and duties of committees, 1424
- Preservation of order and decorum in Senate, 1356
- Previous question, 1357
- Principle of bill, debating of at second reading, 1363, 1464-5
- Private bills
 - Deposit of bill and fees, 1359
 - Substantial amendments, notice of, 1359
- Procedure when Speaker leaves the chamber, 1356
- 'Question', or 'matter', definition of, 1363
- Quorum of committees, 1358, 1465
- Quotations from speeches made in Commons, 1356, 1359, 1360, 1363, 1465
- Recalling of Senate earlier than set forth in motion for adjournment, 1356
- Reports from committees, 1359
- Select committees, 1357
- Senator's final reply to inquiry on second reading of bill, 1356
- Speaker addressing house, 1357
- Special procedure or practice in committee, approval of Senate for, 1358, 1364
- Time of daily sittings, 1364
- St. Lawrence Islands National Park, government expenditures on, 1549-50, 1588
- Senate and House of Commons Act
 - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 951
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 874
- Senate business, 482, 484
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509, 512-13

Money bills

- Senate authority to amend, 1656-9
- See* Appropriation bills,
- Estimates.

Morgentaler, Dr. Henry

- Abortion charges, 1036, 1732, 1742-6, 1767-8
- Admission of facts but denial of guilt, 1745, 1746
- Canadian Institute of Public Opinion*, survey results, 1767, 1774
- Excerpts from notes of supreme court judges, 1773
- Jury decision, reversal by court of appeal, 1767-8
- Statement of Past President of Bar Association, 1773-4

Motor vehicle tire safety

Maintaining and enforcing standards, 126
 National tire safety mark, 126, 150
 Regulations, lack of information on, 150-1
 Replacement tires, 125

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 2069
 Haig, J. Campbell, 149-51
 Hicks, Henry D., 151-2
 Langlois, Leopold, 2066-8
 Neiman, Joan, 125-6, 152
 Perrault, Raymond J., 150, 151

Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8. 1r, 47; 2r, 125-6, 149-52; 3r, 161; Commons amds, 1048, 2066-8; r.a., 2096

Multiculturalism

Ministry of State, organization and budget, 742, 849, 866

Narcotics

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code, 300, 354-62, 366-8, 374-5, 382-5, 402-06, 446-54, 456, 969-71, 983, 1007-11, 1014-21, 1023-33, 1036-8, 1046-9, 1066, 1074-80
 Study of legislation by Senate committee, question re, 316

National Arts Centre

Reception for English- and French-speaking artists in Speaker's Chambers, 2003

National Capital Region, Special Joint CommitteeMembers

Commons, 1174
 Senate, 1133

Message from Commons, 1097

Message to Commons, 1126

Reports

First report, Committee quorum, 1237
 Second report, services of advisers and staff, 1914

Terms of reference, 1097, 1126

National Commercial Bank of Canada

Assets of Canadian domestic banks, statistics re, 959-60
 Authorized capital and shares, 935, 960
 Branch offices, 936, 959, 961
 Comparative United States and Canadian banking statistics, 959
 Head office, 935
 Name of bank, possible conflict re, 960, 974
 Pension funds of crown corporations, investment of, 973-4
 Provisional directors and shareholders, background of, 936, 961-2
 Risk financing, 960
 Specialty operations, 936, 960
 Sponsor (Boyd, Stott & McDonald Limited), 936
 Term deposits, 961
 'Wholesale bank', 936, 973

National Commercial Bank - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Everett, Douglas D., 961-2
 Flynn, Jacques, 973-4
 Grosart, Allister, 958-61
 Hays, Harry, 935-6, 974
 Laird, Keith, 1062-3

National Commercial Bank of Canada (Canadian Commercial and Industrial Bank) bill S-24. 1r, 923; 2r, 935-6, 958-62, 973-4; ref to com, 974; rep with amdts, 1057, 1062-3; 3r, 1063; r.a., 1281

National Defence

Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3

National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment)

Acts deemed traitorous or cowardly exacting death penalty, 834
 Canadian Catholic Conference, statement issued by, 835
 Communication between public and members of Parliament, question of, 895-6
 Crime increase, 835-6
 Montreal kidnappings, 835
 Violation of parole conditions, 836
 Deterrent aspect, 800, 834-5, 840
 Doctrine of atonement, 894
 Government attitude towards total abolition of death sentence, 800
 Law and order, tyrannical use of phrase throughout history, 840-1
 Murder of Chicago boy, 894-5, 896
 Excerpt from autobiography of Nathan Leopold, convicted killer, 895
 Murders of Toronto policemen cited, 800, 801
 National security, 834
 Occupational hazards vs loss of life, 801
 Opinions of prominent lawyers, 894
 Parole or leave of absence records, 801
 Policemen and prison guards, 835
 Quality of mercy, 894
 Rehabilitation, 895
 Royal prerogative of mercy, 894
 Statistics on killings of policemen, 801
Theology and the Death Penalty, paper issued by Task Force for Abolition of Capital Punishment, 835
 UK Royal Commission on Capital Punishment, conclusion of, 841
 Violence in administration of justice, 835

Speakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 800-02, 1459
 Beaubien, L.P., 835-6
 Carter, Chesley W., 893
 Greene, John J., 893-6
 Macdonald, John M., 833-5
 O'Leary, M. Grattan, 840-1

National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23. 1r, 643; 2r, 800-02, 833-6, 840-1, 893-6, Order stands, 1168, 1297-8, 1459, 1816-18, 1836, 1848-9

National Finance, Standing Senate Committee

Auditor General of Canada, report of Independent Review Committee, question of referral to com, 796
 Authority to publish and distribute report on Manpower Division estimates, 2208

National Finance, Standing Senate Committee - Concluded

Budget for expenditure re study of legislation, 525, 795, 1088, 1337, 2119

Counsel and staff, engagement of, 351

Estimates, authority to examine and report on

Year ending Mar. 31/75, 108

Supplementary (A), 108

Supplementary (B), 300

Supplementary (C), 441-2

Supplementary (D), 586

Year ending Mar. 31/76, 555

Supplementary (A), 1409

Supplementary (B), 1824

Year ending Mar. 31/77, 1777

Supplementary (A), 2178

Manpower and Immigration Dept., Manpower Division, com authorized to examine and report on, 400-01, 418-20

Meetings during adjournment, 2048

Meetings during Senate sittings, 684, 774, 795, 973

Members, 96

Reports

Estimates

Year ending Mar. 31/75, 136-7, 189-90

Supplementary (A), 136-7, 189-90

Supplementary (B), 349-51, 372

Supplementary (C), 444

Supplementary (D), 693-4, 695-702

Year ending Mar.31/76, 971-3, 983-4, 1054-7, 1082-6

Supplementary (A), 1549, 1565-70, 1602

Supplementary (B), 1937, 1948-53, 1966-70

Year ending Mar. 31/77, 2182-3, 2187-91, 2212-14

Supplementary (A), 2223, 2234-5

Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80, rep without amdt, 1649

National Flag of Canada

Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada), 710-11, 714-15, 740

National Forestry Week, 2076National housing (Bill C-46)

Advisory council, 756

Building materials tax, 745-6, 747-8

Forgiveness provisions for municipalities, 744, 747

Government costs, 746

Handicapped persons, 753

Housing starts, decrease in, 742, 744-5, 747, 749

Indians, 751

Inspection of projects, 746, 751

Interest charges, 747

Mortgage insurance plan, 753, 754, 755

Newfoundland, deterioration of buildings after lease expiry, 755-6

New homes, mortgage provisions, 743

Non-profit and cooperative housing, 743, 745, 750

Older homes, 745

Registered home ownership program, 746, 747

National housing (Bill C-46) - Concluded

Rental housing projects, 743, 746, 754
 Senior citizens, 749, 750
 Sewage treatment plants and trunk storm sewer systems, 744, 747, 756
 Statutory limits for making and insuring loans, 744, 756
 Veterans, 750
 US program for income tax deductions of interest and municipal taxes, 748

Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 747-8, 749, 754, 755
 Carter, Chesley W., 750, 751, 752, 755
 Cook, Eric, 755-6
 Flynn, Jacques, 742, 753, 755, 756
 Grosart, Allister, 744-7, 748, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757
 Hicks, Henry D., 744, 754
 Lamontagne, Maurice, 749, 751
 Manning, Ernest C., 744
 McIlraith, George, 742, 743-4
 Neiman, Joan, 752-3
 Riley, Daniel, 749
 Williams, Guy, 751
also
 Danson, Hon. Barnett, Minister of State for Urban Affairs, 748-57

National Housing bill (No.1) C-46. 1r, 742; 2r, 743-8; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Bourget in the Chair, Minister of State for Urban Affairs Hon. Barnett Danson taking part in debate, 748-57; rep without amdt, 757; 3r, 757; r.a., 758

National housing (Bill C-77)

Abuses of legislation privileges, 1678
 AHOP, 1673-4, 1676, 1678
 Appraisal of housing costs in various areas, 1678
 Continuity of program and target, 1676
 Cooperatives, 1679
 Costs of program, 1677
 Critical areas of housing, 1674
 Density, 1674
 Design, 1674
 Expenditures of interest reduction grants (1976), 1679
 House price limits, 1676
 Housing standards and construction quality, 1673, 1675, 1676-7
 Inflationary effect of new regulations, question of, 1673
 Land assembly programs of municipalities, 1675
 Loans and grants, 1674
 Low cost medium density housing, $1000 grants to municipalities, 1680
 New Brunswick semi-detached homes under AHOP, 1673-4
 Private funding, 1675
 Refinancing of mortgage, 1676
 Rental accommodation, 1677
 Repayment conditions, five-year clause, 1678
 Servicing of land, 1675
 Single parent family, 1676
 Two-person families, 1674
 Warranty from builder to owner, 1681

National housing (Bill C-77) - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Grosart, Allister, 1667, 1671-2, 1677, 1678, 1679-80, 1681
 Macdonald, John M., 1676, 1678, 1679, 1680
 Macnaughton, Alan (Chairman, Committee of the Whole), 1673-81
 McIlraith, George, 1667-9, 1671, 1672-3
 Perrault, Raymond J., 1667, 1671
 Phillips, Orville H., 1669-71, 1675, 1676
 Williams, Guy, 1678

also

Danson, Hon. Barnett, Minister of State for Urban Affairs, 1673-81

National Housing bill (No.2) C-77. 1r, 1667; 2r, 1667-73; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Macnaughton in the Chair, Minister of Urban Affairs Hon. Barnett Danson taking part in debate, 1673-81; rep without amdt, 1681; 3r, 1681; r.a., 1712

National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2103-04, 2110-11, 2160-3, 2168-9, 2191

Excerpt from speeches or statements re, 2160
 Excerpt from speech of Treasury Board President, 2162-3
 Gullibility of the poor in relation to lotteries, 2162, 2169
 Method of authorization for, 2103-04, 2110-11, 2160-3, 2168-9
 Policy of government in fiscal matters, departure from, 2162
 Regressive taxation, 2162, 2169
 Religious attitudes towards gambling, 2169

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 2161
 Forsey, Eugene A., 2103-04, 2110-11, 2160-2, 2163
 Grosart, Allister, 2163
 Hicks, Henry D., 2168-9
 Perrault, Raymond J., 2161, 2162-3
 Rowe, Frederick William, 2169

National Museums

Storage of Canadiana, 2209
 Artisanship of John D. Howe, 2217

National Press Gallery

Invitation to reception issued to members of Parliament, question, 61-62

National unity

National interests and unity, 28-30
 TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', separatist tendencies, 1127-8

Natural resources

Resource development, 38
See Energy resources

Neiman, Hon. Joan

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 14-18
 Capital punishment, expiration of trial period of partial abolition, 1656, 1716
 Criminal Code (Commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 937-40, m that subject matter be ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 940-1
 Cabinet decisions re commutation of death sentence, 940
 Petition of Right Act, 939

Neiman, Hon. Joan - Concluded

- Criminal Code bill S-21 - Concluded
 - Remission Service of Justice Dept., Fauteux Commission on, excerpt from report, 937
 - Responsibility of judge and jury, 940
 - Royal prerogative, 937-40
 - Statistics on death sentences, 940
 - Statutory power of clemency, 937-8
 - Treatise on the Laws, Privileges, Proceedings and Usages of Parliament*, excerpt from, 938-9
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.1) C-71, 1898, 1907
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No.2) C-84, 2421-3
 - Challenge to identify violent and anti-social behaviour, 2421
 - Disparities in treatment of accused persons, 2422
 - Excerpt from proceedings of Commons Justice and Legal Affairs Committee, 2423
 - Parole, 2423
 - Prison term, 2423
 - Professional criminals, resources of, 2422
 - Toronto Sun* article re sex offender, 2421-2
- Economic conditions, 15-16
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee
 - First report, 255
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 354-8, 456, 1017-18, 1076-7
 - Cannabis, 354-6, 357-8
 - Convictions for possession of, 355-6, 1017-18
 - Effects of, 357
 - Research on, 357
 - Drugs and alcohol, use by teenagers, 355-6
 - LeDain Commission, 354
 - Search by police, authority for, 356
 - 'Sell', 'traffic', 'give', definition of, 1017-18
- Government expenditures, 16
- Inflation, 15-16
- Law reform, 16-17; family law, 16-17; abortions, 17
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 125-6
 - Maintaining and enforcing of standards, 126
 - Replacement tires, 125
- National Housing bill (No.1) C-46, 752-3
 - Handicapped persons, 753
 - Senior citizens, 753
- Native people, 17
- Oil crisis, 15
- Parliamentary reform, 17
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 820
- Social security, 16
- Status of women, 16-17
- Televising of committee proceedings, 547
- Transportation, 16

New Brunswick

- Bay of Fundy power potential, 112
- Bilingualism
 - Agricultural representatives, 121-2
 - Globe and Mail* article, 'NB Credit Unions show different approach of French and English', 1752
- Court of Appeal decision re K.C. Irving, Ltd., 1023, 1045-6
- Economic conditions, 1750-4, 1817-20, 1821, 1854-5, 2009-13, 2015-18, 2033
- Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, possible increase in fares, 1815

New Brunswick - Concluded

Forestry, devastation by Spruce budworm, 1158-63, 1169-70, 1218-20, 1230-2, 1816
 Kent County, report of Agriculture Committee, 2308, 2334
 Lumber industry, effect of inflation on, 122
 Saint John, increase in bus fares, 1815-16
 Storm damage, possibility of federal aid, 1720-1, 1729-30

New Brunswick economic conditions, 1750-4, 1817-20, 1821, 1854-5, 2009-13, 2015-18, 2033

Acadian heritage, 1753-4, 2009-12, 2016-17
 Acadian Village, 2012
 Statement of Antonine Maillet, authoress, 1754
 Advertisement of Regional Economic Expansion Dept. entitled The New Approach, 2012
 Agricultural problems, 1751, 1818, 2009-10
 Agronomy students at Laval and Moncton Universities, 1753
 Meeting of Senate Agricultural Committee and results of, 1751, 1753
 Prospects for young people in farming profession, 1752
 Statements of Prime Minister and of Agriculture Minister re, 1751
 Artists and musicians from NB, 2018
 Bilingualism, lack of, 1752
Globe and Mail article, 'NB Credit Unions show different approach of French and English', 1752
 Fisheries, 1818-19
 Gloucester County, 2012
 Highways, Route 11, 2012
 Improvement project in northeastern NB, Evangeline article re, 1753
 Infrastructural works, government expenditures on, 1818
 Memramcook Institute as training centre, recommendation re, 1752
 Mineral resources, 2019
 Mining, 1819
 New Brunswick Psychological Association, letter to Premier of NB., copy to Prime Minister, 2010-11
 Nuclear power plant, change of site, 1817
 Relocation of workers, 2011
 RC clergy declaration in support of northeast area, 1750-1
 Recommendation re farmlands, 1751
Saint John Telegraph-Journal article re Northeast New Brunswick, 2012
 Shipping, 1820
 Social equality program, 2017-18
 Tourism, 1819
 Transportation, 1819
 Unemployment, 1820
Speakers: Senators
 Fournier, Michel, 1817-20
 Michaud, Herve J., 1750-4
 Molgat, Gildas L., 2033
 Riley, Daniel, 2009-13
 Robichaud, Louis-J., 2015-18

Newfoundland and Labrador

Anniversary of entry into Confederation, 139
 CNR services in Newfoundland, 1868, 1903
 Come-By-Chance refinery, financial assistance for, 1826-7, 1860
 Curling, congratulations to Newfoundland Rink on winning of Canadian Men's Championship, 1889
Education and Culture in Newfoundland, by Hon. Frederick William Rowe, 2308-09
 Fisheries, ice conditions, 117; foreign fishermen inside limit, 117
 Judges, 1005, 1040-3, 1051-3, 1066, 1080, 1095

Newfoundland and Labrador - Concluded

- Marine safety, request for location of air and sea rescue units in Newfoundland, 1860
- Offshore gas and oil, negotiations between federal government and producing provinces, 2070, 2142
- RCMP, request for use of during labour strike, 965-6
- Trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, 1903, 1922
- Transportation
 - Air Canada service St. John's-Ottawa, 506-08
 - Inter-city passenger routes, Canadian Press article re, 139-40
 - North Sydney-Cape Breton-Port aux Basques, 139
 - Passenger trains, eastern Canada, 52, 140
 - Strait of Belle Isle, 64
 - Trans-Canada Highway, 63-64

Newspapers, periodicals, speeches, interviews, etc., excerpts from

- Abortion, article in Status of Women News, 120-1
- Anatomy of Human Aggression, 917, 1289
- Articles on Senate by Senator Rowe, press account of, question of privilege, 480
- Autobiography of Nathan Leopold, convicted killer, 895
- Business Corporations Law for Canada, report of Task Force, 490
- Canadian armed forces in Europe, article re, 1493
- Canadian Pacific: A Brief History, by J. L. McDougall, 40-41
- Canadian Pacific Railway - A Century of Corporate Welfare, by Robert Chodos, 38-39, 40
- Canadian Press
 - Article entitled "Senior civil servants bitter over Ottawa's wage example", 1351
 - Article quoting statement of Hon. Mr. Pepin, 1576
 - Article re CNR estimates and plans, 139-40
 - Report of statements made by Leader of the Government re matter concerning Senator Giguere, 1395-7
- Canadian Transportation and Distribution, statement by Transport Minister re transportation policy, 42-43
- Capital punishment, statement issued by Canadian Catholic Conference, 835
- Communications: Some Federal Proposals, 850
- Crime Against Internationally Protected Persons: Prevention and Punishment - an Analysis of the UN Convention, 1769
- Crime and Punishment as Ritual of Life, excerpt from article by Dr. Carl Menningers, 920
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, question of privilege re newspaper article, 2406
- Drug epidemic, excerpt from Healthways Magazine, 374
- Economic prospects, excerpts from speeches by Minister of Finance and by Senator Lamontagne, 168-9
- Education and Culture in Newfoundland, by Hon. Frederick William Rowe, 2308-09
- Energy Policy for Canada - Phase I, Vol. I, Analysis, 1216
- Equal rights, statement of Helvi Sipilä, UN Assistant Secretary General for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, 836, 896
- Excerpts from Prime Minister's speeches re anti-inflation legislation, 1454-5
- Financial Post: Transportation costs, 43
- Financial Times: 'Canada left out - Crucial oil meeting next month', 605
- Financial Times survey re percentages of wage settlements, 2105
- Globe and Mail:
 - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, article by Prof. J. D. Morton re constitutional problems of White Paper, 1320
 - Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, 2122-3
 - Canadian Pacific Railway, article re, 43, 44
 - Equal opportunities for women, article re, 187
 - Price controls, 1323
 - Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee Chairman Senator Forsey, article re, 794-5
 - Sarnia-Montreal pipeline, statement by President of Interprovincial Pipelines, 112
 - Senate reform, statements by Prime Minister, 32

Newspapers, periodicals, speeches, interviews, etc., - Continued

- Globe and Mail - Concluded
 Time magazine, article by J. Carruthers re, 582-3
 Whittling Down a Freedom, editorial re, 582, 641-2
 Government expenditures, effect on inflation, excerpt from report of Canadian Economic Policy Committee, 1056
 Helsinki Declaration, statements by leaders of various nations re, 1758
 Housing, excerpt from speech by Hon. Mr. Danson, 1457
 Income Security for Canadians, White Paper on, 250
 Inequalities between men and women, UN publication re, 838
 La Presse report of alleged statement re CBC by Senator Lamontagne, 1165-6
 Leading Cases in Constitutional Law, excerpt from decision in 'Edinburgh and Dalkeith Railway Company v. Wauchope', 391
 Managing the Future: Conference on Anticipatory Institutions, 1171, 1221
 May's Parliamentary Practice, 'Queen's Consent to Bills', 566
 Ministry of State for Science and Technology, paper re National Research Council functions, 114
 Modern Senate of Canada, The, excerpt re Minister explaining bills in the Senate, 218
 National Flag, speech by Governor General on initial raising of, 710
 National Research Council, financial assistance for, excerpt from paper of Ministry of State for Science and Technology, 114
 Newspapers featuring articles on Helsinki Conference, 1757, 1759-60
 Newsweek article on drug control, 1451
 Nobel Peace Prize winner, refusal of USSR to permit acceptance of award, letter from Senator Forsey re, 1761
 Ottawa Citizen article titled 'Carpets escape the axe', 1585
 Ottawa Journal article re comments of President of Time Canada before Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 2140
 Ottawa Journal article re Nova Scotia storm damage, 1766
 Palestinian Liberation Organization, attendance at UN General Assembly, statement re position taken by Canadian delegation, 110, 137-8
 Peking Review article on USSR disregard of agreements, 1760
 Police Costs - Where are all those Millions?, booklet issued by Quebec Justice Dept., 538
 Poverty in Canada, report of Senate Special Committee, updated, 282
 Pricing of Crude Oil: Economic and Strategic Guidelines for International Energy Policy by Taki Rifai, 618
 Prime Minister's speeches re government policies on controls, 1443
 Psychopathic personality, sociopathic personality and character neurosis, excerpt from address by Prof. James McHorter, 919-20
 Regional development incentives, Halifax-Chronicle Herald article re, 1620
 Remission Service, excerpt from report of Fauteux Commission, 935
 Science policy, excerpts from speeches of and letters from Prime Minister and from Deputy Secretary of Cabinet re Institute for Research on Public Policy, 296-7, 1171-2, 1221
 Secondary industry trade policies, Separatist leader's comments re government attitude, 978
 Social Security in Canada, Working Paper on, 250
 Song of Equality for International Women's Year, by Jacqueline Lemay, 673
 Status of women, Le Devoir editorial re, 1103
 Textile industry, Gazette articles re, 781-2
 Theology and the Death Penalty, paper issued by Task Force for Abolition of Capital Punishment, 835
 Tidal power, Bay of Fundy, excerpt from paper by George Baker, P.Eng., 112-13
 Toronto Globe and Mail article 'The Brutal Reality of Brezhnev's Policy', 1759
 Treatise on the Laws, Privileges, Proceedings and Usages of Parliament, 938-9
 Unemployment in Victoriaville clothing industry, Le Devoir article re, 844
 US judicial system, Canadian Press report in Saint John Telegraph Journal, 692
 US Police: A New Image?, excerpt from Christian Science Monitor, 1254-5

Newspapers, periodicals, speeches, interviews, etc., - Concluded

- Wage and price controls, US publication by C. J. Grayson, Chairman of Prices Commission re unsatisfactory results of, 1351
- Wall Street Journal article by Claire Boothe Luce re permissive society, 1290-1
- Whatever Became of Sin?, by Carl Menninger, 1291
- 'Why Not' campaign, comments of Hon. Marc Lalonde, women MPs and others, 672-3

Norrie, Hon. Margaret

- Abortion, 120-1
 - Priorities for Government Action, 121
- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 120-2
- Air Canada service Ottawa-Halifax, question of privilege, 1479-80
- Animal Contagious Diseases bill C-28, 1632-3
- Bilingualism, agricultural representatives, New Brunswick, 121-2
- Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2039
- Crime and violence, 1252-5
 - Basic principles for prevention of crime, 1253
 - Statement of Henry Fielding, founder of crime prevention organization, 1253
 - Netherlands crime reform, 1253-4
 - Communication between prisoners and personnel, 1254
 - 'Land Without Prisons', Newsweek article, 1253
 - Penal system, 1253
 - Prison population, comparisons, 1253-4
 - Rehabilitation, 1253
 - US Police: A New Image?, excerpt from Christian Science Monitor, 1254-5
 - Youth training, 1253
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 863-4
 - Age limit, 863
 - Maritime farmers, problems of, 863-4
- Feed grains, assistance to Atlantic provinces, 1035
- Feeds bill S-10, 161-2
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 120
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, tribute on occasion of resignation from the Senate, 968
- Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 2099-2102
- Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation bill C-78, 1717-18
 - Background of Commission formed after Halifax explosion, 1717-18
 - Pensions and allowances paid to widows and disabled persons, 1718
 - Transfer of responsibilities and assets to Canadian Pension Commission, 1718
- Inflation, 121-2
 - Beef industry and prices, 122
 - Supply of goods and services, 121
- International Women's Year, 836-8
 - Abortion law, 837, 838
 - Asia and Africa, male domination, 837
 - Inequality of wages for men and women in Canada, 838
 - Statement of Helvi Sipilä, UN Assist. Sect. General for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, 836
 - UN Charter, 836
 - Women's responsibility in economics, social and cultural development, worldwide friendly relations and cooperation, 836
 - Women's wages in Italy, 837
- Televising of committee proceedings, 550

Norrie, Hon. Margaret - Concluded

Transportation

BNA Act as it pertains to transportation, 2211-12

Atlantic provinces, 2211-12

Halifax container pier, 2212

Halifax and Saint John, 'Gateway to Eastern North America', 2211-12

Passenger rail service, 2212

Sea-Wings cargo business, 2212

Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1703

North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1489-94, 1513-16, 1726-8

Armed forces in Europe, 1489-93, 1494, 1726, 1727

Canadian troops, 1491-2, 1493; newspaper article re, 1493

Central Europe and Warsaw Pact countries, 1491

Equipment statistics, various countries, 1490-2; aircraft, Lockheed P-3 Orion, 1492, tanks, Leopard and

Centurion, 1491, 1492, 1494

Nuclear power, 1490-1

Reserves, 1492, 1494

US military bases in Spain, 1493

Canada's role in NATO, 1490, 1727-8

Canada's community of interests, 1727-8

Senate representation, 1490

Defence policy, 1493, 1726, 1727

Canada's contribution, 1727

Education, Cultural Affairs and Information Committee, 1515, 1517

Energy resources, protection of, 1492-3

Helsinki Agreement, 1515

Interparliamentary advisory Council and sub-committee, 1493-4

Political Committee, 1514

Recommendations and Resolutions adopted at Copenhagen Session, 1514-15, 1517-23

Challenges of Modern Society Committee, 1520

Eastern Mediterranean, 1515, 1518, 1522-3

East-West relations, 1515, 1519

Economic aid to Portugal, Greece and Turkey, 1520

Energy supplies within the Atlantic Alliance, 1521

Eurogroup activities, 1521

International Policy for raw materials, 1523

Middle East, 1514, 1522

National economic policies, 1517

National energy policies, 1521

Nuclear energy, 1523

Portugal, 1514, 1522

Rationalization of defence resources within Alliance, 1518-19

Restructuring of NATO forces, 1517-18

Science Committee budget, 1519-20

Spain, 1514, 1522

United States arms embargo on Turkey, 1521-2

World economic order, 1520

World monetary reform, 1520-1

Soviet Union, armed forces and equipment, 1515-16

Warsaw Pact, 1727-8

Speakers: Senators

Carter, Chesley W., 1494

Grosart, Allister, 1493-4

Lafond, Paul, 1726-7

North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference - *ConcludedSpeakers: Senators - *Concluded

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 1489-94
Perrault, Raymond J., 1727-8
Yuzyk, Paul, 1514-16

North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 342-7, 362-5, 456-9

Canadian delegation, 344, 364-5
Canadian troops in Lahr and Baden, and equipment for, 345-6
Defence of Western European Union, 345
Economic Committee discussions, 457-8
 Defence budgets, 457
 Energy supplies, 457, 458
 Inflation, 457
 Recommendations, 457
Education, cultural affairs and communications, 362
Mutual and balanced force reductions, 344-5
NATO, 342-7, 362
 Information service, 364
Oil crisis, 344
Political differences, 362
Problems in Cyprus, Greece, Turkey and Middle East, 345
Replacement of aircraft, 345
Security and cooperation in Europe, 362-3
Ukrainian historian Valentyn Moroz, confined in Vladimir prison, 363-4
US amendment to trade bill, 363
USSR, 342-3, 345, 363-4, 458
 Economic conditions and trade prospects, 458
 Maritime forces, 345
 Territorial gains as result of World War II, 342-3
 Treatment of dissidents, 363-4
Speakers: Senators
 Lafond, Paul C., 456-9
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 342-7
 Yuzyk, Paul, 362-5

North Atlantic Treaty Organization

See North Atlantic Assembly, 342-7, 362-5, 456-9

Northern Canada Power Commission

Commission members, functions and jurisdiction, 808, 813, 814
Construction of transmission network, 808
Employment of native people, 808
Expenditures over $50,000, approval of Governor in Council for, 814, 815
Financial records and procedures, maintenance of, 809
Lack of authority of Yukon and NWT councils, 814
Meetings of Commission, 840, 851
Operating budget, 808, 809
Ownership of northern generating power, 808
Power rates, 814
Speakers: Senators
 Bourget, Maurice, 807-09, 814-15
 Choquette, Lionel, 813-14
 Connolly, John J., 840, 851
 Smith, Donald, 815

Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13. 1r, 795; 2r, 807-09, 813-15; ref to com, 815; rep with amdts, 840, 851; 3r, 855; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 1005; r.a., 1095

Northland Bank bill C-1002. 1r, 1524; 2r, 1598-1600; ref to com, 1600; suspension of rule 95, 1601; rep without amdt, 1602; 3r, 1619; r.a., 1712

Northwest Territories

Appointment of senators to represent Territories, 1005, 1054, 1060-2, 1081, 1095
 Fire losses replacement account, 325, 338, 353, 366, 397
 Northern Canada Power Commission, 807-09, 814-16, 840, 855, 1005, 1095
 Northwest Territories representation in Commons, 583, 594-5, 622-3, 642, 656
 Senate appointment, question, 1772

Northwest Territories representation

Boundaries of constituency, 594-5
 BNA Act, amdt re NWT representation, 622
 Chairman of Commission, terms of appt., 623
 Indians and Eskimos, voting franchise, 622
 Neo-colonialism in respect of Territories, 623
 Population statistics, 595
Speakers: Senators
 Grosart, Allister, 622-3
 Prowse, J. Harper, 594-5

Northwest Territories Representation bill C-51. 1r, 583; 2r, 594-5, 622-3; 3r, 642; r.a., 656

Nova Scotia

Cape Breton coal mines, operating losses, 176; DEVCO, 176
 Destruction of forests and residential property by fire, 2178-9
 Halifax Relief Commission pension continuation, 1714, 1717-18, 1721-3
 National Defence cutbacks as result of anti-inflation program, 1683, 1716
 Springhill fire disaster, possibility of federal aid, 1241-2
 Steel industry, Cansteel study of Atlantic rim, 176
 Storm damage, 135-6, 1765-6

Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India and to Argentina, 1859-60, 1869, 1975, 2142

Ocean dumping control

Alternate disposal in controls of dumping, 1050
 Appeal agency, 1050-1
 Conference on Law of the Sea, Geneva, 1050
 Courts of criminal jurisdiction, 1040
 Deliberate or accidental dumping, 1051
 Detainment, seizure or forfeiture of ships and aircraft, 1039-40
 Dumping by aircraft over land, 1040
 Exceptional circumstances involving safety of human life, 1039
 Federal-provincial consultation, 1050
 London Convention on ocean dumping control, 1038-9, 1050
 Ontario, pollution of lakes and rivers, 1050
 Oslo Convention, 1039
 Penalties for contravention of act, 1039
 Permits for dumping, 1039, 1050
 Times, rates of disposal, etc., compatible with protection of marine environment, 1039

Ocean dumping control - *ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Belisle, Rheal, 1049-51

Connolly, John J., 1040

Macnaughton Alan A., 1038-40, 1051

Ocean Dumping Control bill C-37. 1r, 1005; 2r, 1038-40, 1049-51; ref to com, 1051; rep without amdt, 1088; 3r, 1088; r.a., 1096

Official languages

Implementation of resolution re, report to Parliament tabled, 289-90

Language rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2344-8, 2378-86

Quebec official language, 54-58, 829, 912

Report of Commissioner for fiscal year ended Mar. 31/74, tabled, 757

Report of Commissioner for fiscal year ended Mar. 31/75, tabled, 2003

See Bilingualism and biculturalismOfficial languages

Motion that Senate support language rights of air pilots in Quebec (Hon. Maurice Lamontagne), 2344-8, 2378-86

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 2344, 2345, 2348, 2378-81

Lamontagne, Maurice, 2344-6

Langlois, Leopold, 2381-6

Perrault, Raymond J., 2386

Walker, David, 2346-8

Oil

Income tax, 583, 606-14, 616-21, 627-40, 645-56

Indian oil and gas, 325, 337-8, 351-3, 402, 426, 467

International conference of oil-producing and oil-consuming countries, 605-06, 744-5

See Energy resourcesOld age security

Absence from Canada, 1103

Calculation of income, 1102

Discrimination reflecting on Bill of Rights, 1124

Federal-provincial responsibilities in social security, 1101

Guaranteed income supplement, 1101-02

Inflation and cost of living, 1123

Joint application, 1124, 1125

Married or common-law status, 1124, 1125

Means test, 1102

Overpayments, 1103

Statistics on recipients and benefits, 1123-4

Suspension of allowance, 1102

Termination of allowance upon husband's death, 1124, 1125

Universality vs selectivity, 1025

White Paper on Income Security for Canadians, 1101

Working Paper on Social Security in Canada, 1101

Speakers: Senators

Carter, Chesley W., 1101-03, 1125-6

Choquette, Lionel, 1126

Phillips, Orville H., 1123-5

Old Age Security, Old Age Assistance bill C-62. 1r, 1087; 2r, 1101-03, 1123-6; 3r, 1126; r.a., 1134

O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan (Deceased Apr. 7/76)

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 48-51
- Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 223-4
 - Boundary Commission, composition of, 223-4
- Cultural Property Export and Import bill C-33, 768-70
 - Book of Kells, Ireland, 770
 - Bureaucracy in discretionary powers of minister, 768
 - Canadian identity and nationalism, 769
 - Freedoms of thought and action, elimination of in over-protection by government, 768, 770
 - Preservation of muniments, excerpt from statement of Hon. Joseph Howe, 770
- European Parliament, 316-19
 - Canada-US relations, 317-19
 - Finished products, export of, 317
 - Treaty of Rome, 316, 317
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 58
- National Defence and Criminal Code (total abolition of capital punishment) bill S-23, 840-1
 - Deterrent aspect, 840
 - Law and order, tyrannical use of phrase throughout history, 840-1
 - UK Royal Commission on Capital Punishment, conclusion of, 841
- Representation bill C-36, 435-6
 - Increase in parliamentary representatives, executives and assistants, opposition to, 435-6
 - Salary increases of members, 436
- Senate reform, 49-51
 - Appointments, 50-51
 - Committees, 50
 - Initiation of bills, 49
 - Investigation of provincial rights, 49-50
 - Suspensive veto, 49
- Tributes, 2034-6
- United Nations Peacekeeping Force, pension benefits for dependants of Canadian soldier killed in Cyprus, 760, 768

Olympic bill C-63. 1r, 1174; 2r, 1188-90, 1198-1205; ref to com, 1205; rep without amdt, 1211; 3r, 1211; r.a., 1281

Olympics

- Coin-selling program to include gold coins, 1188-9
- Cost according to market price of gold, 1189
- Deficit forecast, 1199, 1200, 1201, 1203
- Expenditures, inflationary trend, 1204
- Federal government responsibility for Games, 1199-1201
- Gold content of coins, 1204-05
 - Statement of Postmaster General, 1204-05
- Gold requirements for program, 1198
- Limit on coins to be issued, 1189
- Location of Games, regional and national aspects, 1201-03
- Lottery receipts, 1188
- Minister's statement re possible withdrawal of Bill C-63, 1202, 1204-05
- Permanent assets from capital investments, 1203

Olympics - Concluded

- Profit potential from sale of gold coins, 1199
- Programs of government assistance for Games, 1189-90, 1199
- Security costs, 1199
- Trade marks and copyrights, 1189
- Western Canada attitude towards expenditures undertaken for Games, 1201-02
- Western Canada projects sponsored by federal government, 1202

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 1201-02
- Asselin, Martial, 1200-01
- Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 1188-90, 1198, 1204-05
- Flynn Jacques, 1203-04
- Langlois, Leopold, 1202-03
- Macdonald, John M., 1198-1200
- Manning, Ernest C., 1201, 1202

Olympic Games, flame ceremony on Parliament Hill, 2419

Ontario

- Corporations Act, 493, 495, 496
- Legal profession statistics, 625
- Police force, claim for compensation for maintenance, 501-3, 568
 - Costs of administration of force, 568
 - Financial implications of RCMP provincial operations, 501, 502
 - RCMP contracts, letter from Solicitor General re, 503
- Pollution of lakes and rivers, 1050

Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police

- Motion that matter of compensation by federal government be referred to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 954-5, 962-6, agreed, 966
 - Advantages to contracting provinces in use of RCMP, 962-3
 - Alberta, 965, 966
 - British Columbia, 965
 - Coordination and cooperation of various police forces, 964
 - Cost-sharing formula, 955
 - Federal-provincial negotiations re RCMP, 963, 965
 - Financial obligation of province to pay for provincial force, 964
 - Newfoundland, request for use of RCMP during labour strike, 965-6
 - Option of provinces, 965
 - Police forces in metropolitan centers, 966
 - RCMP operations in Ontario and Quebec, 963; in other provinces, 954
 - RCMP work in matters under federal jurisdiction, 964-5
 - Subsidizing by Ontario and Quebec and other provinces, 955

Speakers: Senators

- Carter, Chesley W., 966
- Grosart, Allister, 964
- Manning, Ernest C., 965-6
- McIlraith, George, 963-5
- Perrault, Raymond J., 962-3

See Quebec Provincial Police

Opening of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament

Communications from Governor General's Secretary, 1, 2

Speech from the Throne, 2-7

See Address in reply to Speech from the Throne

Orders in Council dealing with prerogatives of Prime Minister, 1349, 1355

Ouellet, Hon. Andre, Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs

Announcement of resignation because of pending contempt of court appeal, 1890-3, 1920-3

Pacific Western Airlines, possible move of head office to Calgary, 1824-5, 1859, 2376, 2444

Palestinian Liberation Organization, status as participants at United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and position taken by Canadian delegation, 137-8, 1238, 1242-4, 1248-9

Current discord at international conferences, 1238

Resolution adopted by General Assembly inviting PLO to attend Congress, 1238

Statement of Secretary of State for External Affairs re government decision to request postponement of meeting, 1248-9

Parliament

Sessions of Parliament, legislative program, 1902-03

Parliamentary immunity

Question of privilege, 1398-1403

Statement by Leader of the Government, 1409

Parliamentary reform, 17, 28-29

Conflict of interest, 28, 153, 163, 373, 573-4, 580, 774, 779-81

Senate reform, 32, 49-53, 62-63, 74-75, 184

Parliamentary secretaries

Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries, 847, 856-61, 868-80, 889, 899

Parliament Buildings

Centre Block, inaccuracies in commercial use of pictures of, 1765, 1777

East Block accommodation, 2185

Advisory Commission on Parliamentary Accommodation, 2185

Letter from Commons Speaker to Prime Minister, tabled, 2185

East Block, cost of proposed renovations, and preservation of Privy Council Chamber, 241, 279

East Block, Senate use of rooms, proposal, 110

Identity cards for senators, 179-80

Ottawa Citizen article re question of privilege of Senator F. W. Rowe, 1777

Senate, use of rooms by Commons members and others, 110

Use of picture in commercial advertising of Guaranty Trust, 556, 564, 956-7

Parole

Consideration of changes in present system, question, 1371

Criminal Law Amendment (Crown liability, immigration, parole) bill C-71, 1714, 1730-3

Parole in Canada, report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, tabled, 10

Passports

Passport Office refusal to accept $50 and $100 in Canadian currency, 2037, 2077

Restrictions on special passports of MPs, article in Globe and Mail, 2262-3, 2362-3, 2443

Use of diplomatic and special passports for travel to Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4

Paterson, Hon. Norman McL.

- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2448
 - Murder of Moncton policemen, 2448
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2005-06, 2301
 - Canada-US relations, 2005-06
 - Foreign investments contributing to Canadian revenue, 2005
 - Reader's Digest* article, 2005
- United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33, 1925
- Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1766

Penitentiaries

- Action taken to implement principal recommendations of Special Joint Committee, 2200
- Proposed construction of medium security prison in Saint John, 1916-17, 1922-3

Pensions

- Lieutenant governors, 1304, 1337-40
- Pension Plan, Canada, 242, 249-52, 277-9, 300, 307, 314

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate

- Abortions
 - Study of procedure for obtaining therapeutic abortions, committee on, 1428, 1624-5, 1639, 1654-5
- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 26-30
- Air Canada service Fredericton-Ottawa, 855, 867
- Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 334
- Air Transport, flight delays due to labour dispute, 2062-3, 2168
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1503-08, 1511, 1512-13, 1559-64, 1575-7, 1579, 1580, 1582, 1586, 1587
 - Agriculture and support programs, 1563
 - Anti-Inflation Board, 1506, 1511
 - Functions and powers of Board and Administrator, 1506, 1560, 1562
 - Regulations of Governor In Council, 1506, 1511, 1561
 - Bank interest rates, 1582
 - Compensation, fringe benefits, etc., 1504, 1505
 - Constitutionality of bill, 1561
 - Cost inflation, wage and price controls to counteract, 1503
 - Energy, food and housing supplies, 1504
 - Enforcement provisions, 1505-06, 1508
 - Existing contractual arrangements, 1505
 - Export profits, 1504
 - Federal-provincial cooperation in application of guidelines, 1507-08, 1512-13, 1561, 1586
 - Toronto high school teachers, 1507, 1508
 - Fish and farm products, exemption from guidelines, 1504
 - Government expenditures, 1504, 1507
 - Human rights, protection of, 1560
 - Judicial review of decisions of Appeal Tribunal, 1563-4
 - Labour leaders' attempts to defeat program, 1505
 - Low-income groups, 1504-05
 - Maintaining of balance of fiscal and monetary policies, 1504
 - Penalty for contravention of guidelines, 1505
 - Appeals to Tribunal, 1506, 1560; costs, 1562
 - Postal workers, 1587

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Anti-Inflation bill C-73 - Concluded
 - Prices and incomes policies, 1504, 1508, 1562
 - Productivity and compensation for, 1508-09
 - Professional compliance, 1504
 - Public reaction and result of polls, 1560
 - Statement of Hon. Mr. Pepin, Canadian Press article re, 1576
 - Three-year period of program, 1505, 1562-3, 1575-7, 1586
 - US-Canada wage demands and productivity, 1507
- Anti-inflation program, questions
 - Budget reduction in Regional Economic Expansion Dept., 1683
 - Family allowances, 1683, 1716, 1721
 - Government rejection of Board's opinion re postal workers' contract, 1627-8, 1655
 - Judges' salaries, 1662, 1681
 - Meeting of Minister of Finance and provincial representatives re implementation of guidelines, 1549
 - National Defence cutbacks in Nova Scotia, 1682, 1716-17
 - New Brunswick, increase in bus fares in Saint John, 1846
 - Wage guidelines, 1683
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 416
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1975 C-79, 1615
- Auditor General of Canada, report of Independent Review Committee, question of referral to com, 796
- Austin, Hon. Jacob, introduced in the Senate, 1354
- Bills, printing and distribution of, 61
- Bills, public and private, dealt with during session, 1286-7
- Boucher, Hon. William A., the late, 2251
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 11
- British Columbia Telephone Company bill S-11, 133
 - Advertising of bill, 133
- British Columbia Women's Basketball Team, 1889
- British Trade Mission offices, 252
- Budget, date of presentation, 161
- Canada-United States boundary, government policy re demarcation line on Dixon Entrance on Strait of Juan de Fuca, George's Bank and northwards, 2308
- Canada-United States relations, 1626-7
 - BC provincial election, question re comments of US ambassador, 1627
 - Canadian Radio and Television Commission, policy re commercial content of cable systems, 1626-7
 - Communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re, 2192-3, 2377-8
 - Report of Foreign Relations Committee tabled, 1716
 - Unofficial meeting of US Ambassador with media representatives in Ottawa, 1626
- Canadian Armed Forces casualties in defence of France in World War I and World War II, 1417
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
 - Munsinger, Gerda, presence in Canada and appearance on television program, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1257, 1618-19, 1625
- Canadian coins, reported change in design, 1937, 1955
- Canadian economy
 - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1293, 1298-1303, 1319
 - Anti-Inflation Board, functions and powers, 1301-2
 - Consultations with provincial finance and labour ministers, 1303
 - Dollar value (1946-75), 1298, 1319
 - Energy, raising of costs by OPEC nations and effect on Canada's economy, 1299
 - Guidelines of attack on inflation, 1300
 - Housing needs, 1301
 - Labour and industry, wage settlements affecting international trade, 1300
 - Maximum increase allowable to wage earners and other income groups, 1301

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Canadian economy
 - Attack on Inflation - Concluded
 - Parliamentary and other governmental restraints, 1301
 - Powerful groups to be affected, 1300
 - Professional groups, 1301
- Canadian Labour Congress
 - Political affiliation, 2153-4
 - Possibility of general strike, newspaper report re meeting and proposals for liberal corporatism, 2130
 - Salary increases for officers, 2159, 2209-10
- Canadian National Railway
 - Cost of construction of tower in Toronto, 2185-6, 2263-4
 - Services in Atlantic provinces, 1923-4, 1976
- Canadian Press* report of statements made by Leader of the Government re matter concerning Senator Giguere, 1396-7
- CTV news report on death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as member of Conservative Party, 1241
- Candu reactors, proposed sale to Argentina and Korea, 1307, 1319
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2311, 2312, 2324, 2336-7, 2348-9, 2362, 2444
 - Federal-provincial conferences, 2284-5
 - McGill Law Journal* article 'The Central Fallacy of Canadian Constitutional Law', 2348
 - Powers of Lieutenant Governor in Council, 2312
 - Referral of clause 33 to Supreme Court, question of, 2348-9, 2362, 2444
- Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1684-5
- Combines investigation, New Brunswick court of appeal decision re K. C. Irving, Ltd., 1023, 1045-6
- Combines, planned takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd., of Argus Corporation, 1064
- Committee meetings, co-ordinating committee to arrange scheduling, 828-9, 1091
- Committee meetings during Senate sittings, 1856-7
- Committees, implementation of new schedule of meetings, 1937-8
- Committees, sub-committee meeting, 1931
- Committees work during session, 1287-8
- Conflict of Interest, Green Paper, 28, 774
 - Question of privilege re referral to com, Hon. Mr. Croll, 574, 580, 779-80
- Connaught Laboratories testing adjacent to proposed housing development, 616, 732, 902
- Construction industry in Quebec, pardon granted to Dede Desjardins, 1035, 1066
- Copyright Act, Economic Review, 'Crown copyright reserved', replacement of words, 2200, 2322-3, 2362
- Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C., the late, 779
- Criminal Code
 - Abortions, Dr. Henry Morgentaler's acquittal of charges, 1036
 - Control of weapons and firearms, question as to progress of bill in committee stage, 479
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2309, 2387, 2406, 2428-33, 2440
 - Alternatives to death by hanging, 2430
 - Background of convicted killers, psychological effects of, 2429-30
 - Commutations, 2430
 - Date of introduction in Senate, question, 2309
 - Deterrent aspect, 2429, 2431, 2432
 - Parole, 2430
 - Psychological and moral aspects, 2432
 - Question of privilege (Hon. Mr. Molson), 2406
 - Recidivist percentages, 2429
 - Unequal aspects of implementing penalties, 2432
 - Vengeful reactions towards violence, 2428-9
 - Wilson, Prof. James Q., study on criminal behaviour, 2431, 2432
- Criminal law, subject matter of Bill C-83 ref to com, 1852-3
- Deputy Leader of the Government in the Senate, reappointment of Hon. Leopold Langlois, 46
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee, 188-9

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

Energy resources

- Conservation of fuel, car awaiting Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, 2209, 2443
- Construction of Arctic gas pipeline, supply of Arctic gas to southern Canada, 2037-8, 2069-70
- Development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2070, 2142
- Government policy re Canadian ownership of companies developing oil and gas on crown lands, 1259-60
- International conference of oil-producing and oil-consuming countries, 605-06, 774-5
- Lighting of government buildings, 606, 1238-9
- Offshore oil and gas resources in Atlantic Provinces, 2070, 2141-2, 2143
- Oil and gas reserves, negotiations between federal government and governments of producing provinces, 2070
- Passamaquoddy-Cobscook Bay, US Corps of Engineers report on, 2210-11
- Prices for crude oil and natural gas, announcement of minister re, 2142-3
- Proposed construction of pipeline from Prince Rupert to Edmonton, 2037
- Proposed pipeline treaty between Canada and United States, 2037
- Energy, Statement of Policy, Proposed Petroleum and Natural Gas Act and New Canada Oil and Gas Land Regulations, 2169-71
 - Background of Statement of Policy, 2171
 - Crude oil and natural gas prices, 2169, 2170
 - Dependency on imported oil, 2170
 - Discretionary powers under new regulations, 2171
 - Domestic energy, increase in prices, 2170
 - Exploration and development in frontier regions of Canada, 2170, 2171
 - Export prices of natural gas, 2170
 - Freeze period on petroleum products prices, 2170
 - Government decisions re crude oil and natural gas prices, 2170
 - National energy strategy for Canada, 2169-70
 - Reduction in average use of energy, 2170
 - Self-reliance on natural gas, 2170

Environment, protection of coastal waters from radio-active pollution, 889, 924

Estimates

- Family allowances, 1084
- Government restraints, 1083
- Loto Canada, 2247-9
- Oil subsidies, 1084
- Purchases of goods and services, 1084, 1085
- Recommendation of Canadian Economic Policy Committee, 1084
- Transfer payments to provinces, 1084
- Unemployment insurance, 1083

Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, rep of National Finance Committee, 1082-5, 1086

European Community, Canada's claim for compensation re loss of preferential access of Canadian commodities to British market, 579-80, 662, 671

- Cheddar cheese, Canadian, 671
- Concessions of interest to Canada, 671
- Negotiations leading to agreements between various countries, 671
- Wheat and barley, 671

Excise Tax bill C-66, 1275-6, 1280

- Building insulation materials, 1277
- Export and import oil commitments, 1275
- Gasoline for personal use and for travel to and from place of business, 1276-7
- Gasoline tax in other countries, 1280
- Nova Scotia home heating costs, 1275
- Subsidy paid by low-income persons, 1276
- Worldwide oil crisis, 1275

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- External Affairs Department, Passport Office, refusal to accept $50 and $100 denominations, 2037, 2077
- Farm Credit bill C-34, 886, 887, 890
 - Rejection by Commons of amdt similar to Senate proposed amdt, 890
- Federal government buildings, Langevin Block and Justice Building, 137
- Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements bill C-57, 1186-7
 - Medicare, government concern and reassessment of programs, 1186-7
 - Home care and clinical supervision, 1186
 - Remote areas, problems of, 1187
 - Shortage of persons in medical profession, 1187
 - UK health services, unsatisfactory operation of, 1186
- Feed grains, freight assistance to Atlantic provinces, 1035
- Felicitations to Hon. Renaude Lapointe, Hon. Paul Martin and others, 26
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, speech at unveiling of portrait of, 469
- Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, 1815, 1860, 1861
- Ferry service between North Sydney and Port Aux Basques, possible increase in fares, 1861
- Fisheries
 - Extension of 200 mile coastal jurisdiction, 2208, 2377
 - Rights of MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to fish Atlantic salmon, 2208, 2264
- Florida land deals, involvement of Canadians in alleged swindle, 1012, 1198
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1028, 1029-30
 - Absolute or unconditional pardon, 1030
 - 'Give', 'trafficking', definition of, 1028-30
 - Regina vs Christiansen*, case cited, 1029
- Foreign affairs
 - Aid to Chile, 1438-9, 1597-8
 - Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3, 2192-3, 2201
 - Special passports of MPs, restrictions on, 2263, 2362-3
- Forestry, devastation by Spruce budworm, 1162, 1163, 1219-20, 1230-2
 - Acreage affected in Ontario, Quebec, Maritimes and Newfoundland, 1219
 - Economic results from destruction, 1219
 - Federal cost-sharing in aerial control programs, 1219-20
 - Lumber companies participation in control, 1220
 - Position statement prepared by Environment Department, 1230-2
 - Effectiveness and efficiency of chemical control, 1230-1
 - Possible alternatives to widespread use of chemicals, 1231-2
 - Scope and effectiveness of environmental monitoring, 1231
 - Task force report, 1220
- Gasoline excise tax, 1101, 1112-13
- Gelinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, the late, 1713
- Gouin, Hon. L.M., retirement from the Senate, 2057
- Government expenditures, 27-28
- Government Expenditures Restraint bill, questions re date of introduction in Senate, 2130, 2159, 2264
- Government Whip in the Senate, appointment of Hon. William J. Petten, 46
- Grain inspectors' dispute, settlement of, 336
- Grain subsidies paid on shipments to Eastern Canadian ports for export, 2156, 2201-02, 2211, 2376-7
- Grey Cup Game, Vancouver, 301
- Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1963, 2199-2200, 2278-9
- Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Co-operation, 1293
- Identity cards for senators, 180

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

Immigration

Gulf Islands, British Columbia, ministerial discretion permits, 2322

Presence in Canada of Xaviera Hollander and Gerda Munsinger, 1007, 1013

Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 649-52

Energy resources, 649-52

Alberta, incremental royalty, 650

Corporate tax reduction, 652

Exploration expenditures write-off, 652

Federal-provincial agreements, 649-51

Government revenue loss, 651, 652

Prices, 650

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1992-2002, 2274, 2337, 2396-7

British law re purchase of advertising on foreign stations, 1994

Broadcasting, 1998-2002

Bellingham station, 1998-2002

Mexican border stations, 2000-01

UHF TV, Vancouver, 2000

Warmetco station, 1999

Canada-US relations, 1994, 2000

Canadian advertising in Time, 1993

Discussions with Committee Chairman re amtds, 2274

Freedom of advertising, 1993

Mexican President's statement re relations with US, 1995-6

Time and Reader's Digest, 1993-8

Advertising revenue, 1994

Subscription rate, Canada and US, 1995-6

Indians and Eskimos

Manitoba Brotherhood, request to appear before Senate committee, 316

Recruitment development program, 569

Industry, textile imports affecting Canadian industry, 901-02, 945-8

Dollar value of imported suits or suiting, 901

Government concern and study of problem, 901-02, 945-6

Import control list, 946

International Trade in Textiles, agreement re, 947

Polyester-cotton fabrics, sources of imports and processing of, 946

Polyester filament yarn, duty surtax on, 946

Restraints to be implemented on imports of men's suits, acrylic yarn, knit fabrics and nylon, 901

Textile and Clothing Board, role of, 946

Inquiry into imports of certain fabrics and clothing, 946-7

Inflation, 27 (See Canadian economy)

Inman, Hon. Elsie F., illness of, 1931

Insulin, production of, 110-11

Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1825-6, 1846-8, 1857-9, 1920-2, 1930-1

Drury, Hon. Charles Mills, resignation offer and rejection by Prime Minister, 1890-3, 1920-2

Ouellet, Hon. Andre, resignation because of pending contempt of court appeal, 1890-3, 1920-2

Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., the late, 324

Labour conditions

Montreal Police Force, threatened strike, 849

Strike of longshoremen in Quebec, back-to-work legislation, 833, 838-9, 840, 846, 849, 855, 867, 888, 900-01, 912

Withdrawal of services by longshoremen at Montreal, 1006-07

Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 532

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee
 - Expenses, 526
 - Meetings during Senate sittings, 543
- Liberal Caucus, invitation to members of Opposition, 1868
- MacKay, Hon. John, Lieutenant Governor of Prince Edward Island, the late, 135
- MacKenzie, Hon. Norman, visitor to Senate, 1303
- Marine safety, British Columbia fisheries, 1814-15, 1860
- Marine safety, request for air and sea rescue unit in Newfoundland, 1860
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate, 208-09
- Meighen, Right Hon. Arthur, the late, portrait of, 564
- Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, 574, 580
 - Subject-matter ref to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 774, 779-80
- Money bills, Senate authority to amend, 1656
- Montreal police force, threatened strike, 849
- Motor Vehicle Tire Safety bill S-8, 150, 151
- Multiculturalism, Ministry of State, organization and budget, 849, 866
- Narcotics, study of legislation by Senate committee, 316
- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1667, 1671
- National interests and unity, 28-30
- National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2161, 2162-3
 - Excerpt from speech of Treasury Board President, 2162-3
 - Method of authorization for lottery, 2163
- National museums, storage of Canadiana, 2209; artisanship by John D. Howe, 2217
- National Press Gallery, invitation to reception, 61
- New Brunswick storm damage, possibility of federal aid, 1720-1, 1729-30
- Newfoundland, CNR services, 1868, 1903
- Newfoundland, financial assistance for Come-By-Chance refinery, 1860
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1727-8
 - Canada's community of interests, 1727-8
 - Warsaw Pact, 1727-8
- Northwest Territories, Senate appointment, 1772, 1778
- Nova Scotia, storm damage, 135-6, 1766
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to Argentina, 1975, 2142
- Nuclear reactors, sale by Canada to India, 1869, 1975
- Official languages
 - Implementation of resolution re, report to Parliament tabled, 289-90
 - Language rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2386
- Oil export tax, 1264, 1265-6
- O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2034
- Ontario and Quebec Provincial Police, financial compensation by federal government, 962-3
 - Advantages to contracting provinces in use of RCMP, 962-3
 - Federal-provincial negotiations, 963
 - RCMP operations in Ontario and Quebec, 963
- Pacific Western Airlines, possible move of head office to Calgary, 1824-5, 1859, 1868-9, 2376, 2444
- Palestinian Liberation Organization, position taken by Canadian delegation at United Nations meeting, 110, 137-8
- Parliamentary reform, 28-29
- Parliament Buildings
 - Commercial use of Centre Block picture on Christmas cards, 1765
 - Commercial use of Parliamentary Library picture by The Publishers Clearing House, 1764-5
 - East Block, use of rooms by senators, proposal, 110
 - Senate, use of rooms by members of Commons and others, 110

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Parole, consideration of changes in present system, 1371
- Passports
 - Restrictions on special passports of MPs, article in Globe and Mail, 2262-3, 2362-3, 2443
 - Use of diplomatic and special passports for travel to Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4
- Penitentiaries, proposed construction of medium security prison in Saint John, 1916-17, 1922-3
- Penitentiaries, recommendations of Special Joint Committee, implementation of, 2200, 2249
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 906-07
 - Alberta-Ontario-Quebec prices, 907
 - 'Political price fixing', 906
 - Prices vs international political price fixing, 906
 - Provincial royalties, 907
 - Provisions to achieve uniform price, consumer and producer protection, 906-07
- Political Parties, possible RCMP investigation, 2063
- Post Office, opinion of Anti-Inflation Board re settlement with Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1597
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1285, 1319, 1355, 1370-1, 1403, 1409-10, 1416-17, 1428, 1429, 1430, 1439, 1459, 1468
- Prerogatives of Prime Minister, orders in council re, 1349, 1355
- Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1763, 1764
- Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to Paris, news report re accompanying officials, 161, 180
- Privileges and immunities of senators, motion for appointment of special committee, 1434-6; Order discharged and motion withdrawn, 1733-4
 - Hiring of counsel and staff, 1435
 - Terms of reference, 1433
- Privileges of Parliament
 - Parliamentary Library, commercial use of picture of, 1729, 1764-5
- Progressive Conservative Party of Canada, leadership convention, 1778, 1813
- Public Service
 - Bank's refusal to cash government cheques, 1974-5, 2003-04, 2008
 - Commission, new offices, interior wall decoration, 1930, 1975-6
 - Salary bracket of $60,000, 889
 - Strike of general labour and trades group, 642
- Public Works
 - Langevin Building, costs of renovations under headings of structural, mechanical, decoration and communications, 2243
- Quebec Official Language Act, decision of federal government on petition, 912, 924-5
- Queen Elizabeth, celebration of Silver Jubilee in Canada, 1318-19, 1403
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1639-40, 1662-3, 1664, 1665-6
- Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, newspaper article re Chairman Senator Forsey, 794
- Representation bill, 1974 C-36, 420-3, 437-8, 439-40
 - Quebec, 421
 - Representation by population, 421
 - Statistics of provincial representations, 422-3, 437, 439, 440
- Restaurant of Parliament, source of meat supplies, 1007, 1012-13
- Rowe, Hon. Frederick William, publication of book, Education and Culture in Newfoundland, 2308-09
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1209
- Rules of the Senate
 - Initiation of money bills, 887
 - Point of order, amending of money bills, 886
 - Excerpts from Commons Standing Orders and from Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms re, 886
 - Referral of items to National Finance Committee, 1109, 1110
 - Suspension of rule 95 re private bills, 1209
 - Use of unparliamentary language, 1109

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

- Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fares, 1815, 1816, 1846
- St. John the Baptist Day, 2259
- St. Lawrence Islands National Park, government expenditures on, 1549-50, 1588
- St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59, 817-18, 821, 826-7
 - Government policy in conciliation matters, 826
 - Grain supplies in Quebec, 826
 - Injunctions obtained by private interests, 827
 - Maritime Employers Assoc. and International Longshoremen's Assoc., 817, 818
 - Mediator Charles Poirier (1975), 817
 - Mediator Judge Alan Gold (1974), 817
 - Parliamentary responsibility in settlement of dispute, 817
 - Penalty clause, 827
 - Rate of pay, 818
- St. Patrick's Day, 1902
- Saskatchewan, safety of Gardiner Dam, 2179, 2377
- Science Policy Committee, 1259
- Senate
 - Adjournment from afternoon to evening sitting, 1108, 1110
 - Adjournment, summer, 1280
 - Business, 31, 60-61, 222, 255-6, 454-5, 713, 714, 723, 848-9, 878-9, 1091, 1107, 1111, 1250, 1261-4, 1265, 1286-7, 1653-4, 1661, 1682, 1686, 1712, 1717, 1718-19, 1875-6, 1879, 1880, 1914-16, 1954-5, 1966, 2356
 - Committees, work of, 28-29
 - 'Consecutive sitting days', 31
 - Monday evening sittings, question of, 1879, 1880
 - Photographing of precincts and of senators for distribution to Canadian embassies, 473
 - Protective staff, summer uniforms, 1156, 1213-14
 - Reform, article in Globe and Mail quoting statements of Prime Minister, 47
 - Role of, 28-29
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 856-9, 879-80
 - Commissioners to be appointed by Governor in Council for annual inquiry into allowances, 858
 - Comparisons with newspaper reporters and editors, 857
 - Economic problems of members of Parliament, 879
 - Expenses and travel allowances, 858
 - Food retailing industry, salaries, 879
 - Indemnities and allowances, adjustment of, 857, 859
 - Industrial composite index (1970-74), 857
 - Opposition members, 858
 - Provincial legislature allowances, 858
 - Senate and Commons, sitting days and hours of work, 880
 - Service to the public, importance of, 879-80
- Senate (Intersessional Authority) bill S-22, 770-1
 - Administration of internal economy of Senate between sessions, 771
 - BNA Act provisions re privileges, immunities and powers of Senate, 771
 - Committee meetings between sessions, 772
 - Intersessional authority, question of money bill concept, 771
 - Royal prerogative, necessity of, 771
- Sessions of Parliament, 1903
- Small Farms Development Program
 - Farm management consultants, 2079
 - Number of loans approved for provinces, 1197-8
- Smith, Hon. George Isaac, introduced in the Senate, 1282
- Spain, King Juan Carlos I, attendance at coronation of, 1485

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - Continued

Sports

Congratulations to Montreal Canadiens on winning of the Stanley Cup, 2199

Congratulations to Newfoundland Rink on winning of the Canadian Men's Curling Championship, 1889

Springhill, N.S., fire disaster, possibility of federal aid, 1242

Tailoring service for Senate and Commons, 2167

Tax treaties or conventions with other countries, 855, 867, 925, 942

Televising of committee proceedings, 509, 510, 513, 548-9

Television commercial advertising of Guaranty Trust, use of picture of Parliament Buildings, 556, 564, 959-7

Transportation

Bilingual air traffic services, Commission of Inquiry, 2261-2, 2322, 2335, 2352-3

Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 889, 924

Disruption of airline services in Canada, 2237, 2243, 2249-50, 2258-9

Memorandum of Understanding between the Minister of Transport and the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association, 2276-7

Trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island, 1903, 1922

Transport Minister Hon. Jean Marchand, rumour of resignation, 573

Unemployment Insurance bill C-69, 1693, 1694

Opposition criticisms of bill, 1693-4

Persons 65 years and over, 1694

Studies of systems in other countries, 1693

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, invitation to send Canadian Parliamentarians to Russia, 1250-1, 1257

United Kingdom Prime Minister Harold Wilson, visit to Ottawa, 473, 480

United Nations Assembly resolution re Zionism, 1411, 1417, 1439

United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants, 1166, 1238, 1242-4, 1248-9

Canada's participation in refugee relief, peacekeeping and ceasefire missions, 1244

Current discord at international conferences, 1238

Resolution adopted by General Assembly inviting PLO to attend, 1238

South Africa, exclusion from UN, 1243-4

Statement of Secretary of State for External Affairs re government decision, 1248-9

United Nations Peacekeeping Force, pension benefits for dependants of Canadian soldier killed in Cyprus, 768

Uranium of Canada, Limited, proposed referral of report to National Finance Committee, 1639

Victoria Memorial Museum, rumoured change of name, 1035, 1165

Visitors to Parliament, abatement of noise in precincts, 1012

Welfare ministers' conference, statement by Minister of NHW re federal policy in social welfare field, 556, 564

West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12, 77-78, 80, 89-93, 94

Basic hourly rate, 78, 92

Conciliation commissioner, Dr. Neil Perry, recommendations of, 77-78, 89-90, 91-92

Consultations between government representatives and company officials in Saskatoon, 91

Cost-of-living and pension proposals, 94

Industrial Inquiry Commission, proposal of Labour minister, 78

Legislative proposals, 78

Term of collective agreement, 78, 80, 89

West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 724-5, 728-30

Collective agreement provisions, 725

Disruption to economy due to strike, 724, 725

Mediator W. Kelly, Labour Assist. Deputy Minister for Industrial Relations, 724

Perrault, Hon. Raymond J., P.C., Leader of the Government in the Senate - *ConcludedWest Coast Ports Operations bill C-56 - *Concluded

- Negotiations process, 724
- Non-supervisory and supervisory longshoremen, 724
- Penalty for failure to comply with legislation, 729-30
- Stevedoring companies and ship and dock foremen, 724
- Time limit on proceedings of arbitrator, 728

Wheat Board

- Adjustment payments to grain producers, 1297
- Annual report, 732-3

Petro-Canada

- Authorized capital, 1178
- Control by Governor in Council, 1218
- Crown corporations's assets, 1216
- "Energy Policy for Canada - Phase I, Vol. I, Analysis", 1216
- Equity and debt investment for Petro-Canada, 1216
- Establishment of national petroleum company as crown corporation, 1178, 1215
- Excerpt from minister's statements re petroleum industry, 1215
- Foreign control, 1217
- Government policies detrimental to small companies, 1215, 1216
- Private sector achievements, 1215-16
- Revenues for exploration, 1217
- Sale of government interest in Panarctic Oils, 1178
- Scope of activities, 1178-9
- Speakers: Senators
 - Cook, Eric, 1178-9, 1218
 - Grosart, Allister, 1215-18

Petro-Canada bill C-8. 1r, 1174; 2r, 1178-9, 1215-18; ref to com, 1218; rep without amdt, 1244; 3r, 1251; r.a., 1281

Petroleum administration

- Alberta Energy Board, 926
- Alberta-Ontario-Quebec prices, 907
- Alberta-Saskatchewan-British Columbia, oil production for national consumption, 914, 925
- Consumer and producer protection, 903, 906-07, 916
- Control of profits to ensure reinvestment in exploration and development, 905-06, 914
- Cost compensation, 851
- Crude oil prices, 851, 903, 904
- Domestic oil, 862
 - Administration of interprovincial trade, 862
 - Exercise of federal power, 862
 - Federal-provincial agreements, 862
 - Licences for interprovincial transactions, 862
 - Penalties for default of provisions, 862
 - Price restraints, 862
- Dwindling of irreplaceable resources, 903, 926
- Elements creating instability and uncertainty in oil exploration, 904-05
- Exchange of energy between US and Canada in certain regions, 905
- Federal-provincial relations and national unity in solving of problems, 903-04, 915-16
- Federal-provincial temporary arrangements, controversy re, 913
- Frontier oil, 913
- Natural gas, price restraints and controls, 914

Petroleum administration - Concluded

- Nuclear and other energy components, control of, 914-15
- Petroleum export voluntary charge payable to National Energy Board, 861-2
- Political price-fixing, 902-07, 915
- Prices, 906, 914, 925-6
- Pricing of Crude Oil*, by Taki Rifai, 926-7
- Production costs, 926
- Provincial royalties, 907, 913
- Sarnia-Montreal pipeline, 915
- Use of petroleum products in various sectors, extent of, 913

Speakers: Senators

- Flynn, Jacques, 982, 1002
- Grosart, Allister, 912-16
- Hays, Harry, 861-3, 934-5
- Macnaughton, Alan A., 981-2
- Manning, Ernest C., 902-06, 907
- Perrault, Raymond J., 906-07
- Prowse, J. Harper, 925-7

Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 1r, 847; 2r, 861-3, 902-07, 912-16, 925-7, 934-5; ref to com, 936; rep with amdts, 981-2, 1002; motion to amend French version, 1013; 3r, 1013; Commons concurrence in Senate amdts, 1034; r.a., 1095

Petten, Hon. William J., Chief Government Whip in the Senate

- Agriculture Committee, meetings during Senate sittings, 1022
- Appointment to office of Government Whip, 46
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, meetings during Senate sittings, 1006
- Committee meetings, schedule of, 828
- Investigations in Parliament, 1479
- National Finance Committee, meetings during Senate sittings, 774, 827
- Senate business, 774, 828, 1022, 1036

Phillips, Hon. Orville H.

- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1575, 1583-4
 - Appeals, 1583
 - Motion for amdt, 1583
 - Regulations, 1583
 - Termination clause, 1575
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2104-05
 - Appeal Tribunal members, 2106
 - Backlog of appeals to board, 2105
 - Financial Times survey re percentages of wage settlements, 2105
 - Government spending, 2105
 - Inflationary effects of high interest rates, food, fuel and transportation costs, 2104
 - Maritime wage settlements, 2104, 2106
 - Money supply, 2105
 - Women's professional and business groups, 2104
- Anti-inflation program
 - Budget reduction in Regional Economic Expansion Dept., 1683
 - Government rejection of Board's opinion re postal workers' contract, 1627, 1655
 - Wage guidelines, 1683
- Appropriation bill No. 2, 1976 C-91, 1984-6

Phillips, Hon. Orville H. - Continued

Canadian economy

- Attack on Inflation – a program of national action, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1312-14
 - Anti-Inflation Board, 1314
 - CBC News Magazine* commentary re financial operations of business groups, 1314
 - Conferences with provincial finance and labour ministers, 1312
 - Cost-of-living index (1970-75), 1312-13
 - Deputy ministers' salaries, 1314
 - Government expenditures, 1313-14
 - Interest rates, 1313, 1314
 - Low income groups, 1313, 1314
 - Mirabel Airport, 1314
 - No-interest loans to foreign countries, 1314
 - Parliamentary and other governmental restraints, 1313
 - Regional disparities, 1313
 - Voluntary restraints, 1313

Canadian Labour Congress, salary increases for officers, 2159, 2209-10

Compensation for Former Prisoners of War bill C-92, 2039-40

- Carleton University award of Rip Van Winkle award to Veterans Affairs Minister, 2039-40
- Evaders and escapees, 2040
- Prisoners of war held at Dieppe, 2040
- Prisoners of war held by Japanese, 2040
- Widows' allowances, 2040

Energy resources

- Prices for crude oil and natural gas, announcement by minister re, 2142

Energy, statement of policy re oil and gas, 2179-81

- Berger inquiry, 2180
- Canada-US relations, 2179
- Development of frontier resources, 2180
- Electricity costs, Atlantic provinces, 2181
- Energy conservation, gas and oil, 2179-80
- Exploration regulations, 2181
- Hydroelectric power generation, statement of Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, 2180
- Nuclear energy, 2180
- Oil prices, 2181
- Petro-Canada, 2181-2
- Provincial exports of energy, 2180

Estimates

- Bilingualism, 1986
- Housing grants, 1986
- Lockheed long-range patrol aircraft, 1984-5
- Nova Scotia heating costs, 1985
- Oil subsidies to Ottawa Valley line, 1985
- Olympic Games deficit, 1985, 1986
- Percentage increase in government expenditures, 1984
- Transport Department reductions, 1985-6
- Two-price wheat system, 1985

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1036-7

- Fingerprinting, 1037
- Parole or pardon, 1037
- Summary conviction or conviction upon indictment, 1036

Medical Care bill C-68, 2357-8

- Federal-provincial conferences, 2357, 2358
- New Brunswick refusal to participate in medicare program, 2357
- Nursing homes, 2358

Phillips, Hon. Orville H. - Concluded

- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1669-71, 1675, 1676
 - AHOP, 1676
 - Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., 1670
 - First purchase, question of, 1676
 - Grants and repayable loans, 1670
 - Housing costs, 1669
 - Mortgage arrangements, 1670
 - Mortgage funds, diversion to low and moderately-priced housing, 1669
 - Processing of applications, 1670
 - Refinancing of mortgage, 1676
 - Rental accommodation, 1670
 - Servicing of land, 1669
 - Single parent family, 1670, 1676
 - Standards, 1669-70, 1675
- Old Age Security bill C-62, 1123-5
 - Discrimination reflecting on Bill of Rights, 1124
 - Inflation and cost of living, 1123
 - Joint application, 1124
 - Married or common-law status, 1124
 - Statistics on recipients and benefits, 1123-4
 - Termination of allowance upon husband's death, 1124
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1370, 1371
- Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks bill S-35, 2132
- Quarantine bill S-31, 1785-6
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1663, 1666
- Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28, 1205-06
 - Assets or property, branch holdings, 1206
 - Closing of small branches due to membership drop, 1205-06
 - Legion background, 1205
 - War veterans allowance, 1205
 - Youth programs, 1205
- Transportation, BNA Act as it pertains to, 2063-6
- Transportation, flight delays due to labour dispute, 2062-3, 2168

Point of order

- Adjournment from afternoon to evening sitting, 1110
- Amending of money bills, 886-8
 - Excerpt from The Modern Senate of Canada, 887
 - Precedents of amdts by the Senate, 887
 - Rights of Senate in Matters of Financial Legislation, report of special committee, 887-8
- Appropriation bill, 387-8, 390
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill, discussion on amdt, 1015
- Initiation of money bills, 887
- Investigations in Parliament, 1477-8
- Minister speaking on behalf of government, 1202
- Motion presented and seconded by senators not present, 944
 - Speaker's statement re, 944
- Question of privilege re Air Canada service, 506-07
- Question of privilege re Green Paper on Conflict of Interest, 779-81
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1666
- Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, motion re, 952
- Senate reform, discussion out of order, 1578-9
- Unscheduled speakers taking part in debate, 560
- See Privilege, question of

Police forces

- Montreal police, threatened strike, 849
- Murder of Moncton policemen, 529, 561
- Ontario and Quebec provincial police, financial compensation for maintenance, 501-04, 537-40, 567-9, 603
- Motion for referral to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 954-5, 962-6, agreed, 966

Polish Ambassador, His Excellency Jozef Czesak and Mrs. Czesak, visitors to Senate, 1442

Political Parties, possible RCMP investigation, 2063

Post Office

- Anti-Inflation Board's opinion re settlement with Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1597
- Government rejection of Anti-Inflation Board's opinion re contract settlement, 1627-8
- Strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1285, 1319, 1355, 1370-1, 1409-10, 1416-17, 1428-31, 1454, 1459, 1468

Poverty in Canada

- Children in poverty, report by National Council of Welfare, 625-6
- Real and fraudulent poverty, 241
- Report of Special Senate Committee, updated, 281-2, 626
- Unequal distribution of wealth, 475
- Work ethic in Canada, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518
- Working poor, 283

Prairie grain advance payments (Bill C-10)

- Abuses of cash advances, question of, 615
- Corporate farms, partnerships, cooperatives or farming enterprises, 596, 614
- Crowsnest Pass Agreement, 598
- DREE, 599
- Elevator companies, question of commission for, 596, 597, 615
- Flax, 597-8
- Grants and subsidies to railways, 599
- Increase in advance payment to $15,000, 595, 614
- Instigation of Act by Conservative government, 614
- Investment of cash advance payments, 615, 622
- Labour problems and effect on wheat and farm industry, 600
- Loans in relation to land values, 596-7
- Option to deliver on quota system or by offboard sales, 596
- Prices and production costs, 615
- Railway branch lines, proposed removal of, 598-9
- Repayment record, 615

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 597-9, 600, 602
- Benidickson, W. M., 615
- Buckwold, Sidney L., 599, 600
- Flynn, Jacques, 599, 600
- McDonald, A. Hamilton, 595-7, 615, 621-2
- Sparrow, Herbert O., 598, 599
- Yuzk, Paul, 614-15

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10. 1r, 583; 2r, 595-601, 614-15, 621-2; ref to com, 622; rep without amdt, 684; 3r, 709; r.a., 731

Prairie grain advance payments (Bill C-53)

Damp or tough or unthreshed grain, 1156, 1166, 1167
 Date of coming into force of act, 1157
 Offboard sales, 1156-7
 Persons authorized to purchase grain for board, 1166
 Provisions re initial price, interest, deliveries, etc., 1156
 Repayment statistics and defaults, 1156, 1167

Speakers: Senators

Molgat, Gildas L., 1156-7, 1167-8
 Yuzyk, Paul, 1157, 1166-7

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 2) C-53. 1r, 1136; 2r, 1156-7, 1166-8; ref to com, 1168; rep without amdt, 1180; 3r, 1198; r.a., 1281

Prime Minister of Canada

Inaccuracies in pamphlet issued by Information Canada regarding Prime Ministers of Canada, 1757
 Orders in Council concerning prerogatives of Prime Minister, 1349, 1355
 Visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1763-4
 Visit to Paris, news report re accompanying officials, 161, 180
See Trudeau, Right Hon. Pierre Elliott, P.C., Prime Minister of Canada

Prince Edward Island

Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, possible increase in fares, 1815
 Judges, 1005, 1040-3, 1051-3, 1066, 1080, 1095
 MacKay, Hon. John, Lieutenant Governor, the late, 135
 Matheson, Hon. Alexander W., the late, former Premier, 1861-2
 Trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, 1903, 1922
 Transportation, 73
 Tuna fishing and revenue from, 74
 Unemployment insurance for rural residents, 74

Printing of Parliament, Joint Committee

Members

Commons, 60

Senate, 109

Printing and distribution of bills, question, 61

Private bills

See Bills, general data,
 Bills, Private, Commons,
 Bills, Private, Senate.

Privilege, question of Air Canada service

Ottawa-Halifax, 1479-80

Point of order re, 506-07

Allegations of conflict of interest re Sky Shops Export Ltd. (Senator Giguère), 1348

Privilege, question of - Concluded

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Appearance of Gerda Munsinger on TV program, answer to inquiry, 1256-7, 1618-19

La Presse report of statement by Senator Lamontagne, 1165-6

Canadian Labour Congress, political affiliation, 2153, 2154

Canadian Press report of statements made by Leader of the Government re matter concerning Senator Giguère, 1395-7

CTV News report on death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as Conservative member of Parliament, 1241

Comment of government leader re remarks of Senator Croll, 198

Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, Senator Croll, 779-81

Conflict of interest, interpretation of, 1308-09

Conflict of interest re withdrawal of senator from debate on Combines Investigation bill C-2, 1315-16

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, press article re passage of, 2406

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee

Unauthorized release to press of draft report, 1755-6

Immigration policy, unauthorized press publication of draft report of Special Joint Committee, 1285-6

Investigations in Parliament, 1476-9

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, meeting in camera, 1770-1

National Defence and Criminal Code bill S-23, adjournment of Orders of the Day for second reading, 1459

Newfoundland, CTV references to, 2215-16

Omission of motion and of Speaker's ruling from Minutes of Proceedings, 961

Parliamentary immunity, 1398-1403

Statement by Leader of the Government, 1409

Parliamentary Library, commercial use of picture of, 1729, 1764-5

Publishing industry, letter from Hon. Mr. Davey to Globe and Mail re editorial entitled 'Whittling Down a Freedom', 582, 641-2

Right to invoke any rule of the Senate, 198

Senate, articles by Senator Rowe, press report of, 480

Team Canada, press report of speech by Senator Godfrey, 98-99

Third reading of Bill C-58, absence of Hon. Mr. Davey, 2450

See Point of order

Privileges and immunities (international organizations)

European Community, 957-8

Comprehensive economic cooperation agreement, 957

Ottawa office, establishment of, 957-8

Recommendations of Foreign Affairs Committee, 957

Visit of Prime Minister to Community, 957

Speakers: Senators

Grosart, Allister, 958

van Roggen, George C., 957-8

Privileges and Immunities (International Organizations) bill S-25. 1r, 934; 2r, 957-8; 3r, 973; r.a., 1281Privileges and immunities of senators, 1395-7, 1398-1403, 1409, 1434-6

Motion for appointment of special committee, 1434-6; Order stands, 1458

Hiring of counsel and staff, 1435

Search warrants, procedure for dealing with, 1434

Sky Shops Export Limited, alleged conflict of interest (Senator Giguere), 1348, 1395-7, 1398-1403, 1434-6

Terms of reference, 1434

Privileges of Parliament

Ottawa Citizen article re comments of Senator F. W. Rowe, 1777

See also Inquiries,
Privilege, Question of,
Questions.

Privy Council

Clerk of the Privy Council, 465

Secretary to the Cabinet for Federal-Provincial Relations, 465-6

Progressive Conservative Party of Canada

Best wishes for successful leadership convention, 1778

Congratulations on election of leader, 1813-14

Property qualification of senators

Return presented, 242

Supplementary return authorized, 242; supplementary return tabled, 472

Proprietary or patent medicine and trade marks (Bill S-9)

Authority for making regulations, 128, 157

Certificates for registration, 127

Continuous scientific review of medicine, 156

Herbal medicinals, 156

Listing of ingredients, 157

Proprietary division of food and drug regulations, 127

Quality, manufacture, safety and effectiveness of proprietary medicines, regulations re, 127, 157

Royal patent, 156

TV advertising, detrimental aspects, 128, 156, 157

Speakers: Senators

Bonnell, M. Lorne, 126-7, 128

Buckwold, Sidney L., 127, 128

Grosart, Allister, 128

Langlois, Leopold, 156-7

Macdonald, John M., 157

Sullivan, Joseph A., 155-6, 157

Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks bill S-9. 1r, 47; 2r, 126-8, 155-7; ref to com, 157; rep with
amdt, 240, 245; 3r, 253; r.a., 832

Proprietary or patent medicine and trade marks (Bill S-35)

Excerpt from speech by Hon. Marc Lalonde, 2126

Federal-provincial consultation, 2126

Self-medication, 2126

Speakers: Senators

Cottreau, Ernest G., 2125-6

Phillips, Orville H., 2132

Proprietary or Patent Medicine and Trade Marks bill S-35. 1r, 2103; 2r, 2125-6, 2132; 3r, 2144; r.a., 2207

Prorogation of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament

Speech from the Throne, Rt. Hon. Bora Laskin, P.C., 2453

Prowse, Hon. J. Harper (Deceased Sept. 28/76)

- Alberta-British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 219, 225
 - Boundary Commission, composition of, 219, 225
 - Federal-provincial agreement on boundary lines, 225
 - Strip-mining operations, effects on boundary lines, 219, 225
- Appropriation bill No. 4, 1974 C-42, 388
- Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 560-2, 589
 - Deterrent aspects, 562
 - Excerpt from Code re responsibility for carrying out sentence, 560-1
 - Jury and judge responsibility in sentence of death, 562
 - Louis Riel case* cited, 561
 - Murder of Moncton policemen, 561
 - Nuremberg* trials, 561, 562
 - Royal prerogative, 562
 - Vengeance vs justice, 561-2
- Distribution of document in Senate chamber, 644
- Excise Tax bill C-66, 1271, 1277-8
 - Gasoline for personal use, 1278
 - Prices, 1277
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 382-5, 1048-9
 - Convictions for possession, 1047
 - 'Give', definition of, 1047
 - LeDain Commission, 383
 - Parole or pardon, 1048
 - Penalty for trafficking or possession, 1047-8
 - Teenagers use of drugs, 383-4
- Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 616-20, 652-3
 - Coal, 619-20
 - Annual report of South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corp., 619
 - Oil industry, 616-20
 - Alberta, 617-19; oil and gas conservation board, 618
 - Export tax, 617
 - Great Canadian Oil Sands, 619
 - Prices, 617, 618, 619, 652
 - Pricing of Crude Oil, Economic and Strategic Guidelines for International Energy Policy*, by Taki Rifai, 618
 - Production costs, 618
 - Royalties, 617
 - Tar Sands, 619, 620
- Northwest Territories Representation bill S-22, 594-5
- Parliamentary immunity, question of privilege, 1398-1401, 1402
- Petroleum Administration bill C-32, 925-7
 - Alberta Energy Board, 926
 - Alberta-Saskatchewan-British Columbia, oil production for national consumption, 925
 - Depletion of natural resources, 926
 - Prices, 925-6
 - Pricing of Crude Oil*, by Taki Rifai, 926-7
 - Production costs, 926
- Senate and House of Commons
 - Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 953
- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 878-9
 - Provincial government remuneration, 878-9
- Senate business, 484

Prowse, Hon. J. Harper - Concluded

Senate (Intersessional Authority) bill S-22, 772-3

Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, difficulties encountered between sessions because of impending election, 722

Sittings of Senate committees during election periods, question of feasibility of, 772

Televising of committee proceedings, 509

West Coast Ports Operations bill C-56, 727

Labour unions and management, irresponsibility in not reaching agreement, 727

Right to strike, 727

Public bills

See Bills, general data,

Bills, Public, Commons,

Bills, Public, Senate.

Public Service

Bank's refusal to cash government cheques, 1974-5, 2003-04, 2008

Civil Service insurance, 712, 766-7, 770, 775, 832

Commission, new offices, interior wall decoration, 1930, 1975-6

Employees in $60,000 bracket, 876, 889

Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Senate Committee, 160, 188-9, 1545-7

Reclassification of economists, sociologists and statisticians, Treasury Board action re, 2318-21

Recommendation to establish permanent Staff Relations Board, 998

Strikes of general labour and trades group, 642

Workload of present board, 999

See Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Special Joint Committee

Public Service employment, staff relations, superannuation

Federal-provincial relations, 465, 466

Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet, 465, 466; responsibilities, 466

Privy Council functions, 465

Speakers: Senators

Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 466

Forsey, Eugene A., 466

McIlraith, George, 464-5, 466

Public Service Employment, Staff Relations, Superannuation, Interpretation bill C-38. 1r, 464; 2r, 464-6; 3r, 466-7; r.a., 467

Public Service staff relations

Apolitical aspect of board appointments, 1236

Authority of chairman to appoint outside arbitrator, 1237, 1245

Backlog of work of board, 1236-7, 1245

Board composition and responsibilities, 1236-7, 1246-7

Term of office, 1245, 1246-7

Finkleman report, 1235-6

Topics involving committee recommendations, 1235

Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 1235-7, 1245-6

Flynn, Jacques, 1245, 1246

Macdonald, John M., 1245

Public Service Staff Relations bill C-70. 1r, 1235; 2r, 1235-7, 1244-6; 3r, 1251; r.a., 1281

Public Works

Langevin Building, costs of renovations under headings of structural, mechanical, decoration and communications, 2243

Publishing industry, 62, 556, 564, 582-3

Globe and Mail article by J. Carruthers re Time magazine, 582-3

Letter from Senator Davey to Globe and Mail re editorial entitled 'Whittling Down a Freedom', 582

Television commercial advertising of Guaranty Trust, use of picture of Parliament Buildings, 556, 564, 956-7

Time and Reader's Digest magazines, tax concessions in advertising, 582

Time magazine, brief presented to members of Commons, 62

Quarantine

Black death of Europe and London plague, 1786

Cleansing or removal of infested or contaminated conveyance, 1779

Detention by quarantine officer or permission to proceed, 1779

Extension of provisions to include other dangerous diseases, 1779

Immigration (1847) causing ship-fever, typhus and cholera, 1786

Grosse Isle monument to victims, 1786

Medical examination, 1779-80

Research scientists, tribute to, 1786-7

Pasteur, Fleming and Snow, 1787

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 1786-7

McGrand, Fred A., 1778-80

Phillips, Orville H., 1785-6

Quarantine bill S-31. 1r, 1763; 2r, 1778-80, 1785-7, 1788; ref to com, 1788; rep without amdt, 1874; 3r, 1893; r.a., 2096

Quart, Hon. Josie D.

Canadian Sovereignty Symbol bill C-373, 687, 709

Importation of beavers from US for Grey Owl film, 709

Environmental Contaminants bill C-25, 1404-05

DDT and other chemicals, dangerous effects of, 1404

Federal-provincial consultations, 1404

Government authority to obtain information re environment and manufactured substances, 1404

Habitat, United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, 1964

International Women's Year, 671-4

Honorary aide-de-camp to Governor General, Colonel Mary Vallance, 672

Protest speech of student at public meeting contest, 673-4

Royal Commission on the Status of Women, 672

Song of Equality, by Jacqueline Lemay, 673

Speaker of the Senate, Hon. Renaude Lapointe, 671-3

Symbol of Why Not buttons, comments of Hon. Marc Lalonde, women MPs and others, 672-3

UN conference on ways and means to end discrimination against women, 672

UN disregard of women's rights in appointments to principal positions, 672

UN resolution re International Women's Year, 672

Quebec

- Bill 22 on use of French language, 54-58
 - Administrative discretion, 57
 - Constitutionality of, 56-57
 - Universities, 57-58
- Construction industry, pardon granted to Dede Desjardins, 1035, 1066
- Labour conditions, strike of longshoremen, 833, 838-9, 840, 846, 849, 855, 867, 888, 912
- Legal profession statistics, 625
- Official Language Act, question re government decision on petition, 829, 912
- Provincial police, 501-04, 537-40, 567-9, 603, 954-5, 962-6
- St. Lawrence ports operations, 817-27, 832
- Statutes of Canada (references to Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec) 243, 274-7, 291-3, 301, 467

Quebec and Ontario Provincial Police

- Motion to authorize Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee to consider financial compensation by federal government, 954-5, 962-6, agreed, 966

Quebec Provincial Police financial compensation for maintenance, 501-04, 537-40, 567-9, 603, 954-5, order withdrawn, 966

- Agreements between federal-provincial governments for services of RCMP, 501
 - Financial implications, 501, 502, 538
- Compensation claims, 501
- Conferences and correspondence between Quebec Justice Minister and Solicitor General, 503, 538-9
- Constitutional jurisdiction of provinces over police matters, 539
- Opting-out formula, 539
- Police administration costs, 503-04, 568
- Police Costs - Where are all those Millions?*, booklet issued by Quebec Justice Dept., 538
- Separatism, danger of upsurge as result of federal-provincial differences on subject, 540
- Staff and equipment, lack of facilities in Quebec to fight organized crime, 538
- Speakers: Senators
 - Asselin, Martial, 537-40
 - Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 501-04
 - Desruisseaux, Paul, 567-8
 - Flynn, Jacques, 603
 - Manning, Ernest C., 568-9

Queen Elizabeth, Her Majesty, celebration of Silver Jubilee in Canada, 1318-19, 1403Question of Privilege, 98-99, 198, 480, 506-07, 582, 641-2, 779-81, 961, 1165-6, 1241, 1256-7, 1285-6, 1308-09, 1315-16, 1348, 1395-7, 1398-1403, 1409, 1459, 1479-80, 1618-19, 1729, 1764-5, 1770-1, 2215-16, 2450

See Privilege, Question of

Questions

- Abortions, study of procedure for obtaining therapeutic abortions, 1428, 1624-5, 1639, 1654-5
- Air Canada service Fredericton-Ottawa, 854-5, 867
- Air transport, flight delays due to labour dispute, 2062-3
- Anti-inflation program
 - Budget reduction in Regional Economic Expansion Dept., 1683
 - Family allowances, 1683, 1716, 1721
 - Judges' salaries, 1662, 1681
 - Meeting of Minister of Finance and provincial representatives re implementation of guidelines, 1549
 - National Defence cutbacks in Nova Scotia, effect of, 1683, 1716

Questions - ContinuedAnti-inflation program - Concluded

Postal workers' contract, government rejection of Board's opinion on, 1627-8, 1655

Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fare, 1815-16, 1846

Wage guidelines, 1683

Auditor General of Canada, report of Independent Review Committee, 796

Beef producers, federal assistance for, 240-1, 253

Bilingual air traffic services, Commission of Inquiry, 2322, 2335, 2352-3

Letters from Air Traffic Control Assoc. and Air Line Pilots' Assoc., and to Minister of Transport, 2352-3

Budget, date of presentation, 161

Canada-United States boundary, government policy re demarcation line on Dixon Entrance on Strait of Juan de Fuca, George's Bank and northwards, 2308

Canada-United States relations, 1625-7

Canada-United States relations, communications between Canada and US, newspaper article re remarks by American Ambassador, 2122-3, 2192-3, 2201, 2377-8

Canada Year Book, 1788, 1821-3

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation

Gerda Munsinger, presence in Canada and appearance on CBC television program, 1034, 1073, 1239-40, 1256-7, 1618-19, 1625

Canadian coins, reported change in design, 1937, 1955

Canadian economy, statement by Prime Minister re anti-inflation legislation, 1293

Canadian Labour Congress, political affiliation, 2153-4

Canadian Labour Congress, possibility of general strike, newspaper report re meeting and proposals for liberal corporatism, 2130

Canadian Labour Congress, salary increases for officers, 2159, 2209-10

Canadian National Railway services in Atlantic provinces, 1923-4, 1976

Canadian National Railways, cost of construction of tower in Toronto, 2185-6, 2263-4

CTV news report of death of Viateur Ethier and misrepresentation as member of Conservative Party, 1241

Canadian Wheat Board, adjustment payments to grain producers, 1297

Candu reactors, proposed sale to Argentina and Korea, 1307, 1319

Capital punishment

Commutation of sentences of accused murderers and kidnappers, 400

Partial abolition and expiration of trial period, 1656

Childers, Erskine, President of Republic of Ireland, death of, 265

Citizenship bill, suggested referral of Clause 33 to Supreme Court, 2362, 2444

Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1683-5

Combines investigation, New Brunswick court of appeal decision re K. C. Irving, Ltd., 1023, 1045-6

Combines, takeover bid by Power Corporation of Canada Ltd. of Argus Corporation Ltd. reference of matter to Senate committee, inquiry dropped, 1063-4

Connaught Laboratories Ltd., testing operations adjacent to proposed housing development, 586, 616, 732, 902

Construction industry in Quebec, pardon granted to Dede Desjardins, 1035, 1066

Copyright Act, Economic Review, 'Crown copyright reserved', replacement of words, 2200, 2322-3, 2362

Criminal Code (control of weapons and firearms) bill S-14, progress of bill in committee stage, 479-80

Criminal Code, illegal abortions, Dr. Henry Morgentaler, acquittal of charges, 1036

Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 889, 924

Distribution of document in Senate chamber, 644

Energy resources

Atlantic provinces, development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2070, 2142, 2210

Atlantic provinces, offshore oil and gas resources, 2070, 2141-2, 2143

Conservation of fuel, car awaiting Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, 2209, 2443

Construction of Arctic gas pipeline, supply of Arctic gas to southern Canada, 2037-8, 2069-70

Government policy re Canadian ownership of companies developing oil and gas on crown lands, 2159-60, 2210

Questions - ContinuedEnergy resources - Concluded

- International conference of oil-consuming and oil-producing countries, exclusion of Canada, 605-06, 774-5
- Lighting of government buildings, 606, 1238-9
- Oil and gas reserves, negotiations between federal government and governments of producing provinces, 2070
- Passamaquoddy-Cobscook Bay, US Corps of Engineers report on, 2210-11
- Proposed construction of pipeline from Prince Rupert to Edmonton, 2037
- Proposed pipeline treaty between Canada and United States, 2037
- Environmental affairs, protection of coastal waters from radio-active pollution, 889, 924
- Estimates, fiscal year ending Mar. 31/77, removal of item from order paper, 1782-5
- European Economic Community, Canada's claim for compensation, 579-80, 661-2, 671
- External Affairs Department, Passport Office, refusal to accept Canadian currency of $50 and $100 denominations, 2037, 2077
- Federal government buildings, Langevin Block and Justice Building, 76-77, 137
- Feed grains, freight assistance to Atlantic provinces, 1035
- Ferry service
 - Between North Sydney and Port Aux Basques, 1861
 - Between Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, 1815, 1860, 1861
- Fisheries
 - Extension of 200 mile coastal jurisdiction, 2208, 2377
 - Rights of MicMac Indians of Cross Point Reserve to fish Atlantic salmon, 2208, 2264
- Florida land deals, involvement of Canadians in alleged swindle, 1012, 1198
- Foreign affairs
 - Aid to Chile, 1438-9, 1597-8
 - Canadian Defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3, 2201
 - Special passports for MPs, restrictions on, 2263, 2362-3
- Gasoline excise tax, 1100-01, 1112-13
- Government Expenditures Restraint bill, date of introduction in Senate, 2130, 2159, 2264
- Grain subsidies paid on shipments to Eastern Canadian ports for export, 2156,
- Helsinki Declaration on European Security and Co-operation, 1293, 1466
- Identity cards for senators, 179-80
- Immigration, Gulf Islands, British Columbia, ministerial discretion permits, 2322
- Immigration, presence in Canada of Xaviera Hollander and Gerda Munsinger, 1007, 1013, 1034, 1249-40
- Indians, Manitoba Brotherhood, request to appear before Senate Committee, 315-16
- Information Canada, inaccuracies in publications regarding Governors General and Prime Ministers, 1757, 2003
- Insulin, production of, 100, 110-11
- Italy, earthquake victims, Canadian government assistance to, 2111
- Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1825-6, 1846-8, 1857-9, 1890-2, 1930-2
- Labour
 - Defiance by unions of court orders, 2237
 - Strike of longshoremen in Quebec, back to work legislation, 833, 838-9, 840, 846, 849, 855, 867, 888, 912
 - Withdrawal of services by longshoremen at Montreal, 1006-07
- Liberal Caucus, invitation to members of Opposition, 1868
- Marine safety, British Columbia fisheries, 1815, 1860
- Marine safety, request for location of air and sea rescue unit in Newfoundland, 1860
- Meighen, Rt. Hon. Arthur, the late, portrait of, 53, 563
- Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest, Green Paper on, ref to Commons com, 373, 573, 580
- Money bills, Senate authority to amend, 1656-9
- Montreal police force, threatened strike, 849

Questions - Continued

- Multiculturalism, Ministry of State, organization and budget, 742, 849, 866
- Narcotics, study of legislation by Senate committee, 316
- National Capital Region, proposed study by joint committee, 229
- National lottery, method of proceeding with, 2103-04, 2110-11
- National Museums, storage of Canadiana, 2209; artisanship of John D. Howe, 2217
- National Press Gallery, invitation to reception, 61-62
- New Brunswick storm damage, possibility of federal aid, 1720-1, 1729-30
- Newfoundland
 - CNR services, 1868, 1903
 - Financial assistance for Come-By-Chance refinery, 1826-7, 1860
 - Trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, 1903, 1922
- Nova Scotia storm damage, possibility of federal aid, 135-6
- Nuclear reactors
 - Sale by Canada to Argentina, 1975, 2142
 - Sale by Canada to India, 1859-60; further questions, 1975
- Oil export tax, 1264, 1265-6
- Pacific Western Airlines, possible move of head office to Calgary, 1824-5, 1859, 1868-9, 2376, 2444
- Palestinian Liberation Organization attendance at United Nations General Assembly, position taken by Canadian delegation, 110, 137-8, 1238
- Parliament Buildings
 - East Block, use of rooms by senators, proposal, 110
 - Senate, use of rooms by members of House of Commons and others, 110
- Parole, consideration by government of changes in present system, 1371
- Passports
 - Restrictions on special passports of MPs, article in Globe and Mail, 2262-3, 2362-3, 2443
 - Use of diplomatic and special passports for travel to Namibia, 2363-4, 2443-4
- Penitentiaries
 - Proposed construction of medium security prison in Saint John, 1916-17, 1922-3
 - Recommendations of Special Joint Committee, implementation of, 2200
- Political Parties, possible RCMP investigation, 2063
- Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1285, 1319, 1370-1, 1403, 1409-10, 1416-17, 1428-31, 1439, 1454, 1459, 1468
 - Opinion of Anti-Inflation Board re settlement of wage dispute, 1597
- Prerogatives of Prime Minister, orders in council re, 1349
- Prime Minister of Canada
 - Visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1763-4
 - Visit to Paris, news report re accompanying officials, 161, 180
- Prince Edward Island, trans-Canada highway, maintenance cost subsidies, 1903, 1922
- Privileges of Parliament, commercial use of picture of Parliamentary Library, 1729, 1764-5
- Public Service
 - Bank's refusal to cash government cheques, 1974-5, 2003-04, 2008
 - Commission, new offices, interior wall decoration, 1930, 1975-6
 - Salary bracket of $60,000, 889
 - Strike of general labour and trades group, 642
- Public Works, renovation of Langevin Building, costs under headings of structural, mechanical, decoration and communications, 2243
- Quebec Official Language Act, question re government decision on petition, 829, 912, 924-5
- Queen Elizabeth, celebration of Silver Jubilee in Canada, 1318-19, 1403
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, passage of, 1639-40
- Regulations and other statutory instruments, agreements between federal government and provincial governments, 2103, 2110
- Restaurant of Parliament, source of meat supplies, 1007, 1012-13
- Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fares, 1815-16

Questions - Concluded

- St. Lawrence Islands National Park, government expenditures on, 1549-50, 1588
- Saskatchewan, safety of Gardiner Dam, 2179, 2377
- Secrecy in government, discussion of TV program re committee involved in, 1349
- Senate
 - Amplification and simultaneous interpretation system, 13-14
 - Northwest Territories Senate representation, 1772, 1778
 - Protective staff, summer uniforms, 1156
 - Reform of Senate, article in Globe and Mail quoting statements of Prime Minister, 32, 47
 - Seating arrangements for senators on ceremonial occasions, 13
- Sessions of Parliament, legislative program, 1902-03
- Small Farms Development Program
 - Farm management consultants, 2079
 - Number of loans approved for provinces, 1197-8, 1213
- Tailoring service for Senate and Commons, 2167-8, 2209
- Tax treaties or conventions with other countries, 855, 867, 925, 942
- Television commercial advertising by Guaranty Trust, use of picture of Parliament Buildings, 556, 564, 956-7
- Time* magazine, brief presented to members of Commons, 62
- Transportation
 - Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 889, 924
 - Disruption of airline services in Canada, 2237, 2243, 2249-50, 2258-9
 - Pacific Western Airlines, 1824-5, 1859, 1868-9, 2376, 2444
- Transport Minister Hon. Jean Marchand, rumour of resignation, 573
- Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, invitation to Canadian Parliamentarians to visit Russia, 1250-1, 1257
- United Kingdom Prime Minister Harold Wilson, visit to Ottawa, 473
- United Nations
 - Assembly resolution re Zionism, limitation on contributions as result of, 1411, 1439
 - Congress on Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants at, 1166, 1238
 - Peacekeeping Force, pension benefits for dependants of Canadian soldier killed in Cyprus, 760, 768
- Victoria Memorial Museum, rumoured change of name, 1035, 1165
- Visitors to Parliament, abatement of noise in precincts, 1012
- Voting procedure on Bill C-84, 2444
- Watergate tapes, reference to Prime Minister Trudeau by former U.S. President Nixon, 179
- Welfare ministers' conference, statement by Minister of NHW re federal policy in social welfare field, 556, 564
- West Coast ports operations, resumption of work by longshoremen and related operations, 742
- Wheat Board annual report, 685, 732
- See also Inquiries,
 - Privilege, Question of,
 - Privileges of Parliament.

Radio and television

- Canadian radio-television and telecommunications, 803, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51, 998, 1007, 1095
- See Broadcasting

Railway bill C-48. 1r, 712; 2r, 760-1; ref to com, 761; rep without amdt, 795; 3r, 803; r.a., 832

Railways (Bill C-48)

- Compliance by companies to regulations, 760
- Disclosure of financial operations, 760
- Ministerial powers, 760
- Western Economic Opportunities Conference, 760

Railways (Bill C-48) - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Cook, Eric, 760

Flynn, Jacques, 760-1

Railways

Abandonment of lines and effect on municipal property tax assessments, 44-45

Atlantic provinces, CNR services, 1922, 1923-4, 1976

Branch lines, Western Canada, proposed removal of, 698-9

Canadian Pacific Railway, 38-45

Canadian Pacific: A Brief History, by J. L. McDougall, 40-41

Canadian Transportation and Distribution, excerpt from magazine re freight policy, 43

Crowsnest Pass, 41-42, 889, 924

Globe and Mail articles re CPR, 43, 44

Hudson's Bay Company, 39

Income from oil, gas and other minerals, 41

Income from real estate and related operations, 40

Integration of CNR and CPR, 43-44

Land grants and sales, 39-42

Marathon Realty, CPR subsidiary, 39

Tax and land concessions, 38-39

The CPR: A Century of Corporate Welfare, by Robert Chodos, 38-39, 40Railways bill S-1 (pro forma). 1r, 7*Reform of the Senate

Appointments, 50-51

Committee work, 74-75

Initiation of bills, 49, 52

Investigation of provincial rights 49-50

Official Opposition, reinforcement of, 184

Orders in Council and other legislation, 52-53

Prime Minister's comments, 32, 62-63, 184

Representation from Yukon and Northwest Territories, 53

Suspensive veto, 49, 54

Term of appointment, 54, 75, 184

Refund of fees

Honey Bear Brewing Corporation Limited, 1782

Regional development incentives

Commercial operations, 1621

Abenaki Motor Inn, 1621

Commercial production deadline, 1601

Disparity in allocation of grants or loans, 1620

Five-year extension of program, 1620

Grants, repayable grants, loan guarantees, 1601

Per capita income, 1620

Program statistics, 1601

Question re passage of bill, 1639-40

Slow-growth areas, 1620, 1621

Time lapse in application for grant and approval of, 1620-1

Halifax Chronicle Herald article re, 1620

Regional development incentives - Concluded

Unemployment statistics, 1620

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 1658
 Belisle, Rheal, 1665
 Forsey, Eugene A., 1666
 Grosart, Allister, 1664, 1665
 Langlois, Leopold, 1658-9
 Macnaughton, Alan, 1601
 Perrault, Raymond J., 1639-40, 1662-3, 1665-6
 Phillips, Orville H., 1666
 Smith, George I., 1620-2, 1664, 1666

Regional Development Incentives bill C-74. 1r, 1524; 2r, 1601-02, 1619-22; ref to com, 1622; rep without amdt, 1639; 3r, 1658-9; r.a., 1712

Regulations and other statutory instruments

Agreements between federal government and provincial governments, 2103, 2110

Regulations and other Statutory Instruments, Standing Joint Committee

Budget, 178, 205-06, 525, 795, 956, 1502

Duties and functions of committee, 515, 1534, 1535

Guidelines for Motions for Production of Papers, ref to com, 467

Members

Commons, 60

Senate, 109

Newspaper article re Chairman Senator Forsey, question of privilege, 794-5

Reports

First report, 178, 205-6

Second report tabled in Commons Oct. 29/74

Third report, 239-40, 264

Fourth report, 327-8, 338

Fifth report, 1100, 1133-4

Sixth report, 1479, 1487

Seventh report, 1638

Eighth report, 2045

Ninth report, 2307-09, 2333

Right to Information bill C-225, ref to com, 467

Secrecy in government, subject matter ref to com, 1349

Terms of reference, see Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate Oct. 24/74

Travel arrangements for committee outside of Canada, authority for, 1479

Regulations regarding attendance of senators, 1781-2, 1790-1, 1911-13, 1917-18, 1933-6

Absence beyond 21 days, 1790, 1917-19

Attendance records, 1912, 1918-19

Committee review of reasons for absence, 1791, 1917-18

Official business, specifying of, 1790-1, 1912, 1917-18

Senate vacancies and workload, 1934

Travel distance, 1934-5

Remembrance Day

CBC program, 257

Thirtieth anniversary ceremonies held in France, 258-9

Representation (Bill C-36)

- Amalgamation formula, 423-4
- Quebec, 421
- Representation by population, 421
- Statistics of provincial representations, 422-3, 437, 439, 440

Speakers: Senators

- Buckwold, Sidney L., 438
- Deschatelets, Jean-Paul, 436, 437
- Flynn, Jacques, 438-9
- Hicks, Henry D., 438
- Lafond, Paul C., 424
- O'Leary, M. Grattan, 435-6
- Perrault, Raymond J., 420-3, 437-8, 439-40

Representation bill 1974 C-36. 1r, 402; 2r, 420-4, 435-40; ref to com, 440; rep without amdt, 443; 3r, 443; r.a., 467

Research staff

- Parliamentary Library, 146, 516
- Senate, 321, 516

Restaurant of Parliament, Standing Joint Committee

- Meat supplies, question re, 1007, 1012-13
- Members
 - Commons, 60
 - Senate, 109

Riel, Hon. Maurice

- Immigration Policy, Special Joint Committee
- Reports
 - First report, 1006, 1021
 - Second report, 1306
 - Third and final report, 1375, 1376-94
- Unauthorized press publication of confidential draft report of committee, 1285, 1286

Right to Information bill C-225, subject matter ref to Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, 467

Riley, Hon. Daniel

- Capital punishment, commutation of sentences of accused murderers and kidnappers, 400
- Energy resources
 - Development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2142, 2210
 - Passamaquoddy Bay, US Corps of Engineers report on, 2210-11
- National Housing bill C-48, 749
- National Museums, storage of Canadiana, 2209; artisanship by John D. Howe, 2217
- New Brunswick, economic conditions, 2009-13
 - Acadians, 2009-13
 - Acadian Village, 2012
 - Culture of, 2011
 - Advertisement of Regional Economic Expansion Dept. entitled The New Approach, 2012
 - Agriculture, 2009-10
 - Fisheries, 2010
 - Gloucester County, 2012
 - Highways, Route 11, 2012

Riley, Hon. Daniel - *Concluded*New Brunswick economic conditions - Concluded

New Brunswick Psychological Association, letter to Premier of N.B., copy to Prime Minister, 2010-11

Relocation of workers, 2011

Saint John Telegraph-Journal article re Northeast New Brunswick, 2012

Unemployment, 2010

New Brunswick storm damage, possibility of federal aid, 1720, 1729-30

Northwest Territories Senate representation, 1778

Parliamentary Library, commercial use of picture of, 1764-5

Penitentiaries, proposed construction of medium security prison in Saint John, 1916-17, 1922-3

Prince Edward Island, CNR services, 1924, 1976

Saint John, N.B., increase in bus fares, 1815, 1816

Televising of committee proceedings, 510, 511-12, 521

Transportation, BNA Act as it pertains to, 2221

Robichaud, Hon. Louis-J., P.C.

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1578-9

Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 528-30, 1733

Acquittals and convictions in murders of police officers (1967-73), 529

Atlantic Provinces Policemen's Assoc., meeting in Moncton, 530

Royal prerogative in commutation of death sentence, 529, 530

Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2411-13

Deterrent aspect, 2412

Incorrigibles, 2412

Statistics, 2412

United States, 2412

Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1163

Cost-sharing of insecticide spraying, 1163

Damaging side effects of insecticides, 1163

Inter-Parliamentary Union, Tokyo conference, 248-9

Canadian delegation, 248

Inflation problems in Japan, 248

Labour unions in other countries, 248

National Forestry Week, 2076

New Brunswick, economic conditions, 2015-18

Acadians, 2016-17

Artists and musicians from NB, 2018

Mineral resources, 2019

Social equality program, 2017-18

Regulations re attendance of senators, 1917-18

Absence of 21 days, 1917

Committee review of reasons for absence, 1917-18

Official business, specifying of, 1917

Senate and House of Commons Act

Objection to motion for referral of subject matter to com, 953

Regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 953, 954

Senators' work in public interest outside of Senate, 953

Senate role, 1578-9

Rowe, Hon. Frederick William

Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 62-68, 71

Alberta - British Columbia Boundary bill S-13, 224

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, appearance of Gerda Munsinger on television program, 1619, 1625

Rowe, Hon. Frederick William - Continued

- Crime and violence, 1449-53
 - Crime increase and demands on protective resources, 1449-50
 - Drug control, Newsweek article re, 1451
 - Good Housekeeping* article by Art Linkletter entitled 'What I've learned about drugs since my daughter's death', 1451-2
 - Gun control, 1452
 - Marihuana convictions of young people, 1451-2
 - Prison population per capita, 1451
 - Royal Canadian Mounted Police duties, 1450
 - Sex deviates, 1451
 - Training of police in psychology, pathological conduct and behaviour, 1450
 - Unnecessary activities of police, 1450
 - Vice squads, 1450
 - Vulnerability of democratic society, 1452-3
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1746, 1899
- Education and Culture in Newfoundland*, by Hon. Frederick William Rowe, 2308-09
- Energy
 - Offshore oil and gas resources in Atlantic provinces, 2143
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 62
- Ferry service between North Sydney and Port Aux Basques, possible increase in fares, 1861
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control, and Criminal Code bill S-19, 448-54, 1048-9
 - Long-standing effects from use of marihuana, 450, 451
 - Misunderstandings re legislation, 449
 - National Organization for Reform of Marihuana Laws (US), 449
 - Penalties for drug convictions, 447
 - Tobacco and alcohol, use by children, 453, 1048
- Forestry, devastation in Eastern Canada by Spruce budworm, 1161-2
 - Damaging side effects of insecticides, 1162
 - Federal responsibility in control, 1162
 - Newfoundland, 1161-2
 - Birch and Mountain Ash, 1162
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1955-8
 - Canada-US relations, 1955-6, 1958
 - Freedom of the press, question of, 1957-8
 - MD of Canada*, 1957
 - Time Canada*, 1956-7
 - Women's magazines published in US and circulated in Canada, 1957
- Inter-Parliamentary Union, Colombo, Sri Lanka conference, 984-8
 - Aid to developing countries, 985, 986, 987-8; Sri Lanka and Pakistan, 985, 986
 - Tarbela Dam, 987-8
 - Birth control, 987
 - Canada's esteem in foreign countries, 985
 - Disarmament, 984
 - Drugs, 984-5
 - Economic conditions in Canada, 985-6
 - Economic cooperation, 984
 - Education, scientific techniques for promotion of, 984
 - Human rights, 984
 - Living standards, 985
 - Population statistics, 986
 - Poverty problems, 987
- Labour, the working poor in Canada, 2019-23
- Labrador hydro development, 64-65
- Law reform, 66; rape victims, 66; drug convictions, 66

Rowe, Hon. Frederick William - Concluded

- National lottery, proposed incorporation of Loto-Canada, 2169
 - Method of authorization for, 2169
 - Religious aspects of gambling, 2169
- Privileges of Parliament
 - Library of Parliament and Centre Block, commercial use of pictures of, 1765
 - Ottawa Citizen* article re comments of Senator F. W. Rowe, 1777
- Rules of the Senate, 1359
- Senate
 - Chamber seating arrangements for senators on ceremonial occasions, 13
 - Reform, 62-63
 - Televising of committee proceedings, 547-8
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1829
- Transportation, 63-65, 506-08
 - Newfoundland, 63-65; Air Canada service St. John's-Ottawa, 506-08; Strait of Belle Isle, 64-65;
 - Trans-Canada Highway, 63-64
- Transportation, British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2106-08, 2064
 - Newfoundland, 2106-08
 - Disruption of tourist trade and general welfare because of labour strike, 2108
 - Terms of Union re transportation services, 2108
 - Trans-Canada Highway, 2106-07
 - Provincial disparities, 2106-07
- United States, Canada's relations with, 66-68

Royal assent

- Beetz, Hon. Jean, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 1791-2, 2002, 2207
- de Grandpre, Hon. Louis-Philippe, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 2152
- Dickson, Hon. R. G. B., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 731, 899
- Judson, Hon. Wilfred, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 1281
- Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, Chief Justice of Canada, 95, 220, 467, 581, 1095-6, 1476, 2096
- Leger, Rt. Hon. Jules, His Excellency the Governor General, 397, 2450
- Spence, Hon. Wishart F., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, 313-14, 656, 740, 832, 1134, 1617, 1712, 2301

Royal Canadian Legion

- Assets or property, branch holdings, 1195, 1206
- Branch agreements to amend to act, 1206-07
- British Commonwealth and Empire, deletion of words from act, 1195
- Closing of small branches due to membership drop, 1205-06
- Department to assist or advise ex-servicemen's clubs, 1196
- Filing date of petition, 1212
- Legion background, 1194, 1205
- Senior citizen housing sponsored by Legion, 1195
- War veterans allowance, 1194, 1205
- Youth sports training programs, 1195, 1205, 1206

Speakers: Senators

- Carter, Chesley W., 1194-6, 1206, 1207, 1209
- Flynn, Jacques, 1207, 1209
- Grosart, Allister, 1206-09
- Langlois, Leopold, 1208
- Perrault, Raymond J., 1209
- Phillips, Orville H., 1205-06

Royal Canadian Legion bill S-28. 1r, 1180; 2r, 1194-6, 1205-07; ref to com, 1207; suspension of rule 95, 1207-09; rep without amdt, 1211-12; 3r, 1212; r.a., 1281

Royal Canadian Mounted Police

Federal-provincial agreements with provinces re RCMP personnel, 501, 568-9
 Financial implications of provincial operations, 501, 502
 Quebec and Ontario, claims for compensation, 501-04, 537-40, 567-9, 603
 Subject matter referred to Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 954-5, 962-6

Rules and Orders, Standing Senate Committee

Chairman, appointment of Hon. Hartland de M. Molson, 557
 Members, 96
 Report, 1317-18, 1331-6, 1355-64, 1422-6, 1460-6
 Sub-committee for co-ordination of meetings, 828-9, 1091
 Members, 924
 Terms of reference, 526, 537-8

Rules of the Senate

Amendment to committee report after report presented to the Senate, 908, 909
 Appropriation bills, 721-2, 735-7
 Borrowing authority, 722
 Excerpt from Bourinot, 4th edition, re supply bills, 722
 Forms and Proceedings, 721-3, 735
 Senate role in consideration of money bills, 723
 Suggestion that matter of bills being ref to com be considered by Standing Rules and Orders Committee, 736-7
 Comment on speech of Commons member, 2416
 Committee budgets, special expenses, 525-6
 Committee report on regulations re attendance of senators, rule re consideration of, 1781-2, 1790-1
 Committee reports, ref back to com or to Committee of the Whole for reconsideration, 882-4
 Precedents cited in excerpts from Senate Journals, 883
 Speaker's ruling reserved, 882-8; Speaker's ruling, 890
 Debate on com rep without amdt and motion for third reading, Speaker's statement re, 2395, 2396
 Debate on interrogation restricted to brief explanatory remarks, 1213
 Delay in raising of point of order, 1111
 Forms and Proceedings, question of authority of rules, 882-3
 Initiation of money bills, 887
 Minister invited to Senate Chamber to explain bill, precedents, 197-8, 217-19
 Excerpt from The Modern Senate of Canada re, 218
 Minister's statement of policy, senator's comment on or criticism of, 1202, 1203
 Motion to amend committee report, 882-3; point of order re Speaker's statement, 890
 Point of order, 387-8, 390, 506-07, 560, 779-81, 882-3, 886-8, 944, 952, 1015, 1110, 1202
 Amending of supply bills, 886-8
 Excerpt from The Modern Senate of Canada, 887
 Precedents of supply bills amendments by the Senate, 887
 Rights of Senate in Matters of Financial Legislation, report of Senate special committee, 887-8
 Presentation of committee reports before review by senators, 1606
 Private bills, suspension of rule 95, 1207-09, 1601
 Privilege, question of, 98-99, 198, 480, 506-07, 582, 641-2, 779-81, 961, 1165-6, 1241
 Reference of Green Paper on Conflict of Interest to committee, 779-81
 Referral of annuities bill to committee, 1643-4
 Referral of estimates and other matters to National Finance Committee, 440-1, 1109-10

Rules of the Senate - Concluded

- Senator speaking twice on same subject, 1513
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54
- Two days' notice between 1r and 2r, 1109
- Unscheduled speakers taking part in debate, 560
- Use of unparliamentary language in debates, 562, 1109

Rules of the Senate, report of Standing Committee on Standing Rules and Orders, 1317-18, 1331-6, 1355-64, 1422-6, 1460-6, 1537, 1813

- Absence of senators, 1359
- Adjournment of debates for prolonged periods, 1460-2, 1464, 1465-6
- Adopting of report, one day's notice of motion, 1357, 1360
- Authority to reprint rules, 1537
- Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, terms of reference, 1357
- Bilingual form of bills originating in Senate, 1357, 1360
- Bills, explanation of content at initial presentation of, 1464
- Commencement date of amendments contained in report, 1537; order rescinded, new date authorized, 1720
- Committee of the Whole, procedure for discussion in, 1362
- Declaration of property qualification, 1359
- Ex officio* members of committees, 1358
- Forms and proceedings of the Parliament of Canada, 1356, 1360, 1362-3
- Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 1357, 1364, 1423-6, 1462, 1464-5
- Joint Committee on Library of Parliament and Other Shared Services, 1359
- Limitation of senator speaking only once in any debate, 1356
- Motions during debate, 1356
- Motions for which no notice is required (matters of urgent public importance), 1357, 1363
- Motion to refer matters to committee, 1357-8, 1363-4
- Oral questions, 1356, 1460, 1462-3, 1465
- Organization of committees, 1358
- Parliamentary reform, 1360
- Powers and duties of committees, 1423-4, 1425
- Preservation of order and decorum in Senate, 1356
- Previous question, 1357
- Principle of bill, debating of at second reading, 1361, 1363
- Printing of rules as appendix to current debate, 1361
- Private bills, deposit of bill and fees, 1359
 - Substantial amendments, notice of, 1359
- Procedure when Speaker leaves the chamber, 1356
- 'Question' or 'matter', definition of, 1361, 1363
- Quorum of committees, 1358, 1460, 1465
- Quotations from speeches made in Commons, 1356, 1359, 1360, 1363, 1460, 1464, 1465
- Recalling of Senate earlier than set forth in motion for adjournment, 1356
- Reports of committees, 1359
- Select committees, 1357
- Senate speech quoted verbatim in Commons, 1359-60
- Senator's final reply to inquiry on second reading of bill, 1356
- Speaker addressing house, 1357
- Special procedure or practice in committee, approval of Senate for, 1358, 1364, 1461, 1463
- Standing Rules and Orders Committee, 1424

Rules of the Senate, report of Standing Committee on Standing Orders - Concluded

Terms of reference of committees, 1361-2, 1461, 1463, 1464

Procedure or practice inconsistent with practices and usages of Senate, 1461, 1463

Time of daily sittings, 1364

Unanimous consent, 1362

Speakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 1460-2

Benidickson, W. M., 1364

Bourget, Maurice, 1425

Croll, David A., 1364, 1422-3, 1425-6

Grosart, Allister, 1425, 1462-4

Laird, Keith, 1359-60, 1426

McIlraith, George, 1360-3, 1423, 1424, 1425, 1426, 1464

Molson, Hartland de M., 1317-18, 1331-6, 1355-64, 1424-6, 1464-6, 1537

Rulings by the Speaker

See Lapointe, Hon. Renaude, Speaker of the Senate

St. John the Baptist Day, 2259St. Lawrence Islands National Park

Government expenditures on, 1549-50, 1588

St. Lawrence ports operations

Bankruptcy of livestock breeders, 820

Deterioration of supplies in storage, 819, 826

Inability of society to maintain law and order, 822

Injunctions granted to manufacturers and millers, 819, 827

Labour unrest, 823-4

Losses to workers and producers, 825

Maritime Employers Assoc. and International Longshoremen's Assoc., 817, 818

Mediator Charles Poirier (1975), 817

Mediator Judge Alan Gold (1974), 817

Parliamentary responsibility in settlement of dispute, 817

Penalty clause, 824, 826, 827

Precedents in emergency legislation, 819, 821

Wage and job security demands and controls, 819, 824

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 818-20

Buckwold, Sidney L., 823-4

Connolly, John J., 826

Forsey, Eugene A., 825-6

Greene, John J., 822-3

Grosart, Allister, 821-2

Lawson, Edward M., 824-5

Neiman, Joan, 820

Perrault, Raymond J., 817-18, 821, 826-7

St. Lawrence Ports Operations bill C-59. 1r, 817; 2r, 817-27; 3r, 827; r.a., 832

St. Patrick's Day, 1902

Salaries (Lieutenant Governors)

- Comparison to salaries of other officials, 1092
- Former provincial levels of salaries, 1081
- Jurisdiction of lieutenant governors, 1093
- Non-accountable allowances and other benefits, 1081
- Pensions, 1092-3, 1094
- Special fund for expenses incurred outside provincial capitals, 1095
- Status of lieutenant governors, 1091-4
- Tax benefits, 1095
- Speakers: Senators
 - Asselin, Martial, 1091-3, 1094
 - Benidickson, W. M., 1095
 - Connolly, John J., 1081, 1094, 1095
 - Forsey, Eugene A., 1093, 1094
 - Greene, John J., 1095
 - Langlois, Leopold, 1094

Salaries (Lieutenant Governors) bill C-24. 1r, 1065; 2r, 1081, 1091-5; 3r, 1095; r.a., 1096

Saskatchewan

- Parliamentarians and wives, visitors to Senate, 262
- Safety of Gardiner Dam, question, 2179, 2377

Science policy

- Budget, 1261, 2119
- Commission on the Future, termination of committee mandate for, 1173, 1220
- Committee work in creating awareness of science futures, 1223, 1224
 - Tribute to chairman, 1224
- Data Bank, 295
- Defence Research Board, 114-15
- Excerpts from letters from Prime Minister and from Deputy Secretary of Cabinet re Institute for Research on Public Policy, 1171-2, 1221
- Expenditures of committee, 160, 348, 1088, 1223-4, 1244, 1260
- Futures branch of US Congressional Library, 1225
- Futures research areas of Science Policy Committee, 1173
- Granting agencies, 113-15
- Impact of committee report on other countries, 1222
- Information centre, Futures Canada, 295
- Institute for Research on Public Policy, 1221, 1222, 1225
- Inter-Council Coordinating Committee, 115
- Managing the Future: Conference on Anticipatory Institutions*, 1171, 1221, 1223
- National Research Council, 113-14
- 'Need for an Overall Science Policy', excerpt from committee reports (1970-73), 1225
- Predictive and normative approach in future, 1224
- Prime Minister Trudeau's speech at Duke University, 296-7
- Recommendations to government, 1222
- Research and development programs, lack of coordination, 1225-6
- Research in government laboratories and in industry, comparison, 1226
 - Other countries, 1226

Science policy - Concluded

Study undertaken by government into futures research and futures information, 1172-3
 Training program in cooperation with management and schools, 295-6
 US state commissions on futures, 1225

Speakers: Senators

Carter, Chesley W., 1225-6
 Grosart, Allister, 1222-4
 Lamontagne, Maurice, 1164, 1171-3, 1220-2

Science Policy, Special Senate Committee

Annual meetings, regional and national, 296
 Appointment, 295-8
 Budget tabled, 1261
 Club of Rome President, visit to committee, 473
 Commission on the Future, authority to hold conference re, 295-8
 Termination of mandate re, 1171-3
 Expenses, 160, 348, 1088, 1223-4, 1244, 1260, 1261
 Members, 295
 Reports
 Quorum, 1355
 Termination of mandate re Commission on the Future, 1164, 1171-3, 1220-6, 1246-7, 1259-60
 Terms of reference, 295, 1173

Secrecy in government, discussion on TV program re committee involved in, 1349

Selection Committee

Appointment, 7
 Reports
 Standing committees, members, 76, 96-97

Senate

Adjournments, 712-13, 741, 1280
 Summer adjournment, 1280
 Amplification system and simultaneous interpretation system, 13-14, 504, 1092
 Bills, printing and distribution of, 61
 Business, 31, 60-61, 124-5, 152-3, 178-9, 221-2, 240, 255-6, 289, 315, 325, 351, 380-1, 454-5, 482, 483-4, 505-06, 524, 540-1, 556, 579, 592-3, 594, 656, 713-14, 723, 740-1, 758, 774, 796, 816, 828-9, 848-9, 899, 923-4, 956, 999, 1022, 1036, 1057, 1086, 1090-1, 1107-12, 1122, 1164-5, 1210, 1226, 1250, 1261-4, 1265, 1286-8, 1297, 1337, 1370, 1409, 1437-8, 1467-8, 1502-03, 1524, 1537-8, 1547-8, 1615, 1647-8, 1653-4, 1660, 1661, 1682, 1686, 1711-12, 1717, 1718-19, 1729, 1756-7, 1778, 1793, 1846, 1874-81, 1914-16, 1954-5, 1966, 2007-08, 2044, 2045-7, 2069, 2097-8, 2120-2, 2151-2, 2192, 2215, 2255, 2302, 2308, 2335-6, 2356, 2360
 Chamber renovations, 1282-3
 Christmas decorations, 1476
 Clerestory of the Senate Chamber, Special Senate Committee, 480-2
 Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1973-74), 192
 Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1974-75), 1005
 Clerk's accounts, receipts and disbursements (1975-76), 2167
 Clerk's Scroll, 1667, 1683-5
 Comments re Senate, Hon. Grattan O'Leary (1942), 870-1
 Comments re Senate, Hon. Renaude Lapointe (1973), 871

Senate - Continued

Committees

- Scheduling of meetings, 828-9, 923-4
- Science Policy Committee, work of, 1164, 1171-3, 1220-6, 1246-7, 1259-60
- Sittings of committees when Parliament is adjourned, 951-3
- Work of, 28-29, 74-75, 945, 951-3
- Conflict of interest, report of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 2278, 2303-06
- Consecutive sitting days, 31
- Criticisms by public and in press re Senate consideration of Bill C-49, 645-7
 - Process of Senate consideration of bill, items discussed and witnesses interviewed, 645-7
- Distribution of document in Senate chamber, 644
- Deputy Leader of the Government, reappointment of Hon. Léopold Langlois, 46
- Emergency sittings, authority to convene Senate during adjournments, 328
- Government Whip, appointment of Hon. William J. Petten, 46
- Identity cards for senators, 179-80
- Intersessional authority, Bill S-22, 505, 576-7, 815-16
- Minutes of the Proceedings of the Senate*, No. 96, correction, 1036
- Monday evening sittings, question of, 1874-81
- Newspaper account of articles on the Senate by Senator Rowe, question of privilege re, 480
- Northwest Territories Senate representation, 1772, 1778
- Painting of Royal Canadian Engineers, authority to photograph for purposes of Heritage Publishing Company, 46
- Parliamentary immunity, 1476-9
 - Question of privilege, 1398-1403
 - Statement by Leader of the Government, 1409
- Photographing of precincts and of senators for distribution to Canadian embassies, 253, 255, 473
- Privileges and immunities of senators, 1395-7, 1398-1403, 1409, 1434-6, 1458, 1718, 1721, 1726
- Property qualification of senators, return presented, 242; supplementary return authorized, 242; supplementary return tabled, 427
- Protective staff, summer uniforms, 1156, 1213-14
- Reform
 - Appointments, 50-51
 - Committee work, 74-75
 - Initiation of bills, 49, 52
 - Investigation of provincial rights, 49-50
 - Official Opposition, reinforcement of, 184
 - Orders in Council and other legislation, 52-53
 - Prime Minister's comments, 32, 62-63, 184
 - Representation from Yukon and Northwest Territories, 53
 - Suspensive veto, 49, 54
 - Term of appointment, 54, 75, 184
- Regulations respecting attendance of senators, 1781-2, 1790-1, 1911-13, 1917-18, 1933-6, 2118
- Research staff, 146, 321, 516
- Resume of Senate work Oct.21-Dec.20/75, 1717
- Role of, 28-29, 74-75, 148-9
- Salaries and expense allowances of members, 847, 856-61, 868-80
 - Public and press reaction to, 847, 856-61, 868-80, 889, 899
- Seating arrangements for senators on ceremonial occasions, 13
- Senate and House of Commons Act, regulations respecting senators' attendance and deductions for absence, 948-54
- Senators' work in public interest outside of Senate, 952, 953
- Tailoring service for Senate and Commons, 2167-8, 2209
- Televising of committee proceedings, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54

Senate - Concluded

- Television and radio coverage of Senate Committees, 1365-6, 1483, 1484, 1487-8; Order stands, 1817
- Controls, 1483, 1484, 1488
- Other countries, 1483
- Press reporting of Senate proceedings, 1365
- Public reaction to appearance of senators on television, 1365
- Relevance of Senate to constitutional procedure, 1365
- Resolution adopted by Commons, 1483, 1487
- Right of public to view proceedings, 1365

Unreformed Senate of Canada, The, excerpt re senatorship, 870, 872; vacancies, 945

Wednesday sittings, hour of adjournment, 2097-8; motion rescinded, 2308, 2335

See Rules of the Senate,

- Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 847, 856-61, 868-80,
- Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81, 2177, 2186-7, 2193-6, 2203-07.

Senate and House of Commons

- Regulations respecting attendance of senators, 948-54; motion that Senate make regulations re attendance of senators and deductions for absence, 948-51; motion in amdt that subject matter be ref to Internal Economy, Budgets and Administration Committee, 951-4, agreed, 954
- Committee work, 950; meetings while Parliament is adjourned, 951-3
- Deduction for member's absence, 948
- Reform, 950-1
- Remuneration, 949
- Resolution affecting balance of national accounts, question of, 952
- Senatorship, public and press reaction to, 949
- Sittings of Senate and Commons, statistics on, 948-9

Speakers: Senators

- Carter, Chesley W., 952-3
- Cook, Eric, 951
- Croll, David A., 951-2, 953, 954
- Godfrey, John M., 948-51
- Greene, John J., 952, 954, 961
- Laird, Keith, 953
- Lamontagne, Maurice, 952
- Molson, Hartland de M., 951
- Prowse, J. Harper, 953
- Robichaud, L. J., 953

Senate and House of Commons, salaries and parliamentary secretaries

- Adequacy of increase, question of, 868
- Attendance in Parliament, Senate recording of and Commons statements re, 874
 - Statistics on attendance, 871-2, 879, 880
- Commissioners to be appointed for annual inquiry into remuneration of members of Parliament, 858, 869-70
- Committee work of senators, 874-5
- Commons members, suggestion for graduated increase on re-election, 875
- Conflict of interest aspect of bill, 870
- Cost of living index and industrial composite index, 869, 877-8
- Economic problems of members of Parliament, 879
- Expenses and travel allowances, 858, 860, 869, 870
- Hours of work on Senate sitting days, 872-3
- Income ranges affecting investments or borrowings, 876
- Increase for woodworkers, plumbers, teachers, labourers, 859
- Indemnities, suggestion for automatic fixed-dollar increase, 875, 876, 878
- Industrial composite index (1970-74), 857

Senate and House of Commons, salaries and parliamentary secretaries - Concluded

- Inflationary trends and restraints, 876-7
- Labour demands and union settlements, 860
- Leadership of members of Parliament in crisis of wage demands and of prices, 877
- Leave of absence and deduction for, 872, 874, 875
- Opposition members, 858
- Parliamentarians' remuneration, scale of, (1953-70), 857, 859, 869
- Parliamentary restaurant charges vs tradesmen's free meals, 860
- Press reaction and adverse reports re proposed salary increase, 859, 860, 870, 876
- Prime Minister, ministers and deputies, 869
- Principles governing salary increase, 868
- Provincial legislature allowances, 858, 876, 878-9
- Public servants in $60,000 bracket, 860, 876, 889
- Remuneration of senators and Commons members vs salaries in other business and professional areas, 857, 859-61, 868, 877, 879
- Retroactive clause, 860
- Senate rejection of bill suggested, 878
- Senatorship, public and press reaction to, 870-1
- Sittings of Senate and Commons, statistics, 871-2, 879, 880
- Speakers of Senate and of Commons, remuneration, 869
- Working hours, unjust criticisms of, 860

Speakers: Senators

- Carter, Chesley W., 874
- Croll, David A., 874
- Flynn, Jacques, 868-70
- Godfrey, John M., 870-5
- Greene, John J., 874
- Lamontagne, Maurice, 878
- Lawson, Edward M., 859-61
- Manning, Ernest C., 875-8
- Molson, Hartland de M., 874
- Perrault, Raymond J., 856-9, 879-80
- Prowse, J. Harper, 878-9
- Walker, David J., 874, 875

Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44. 1r, 847; 2r, 856-61, 868-80; 3r, 889; r.a., 899

Senate and House of Commons, supplementary retirement benefits

- Freeze on salaries of members of Parliament, 2186
- Liberal caucus support re cancellation of 7% increase, statement of Prime Minister re, 2193
- Press criticism of members of Parliament, 2195
- Provincial legislatures, salary increases, 2194
- Saskatchewan legislature, salary increases, 2195
- Senior public servants, 2193-4
- Sessional expenses and other allowances, 2186
- Supplementary retirement benefits, 2186-7, 2194, 2196

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 2195, 2204
- Carter, Chesley W., 2186-7, 2196
- Denis, Azellus, 2195
- Flynn, Jacques, 2187, 2193-5, 2196, 2203, 2204, 2205, 2207
- Forsey, Eugene A., 2195-6
- Greene, John J., 2204

Senate and House of Commons, supplementary retirement benefits - Concluded

Speakers: Senators - Concluded

Grosart, Allister, 2205-06
 Hicks, Henry D., 2205
 Langlois, Leopold, 2203, 2204-05, 2206
 Macnaughton, Alan A., Chairman, Committee of the Whole, 2203-07
 Manning, Ernest C., 2205

Senate and House of Commons, Supplementary Retirement Benefits bill C-81. 1r, 2177; 2r, 2186-7, 2193-6; ref to Committee of the Whole, 2196; considered in Committee of the Whole, 2203-07; rep without amdt, 2207; 3r, 2207; r.a., 2207

Senate (intersessional authority)

Administration of internal economy of Senate between sessions, 771
 BNA Act provisions re privileges, immunities and powers of Senate, 771
 Committee meetings between sessions, 577, 772
 Limitations encountered, 577
 Reports, preparation of, 577
 Committee work, delays due to dissolution of Parliaments, 577
 Dissolution periods 1963-74 (number of days), 576
 Informal arrangements previously used, 772-3
 Intersessional authority bill, question of money bill concept, 771
 Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, difficulties encountered because of impending election, 772
 Resolution re intersessional authority, 576
 Royal prerogative, necessity of, 771

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 771-2
 Flynn, Jacques, 576-7, 815-16
 Perrault, Raymond J., 770-1
 Prowse, J. Harper, 772-3

Senate (Intersessional Authority) bill S-22. 1r, 505; 2r, 576-7, 815-16; ref to com, 816

Senators, deceased

Boucher, Hon. William A. (June 23/76), 2251-2
 Bourque, Hon. Romuald (Aug. 14/74), 11-12
 Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C. (Apr. 11/75), 778-9
 Gelinias, Hon. Louis-Philippe (Jan. 1/76), 1713-14
 Hugessen, Hon. A. K. (Mar. 30/76), 2007
 Kickham, Hon. Thomas J. (Dec. 1/74), 324
 Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C. (Feb. 13/75), 532-4
 Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C. (May 28/76), 2176-7
 O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan (Apr. 7/76), 2034-6
 Prowse, Hon. J. Harper (Sept. 28/76)
 Smith, Hon. Sydney J. (July 15/76)

Senators, new

Austin, Hon. Jacob (Nov. 5/75), 1354
 Barrow, Hon. Augustus Irvine (Sept. 30/74), 1
 Cottreau, Hon. Ernest George (Sept. 30/74), 1
 Lucier, Hon. Paul Henry (Nov. 12/75), 1395
 Smith, Hon. George Isaac (Oct. 21/75), 1282

Senators, resignations

Aird, Hon. John B. (Nov. 28/74), 334-6
 Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, P.C. (May 25/75), 967-8

Senators, resignations - Concluded

- Gelinas, Hon. Louis P. (Dec. 10/75), 1713-14
- Gouin, Hon. Leon Mercier (Mar. 18/76), 2057
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C. (Oct. 30/74), 207-12

Senators, retirements

- Welch, Hon. Frank C. (July 14/75)

Sessions of Parliament

- Legislative program, government policy re, question, 1902-03

Sky Shops Export Limited, Dorval Airport, alleged conflict of interest (Senator Giguere), 1348, 1395-1403, 1434-6

Small farms development program

- Consultants assigned to individual provinces, 2079
- Consultants serving NB, NS and PEI, 2079
- Loans approved provincially Sept. 21/72 to June 30/75, 1197-8, 1213
 - British Columbia, 1198
 - New Brunswick, 1213
 - Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Quebec, 1198

Smith, Hon. Donald

- Migratory bird sanctuaries, warden services in Maritime provinces, contracts for, 279
- Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 815

Smith, Hon. George Isaac (Introduced in the Senate Oct. 21/75)

- Anti-Inflation bill C-73, 1508, 1509, 1528-32, 1537, 1580
 - Professional categories under provincial jurisdiction, 1508, 1509
- Anti-inflation program, government rejection of Board's opinion re postal workers' contract, 1627-8
- Cabinet ministers, rejection of resignations by Prime Minister, 1892-3
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2281-2, 2286, 2350
 - International law, question of, 2281
 - Land ownership, 2281-2
 - Certification of title, 2282
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 1) C-71, 1893-6, 1898, 1899, 1907-08
 - Morgentaler* amendment, 1907-08
 - Right of judge to infer from peace officer's evidence that disturbance has occurred, 1894-6
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2438, 2439-42
 - Parole, 2440
 - Prison term, 2440
 - Sanctity of life, 2440
 - Senate responsibility, 2438-9
 - Statistics, inadequacy of, 2440, 2441
 - Victims of crime, 2440
- Energy, development of tidal power in Bay of Fundy, 2070
- Grain subsidies paid on shipments to Eastern Canadian ports for export, 2156, 2201-02, 2211, 2376-7
- Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation bill C-78, 1721-3
 - Background of Commission formed after Halifax explosion (1917), 1721-2
 - Blind persons rehabilitation, 1722
 - Payments to be within credit of account, 1722
 - Pensions and allowances paid to widows and disabled persons, 1718
 - Inequalities of, 1722
 - Transfer of funds to provincial or municipal organization, 1722

Smith, Hon. George Isaac - Concluded

- Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, 1439-42
 - Alberta royalty reduction, 1441
 - Interest and dividends credit for man and wife, 1440
 - Investment tax credit, 1440
 - Registered retirement savings plans, 1440-1
 - Resource allowance, 1441-2
- Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1881-3, 2395, 2396
 - Broadcasting, 1882
 - Bellingham station, 1882
 - Canada-US relations, 1883
 - MD of Canada*, 1881-2
 - Ministerial rulings, 1882-3
 - Time and Reader's Digest*, 1882-3
- Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1858
- Medical Care bill C-68, 2339
 - Ceiling on federal payments, 2338, 2340-1
 - Excerpt from speeches of Hon. Mr. MacEachen (1966), 2339-40
 - Federal-provincial consultations, 2342-3
 - Provincial reactions to legislation, 2341-2
 - Statement of Hon. Mr. Macnaughton, 2341
 - Statement of Hon. Mr. Robarts (1966) 2339
 - Victoria conference of provincial health ministers, 2342
- Regional Development Incentives bill C-74, 1620-2, 1664, 1666
 - Commercial operations, 1621
 - Abenaki Motor Inn, 1621
 - Disparity in allocation of grants or loans, 1620
 - Five-year extension of program, 1620
 - Per capita income, 1620
 - Slow-growth areas, 1620, 1621
 - Time lapse in application for grant and approval of, 1620-1
 - Halifax Chronicle-Herald* article re, 1620
 - Unemployment statistics, 1620
- Senate
 - Monday evening sittings, question of, 1877
- Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80, 1644
- Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, 1827-30, 1831, 1832, 1833-4
 - Appeals, 1827-9
 - Certificates submitting opinion of minister and Solicitor General, 1828
 - Improvements suggested:
 - Certificate giving opinion re national interest, 1829
 - Expiration date of effect of legislation, 1829
 - Reasonable grounds for minister's opinion, 1828-9
 - Ministerial powers, 1827-8, 1834
 - Retaining of powers after expiration date of Games, 1828, 1829-30

Smith, Hon. Sydney J., Former Speaker of the Senate, retired
 Deceased July 15/76

Social security

Old age security, 1101-3, 1123-6, 1134

Social welfare, distribution of income, 2144-9

Distribution of income by quintiles, 2145

Forms required of welfare recipients, 2144, see also appendix to Debates of May 19/76

Social welfare - Concluded

- Income redistribution through government intervention (1970), 2145-6
- Myths concerning welfare, 2144
- Report of study of government expenditures on welfare, 2147-8
- Subsidies to businesses, 2147, 2149; CNR and CPR, 2149
- Universality of welfare programs, 2146-7
- Speaker: Senator
 - Croll, David A., 2144-9

Spain

- King Juan Carlos I of Spain, attendance of Senator Perrault at Coronation, 1485

Sparrow, Hon. Herbert O.

- Canadian Wheat Board, adjustment payments to grain producers, 1297
- Continental Bank of Canada bill S-30, 1345
- Estimates, discussion on subject matter of appropriation bills remaining on Order Paper, 1784
- Estimates, fiscal year ending Mar. 31/75, Supplementary (C), 441-2
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, rep of National Finance Committee, 971-3, 983-4
 - CIDA, authority to carry funds from year to year, 973
 - Employees in the government, statistics, 972
 - Expenditures and GNP, 972, 983
 - Growth of budgetary expenditures in various depts., 972, 983
 - Increases in statutory items and non-statutory items, 972-3, 983
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, Supplementary (A), rep of National Finance Committee, 1549, 1565-70, 1602
 - Budgetary expenditures, various departments, 1565
 - Dollar items, 1565-70
 - Agriculture, 1569
 - Energy, Mines and Resources, 1566
 - External Affairs, 1568
 - Finance, 1569
 - Industry, Trade and Commerce, 1566
 - National Health and Welfare, 1566, 1568
 - Public Works, 1566-7
 - Regional Economic Expansion, 1570
 - Science and Technology, 1567
 - Secretary of State, 1567, 1568-9, 1570
 - Solicitor General, 1569
 - Transport, 1567, 1568, 1569
 - Urban Affairs, 1568
 - Veterans Affairs, 1567-8, 1569
 - Yearly estimates totals (1969-76), 1565
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/76, Supplementary (B), 1937, 1948-53, 1958-9
 - Dollar items, 1948-53
 - Percentage increase of supplementary estimates in relation to main estimates, 1948, 1959
- Estimates, year ending Mar. 31/77, rep of National Finance Committee, 2167, 2173-5
- External Affairs Department, Passport Office, refusal to accept Canadian currency of $50 and $100 denominations, 2037, 2077
- National Finance Committee
 - Meetings during adjournment, 2038
- Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, 598, 599
 - Crowsnest Pass Agreement, 598
- Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1725

Speaker of the House of Commons

Commission appointing Hon. James Jerome to office of Speaker of the House of Commons, 2

Speaker of the Senate

Commission appointing Hon. Renaude Lapointe to office of Speaker of the Senate, 1

Former Speaker Hon. Muriel McQueen Fergusson, speeches at unveiling of portrait in Senate foyer, 469-71

Pro tem

Bourget, Hon. Maurice, 382, 396, 1395, 2176, 2361

Deschatelets, Hon. Jean-Paul, 1781

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, 582, 803

Macnaughton, Hon. Alan A., 239

McIlraith, Hon. George J., 833

Statement at Opening of Session, 1

See Lapointe, Hon. Renaude

Special Committees, see CommitteesSpeech from the Throne at Opening of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament, 2-7

Consideration date, 7

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, His Excellency the Administrator of the Government of Canada, Opening of Parliament, 2-7

Termination date of Address in reply, 13

See Address in reply to Speech from the Thron

Speech from the Throne at Prorogation of First Session of Thirtieth Parliament

Laskin, Rt. Hon. Bora, 2453

Spence, Hon. Wishart F., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court

Deputy Administrator of the Government of Canada, 313-14

Royal assent, 313-14

Deputy Governor General

Royal assent, 656, 740, 758, 832, 1134, 1617, 1712

Sports

British Columbia Women's Basketball Team, congratulations on winning of championship, 1889

Canadian Men's Curling Championship, congratulations to Newfoundland rink, 1889

Message of congratulations to Montreal Canadiens on winning of the Stanley Cup, 2129

Pan American Games, congratulations to Canadian team members, 1318

Russia-Canada hockey series, 58-59; Press report of speech by Senator Godfrey, 98-99

Stanbury, Hon. Richard J.

Anti-inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2098, 2137-9

Appeals, 2098

Compensation cases, 2098

Increases in compensation in excess of guidelines, 2098

Right of notification to an appeal board, 2098

Authority of Administrator, 2098

Compensation in Quebec industry, 2098

Gross National Product, 2138-9

Right to freedom, 2137-8

US economy, 2138-9

Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, 542

Brotherhood Week, 542

Indian and non-Indian children, wilderness camping, 542

Labour-management conferences, 542

Religious dialogue, 542

Student exchange, 542

Stanbury, Hon. Richard J. - Concluded

- Canadian economy
 - Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1373-5
 - Domestic savings, 1374
 - Federal-provincial leadership, 1374-5
 - Labour demands, 1374
 - Trade strategies, 1374
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2408-09
 - Deterrent aspect, 2408
 - Gallup poll, 2408, 2409
 - Media coverage of subject and effects of, 2409
 - Responsibility of members of Parliament, 2409
- Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, Joint Committee
 - Rep with amds, Bill C-52 (Superannuation), 1545-7
- Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1707-08, 1710-11
 - Benefits payable on cessation of employment, 1707
 - Common-law spouse, 1710
 - Continuation of employment beyond December, 1707
 - Continuation of pension entitlement on job change, 1707
 - Equalization of benefits to male and female employees, 1707, 1710
 - Interest rate on return of contributions, 1710, 1711
 - Transfer of pension credits, 1707
 - Widower's benefit, 1707, 1710
- Statute Revision bill S-3, 128-9
 - Indexing of statutes and regulations, 129
 - Loose-leaf editions, 129
 - Omission of federal and private acts from earlier revisions, 129
 - Powers of commission, 129

Status of women, 16-17, 187-8

- International Women's Year, 188, 671-4, 836-8, 896-9
- Statute Law (status of women) 1065, 1103-07, 1122-3, 1136, 1281
- See Women, status of*

Statute law relating to income tax, 583, 606-14, 616-21, 627-40, 645-56, 1403, 1417-22, 1439-42, 1454, 1459, 1476Statute law (status of women)

- Acts amended, 1104, 1107
 - Civilian war pensions and allowances, 1104
 - Criminal Code, 1104
 - Elections, 1104
 - Immigration, 1104
 - National defence, 1104
 - Pensions, 1104
 - Public Service employment, 1104
 - Unemployment insurance, 1107
- Cadet organizations, 1106
- Education, 1105
- Excerpt from Le Devoir editorial, 1103
- Female staff of the Senate, 1103-04
- Labour force discriminations, 1105
- Pension inequalities, 1106

Statute law (status of women) - Concluded

- Political status, 1105
- Recommendations of Royal Commission on the Status of Women, 1104
- Speakers of the Senate, 1105, 1107
- Speakers: Senators
 - Belisle, Rheal, 1104-07
 - Denis, Azellus, 1103-04, 1107

Statute Law (Status of Women) 1974 bill C-16. 1r, 1065; 2r, 1103-07; m for amdt to French version, 1122, agreed, 1123; 3r, 1123; Commons concurrence in Senate amdt, 1136; r.a., 1281

Statute law (superannuation)

- Benefits payable on cessation of employment, 1707
- Common-law spouse, 1708, 1710
- Continuation of employment beyond December, 1707
- Continuation of pension entitlement on job change, 1707
- Equalization of benefits to male and female employees, 1707, 1708, 1710
- Interest rate on return of contributions, 1708-09, 1710, 1711
- Members of Parliament, 1709
- Transfer of pension credits, 1707
- Widower's benefit, 1707, 1710
- Widows of senators, 1710-11
- Speakers: Senators
 - Bélisle, Rhéal, 1708-09, 1710
 - Choquette, Lionel, 1709-10
 - Forsey, Eugene A., 1710
 - Stanbury, Richard J., 1707-08, 1710-11

Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52. 1r, 1706; 2r, 1706-11; 3r, 1711; r.a., 1712

Statute law (veterans and civilian war allowances)

- Common-law wife, 260, 261
- Dependent children, 257-8, 260, 267-8, 269
- Discrimination affecting those under age of 65 yrs., 268
- Escalation of allowances to consumer price index, 268
- Means test, 268
- Orphans, 257-8
- Qualification of 365 days overseas, 268, 269
- Residence requirement, 268
- Widowers of female veterans attaining age of 60 yrs., 261
- Speakers: Senators
 - Bélisle, Rhéal, 258-62
 - Benidickson, W. M., 269-70
 - Carter, Chesley W., 267-8
 - Lang, Daniel, 256-8
 - Macdonald, John M., 268-9

Statute Law (Veterans and Civilian War Allowances) Amendment bill C-4. 1r, 242; 2r, 267-70; ref to com, 270; rep without amdt, 272; 3r, 281; r.a., 314

Statute law (veterans and returned soldiers' insurance)

- Common-law spouse, 1884
- Death benefit limitation, 1884

Statute law (veterans and returned soldiers insurance) - ConcludedSpeakers: Senators

Carter, Chesley W., 1883-4

Macdonald, John M., 1910-11

Statute Law (Veterans and Returned Soldiers' Insurance) bill C-86. 1r, 1856; 2r, 1883-4, 1910-11; 3r, 1917; r.a., 2002

Statute revision

Indexing of statutes and regulations, 129

Loose-leaf editions, 129

Omission of federal and private acts from earlier revisions, 129

Powers of commission, 129

Speakers: Senators

Choquette, Lionel, 159

Stanbury, Richard J., 128-9

Statute Revision bill S-3. 1r, 12; 2r, 128-9, 159; ref to com, 159; rep without amdt, 243; 3r, 253; r.a., 467

Statutes of Canada

Ambiguous powers, citations re, 275-6

Appeal Court, 276

History of Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec, 274-5

Speakers: Senators

Flynn, Jacques, 291-3

Langlois, Leopold, 274-7, 293

Statutes of Canada (to revise references to Court of Queen's Bench of Quebec) bill S-16. 1r, 243; 2r, 274-7, 291-3; 3r, 301; r.a., 467

Sullivan, Hon. Joseph A.

Abortions, study of procedure for obtaining therapeutic abortions, question re committee on, 1428, 1624-5, 1639, 1654-5

Connaught Laboratories Ltd., sale of land and laboratory testing adjacent to proposed housing development, 586, 616, 732

Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 358-62, 1079-80

'Drugs, Society and Personal Choice', 361

Hazards of use of cannabis, 359-60

Effect on learning ability, 359-60

Metabolic interactions with other drugs, 359-60

Persistence of THC in the body, 359

Tar content, 359

Legal aspects, 360

Permissive society, 361-2

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2004-05

MD of Canada, 2004-05

Time and Reader's Digest, 2004

Medical Care bill C-68, 2339

Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bill S-9, 155-6, 157

Herbal medicinals, 156

Listing of ingredients, 157

Safety and effectiveness of proprietary medicines, 156

Scientific review of medicines, 156

TV advertising, detrimental aspects, 156

Sullivan, Hon. Joseph A. - Concluded

Sports

Montreal Canadiens, message of congratulations on winning of the Stanley Cup, 2129
Team Canada, 98-99

Superannuation

Statute Law (Superannuation) bill C-52, 1706-11, 1712
Subject matter of Bill C-52 ref to Committee on Employer-Employee Relations in the Public Service, 1437; rep with amds, 1545-7

Supplementary borrowing authority

Borrowing through issue of treasury bills and raising of new funds through bonds, 1642, 1649-50
Capital markets, 1642, 1644
Draftmanship of legislation, 1650
Inclusion of borrowing authority in appropriation bills, 1642
Referral of bill to committee, question of, 1643, 1644
Requirement of recommendation of Governor General, 1643
Retroactivity of authority, 1650

Speakers: Senators

Everett, Douglas D., 1649-50
Flynn, Jacques, 1642, 1643, 1649
Grosart, Allister, 1643-4
Langlois, Leopold, 1641-4, 1650
Smith, George I., 1644

Supplementary Borrowing Authority bill C-80. 1r, 1638; 2r, 1641-4; ref to com, 1644; rep without amdt, 1649;
3r, 1649-50; r.a., 1712

Supplementary Retirement Benefits Act

Senate and House of Commons, 2177, 2186-7, 2193-6

Supply bills

See Appropriation bills,
Estimates.

Supreme Court

Appeals as of right, 163
Appeals, restriction to Supreme Court, 103-04, 153-4
Case overload and delays in hearings, committee on, 104-05
Conflict of interest, 163
Interest on judgments, 103, 153, 163
Judges, 1005, 1040-3, 1051-3, 1066, 1080, 1095
Jurisprudence, 163
Quorum, 163-4
Residence requirement for judges, registrars and deputy registrars, 103, 153, 162-3

Speakers: Senators

Connolly, John J., 103-06, 162-4
Flynn, Jacques, 106, 153-5
Macdonald, John M., 162

Supreme Court bill S-2. 1r, 12; 2r, 103-06, 153-5, 162-4; ref to com, 164; rep without amdt, 243; 3r, 253; r.a., 467

Supreme Courts of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island

See Judges bill C-47, 1005, 1040-3, 1051-3, 1066, 1080, 1095.

Tailoring service for Senate and Commons, question, 2167-8, 2209

Tax treaties

Countries with which Canada has concluded tax treaties or conventions, 855, 867, 925, 942

Team Canada, 58-59, 98-99

Telecommunications

Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission, 803, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51, 998, 1007, 1095

Teleglobe Canada

Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation, 1034, 1062, 1067, 1080

Telegraphs Act

Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission, 803, 829-32, 841-3, 849-51, 998, 1107, 1095

Televising of proceedings of Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee, 509-14, 521-3, 543-54

Committee decision re, 509-14

Authority of committee, question, 509-12

Motion to approve decision of committee, 512-14, 521-3, 543-54; agreed, 554

Television and radio coverage of Senate and committee proceedings, 1365-6, 1483, 1484, 1487-8, Order discharged and inquiry withdrawn, 2099

Controls, 1483, 1484, 1488

Decisions of other countries re broadcasting of parliamentary proceedings, 1483

Public reaction, 1487-8

Resolution adopted by Commons re broadcasting of proceedings, 1483, 1487

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 1487-8

Croll, David A., 1483, 1484

Greene, John J., 1365-6, 2099

Temporary immigration security

Appeals against minister's decision, 1827-9

Certificates submitting opinion of minister and Solicitor General, 1828, 1829

Expiry date of legislation, 1829, 1833

'Reasonable grounds' for minister's opinion, 1831

Source of information, disclosure of, 1835

Speakers: Senators

Buckwold, Sidney L., 1831, 1832

Connolly, John J., 1830

Forsey, Eugene A., 1830-2

Langlois, Leopold, 1820, 1832-6

Rowe, Frederick William, 1829

Smith, George I., 1827-30, 1832, 1833-4

Temporary Immigration security bill C-85. 1r, 1813; 2r, 1820, 1827-36; ref to com, 1836; rep without amdt, 1874; 3r, 1893; r.a., 2002

Territorial lands

Conflict of interest, 372, 376
 'Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest', 377
 Offshore rights and the seabed, 376, 377
Speakers: Senators
 Buckwold, Sidney L., 371-2
 Flynn, Jacques, 375-7

Territorial Lands bill S-20. 1r, 326; 2r, 371-2, 375-7; ref to com, 377; rep with amdt, 579; 3r, 579; r.a., 1095

Textile industry

See Industry, Canadian textile problems, 781-7, 791-3, 843-6, 901-02, 945-8, 975-9

Thompson, Hon. Andrew

Aeronautics bill S-34, 2124-5, 2131-2
 Authorization re instituting of security measures, 2125
 Canadian air carriers landing in foreign countries, 2125
 Conventions, international, 2124, 2125
 Landing of foreign air carriers without being subjected to security measures, 2125
 Security measures for civil aircraft of foreign air carriers, 2124, 2131
 Immigration bill S-12, 166
 Italy, earthquake victims, Canadian government assistance to, 2111

Time and Reader's Digest magazines, 582-3, 641-2

See Income Tax bill C-58
 Publishing industry.

Trade

Balance of payments, deficit, 877
 Canada's claim for compensation re loss of preferential access of Canadian commodities to British market, 579-80, 661-2, 671
 Canada-United States relations, 227-9
 European Community, 307-13, 316-20, 329-33, 515, 579-80, 661-2, 671
 Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1738-41, 1849-52, 2059
 Inflationary trends affecting export markets, 877
 Japan, 234-5, 245-9
 Mexico, 775-7, 852-3
 Preferential rates for developing countries, 485, 515
 United Nations Trade and Development Conference, 515

Trade Marks Act

Proprietary or Patent Medicine, Trade Marks bills S-9 and S-35

Translations

Criteria of Regulations and other Statutory Instruments Committee, correction of, 264

Transport and Communications, Standing Senate Committee

Members, 96
 Reports
 Aeronautics bill S-34, rep without amdt, 2141

Transport and Communications, Standing Senate Committee - ConcludedReports - Concluded

- Aircraft Registry bill S-5, rep with recommendation that bill be not proceeded with 980-1, 990-7, 999-1002
- Canadian Broadcasting Corporation TV program 'Les Beaux Dimanches', 1099, 1118-20, 1127-9
- Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission bill C-5, rep without amdt, 998
- International Air Transport Association bill S-18, rep without amdt, 373
- Railway bill C-48, rep without amdt, 795

Transport Minister Hon. Jean Marchand, rumour of resignation, 573Transportation*Air service

- Disruption of services (bilingualism), 2237, 2243, 2249-50, 2258-9
- Eastern Canada, 73
- Fredericton-Ottawa, 854-5, 867
- Halifax-Ottawa, 1479-80
- St. John's-Ottawa, 506-08
- Air service, flight delays due to labour disputes, 2062-3, 2168
- Bilingual air traffic services, Commission of Inquiry, 2322
 - Letters from Canadian Air Traffic Control Assoc. and Air Line Pilots' Assoc., and to Minister of Transport, 2335, 2352-3
- Crowsnest Pass freight rates, 41-42, 598, 889, 924
- Feed grains, freight assistance to Atlantic provinces, 1035
- Ferries operating between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, possible increase in fares, 1815
- Memorandum of Understanding between Minister of Transport and the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, 2276-7
- Newfoundland
 - Air service, 506-08
 - Inter-city passenger routes, Canadian Press article re, 139-40
 - North Sydney-Cape Breton-Port aux Basques, 139
 - Strait of Belle Isle, 64-65
 - Trans-Canada Highway, 63-64
- Nova Scotia, 20
- Official Languages Act, language rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2344-8, 2378-86
- Prince Edward Island, 73
- Railways
 - Abandonment of lines and effect on municipal property tax assessments, 44-45
 - Canadian Pacific Railway, 38-45; land grants and sales, 39-42; mineral rights and revenue from, 40-42; Trail copper smelter, 42; Crowsnest Pass, 42
 - Freight rates, 43
 - Passenger trains, 43-45, 52, 140
- Resumption of airline services in Canada, appointment of Commission of Inquiry, 2261-2, 2276-7

Transportation

- British North America Act as it pertains to transportation, 2049-54, 2070, 2106-08, 2115-18, 2196-8, 2217-21; motion to refer subject matter to Transport and Communications Committee, 2221, 2333-4
- British Columbia terms re transportation services, 2218
- Chignecto Ship Canal, 2219
- Ferry employees right to strike, 2197, 2218-19
- Government policy, lack of statement re, 2218
- Halifax and Saint John, 'Gateway to Eastern North America', 2211-12
- Halifax container pier, 2212

Transportation - ConcludedBritish North America Act as it pertains to transportation - Concluded

Intercolonial railway, 1117-18

British Columbia, 2218

New Brunswick, 2217-18

Newfoundland, 2106-08, 2115-18

CNR operations, 2115-18

Abandonment of passenger service, 2115-16

Elimination of freight trains, 2116

Limited 'train consist', 2115-16

Overcharges on freight, 2117

Shipment delays, 2116

Ferry service, 2197-8

Newfoundland & Ontario Steamship Ltd., 2198

Road cruiser service, 2116

Bus fares, 2117

Bus purchases, questions re, 2116

Shipping, charter rates, 2198

Terms of Union re transportation services, 2108, 2117, 2118

Trans-Canada Highway, 2106-07

Provincial disparities, 2106-07

Passenger rail service, 2212

Prince Edward Island

Background of ferry services to PEI, NB and NS, 2050-1

CNR and Canadian Brotherhood of Transport and General Workers, labour disputes, 2053-4

CNR facilities, deterioration of, 2197

Charlottetown Guardian article re statement of Highways Minister, 2053

Excerpt from BNA Act re provisions relating to PEI services to be assumed by federal government, 2049-50

Ferry services of Albert, Northern Light and Stanley, 2150

Marine East Coast Co-ordinating Committee, 2050, 2054

National transportation policy, 2053

Potatoes, transportation by truck and resulting highway and marketing costs, 2052

Railway traffic provisions, 2051-2

CNR discontinuance of passenger service, 2052

Transportation rates on passengers, vehicles and freight, 2051

Federal government responsibility for increase, 2051

Saskatchewan, inquiry re rail abandonment, 2220

Sea-Wings cargo business, Atlantic provinces, 2212

Unemployment, 2198

Speakers: Senators

Bonnell, M. Lorne, 2049-54, 2070

Buckwold, Sidney L., 2219, 2220

Burchill, G. Percival, 2221

Carter, Chesley W., 2220

Duggan, James, 2115-18

Forsey, Eugene A., 2217-21

Greene, John J., 2219

MacDonald, John M., 2196-8

McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2220, 2221, 2333-4

Norrie, Margaret F., 2211-12

Phillips, Orville H., 2063-6, 2220

Riley, Daniel A., 2221

Rowe, Frederick William, 2106-08, 2064

Treaties

Countries with which Canada has concluded tax treaties or conventions, 855, 867, 925

See Agreements, conventions, treaties

Tributes

- Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 334-6
- Bourque, Hon. Romuald, the late, 11-12
- Crerar, Hon. Thomas A., P.C., the late, 778-9
- Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, P.C.
Resignation from the Senate, 967-8
Unveiling of portrait in Senate foyer, 469-71
- Gelinas, Hon. Louis-Philippe, the late, 1713-14
- Gouin, Hon. Leon Mercier, resignation from the Senate, 2057
- Hugessen, Hon. A. K., the late, 2007
- Kickham, Hon. Thomas J., the late, 324
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 534-2
- Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C., the late, 2176-7
- MacKay, Hon. John, Lieutenant Governor of Prince Edward Island, the late, 135
- Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate and appointment to office of High Commissioner to United Kingdom, 208-12
- Matheson, Hon. Alexander W., the late, former Premier of Prince Edward Island, 1861-2
- O'Leary, Hon. M. Grattan, the late, 2034-6
- See Felicitations*

Trudeau, Rt. Hon. Pierre Elliott, P.C., Prime Minister of Canada

- Orders in Council concerning prerogatives of Prime Minister, 1349, 1355
- Visit to British Columbia with cabinet ministers, 1763-4
- Visit to Paris, news report on accompanying officials, 161, 180
- Watergate tapes, reference to Prime Minister by former US President Nixon, 179

Trust companies

- Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7, 47, 100-03, 107, 160, 180, 314

Two-price wheat

- Bread prices, 928, 929
- Canadian Wheat Board report, excerpt re two-price system, 943
- Escalator clause, lack of, 929-30, 943
- Price of wheat for consumption in Canada, 928, 929-30
- Production costs, 928, 929-30
- Statements to Commons committee re floor price;
 - Canadian Federation of Agriculture, 929
 - National Farmers Union, 929
 - Ontario Wheat Producers' Marketing Board, 930
 - Palliser Wheat Growers Assoc., 930
- Subsidy to producers and consumers, 928, 929

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 928-30, 1088, 1089
- Macdonald, John M., 942-3
- Molgat, Gildas L., 928

Two-Price Wheat bill C-19. 1r, 900; 2r, 928-30, 942-4; ref to com, 944; rep without amdt but with recommendation, 1088-90; 3r, 1090; r.a., 1095

Unemployment

- Community employment, 283
- Importation of farm labourers, 284, 287
- Loss of working days through strikes, 81-82
- Manpower centres, functions of, 400-01
- Prince Edward Island, transportation problems of employable persons, 84
- Textile workers, 782, 784, 786-7, 791
- Unemployment insurance for pensioners, 145
- Welfare and unemployment insurance vs wages, 283, 284, 287
- Work ethic in Canada, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518
- Working poor, 141

Unemployment insurance

- Amdts to be proclaimed in Jan/76, 1700
- Appeal procedure, 1704
 - Statistics on appeals, 1704
- Application form for insurance, 1704
- Claimants outside Canada, 1703
- Dependency reduction from 75% to 66⅔%, 1696, 1697
- Disentitlement, 1699
- Escalation in unemployment insurance payments, 1697
- Leaving employment voluntarily and refusal of suitable employment, 1702
- Minimum benefit, 1702
- Persons 65 yrs. and over, 1696, 1697, 1698
 - OAS and GIS benefits, 1696, 1698
 - Refunds, 1701
 - Retirement benefits, 1702
 - Statistics, 1698, 1701
- Prison or institutional inmate, 1703
- Qualifying time, extension of, 1700
- Recovery of advance payments, 1703
- Regional breakdown of savings, 1700
- Self-employed persons or partnership, 1699
- Sharing of costs between employees, employers and government, 1697
- Sick benefits, 1700-01, 1702
- Social insurance number, 1705
- Social security measures, increase in benefits, 1696
- Students returning to school, 1700
- Suitable employment, defining of, 1703
- Training or instruction for new employment, 1702-03
- Unemployment statistics (1974), 1697
- Speakers: Senators
 - Forsey, Eugene A., 1690-1, 1698, 1699, 1700, 1702, 1705, 1706
 - Fournier, Sarto, 1705-06
 - Grosart, Allister, 1671-3, 1697, 1698, 1699, 1700, 1701, 1702, 1703, 1704, 1705
 - Macdonald, John M., 1689-90, 1698, 1701-02, 1703, 1704
 - Macnaughton, Alan, 1695-1706
 - Molgat, Gildas L., 1687-9, 1694-5
 - Perrault, Raymond J., 1693, 1694
 - also*
 - Andras, Hon. Robert K., Minister of Manpower and Immigration, 1695-1706

Unemployment Insurance bill C-69. 1r, 1686; 2r, 1686-95; bill committed to Committee of the Whole, Senator Macnaughton in the Chair, Minister of Manpower and Immigration Hon. Robert K. Andras taking part in debate, 1695-1700, m to amend clause 6 not carried, 1700, debate cont, 1700-06; 3r, 1706; r.a., 1712

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Canada-Russia hockey series, 58-59, 98-99
 Economic conditions and trade prospects, 458
 Invasion of other countries, 1759
 Invitation to Canadian Parliamentary delegation to visit Russia, 1250-1, 1257
 Maritime forces, 345
 Military power, 1761
 Nobel Peace Prize winner, refusal of USSR to permit acceptance of award, 1760-1
 Territorial gains as result of World War II, 342-3
 Violation of treaties and agreements, 1758-61
 Warsaw Pact, 1759-60

United Grain Growers Limited bill S-33. 1r, 1914; 2r, 1924-5, 1930, 1946-7; ref to com, 1947; rep without amdt, 2003; 3r, 2009; r.a., 2207

United Kingdom

Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., High Commissioner to UK, farewell speech to the Canadian Parliament on appointment to position, 207-08; tributes, 208-12
 Trades Union Congress of Britain, statement of policy, 1328-9
 Wilson, Rt. Hon. Harold, Prime Minister, visit to Parliament, 473, 480

United Nations

Canada's participation in refugee relief, peacekeeping and ceasefire missions, 1243, 1244
 Crime Prevention, status of Palestinian Liberation Organization as participants in UN Congress, 1238, 1242-4, 1248-9
 Current discord at international conferences, 1238
 Resolution adopted by General Assembly inviting PLO to attend Congress, 1238
 Statement of Secretary of State for External Affairs re government decision to request postponement of meeting, 1248-9
 Crimes Against Internationally Protected Persons; Prevention and Punishment - An Analysis of the UN Convention, 1769
 Habitat, Conference on Human Settlements, report of Canadian National Committee, 1959-64, 2099-2102, 2199-2200, 2278-9
 Pension benefits for dependants of Canadian soldier killed in Cyprus, 760, 768
 Resolution naming Israel as racist nation, motion re condemnation of, Senator Croll, 1397-8
 Limitation on contributions as result of resolution, question, Senator Greene, 1411, 1417
 South Africa, exclusion from UN, 1243-4
 UNESCO, 487-8, 515, 1243
 Agreement for Facilitating International Circulation of Visual and Auditory Materials of Educational, Scientific and Cultural Character, 4-7
 Convention, 515
 Excerpt from Montreal Star re, 487-8
 Withdrawal of grants and exclusion of Israel from European Zone, 488, 1243
 Objectors to UNESCO decision, 1243
 World population, conference on, 236
 Zionism, Assembly resolution re and limitation on Canada's contributions as result of, 1411, 1419

United States

- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Florida meeting, 2221-2, 2224-33
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, Quebec City meeting, 1137-43, 1144-55, 1625-7
- Canada-United States relations, 66-68, 71, 227-9, 234, 1653, 1716, 1747-50
 - Foreign Affairs Committee authorized to report on, 227-9, 234; com authorized to publish and distribute Vol. I of report, 1653; report tabled, 1716
 - Committee report, 1747-50
 - Questions re, 1625-7
- Canadian defence spending, remarks by United States Ambassador, report in Globe and Mail, 2122-3, 2201
- Watergate tapes, reference to Prime Minister by former US President Nixon, 179
- See Canada-US relations

Uranium Canada, Limited, proposed referral of report of National Finance Committee, 1639

Urban affairs

- National housing, 742, 743-57, 758

van Roggen, Hon. George C.

- Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 334-5
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1577, 1581
- Anti-Inflation bill (No. 2) C-89, 2113-15
 - Export levy, effect on resource industries, 2113-14
 - New plants and equipment, 2114
- Austin, Hon. Jacob, introduced in the Senate, 1354
- Canada-United States Inter-Parliamentary Group, 1140-3, see also 1145-55
 - Energy resources, 1141-2
 - Alaska reserves, 1141
 - Athabaska tar sands and Colorado oil shale, 1141
 - Coal reserves, 1141
 - Nuclear energy, 1142
 - Prices, 1141; controversy re, 1141
 - Shortfall in deliveries to US, 1142
 - Solar and geothermal energy, harnessing of tides, heat pumps, 1142
 - Excerpts from speeches made in Quebec City, 1140-1, 1143
- European Parliament, 307-14
 - Brussels meetings, 309-10
 - Canadian delegation, 308-09
 - Canadian relations with European Community, excerpt from Senate Committee report on, 310
 - Economic situation, 311
 - Energy resources, 312-13
 - Exchange meetings in Ottawa, 308
 - Ottawa office, establishment of, 308
 - Prime Minister's visit to the Community, 308
 - United Kingdom, 312
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1048
 - Application for withdrawal of criminal record, 1048
 - Unconditional pardon, 1048
- Foreign affairs
 - Canada-United States relations, 1747-50
 - Changing concepts of the relationship, 1748
 - Current problems, 1748
 - Information program, 1749
 - Inter-Parliamentary Group meetings, 1749
 - Legislative channels and contacts, 1748-9

van Roggen, Hon. George C. - *Concluded*Foreign affairs - *Concluded*Canada-United States relations - Concluded

Statistical comparisons on trade, 1749

'The Institutional Framework for the Relationship', foreward of Vol. I of report, 1747-8

Trade relations, 1748

Tributes to committee members, witnesses and staff, 1750

Foreign Affairs Committee

Canada-United States relations, committee authorized to report on, 227-9, 234; committee authorized to publish and distribute Vol. I of report, 1653

Reports

Canada-United States Relations, 1747-50

Temporary Immigration Security bill C-85, rep without amdt, 1874

Free trade, an economic consideration for Canada, 1741

Immigration bill C-12, 239

Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1869-73

Broadcasting, 1870

Bellingham station, 1872

Canada-US negotiations, 1870-1, 1872

Canadian advertising expenditures, 1870

CRTC recommendations, 1871, 1872

Ministerial rulings, 1870

Time and Reader's Digest, 1869-70, 1871-2

Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 534

National Press Gallery, invitation to reception, 61-62

Oil industry, Canada-US relations re, 71

Privileges and Immunities (International Organization) bill S-25, 957-8

Comprehensive economic cooperation agreement, 957

European Community, recommendation for establishment of Ottawa office, 957-8

Recommendations of Foreign Affairs Committee, 957

Visit of Prime Minister to Community, 957

Regulations re attendance of senators, 1935-6

Travel distance, 1935

Veterans

Compensation for former prisoners of war, 2014, 2038-43

Royal Canadian Legion, 1180, 1194-6, 1205-09, 1211-12, 1281

Statute Law (veterans and civilian war allowances), 242, 267-70, 272, 281, 314

Veterans and returned soldiers' insurance, 1856Victoria Museum, rumoured change of name, question, 1035, 1165*Visitors

Alberta parliamentarians, 1087

Baltic Nations, Consuls of Estonia and Latvia, 1867

British Columbia, Mr. William Templeton, Victoria Legislative Assembly, 854

British Columbia parliamentarians, 1087

Bulgaria, President of the General Assembly and His Excellency the Ambassador, 124

Club of Rome President, Dr. Peccei, 473

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, African region delegation, 1087

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Secretary General Sir Robin Vanderfelt, 1966

Fergusson, Hon. Muriel McQueen, former Speaker of the Senate, 1970

Icelandic parliamentarians, 2184

Iraq, Mr. Elkadi Kw Kussai, 1742

Japan, delegation from House of Councillors, 2364

Visitors - Concluded

Japan, Mr. Yasunaga Ohara, National Diet Library, 299
 MacKenzie, Hon. Norman, 1303
 Mexico, Parliamentary delegation, 1874, 1877-8
 Polish Ambassador, His Excellency Jozef Czesak and Mrs. Czesak, 1442
 Saskatchewan, parliamentarians and wives, 262
 Senior citizens from March Township and Kanata, 555
 United Kingdom, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, 473

Vote

Anti-Inflation bill (No. 1) C-73, 1581, 1587
 Appropriation bill No. 5, 1974 C-45, 417
 Citizenship bill C-20, 2290
 Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2450
 Question re voting procedure, 2444
 Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 1030-1, 1078
 Income Tax bill (No. 1) C-49, 655-6
 Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 2032

Walker, Hon. David J., P.C.

Aird, Hon. John B., resignation from the Senate, 335
 Canada Business Corporations bill C-29, 494-7
 Administrative discretion, 494
 Complaints re mishandling of business, 496-7
 Directors, 496
 Ontario Corporations Act, 494, 495, 496
 Shares and dividends, 496
 Criminal Code (commutation of death sentence) bill S-21, 558-9
 Deterrent aspect, 558, 559
 Increase in murder crimes, 559
 Federal Trust Companies and Loan Companies bill S-7, 103
 Gasoline excise tax, 1101
 Income Tax bill (No. 2) C-65, 1418, 1420
 Income Tax bill (No. 3) C-58, 1842-5, 1848, 2393-5
 Canada-United States relations, 1844
 Destruction of competition, 1844
 Economic aspects of legislation, 1844
 Mass Media Committee, 1842-3
 Time Magazine and Reader's Digest, 1842-5
 Judges bill C-47, 1042-3
 Salary increases, 1043
 Selection of judges, 1042-3
 Justice, administration of, allegations of interference by cabinet ministers, 1825-6, 1847, 1848
 Macdonald, Hon. W. Ross, P.C., the late, 2176-7
 Martin, Hon. Paul, P.C., resignation from the Senate, 210-12
 Official Languages Act, language rights of air pilots in Quebec, 2346-8
 Parliamentary immunity, 1399
 Post Office, strike of Canadian Union of Postal Workers, 1429, 1430-1
 Restaurant of Parliament, source of meat supplies, 1007, 1012-13
 Rules of the Senate
 Conflict of Interest, Green Paper, question of privilege re reference to committee, Hon. Mr. Croll, 780
 Senate and House of Commons, Salaries and Parliamentary Secretaries bill C-44, 874, 875
 Televising of committee proceedings, 522
 Tributes to Senator Hayden, Chairman of Banking, Trade and Commerce Committee, 1317

War veterans

- Dependent children, 257-8, 260
- Discrimination affecting those under age of 65 yrs., 268
- Eligibility for pension benefits, 259
- Equality for male and female veterans, 258, 260, 261
- Escalatory clause, 257, 268
- Orphans, 257-8
- Remembrance Day, 257, 258-9
- Royal Canadian Legion, 1180, 1194-6, 1205-09, 1211-12, 1281
- Statute Law (veterans and civilian war allowances) 242, 267-70, 272, 281, 314
- Widowers attaining age of 60 yrs., 216

Watergate tapes

- Reference to Prime Minister Trudeau by former US President Nixon, 179

Weapons and firearms

- Control of weapons and firearms, 193, 293-5

Welch, Hon. Frank C.

- Retired from the Senate, July 14/75

Welfare

- Community employment, 283
- Poverty in Canada - report of Special Senate Committee, 281-2
- Unemployment insurance vs welfare, 283, 284, 287
- Welfare ministers' conference, statement by Minister of NHW re federal policy in social welfare field, 556
- Work Ethic in Canada, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518
- Working poor, 283

West Coast grain handling operations

- Agriculture policies, improvement in, 84-85
- Basic hourly rate for grain handlers, 78, 82, 92; disparity in labour rates, 82
- Conciliation commissioners, Globe and Mail item on, 88
- Consultations between government representatives and company officials in Saskatoon, 91
- Cost-of-living and pension proposals, 94
- Costs of strike action, 87
- Essential services, proposals for collective bargaining, prohibition against strikes, compulsory arbitration, 79-80
- Government intervention and inadequacies in dispute, 82, 86-87
- Grain prices, 85
- Industrial Inquiry Commission, proposal of Labour minister, 78
- Loss of working days through conciliation delays, 81-82
- Prairie farmers and grain handlers reaction to Perry report, 84
- Recommendations of conciliation commissioner, 77-78, 79, 89-90, 91-92
- Termination date of agreement, 78, 80-81, 89

Speakers: Senators

- Argue, Hazen, 82-85
- Flynn, Jacques, 78-80
- Grosart, Allister, 85-89
- Manning, Ernest C., 80-81
- McDonald, A. Hamilton, 81-82
- Perrault, Raymond J., 77-78, 80, 89-93, 94

West Coast Grain Handling Operations bill C-12. 1r, 76; 2r, 77-93; 3r, 93-94; r.a., 95

West Coast ports operations

Collective agreement provisions, 725
 Disruptions in economy due to strikes, 725-7
 Labour unions and management, irresponsibility in not reaching agreement, 727
 Mediator W. Kelly, Labour Assist. Deputy Minister for Industrial Relations, 724
 Non-supervisory longshoremen, 724
 Penalty for failure to comply with legislation, 729-30
 Resumption of work by longshoremen and related operations, question, 742
 Right to strike, 727
 Stevedoring companies and ship and dock foremen, 724
 Time limit on proceedings of arbitrator, 728
 Western farmers, difficulties of communication with government, 727-8
Speakers: Senators

Argue, Hazen, 727-8
 Flynn, Jacques, 725-7, 730
 Forsey, Eugene A., 728
 McIlraith, George, 730
 Perrault, Raymond J., 724-5, 728-30
 Prowse, J. Harper, 727

West Coast Ports Operations bill 1975 C-56. 1r, 723; 2r, 724-30; 3r, 730; r.a., 731

Western grain stabilization, Agriculture Committee authorized to study subject matter of Bill C-41, 1615

Western grain stabilization

Administration of act, 1725, 1737
 Advisory committee, 1725
 Branch offices, question of, 1736, 1737
 Crop insurance, 1736, 1737
 Eligibility to participate, 1724-5
 Instability of agricultural income, 1723, 1735
 Payments vs contributions, 1724
 Production costs, 1724, 1736-7
 Prolonged hardship, 1736-7
 Retirement of farmer or sale of operation, 1724, 1725
 Tax deductions, 1724, 1726
 Voluntary participation in plan, 1724, 1736
 Western Agricultural Conference, 1736
 Wheat Board, role of, 1736, 1737

Speakers: Senators

Bell, A. E. Haddon, 1725
 Buckwold, Sidney L., 1725, 1726
 McDonald, A. Hamilton, 1723-6, 1737-8
 Sparrow, Herbert O., 1725
 Yzyk, Paul, 1725, 1735-7

Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41. 1r, 1714; 2r, 1723-6, 1735-8; ref to com, 1738; rep without amdt, 1756; 3r, 1766; r.a., 1792

Wheat

Two-price wheat policy, 900, 928-30, 942-4, 1088, 1090, 1095
 West Coast grain handling operations, 76, 77-94, 95

Wheat - Concluded

- West Coast ports operations, 723, 724-30, 731
- Wheat Board, 12, 106-07, 169-72, 255, 265-7, 656
 - Annual report, 685, 732
- Wheat Board (Bill C-88), 2260
- Wheat Board (Bill S-6), 12, 106-07, 169-72, 255, 265-7, 656

Wheat Board (Bill S-6)

- Cash advances, 267
- Excerpts from press release by Senator Argue, 171
- Final payment, 170
- Grain prices, 170-2
- Initial price, 172
- Malting barley, 266
- Operations of Board, 170, 172
- Speakers: Senators
 - Argue, Hazen, 170-2, 266-7
 - Buckwold, Sidney L., 106-07
 - Yuzyk, Paul, 169-70

Wheat Board bill (No. 1) S-6. 1r, 12; 2r, 106-07, 169-72; ref to com, 172; rep without amdt, 255; 3r, 265-7; r.a., 656

Wheat Board (Bill C-88)

- Advisory Committee
 - Election of new committee, 2316
 - Functions, 2330
 - Members, 2315, 2316
 - Payments to members, 2316
 - Producers as members, question of, 2330
- Costs of pooling account, 2316
- Kent County can be saved*, study of NB district, 2330
- Malting barley, 2315-16, 2330-3
 - Grainview* article entitled Why Alberta barley growers are suing CWB, 2331
- Provision for further pools by order in council, 2317
- Wheat grading, 2332
- Speakers: Senators
 - Argue, Hazen, 2331-3
 - McDonald, A. Hamilton, 2315-17, 2333
 - Yuzyk, Paul, 2330-1

Wheat Board bill (No. 2) C-88. 1r, 2260; 2r, 2315-17, 2330-3; ref to com, 2333; rep without amdt, 2356; 3r, 2356-7; r.a., 2450

Whips

- Chief Government Whip in the Senate, Hon. William J. Petten
- Chief Opposition Whip in the Senate, Hon. John M. Macdonald

White Papers

- Attack on Inflation - a program of national action, 1284, 1293, 1298-1303, 1312-14, 1319-30, 1349-53

Williams, Hon. Guy

- Address in reply to Speech from the Throne, 142-4
- Criminal Law Amendment bill (No. 2) C-84, 2417
 - Organized crime, 2417
 - Public viewpoint, 2417
 - Self-preservation, possible attitude of police and guards, 2417
- Felicitations to Madam Speaker and others, 142
- Food and Drugs, Narcotic Control and Criminal Code bill S-19, 453-4
- Indians of Canada, 142-4, 453-4
 - Alcoholism and drug addiction, 142-3, 453-4
 - Buffalo kill, 142
 - Demonstration on Parliament Hill, 143
 - Fishermen's assistance program, 142
 - Great Lakes pollution, 142
 - Money-poor and land-rich aspects of Indian life, 144
 - Restrictions on former freedoms of livelihood, 142
 - Talent potential for sports, arts and Indian culture, 143
 - Treaties, 142
- Laing, Hon. Arthur, P.C., the late, 534
- National Housing bill (No. 1) C-46, 751
 - Indians, 751
- National Housing bill (No. 2) C-77, 1678
 - Construction quality, 1676

Wilson, Rt. Hon. Harold, Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, visit to Ottawa, 473, 480Women, status of, 16-17, 187-8

- Abortion, 120-1, 188, 837, 917, 1036
- Advisory Council on the Status of Women, priorities cited, 187-8
- Canada Labour Code amdt, 187
- Canada Pension Plan, inclusion of homemakers, 187
- Divorce or dissolution of marriage, 187
- Equitable employment of women to federal government positions and boards, commissions and crown corporations, 187
- Superannuation Act amdts, 187
- Indian women, loss of status on marriage to non-Indian, 898
- International Women's Year, 188, 671-4, 836-8, 896-9
- Status of Women News, statement issued by National Action Committee, 120-1
- Statute Law (Status of Women) bill C-16, 1065, 1103-07, 1122-3, 1136, 1281

Work Ethic in Canada, special Senate committee proposed, 281-8, 339-42, 474-8, 518

- Changes due to economic environment, 474
- Community employment, 283
- Definition of work ethic, 474-5, 477
- Evaluation of services performed for society, 476
- Guaranteed annual income, 281, 339-40
- Immigrants employed for farm work and menial jobs, 284, 286, 476
- Loss of working days because of strikes, 286
- Management-labour relations, 284
- Market orientation concept of work, 477
- Poverty in Canada - Report of Special Senate Committee, 281-2
 - Report updated, 282.

Work Ethic in Canada - Concluded

Provincial needs for workers, 284
 Real and fraudulent poverty, 241
 Right to work, unions or employers denial of, 476
 Social security programs, 477
 Social status vs job status, 475
 Teachers and public servants under contract, 477
 Unemployment insurance, 283, 284, 286, 477
 Unequal distribution of wealth, 475
 Waste and duplication in social security programs, 340
 Working poor, 283

Speakers: Senators

Asselin, Martial, 339-42
 Carter, Chesley W., 474-8
 Croll, David A., 281-8, 518
 Grosart, Allister, 518

Working poor in Canada, 2019-23, 2154-8

Benefits for those under 65 yrs., 2157
 Canada Pension Plan, 2157
 Employment, provincial statistics, 2019
 Excerpt from speech of Prime Minister of Canadiana Conference, 2158
 Expansion of money supply and redistribution of resources, 2155
 Gallup poll results re income statistics, 2155
 Minimum wage, 2019-22
 Provincially, 2019, 2022
 Rates for experienced adult workers (legislated as of Dec. 31, 1974), 2021
 Vs welfare, 2021-2
 Misallocation of human and physical resources, 2155
 Old age security, 2156-7
 Poverty line, 2022
 Responsibility to work, 2156
 Social security review (1973), 2156
 Specified areas of working poor, 2019
 Supplementary income as work incentive, 2022
 Union workers, 2022
 Welfare expenditures (1966-76), 2157
 Women in the labour force, 2157

Speakers: Senators

Austin, Jack, 2154-8
 Croll, David A., 2019-23

Yukon Territory

British North America Acts 1867 to 1975, appointment of senators to represent Territories, 1005, 1054, 1060-2, 1081, 1095
 Fire losses replacement account, 325, 338, 353, 366, 393
 Northern Canada Power Commission, 807-09, 814-16, 840, 851, 855, 1005, 1095

Yuzyk, Hon. Paul

- Alaska Boundary Treaty of 1825, 100th anniversary of establishment of Canada's western boundaries, 578
- Citizenship bill C-20, 2077-9
 - Citizenship certificates, 2077
 - Eligibility age, 2078
 - Judges of citizenship courts, 2078
 - Landed immigrants, residency requirements and qualifications of, 2078
 - Pledge appended to Bill of Rights, 2078-9
- Criminal Code (the National Flag of Canada) bill C-233, 740
 - Implications of penalty, 740
 - Motion that bill be ref to com after m for 3r, 740; agreed, 740
- Estonia, 58th anniversary of Proclamation of Independence, 1785
 - Tribute to Estonians, 1785
 - US Resolution re foreign policy of non-recognition of annexation of Baltic States by USSR, 1785
- Feeds bill S-10, 157-8
 - Bureaucratic control over regulations, 158
 - Whole seeds or grains free of deleterious substances, 158
- Helsinki Conference on Security and Co-operation, 1757-61
 - Disputes, peace solutions for, 1757
 - Families, uniting of, 1758
 - Human rights, 1757
 - Journalists, visa and travel difficulties, 1758
 - Mediterranean, 1757
 - Military manoeuvres, 1757
 - Newspapers featuring articles on Conference, 1757-60
 - New York Times* article, 1757
 - Nobel Peace Prize winner, refusal of USSR to permit acceptance of award, 1760-1
 - Letter from Senator Forsey re, 1761
 - Obligation to obey international law, 1757
 - Peking Review* article on USSR disregard of agreements, 1760
 - Process of detente, 1757
 - Security, 1757
 - Statements by leaders of various nations, 1758
 - Toronto Globe and Mail* article - The Brutal Reality of Brezhnev's Policy, 1759
 - Tourism, youth meetings, education and culture exchanges, 1758
 - Trade, 1757
 - USSR, 1758-61
 - Invasion of other countries, 1759
 - Military power, 1761
 - Violaton of treaties and agreements, 1758-61
 - Warsaw Pact, phases of strategic plan, 1759-60
 - Disunity of the West, 1759-60
 - Global democratic peace, 1760
 - Period of peaceful co-existence, Khrushchev's policies of de-Stalinization, 1759
 - Social change, 1759-60
- King George V Cancer Fund Winding-Up bill C-76, 1482-3
 - Background of fund, 1482
 - Trustees of fund, 1482
- Multiculturalism, Ministry of State, organization and budget, 742, 849, 866
- North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference, 1514-16
 - Canadian delegation, 1514
 - East-West relations, 1515
 - Education, Cultural Affairs and Information Committee, 1515
 - Helsinki Agreement, 1515
 - Political Committee, 1514

Yuzyk, Hon. Paul - *Concluded*North Atlantic Assembly, Copenhagen conference - Concluded

Resolutions adopted re

Middle East, 1514

Portugal, 1514

Southeastern section of Alliance, 1515

Spain, 1514

Soviet Union, armed forces and equipment, 1515-16

North Atlantic Assembly, London conference, 362-5

Canadian delegation, 364-5

Education, cultural affairs and communications, 362

NATO, 362, 364

Information service, 364

Political differences, 362

Security and cooperation in Europe, 362-3

Ukrainian historian Valentyne Moroz, prisoner in Vladimir prison, 363-4

US amendment to trade bill, 363

USSR, treatment of dissidents, 363-4

Northern Canada Power Commission bill C-13, 807-09, 814-16

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 1) C-10, 614-15

Abuses of cash advances, question of, 615

Corporate farms, partnerships, cooperatives of farming enterprises, 614

Elevator companies, question of commission for, 615

Increase in advance payment to $15,000, 614

Instigation of act during Conservative government, 614

Option to deliver on quota system or offboard sales, 615

Prices and production costs, 615

Repayment record, 615

Prairie Grain Advance Payments bill (No. 2) C-53, 1157, 1166-7

Damp or tough or unthreshed grain, 1166, 1167

Defaults in repayments, 1167

Limitation to wheat, oats and barley, 1166

Persons authorized to purchase grain for board, 1166

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, invitation to Canadian Parliamentarians to visit Russia, 1250-1, 1257

United Kingdom, Prime Minister Harold Wilson, visit to Ottawa, 480

Visitors from Baltic Nations, Consuls of Estonia and Latvia, 1867

Western Grain Stabilization bill C-41, 1725, 1735-7

Branch offices, question of, 1736

Crop insurance, 1736

Instability of agricultural income, 1735

Production costs, 1736-7

Prolonged periods of hardship, 1736-7

Voluntary participation in plan, 1736

Western Agricultural Conference, 1736

Wheat Board, role of, 1736

Wheat Board bill (No. 1) S-6, 169-70

Wheat Board bill (No. 2) C-88, 2330-1

Advisory Committee members, 2330

Functions, 2330

Producers as members, question of, 2330

Kent County can be saved, study of NB district, 2330

Malting barley, 2330-1

Grainview article entitled 'Why Alberta barley growers are suing CWB', 2331

Zionism

- UN resolution naming Israel as racist nation, 1397-8, 1411, 1417
 - Limitation on contributions as result of resolution, question, Senator Greene, 1411, 1417
 - Motion re condemnation of, Senator Croll, 1397-8

